Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee, S.P. Kurdukar and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1998]

[6842] — S. 439 — Bail — Grant of, by Supreme Court in "stamp scam" case — Relevant considerations — Likelihood of delay in completion of trial — Ground of parity — Consideration of period already passed in jail — Charges levelled against appellant Senior Superintendent of Central Prison that he conspired with the main accused involved in the stamp scam and violated the prison rules and regulations by permitting and facilitating the said accused to use mobile phone for his unlawful activities, to run his fake stamp business from the jail and also to celebrate a party within the jail premises, all for illegal gratification — Appellant had already been in jail for about three years and nine months — Trial was likely to take a long time for completion — Co-accused against whom similar accusations were made, already released on bail — Held, having regard to the nature of involvement alleged and the role attributed to the appellant, and the period already spent by him in jail, it was a fit case for grant of bail — Hence, directions made accordingly — Karnataka Control of Organised Crimes Act, 2000 (1 of 2002), Ss. 3, 4 & 25 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 7, 12 and S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Paras 8 and 9). Jaya Simha v. State of Karnataka, (2007) 8 SCC 145: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 518: (2007) 59 AIC 224 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Tarun Chatterjee and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-9-2007]

[6843] — S. 439 — Regular bail — Application made for, after lapse of period of interim bail — Rejection of — Propriety — Offences of cheating, forgery, etc. — Appellants who had floated various companies and were Directors of a Company committing said offences causing huge loss to those who had deposited amounts in City Cooperative Bank Ltd. and the said Company — Appellants granted interim bail on certain conditions including that they would make payments to the investors — Steps already taken to pay to the depositors their dues — Petition for winding up of the said Company pending before Company Judge — Appellants not objecting to making payment to depositors from their assets — Held, no fruitful purpose would be served by keeping the appellants in continued detention — Bail granted imposing certain conditions — Various directions including placement of personal and other assets of the appellants at the disposal of the Company Judge for disbursement of claims of depositors by the said Judge, issued — Clarified that such directions could not have ordinarily been issued by the Supreme Court while disposing of a bail application but considering the present facts, issued under Art. 142 to do complete justice to all parties — Parties given liberty to approach the Supreme Court for any clarification/direction, if any occasion arises therefor — Constitution of India, Arts. 136 and 142 (Paras 24 to 30). Arvind Mohan Johri v. State of U.P., (2005) 4 SCC 640: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1175.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-2004]

[6844] — S. 439 — Bail — Entitlement to — Factors to be considered — SLPs filed against order of High Court holding that provisions of the 1999 Act were misapplied to the facts of the case — Dismissal of — Accused in custody for about 1 year and 7½ months — His medical condition not proper — In these circumstances, held, accused was entitled to be released on bail — Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (30 of 1999), S. 21(4)

Having regard to the fact that the Supreme Court is dismissing the special leave petitions filed by the State of Maharashtra against the order of the Bombay High Court holding that the provisions of the Maharashtra Control of Organised Crimes Act, 1999 had been misapplied to the facts of the case, the stringent provisions regarding bail under the said Act will no longer be attracted in this case. Since the petitioner has been under arrest since the date of his surrender on 1-7-2005, and having further regard to his medical condition, it is directed that the petitioner L be released on bail to the satisfaction of the Chief Judicial Magistrate concerned. (Para 74). State of Maharashtra v. Lalit Somdatta Nagpal, (2007) 4 SCC 171: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 241: 2007 Cri LJ 1678.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2007]

[6845] — S. 439 — Bail in "stamp scam" case — Grant of, to respondent police officer — Challenge to — Tenability — Commission of organised crime, namely, the printing and sale of fake stamp papers — Respondent not taking necessary action against the prime accused T — He facilitating the continuing of illegal activity by T including disposal of ill-gotten properties of T even while T was in police custody — Respondent giving special treatment to T — Contention that High Court granted bail on erroneous approach that connivance or deliberate inaction on the part of a police officer which facilitated the organised crime to flourish would not amount to an offence under S. 3 of the Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act — Held, said question need not be gone into in detail in instant proceedings — It would be inappropriate to go into an analysis of the facts and circumstances of the case — It was for the trial court to take a final view on all questions after the evidence was let in — Thus, order granting bail not interfered with — Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (30 of 1999), Ss. 21(4) & 3

The present appeal was preferred against the order of the High Court granting bail to the respondent police officer. The respondent was arrested in connection with stamp scam case in respect of various offences under the Penal Code as well as under the Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (MCOCA) and the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988.

According to the appellant i.e. CBI, the respondent rendered help and support on his own in the commission of an organised crime. He had directed his subordinates that T, the prime accused in the stamp scam case should not be kept in any lock-up. This had facilitated the continuing of illegal activity by T including the disposal of his ill-gotten properties even while he was in police custody. T was also accorded special treatment by the respondent. The appellant contended that the High Court was clearly in error in granting bail to the respondent on its misconception of the scope of the relevant provisions of MCOCA and on its erroneous approach that connivance or deliberate inaction on the part of a police officer which facilitated the organised crime to flourish would not amount to an offence under Section 3 of MCOCA.

On the other hand, the respondent submitted that the alleged acts of commission and omission of the respondent did not attract Section 3 of MCOCA. Even if the case was brought under Section 24 of MCOCA, the punishment could extend only to three years. Hence, the High Court was justified in granting bail to the respondent.

(16) CrPC provisions for bail and Special Statutes (contd.)

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

There is some merit in submission of the appellant that the approach of the High Court leaves a lot to be desired. There may be some substance in the argument that the High Court has not properly understood the content of Sections 3(2) and 3(3) of MCOCA and it was in error in thinking that deliberate inaction or studied negligence on the part of a responsible police officer could not amount to abetting or knowingly facilitating the commission of an organised crime. But, it is not proper for the Supreme Court to go into that question in detail in this proceeding, which is only an appeal against the grant of bail. It would be inappropriate to go into an analysis of the facts and circumstances of the case. After all, whatever may be said in this order will not even control the decision to be taken after the conclusion of the trial and it would be appropriate to leave it to the court trying the case to take a final view on all the questions after the evidence has been let in. (Paras 5 and 6). CBI v. Pradeep Bhalchandra Sawant, (2007) 7 SCC 344: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 362: (2007) 57 AIC 8 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P.K. Balasubramanyan, J. [Date of decision: 17-8-2007]

[6846] — S. 439 — Bail — Grant of — Considerations — Appellant associated with "Telgi" scam (printing and distributing counterfeit stamps/stamp papers on a very large scale) from registration of FIR (7-6-2002) till the first charge-sheet filed (3-9-2002) — He retired on 31-8-2003 — He was arrested on 4-12-2003 for his alleged involvement in subverting the investigation by helping the perpetrators of organised crime and receiving illegal gratification therefor — Appellant in jail for 2 years and 9 months — Trial likely to take several years as more than 800 witnesses to be examined — Without considering the relative scope of Ss. 3(2) and 34 of MCOC Act, 1999, bail granted having regard to the nature of involvement alleged and the role attributed to him, subject to stipulated conditions (Paras 12 to 15). Mohd. Chand Mulani v. Union of India, (2006) 13 SCC 143: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 658: AIR 2006 SC 3403: (2006) 46 AIC 108 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, G.P. Mathur and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2006]

[6847] — S. 439 — Bail — Relevant considerations for grant of — Telgi stamp scam case — Appellant, Dy. Supdt. of Stamps, arrested during course of investigation about 1½ years after registration of case against several persons under relevant provisions of Penal Code and Ss. 3(2), 3(5) and 24 of Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 — Charges could not be framed by the time hearing of the present appeal was concluded — Appellant already in custody for more than 2 years and 3 months — Held, only consideration for Court is whether appellant made out a case for bail — Detailed discussion on scope of the said Act or materials against appellant and arguments for and against him on merits not called for at this stage — Court can neither be carried away by the catchy submission that "bail and not jail" is the rule, nor can it ignore the principle reflected by that catchphrase — On consideration of relevant circumstances and taking note of the period during which appellant had been in custody, held, it is a fit case for grant of bail to the appellant — Appellant be enlarged on bail on his furnishing security to the satisfaction of the Special Court in a sum of Rs 1 lakh with two solvent sureties for the like amount and on his fulfilling other conditions of S. 438(2) — Further, appellant should report before IO between 10.00 a.m. and 12.00 noon every third Saturday of the month and surrender his passport (or file affidavit, if he has none) before Special Court. Babanrao Tukaram Ranjane v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 9 SCC 422: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 562.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2006]

[6848] — Ss. 439 and 46(1) & (2) — Examination or summoning of person under Ss. 107 and 108, Customs Act, 1962 by Customs office — If amounts to "arrest" or "custody" — Distinction between the two — Observation by Full Bench of Madras High Court in Roshan Beevi case, 1984 Cri LJ 134 that "custody" and "arrest" are not synonymous and that in every arrest there is custody but not vice versa — Applicability of — Held, it may be relevant in the context of Ss. 107 and 108 where summons in respect of an enquiry may amount to "custody" but not to "arrest" although such custody can subsequently materialise into arrest — However, the position is different in respect of proceedings in court in relation to enquiry into offences under the Penal Code and other criminal enactments as in such cases, in order to obtain the benefit of bail the accused has first to surrender to the custody of the court or police authorities — Customs Act, 1962, Ss. 107 and 108

The expression "arrest" has neither been defined in CrPC nor in IPC or any other enactment dealing with criminal offences. However, from Sections 46(1) & (2) CrPC this much is clear that in order to make an arrest the police officer or other person making the same shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be submission to the custody by word or action. Similarly, the expression "custody" has also not been defined in CrPC. (Paras 13 to 15)

The Department is right in its submission that unless a person accused of an offence is in custody, he cannot move the court for bail under Section 439 CrPC, which provides for release on bail of any person accused of an offence and in custody. The precondition, therefore, for applying the provisions of Section 439 CrPC is that a person who is an accused must be in custody and his movements must have been restricted before he can move for bail. (Para 25)

In the instant case the accused persons had appeared before the Magistrates concerned and on applying for bail were granted bail without being taken into formal custody, which appears to have swayed one of the Benches of the High Court to take a liberal view and to hold that no arrest had actually been effected. The said view is incorrect as it goes against the very grain of Sections 46 and 439 CrPC. (Para 26)

Sections 107 and 108 of the Customs Act do not contemplate immediate arrest of a person being summoned in connection with an enquiry, but only contemplate surrendering to the custody of the Customs Officer which could subsequently lead to arrest and detention. In such context the Full Bench of the Madras High Court returned a finding in Roshan Beevi case, 1984 Cri LJ 134, that "custody" and "arrest" are not synonymous terms and observed that it is true that in every arrest there is a custody but not vice versa. A custody may amount to "arrest" in certain cases, but not in all cases. The interpretation of "arrest" and "custody" rendered by the Full Bench in Roshan Beevi case may be relevant in the context of Sections 107 and 108 of the Customs Act where summons in respect of an enquiry may amount to "custody" but not to "arrest", but such custody could subsequently materialise into arrest. The position is different as far as proceedings in the court are concerned in relation to enquiry into offences under the Penal Code and other criminal enactments. In the latter set of cases, in order to obtain the benefit of bail an accused has to surrender to the custody of the court or the police authorities before he can be granted the benefit thereunder. (Paras 24, 20 and 27)

It is, therefore, held that the views expressed by the High Court in D's writ petition regarding arrest were incorrect, while the views expressed in the writ petitions filed by L & B correctly interpreted the meaning of the expressions "arrest" and "custody". However, how far the same would apply in the ultimate analysis relating to their answer in their application forms is another matter altogether. (Para 30)

The reasoning given in D's case in that context is a possible view and does not call for interference under Article 136 of the Constitution. Conversely, the decision rendered in the writ petitions filed by L and B has to be reversed to be in line with the decision in D's case. When the question as to what constitutes "arrest" has for long engaged the attention of different High Courts as also the Supreme Court, it may not be altogether unreasonable to expect a layman to construe that he had never been arrested on his appearing before the court and being granted bail immediately. The position would have been different, had the person concerned not been released on bail. In the facts of the present cases, the benefit of a mistaken impression, rather than that of deliberate and wilful misrepresentation and concealment of facts, has to be given to the appellants in the second of the two appeals as well. (Paras 31 and 32). State of Haryana v. Dinesh Kumar, (2008) 3 SCC 222: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 722: AIR 2008 SC 1083: (2008) 63 AIC 265 (SC): (2008) 2 SLR 331: (2008) 2 LLN 120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-2008]

Roshan Beevi v. Jt. Secy. to the Govt. of T.N., 1984 Cri LJ 134 (Mad), limited

Niranjan Singh v. Prabhakar Rajaram Kharote, (1980) 2 SCC 559: 1980 SCC (Cri) 508, affirmed

State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya, AIR 1960 SC 1125, relied on

Halsbury's Laws of England (4th Edn.), Vol. 11, Para 99, referred to [6849] — Ss. 439 and 437 — Bail granted ignoring provisions of S. 37 NDPS Act — Cancellation of — Non-consideration of the provisions contained in, while granting bail — Order releasing the accused on bail set aside — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 37. T. Bijando Singh v. Mohd. Ibocha, (2004) 10 SCC 151.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-11-2001]

[6850] — S. 439 — Bail — Grant of — Alleged use of medicines containing psychotropic substances — Advertisements allegedly issued by the respondent in newspapers claiming that medicines used by him were prepared from herbal plants and by application thereof patients suffering from epilepsy can be cured — Respondent arrested on allegation of using medicines containing psychotropic substances — High

(16) CrPC provisions for bail and Special Statutes (contd.)

Court allowing the bail application on the ground that ordinarily applications for bail are required to be considered having regard to S. 37 of the 1985 Act, however, as drugs in question not being listed in Sch. I appended to the 1985 Rules, respondent cannot be said to have committed any offence under S. 8 r/w S. 22 of the 1985 Act — Propriety — Held, general prohibitions contained in Rr. 53 and 64 of the 1985 Rules refer only to the drugs and psychotropic substances specified in Sch. I appended to the 1985 Rules — R. 67-A of the 1985 Rules provides for special provisions for medical and scientific purposes — S. 8 of the 1985 Act contains an exception regarding use of the psychotropic substances for medicinal or scientific use — The medicines seized come within the purview of Schs. G and H of the Drugs and Cosmetics Rules and none of them finds place in Sch. I appended to the 1985 Rules — Hence, held, if the drugs do not find place in Sch. I appended to the 1985 Rules, the provisions of S. 8 of the 1985 Act would have no application — S. 37 of the 1985 Act must be construed in a pragmatic manner — It cannot be construed in such a way so as to negate the right of party to obtain bail which is a valuable right — Therefore, held, S. 37 of the 1985 Act would prima facie have no application in view of the exception contained in S. 8 thereof r/w the Rules — Hence, held, a person cannot be denied the right of being released on bail unless a clear case of application of the 1985 Act is made out — He may ultimately be found guilty even for commission of an offence under the 1985 Act but when prima facie the provisions of the said Act are not found applicable, particularly when, on facts, he has been in custody for more than two years, it is not a fit case for exercise of discretionary jurisdiction under Art. 136 of the Constitution — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Rules, 1985, Rr. 53, 64, 65, 66, 67, 67-A and Sch. — Drugs and Cosmetics Rules, 1945 — Schs. G and H — Drugs and Magic Remedies (Objectionable Advertisements) Act, 1954, Ss. 3 and 4 — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 8, 22, 37, 2(vii-a), 2(xxiii-a), 9, 10, 76 and Sch.

Respondent herein is an Ayurvedacharya operating from two clinics. Advertisements were, allegedly, being issued by him in various newspapers claiming that medicines used by him were prepared from herbal plants collected from the banks of Ganges and by application thereof patients suffering from epilepsy can be cured. However, on the allegation that in his medicine he had been using unlabelled tablets containing psychotropic substances making the unsuspecting patients addicted to the drugs, the State raided the premises of the said clinics and recovered the drugs. The drugs allegedly used to be dispatched by post also. The respondent was arrested on 13-8-2004 and since then he was in jail custody. Charges were framed against him under Section 8 read with Section 22 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 and the Drugs and Magic Remedies (Objectionable Advertisements) Act, 1954. An application for bail moved by him before the Special Judge was dismissed. He filed an application for bail before the High Court which was granted. A special leave petition was filed thereagainst and by an order the bail application was revived. The High Court was requested to dispose of the same expeditiously. The High Court by reason of the impugned order allowed the said bail application. In its order the High Court noticed that ordinarily applications for bail are required to be considered having regard to Section 37 of the 1985 Act. It, however, opined that the drugs in question not being listed in Schedule I appended to the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Rules, 1985, the respondent cannot be said to have committed any offence under Section 8 read with Section 22 of the 1985 Act. The State thus filed the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is not in dispute that the medicines seized from the said clinic come within the purview of Schedules G and H of the Drugs and Cosmetics Rules. None of them finds place in Schedule I appended to the 1985 Rules. Hence, the provisions of Section 8 of the 1985 Act would have no application whatsoever. In view of the fact that all the drugs being allopathic drugs mentioned in Schedules G and H of the Drugs and Cosmetics Rules indisputably are used for medicinal purposes. Once the drugs are said to be used for medicinal purposes, it cannot be denied that they are acknowledged to be the drugs which would come within the purview of description of the expression "medicinal purposes". (Paras 22 and 23)

The exceptions contained in Section 8 of the 1985 Act must be judged on the touchstone of:

(i) whether drugs are used for medicinal purposes;

(ii) whether they come within the purview of the regulatory provisions contained in Chapters VI and VII of the 1985 Rules. (Para 24)

Chapter VII-A of the 1985 Rules which was introduced by a notification dated 25-6-1997 with effect from 27-6-1997 provides for special provisions regarding manufacture, possession, transport, import-export, purchase and consumption of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances for medical and scientific purposes. (Para 25)

Section 37 of the 1985 Act must be construed in a pragmatic manner. It cannot be construed in such a way so as to negate the right of party to obtain bail which is otherwise a valuable right for all practical purposes. (Para 28)

Section 37 of the 1985 Act would prima facie have no application in view of the exception contained in Section 8 thereof read with the Rules. (Para 36)

The respondent is charged with a grave offence. It was, therefore, all the more necessary to apply the principles of law strictly. A person cannot be denied the right of being released on bail unless a clear case of application of the 1985 Act is made out. He may ultimately be found guilty even for commission of an offence under the 1985 Act, but in a case of this nature when prima facie the provisions of the said Act are not found applicable particularly, in view of the fact that he has been in custody for a period of more than two years now, it is not a fit case for exercising discretionary jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution of India. (Para 38). State of Uttaranchal v. Rajesh Kumar Gupta, (2007) 1 SCC 355: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 356: (2007) 1 All LJ 254: (2007) 50 AIC 394 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2006]

Dadu v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 8 SCC 437: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1528; Ranjitsing Brahmajeetsing Sharma v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 5 SCC 294: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1057; Babanrao Tukaram Ranjane v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 9 SCC 422: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 562; Sajan Abraham v. State of Kerala, (2004) 4 SCC 441: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1299; Hussain v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 139: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1468, relied on

Rajinder Gupta v. State, (2005) 123 DLT 55; Pradeep Dhond v. Intelligence Officer, Narcotic & Control Bureau, Cri A No. 6787 of 2005, disposed of on 7-2-2006 (Bom), approved

[6851] — S. 439 — Bail — Grant of, by High Court without indicating any reason as to why it was of the view that the contraband articles under the NDPS Act were not seized from the exclusive possession of the accused — Sustainability — Held, was not sustainable — Hence, said order set aside — Bail application directed to be considered afresh by the High Court keeping in view the parameters of S. 37, NDPS Act — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 37 (Paras 13 and 14). Union of India v. Shiv Shanker Kesari, (2007) 7 SCC 798: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 505: (2007) 6 All LJ 355.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2007]

[6852] — S. 439 — Offences under NDPS Act — Rejection of bail — Non-consideration of relevant factors — Allegation against appellants regarding recovery of ganja — On the day of arrest of one of the appellants, a telegram sent by one K to various government and police authorities stating that there was danger to the lives of the appellants as a police party forcibly entered and arrested the appellants from their house and that their whereabouts were not known, ignored by the said authorities — Was a relevant consideration — Hence, bail granted to appellants by imposing certain conditions — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 37, 42, 20(b)(ii)(C) and 25 (Paras 6 to 8). Sarija Banu v. State, (2004) 12 SCC 266.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2004]

[6853] — S. 439 — Bail — Grant of — Twin conditions prescribed under S. 37(1)(b)(ii) NDPS Act for — Fulfilment of — Mode of — Necessary considerations and findings required on the part of court — Expression "reasonable grounds" occurring in S. 37(1)(b)(ii) — Meaning of — Held, for granting bail, both the conditions prescribed under S. 37(1)(b)(ii) i.e. satisfaction of the court that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty and that he is not likely to commit any offence while on bail, must be satisfied — If either of these two conditions is not satisfied, the bar operates and the accused cannot be released on bail — Explaining the meaning of expression "reasonable grounds", further held, there must be existence of such facts and circumstances as are sufficient in themselves to justify recording of satisfaction that the accused is not guilty of the offence charged — However, the court is not required to record a finding of "not guilty" as it does while pronouncing a judgment of acquittal — Existence of some material is also necessary for coming to conclusion as to second condition that the accused is not likely to commit any offence while on bail — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 37(1)(b)(ii)

As Section 37(1)(b)(ii) of the NDPS Act, 1985 itself provides that no person shall be granted bail unless the two conditions are satisfied. They are: the satisfaction of the court that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty and that he is not likely to commit any offence while on bail. Both the conditions have to be satisfied. If either of these two conditions is not satisfied, the bar operates and the accused cannot be released on bail. (Para 6)

(16) CrPC provisions for bail and Special Statutes (contd.)

The expression used in Section 37(1)(b)(ii) is "reasonable grounds". The expression means something more than prima facie grounds. It connotes substantial probable cause for believing that the accused is not guilty of the offence charged and this reasonable belief contemplated in turn points to existence of such facts and circumstances as are sufficient in themselves to justify recording of satisfaction that the accused is not guilty of the offence charged. (Para 7)

The court while considering the application for bail with reference to Section 37 of the NDPS Act is not called upon to record a finding of not guilty. It is for the limited purpose essentially confined to the question of releasing the accused on bail that the court is called upon to see if there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty and records its satisfaction about the existence of such grounds. But the court has not to consider the matter as if it is pronouncing a judgment of acquittal and recording a finding of not guilty. (Para 11)

Additionally, the court has to record a finding that while on bail the accused is not likely to commit any offence and there should also exist some materials to come to such a conclusion. (Para 12). Union of India v. Shiv Shanker Kesari, (2007) 7 SCC 798: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 505: (2007) 6 All LJ 355.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2007]

[6854] — S. 439 — Bail — Grant of — Powers of High Court in NDPS matter — Prosecution under Ss. 8/18, NDPS Act — Setting aside the impugned order, held, High Court erred in failing to consider the mandatory provisions of S. 37 of the NDPS Act while granting bail to accused — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 37 — Consideration of, held, mandatory for granting bail under the Act. Union of India v. Aharwa Deen, (2000) 9 SCC 382: 2001 SCC (Cri) 399: AIR 2000 SC 3512 (2): 2000 Cri LJ 3526: (2000) 120 ELT 595.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-2000]

[6855] — Ss. 439 and 437 — Grant of bail in NDPS case without bearing in mind the provisions under S. 37 of the NDPS Act, held, not proper — Provisions of, not borne in mind by the High Court before granting the bail to accused respondent — Act of High Court, held, was improper — Order passed by the High Court set aside — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 37 (Para 5). Union of India v. Gurcharan Singh, (2003) 11 SCC 764.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2000]

[6856] — Ss. 439 and 167 proviso (a) — Power of High Court under S. 37, NDPS Act — Delay in trial of accused prosecuted under the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act — High Court refusing to cancel the bail — Quashing the order of High Court, held, provisions of S. 37 of the Act are mandatory and Court must bear that in mind while deciding the bail application under the Act — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 37 — Held is mandatory. Union of India v. Ikram Khan, (2000) 9 SCC 221: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1493: AIR 2000 SC 3397.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-1-2000]

[6857] — S. 439 — Bail — Offence under NDPS Act — Relevant factors — Held, compliance with S. 42, NDPS Act is mandatory and is a relevant fact to be taken into account while considering the bail application — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 37 and 42 (Para 7). Sarija Banu v. State, (2004) 12 SCC 266.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-2-2004]

[6858] — S. 439 — Powers of High Court under are subject to the limitations contained in S. 37 of the NDPS Act — Offences committed under the Act — Non-compliance with certain provisions of the Act — Bail application — Factors to be borne in mind — Respondent and his wife prosecuted under Ss. 8-C, 21, 27-A, 28 and 29 of the NDPS Act and Ss. 193 and 120-B of the Penal Code, 1860 — High Court granting bail on the ground of non-compliance with Ss. 52 and 57 of the Act — Having regard to the provisions of S. 37 of the Act, held, it would be too early to take into account and judge the matter regarding non-compliance with the formalities during the bail stage — Since recording of findings under S. 37 of the Act was a sine qua non for granting bail under the Act, impugned order of High Court set aside — No consequential directions made as respondent already put back in jail — This order would not come in way of right of respondent's wife to seek her release by any remedy available under the law — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 193 and 120-B — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 114 Ill. (e) — Official acts — Factual presumption by courts regarding the due performance of — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 37, 52 and 57

In the light of Section 37 of the Act no accused can be released on bail when the application is opposed by the Public Prosecutor unless the court is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is not guilty of such offences and that he is not likely to commit any offence while on bail. It is unfortunate that matters which could be established only in offence regarding compliance with Sections 52 and 57 have been pre-judged by the learned Single Judge at the stage of consideration for bail. The minimum which the learned Single Judge should have taken into account was the factual presumption in law position that official acts have been regularly performed. Such presumption can be rebutted only during evidence and not merely saying that no document has been produced before the learned Single Judge during bail stage regarding the compliance with the formalities mentioned in Sections 52 and 57. (Para 6). Supdt., Narcotics Control Bureau, Chennai v. R. Paulsamy, (2000) 9 SCC 549: 2001 SCC (Cri) 648: AIR 2000 SC 3661.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2000]

Union of India v. Ram Samujh, (1999) 9 SCC 429: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1522, followed

[6859] — S. 439 — Scope of High Court's power to grant bail under — Held, limited to the extent provided under S. 37 of NDPS Act — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 37 and 36-A(3)

The powers of the High Court to grant bail under S. 439 are subject to the limitations contained in the amended S. 37 of the NDPS Act and the restrictions placed on the powers of the court under the said section are applicable to the High Court also in the matter of granting bail. (Para 7). Narcotics Control Bureau v. Kishan Lal, (1991) 1 SCC 705: 1991 SCC (Cri) 265: AIR 1991 SC 558: (1991) 1 KLT 547: (1991) 52 ELT 328: 1991 Cri LJ 654.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-1991]

[6860] — S. 439 r/w S. 482 — Bail — Grant of, by the High Court on the ground that there was no material to show that the articles seized could be treated as "psychotropic substance" — Propriety — Accused found carrying large quantity of "Diazepam" 5 mg tablets — Recovery of tablets admitted by accused in confessional statement under S. 67, NDPS Act — Description of drug at Sl. No. 43 of the Schedule to the Act not kept in view by High Court — Further, report of Central Revenue Control Laboratory lightly brushed aside without any justifiable reason — Object of S. 37, held, completely overlooked by High Court — Present one not a case where it could be reasonably believed that the accused was not guilty of the alleged offence — Bail cancelled — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 8 r/w Item 43 of the Schedule and S. 37 (Paras 7 and 8). Collector of Customs v. Ahmadalieva Nodira, (2004) 3 SCC 549: 2004 SCC (Cri) 834: (2004) 110 DLT 300: 2004 Cri LJ 1810: (2004) 166 ELT 302.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, Arijit Pasayat and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2004]

Ahmadalieva Nadira v. Customs, (2002) 147 ELT 44 (Del), reversed

[6861] — S. 439 — Grant of bail for offences under NDPS Act, 1985 — Matters to be considered — Nature and scope — Scope of High Court's power to grant bail under — Non obstante clause — Effect — Conditions and limitations for grant of bail under — "Reasonable grounds" — Meaning — Held, apart from giving an opportunity to the Public Prosecutor to oppose bail application as provided under S. 37(1)(b)(i), the other twin conditions set out in S. 37(1)(b)(ii) have to be satisfied — The said conditions are cumulative and not alternative — Criminal Trial — Bail — Grant of, in respect of offences under special statute — Considerations involved — Words and Phrases — "Reasonable grounds" — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 — S. 37

It is plain from a bare reading of the non obstante clause in Section 37 of the NDPS Act and sub-section (2) thereof that the power to grant bail to a person accused of having committed offence under the NDPS Act is not only subject to the limitations imposed under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, but also subject to the restrictions placed by clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 37 of the NDPS Act. Apart from giving an opportunity to the Public Prosecutor to oppose the application for such release, the other twin conditions viz. (i) the satisfaction of the court that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of the alleged offence; and (ii) that he is not likely to commit any offence while on bail, have to be satisfied. The conditions are cumulative and not alternative. The satisfaction contemplated regarding the accused being not guilty, has to be based on "reasonable grounds". The expression "reasonable grounds" in Section 37(1)(b)(ii) has not been defined in the said Act but means something more than prima facie grounds. It connotes substantial probable causes for believing that the accused is not guilty of the offence he is charged with. The reasonable belief contemplated in turn, points to existence of such facts and circumstances as are sufficient in themselves to justify satisfaction that the accused is not guilty of the alleged offence. Thus, recording of satisfaction on both the aspects, noted above, is sine qua non for granting of bail under the NDPS Act. (Paras 12 and 13)

While considering an application for bail under Section 37 of the NDPS Act, the court is not called upon to record a finding of "not guilty". At this stage, it is neither necessary nor desirable to weigh the evidence meticulously to arrive at a positive finding as to whether or not the accused has committed offence under the NDPS Act. What is to be seen is whether there is reasonable ground for believing that the accused is not guilty of the offence(s) he is charged with and further that he is not likely to commit an offence under the said Act while on bail. The satisfaction of the court about the existence of the said twin conditions is for a limited purpose and is confined to the question of releasing the accused on bail. (Para 14). Union of India v. Rattan Mallik, (2009) 2 SCC 624.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2009]

Union of India v. Shiv Shanker Kesari, (2007) 7 SCC 798: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 505, relied on

(17) Other issues

[6862] — S. 439(1)(a) — Bail — Appeal against grant of bail — Duty of the State in an appeal against grant of bail — In case of erroneous grant of bail by High Court, held, it was the State which ought to have assailed the order granting bail — In the instant case, the appeal was filed by the informant while the State had remained totally silent and its officers failed to instruct its counsel in the said matter — Such attitude of State and its officers deprecated by Supreme Court — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Para 1). Salim Khan v. Sanjai Singh, (2002) 9 SCC 670.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-1999]

— S. 440 See also S. 498, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp.1274 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 440 See Ss. 436, 437, 440 & 441
See also Ss. 436 to 450
See also Ss. 436, 437, 440, 441 and 442

[6863] — Ss. 440 and 441 — Bail — Amount of bond and sureties — Onerous conditions for grant of bail at FIR stage — Justifiability — Appellant arrested pursuant to FIR lodged by respondent alleging offences under Ss. 420 and 406 IPC — Bail granted on condition of payment of Rs 2 lakhs — As part of compliance with the conditions, appellant executing a bond in a sum of Rs 50,000 with two solvent sureties and one of the sureties issuing cheques for Rs 2 lakhs to the complainant — Cheques having been dishonoured, bail cancelled — Consequently appellant languishing in jail for more than 10 months — Held, keeping the appellant in prison endlessly for default of the surety in case where bail would normally be granted was improper

It is not possible to appreciate even the first order passed by the Metropolitan Magistrate imposing the onerous condition that an accused at the FIR stage should pay a huge sum of Rs 2 lakhs to be set at liberty. On default in payment of that amount the appellant is to languish in jail for more than 10 months now, is sufficient indication that he was unable to make up the amount. If the cheques issued by his surety were dishonoured, the Court could perhaps have taken it as a ground to suggest to the payee of the cheques to resort to the legal remedies provided by law. Similarly if the Court was dissatisfied with the conduct of the surety as for his failure to raise funds for honouring the cheques issued by him, the Court could have directed the appellant to substitute him with another surety. But to keep him in prison for such a long period, that too in a case where bail would normally be granted for the offences alleged, is not only hard but improper. The Court has not even come to the conclusion that the allegations made in the FIR are true. That can be decided only when the trial concludes, if the case is charge-sheeted by the police. No doubt if the appellant was not in a position to abide by the conditions imposed for granting bail he should have raised his objection at that time or should have challenged the order soon after his release on bail. But his failure to do so then cannot now be used as a bar for preventing him from approaching the Court with a prayer to release him from jail. He cannot be detained in custody for long without conviction in a case of this nature. Therefore, the appellant must be released on bail on his executing a bond in a sum of Rs 25,000, with two solvent sureties, to the satisfaction of the Metropolitan Magistrate. (Paras 4 to 6). Sandeep Jain v. NCT of Delhi, (2000) 2 SCC 66: 2000 SCC (Cri) 316: AIR 2000 SC 714: 2000 Cri LJ 807.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2000]

— S. 441 See also S. 499, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1275 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 441 See Ss. 167(2), proviso (a), 309(2), 437(5), 439(2), 441, 442(1) and 444

See also Ss. 436, 389, 437, 441 and 445

See also Ss. 436 to 450

See also Ss. 436, 437, 440 & 441

See also Ss. 436, 437, 440, 441 and 442

See also Ss. 440 and 441

[6864] — Ss. 441 and 442 — Supreme Court's interference with failure to execute order granting bail when not called for — Constitution of India, Art. 136. Raghubir Singh v. State of Bihar, (1986) 4 SCC 481: 1986 SCC (Cri) 511: AIR 1987 SC 149.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-1986]

[6865] — Ss. 441, 446 and 444(1) — Modification of conditions of bail — Effect, if any, on the liability of the surety — Alteration of conditions other than that of ensuring the attendance of the accused in the court whenever required, held, does not absolve the surety from his liability in terms of the bond — If the surety is not agreeable to the modified conditions, he must apply to the court under S. 444(1) to discharge him — Hence, in case of forfeiture of the bond due to default of the accused in appearing before the court, the surety, unless already discharged by the court, held, can be proceeded against by the court under S. 446 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 466 and 471 — Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 — Passport Act, 1967

The appellants stood sureties for bailing out a foreign national who was under indictment for the offences mentioned in Sections 466 and 471 of the IPC besides a few other offences under the Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 and the Passport Act, 1967. The conditions of bail were, inter alia, as follows:

"(i) The accused should furnish a personal bond of Rs 25,000 and to furnish two local sureties for the same amount.

(iv) The accused should not leave Bangalore city without the prior permission from the Bangalore City Police Commissioner, till the trial is completed."

After the release, at the instance of the accused, the Magistrate relaxed condition (iv) of the bond and permitted the accused to reside in Mysore. Thereafter, the accused slipped out of India. Consequently, the Magistrate forfeited the bail bonds and required the sureties to pay the amount of bail bonds. The sureties' appeal was dismissed by the Sessions Court and their second appeal was dismissed on merits by the High Court. The Supreme Court found the second appeal to be not maintainable but since the High Court had dismissed the same on merits, the Supreme Court treated the High Court's order as a revisional one and proceeded to hear the appeal on merits. The appellant sureties contended that with the relaxation of condition (iv) of the bond without notice to them, they stood absolved of their liability under the bond. Rejecting this contention,

Held :

The contention of the appellants is not sustainable. The most essential element of the bail order is for ensuring the attendance of the accused in the court whenever required. In fact, that is the hub of the order and the other conditions are only subsidiary thereto. So long as that core postulate remains unchanged a surety cannot take advantage of any subsequent modification effected in respect of any other conditions. If a surety is not agreeable to abide by the modified conditions he must apply to the court under Section 444(1) CrPC to discharge him. Until the surety is discharged he is bound by the bond and any modification or even deletion of a condition of the order cannot absolve him from his liability in respect of the unaltered conditions. If there is forfeiture of the bond executed by the surety due to the default of the accused in making appearance before the court it is open to the court concerned to resort to the steps contemplated in Section 446 CrPC as against the sureties, besides the accused himself. (Para 12). Mohd. Kunju v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 8 SCC 660: AIR 2000 SC 6.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1999]

State of Bihar v. M. Homi, AIR 1955 SC 478: (1955) 2 SCR 78, distinguished [6866] — S. 441 and Sch. II Form 45 — Extent of liability of surety on forfeiture of the bond — Held, each surety would be liable for the amount undertaken by him — On facts, the accused had furnished a personal bond for Rs 25,000 and two sureties for the same amount — Hence, on forfeiture of such bond, each of the surety, held, was liable to pay Rs 25,000 individually and could not share the amount by half and half (Paras 14 and 5). Mohd. Kunju v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 8 SCC 660: AIR 2000 SC 6.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1999]

Ram Lal v. State of U.P., (1979) 2 SCC 192: 1979 SCC (Cri) 418: AIR 1979 SC 1498, followed

— S. 441(3) See Ss. 437, 441(3) and 209(b)

— S. 442 See Ss. 436 to 450

See also Ss. 436, 437, 440, 441 and 442

See also Ss. 441 and 442

— S. 442(1) See Ss. 167(2), proviso (a), 309(2), 437(5), 439(2), 441, 442(1) and 444

— S. 443 See Ss. 436 to 450

— S. 444 See Ss. 167(2), proviso (a), 309(2), 437(5), 439(2), 441, 442(1) and 444

See also Ss. 436 to 450

— S. 444(1) See Ss. 441, 446 and 444(1)

— S. 445 See Ss. 436, 389, 437, 441 and 445

See also Ss. 436 to 450

— S. 446 See also S. 514, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1279 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 446 See Ss. 436 to 450

See also Ss. 441, 446 and 444(1)

See also Ss. 449(ii) & (i) and 446

[6867] — S. 446 — Bond given to a police officer — If can be enforced and security forfeited — S. 523 and U.P. Police Regulations, Regulation 165 — Effect of — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 514 and 523

Though S. 523, CrPC, read with Regulation 165 of U.P. Police Regulations authorises the police to seize the property and to make a summary order of the custody of the property, but neither S. 523 nor R. 165(ii) authorizes the police officer to take a bond from the person to whom the property is entrusted. The policy of the law appears to be that the execution of the bond involves a civil liability and, therefore, it is in the fitness of things that it should be executed before a court.

Section 514 clearly shows that a bond for the production of the property seized by the police must be executed before the Court, although a bond for the appearance of any person before the Court can be taken by the police under S. 170(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. This section also clearly enjoins that a bond can be forfeited only if it is executed before a court or before a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class.

Since in the present case the bond was not one as contemplated by S. 514, it could not be forfeited.

Even under the new Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 there is no express provision which empowers the police to get a bond from the person to whom the property seized is entrusted.

No observation is being made regarding any other liability of the appellant under the law. Anwar Ahmad v. State of U.P., (1976) 1 SCC 154: 1975 SCC (Cri) 785: AIR 1976 SC 680: (1976) 1 SCR 779: 1976 Cri LJ 620.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-1975]

[6868] — S. 446 — Charges against foreigners who have already left India directed to be dropped — Charges being of trivial nature only a token penalty of Rs. 100 imposed upon surety. Madhu Limaye v. Metropolitan Magistrate, 1984 Supp SCC 699: 1985 SCC (Cri) 148.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and R.S. Pathak and V. Khalid, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-1984]

[6869] — S. 446(3) — Remission in penalty — In the peculiar circumstances of the case, granted — Foreign national under indictment under Ss. 466 and 471 IPC and a few other offences under Registration of Foreigners Act and Passport Act released on bail and thereafter absconding abroad secretly — Sureties in terms of the bond were liable to pay Rs 25,000 each — In such circumstances, since the offences, though not trivial, were not very serious either, the court had not required the accused to surrender his passport and there was no connivance on the part of the sureties, Supreme Court granting remission to them and directing each surety to pay instead Rs 5000 as penalty — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 466 and 471 — Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 — Passport Act, 1967 (Paras 15 and 16). Mohd. Kunju v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 8 SCC 660: AIR 2000 SC 6.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1999]

Madhu Limaye v. Metropolitan Magistrate, 1984 Supp SCC 699: 1985 SCC (Cri) 148, followed

— S. 446-A See Ss. 436 to 439 and 446-A

See also Ss. 439 and 446-A

— S. 447 See Ss. 436 to 450

— S. 448 See Ss. 436 to 450

— S. 449 See Ss. 436 to 450

— S. 449(i) See also Ss. 449(ii) & (i) and 446

[6870] — Ss. 449(ii) & (i) and 446 — Applicability of S. 449(ii) — Held, not applicable in cases where appeal lies to Sessions Court — Hence, appeal from appellate order of Sessions Court, held, not maintainable

The order in the instant case was passed by the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate and hence the appeals preferred by the appellants before the Sessions Court were according to law. Section 449(ii) will not apply in any case where the appeal lies to the Sessions Court as the said provision deals with a different situation when the original order has been passed by the Sessions Court in which case the appeal normally lies to the High Court. In the present case only one appeal can be preferred and that was actually filed and was disposed of by the Sessions Court by a judgment. It is not an order falling within the ambit of clause (ii). Hence no further appeal could have been maintained. (Para 7). Mohd. Kunju v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 8 SCC 660: AIR 2000 SC 6.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-10-1999]

— S. 450 See Ss. 436 to 450

— Ch. XXXIV See S. 4 and Chs. VII, XIII & XXXIV

— S. 451 See also S. 516-A, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1280 in Vol. 2

— S. 451 See Ss. 102 and 451

See also Ss. 164, 451, 452 and 457

See also Ss. 457 and 451

See also Ss. 482 & 451

[6871] — S. 451 — Custody of the animal during pendency of prosecution — Owner's right to — Unless deprived of the custody consequent to conviction under the Act for the second time, the owner of the animal, held, not barred from claiming interim custody thereof — S. 35(2), Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960 gives discretion to, but does not bind, the Magistrate to give interim custody of the animal to a pinjrapole in the event of not sending it to an infirmary — Bombay Police Act, 1951 (22 of 1951) — Gujarat Diseases of Animals Control Rules, 1963, Rr. 65 to 75 — Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960, Ss. 35 and 29(3) & (4)

In view of the provisions of Section 35 of the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960 and Section 451 of CrPC, it has to be held that unless the owner of the animal in respect of which he is facing prosecution, is deprived of the custody (which can be done only on his conviction under the Act for the second time), no bar can be inferred against him to claim interim custody of the animal.

Section 35(2) vests in the Magistrate the discretion to give interim custody of the animal to a pinjrapole. It does not say that the Magistrate shall send the animals to a pinjrapole. The expression "shall be sent" occurring in Section 35(2) is a part of the direction to be given by the Magistrate if in his discretion he decides to give interim custody to a pinjrapole. It follows that under Section 35(2), the Magistrate has discretion to hand over interim custody of the animal to a pinjrapole but he is not bound to hand over custody of the animal to a pinjrapole in the event of not sending it to an infirmary. In a case where the owner is claiming the custody of the animal, the pinjrapole has no preferential right. Pinjrapole Deudar v. Chakram Moraji Nat, (1998) 6 SCC 520: AIR 1998 SC 2769.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-1998]

[6872] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Applicability — Relief — In the present case, pursuant to FIR against drivers and cleaners for cruelty against animals filled in trucks, police seizing the animals and placing them in pinjrapole — Animal owners' application under Ss. 451 and 457 CrPC for release of animals rejected by trial court — Animal owners filing writ petition thereagainst but not claiming therein award of any compensation or costs against the First Informant — In such circumstances, High Court's direction to First Informant to pay compensation and cost to writ petitioners, held, improper (Paras 29, 30, 33, 34, 36, 37 and 42). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

Krishna Priya Ganguly v. University of Lucknow, (1984) 1 SCC 307; Om Prakash v. Ram Kumar, (1991) 1 SCC 441, followed

Dosukhan Samdakhan Sindhi v. State of Gujarat, 2009 Cri LR 101 (Mah & Guj), reversed

[6873] — S. 451 — Writ petition filed by respondent challenging seizure of sandalwood by appellant — Criminal cases relating to seizure of the lorry and sandalwood pending against respondent — High Court taking the view that the sandalwood seized did not form part of the subject-matter of the criminal cases and that simply because there was no official seal mark on the sandalwood seized, it could not be said that the sandalwood was illicitly purchased or smuggled and accordingly it directing the appellant to return the sandalwood to respondent — Held, in absence of any evidence on record High Court erred in recording such findings on disputed questions of fact — Criminal court under S. 451 CrPC was the proper forum for adjudicating such dispute — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — Decision on question of fact, Art. 226

The High Court committed error in adjudicating the question whether the sandalwood was legally or illegally seized or was it or was it not in wrongful possession or whether the seized sandalwood is or is not the subject-matter of criminal cases. There did not exist any evidence on record to decide or conclude any such above findings. Therefore, the High Court committed error in going into the questions and recording findings which it should not have done in exercise of its power under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. Not only High Court has decided disputed questions of fact but through its order has taken the property outside the reach of the criminal court. Accordingly, the said impugned orders are unsustainable in law. In fact the proper course open to the respondent was to move the criminal court under Section 451 of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of the custody of the seized sandalwood. The High Court has committed error in issuing the writ and granting relief to the respondent. (Para 4). S.P., Forest Cell v. Kannans Co., (2001) 9 SCC 209.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Misra and N. Santosh Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-2000]

[6874] — S. 451 — Conditional release of vehicle during trial — Not advisable to keep the vehicle in court compound indefinitely — More advisable to release it to the owner by imposing certain conditions during the pendency of the trial. Ashok Kumar v. State of Bihar, (2001) 9 SCC 718.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R. P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-2000]

[6875] — S. 451 — Conditional release of vehicle during trial — Subject to certain conditions, custody of vehicle could be entrusted temporarily to its registered owner during the pendency of the trial. Rajendra Prasad v. State of Bihar, (2001) 10 SCC 88.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-2-2000]

[6876] — S. 451 — Seizure of truck for alleged non-production of papers — Conditional order for release of said truck which was purchased on loan — Propriety of — High Court confirming the order of Sessions Court which directed the release of truck to the appellant, the registered owner of the truck, subject to the condition that the appellant would first get the guarantors exonerated from the guarantee furnished by them in respect of the loan taken by the appellant for the purchase of the truck, and that he would also furnish a security of Rs 4 lakhs — Held, the inter se civil liabilities of the appellant, the financier and the guarantors were not the subject-matter relevant for granting interim custody of the seized vehicle — Hence, condition imposed to get the guarantors exonerated towards the loan, set aside — Direction made for release of truck to the appellant on his furnishing security in the sum of Rs 4 lakhs to the satisfaction of the trial Magistrate (Paras 5, 6 and 7). Ramesh Chand Jain v. State of Haryana, (2007) 15 SCC 126.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2002]

[6877] — S. 451 — Disposal of seized property viz. semi-processed film and negatives — Property must be one regarding which offence is committed in order to attract S. 451 — Offence alleged against accused film producer of inducing investors to deposit large amounts of money in finance company run by him on temptation of high rate of interest and committing fraud and breach of trust by utilising the deposit for production of film — Film remaining unfinished on closure of the finance company and semi-processed films and negatives seized by police during investigation in criminal case against him — In insolvency proceedings pending against the accused the unfinished film and negatives shown as assets of the accused to be secured by Insolvency Court — Held, the semi-processed film and negatives not properties over which an order of disposal could be made under S. 451. Sajan K. Varghese v. State of Kerala, (1989) 2 SCC 208: 1989 SCC (Cri) 339: AIR 1989 SC 1058: (1989) 2 KLT 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak, C.J. and S. Natarajan, J. [Date of decision: 15-2-1989]

[6878] — S. 451 — Disposal of perishable seized item by auction — Upheld — Auction-sale of paddy/rice (perishable item), pending determination of the rights of the parties in suit — Upheld — CPC, 1908, S. 75(f) (Paras 4 and 2). Satnam Agro Industries v. State of Punjab, (2008) 15 SCC 784: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1213: AIR 2009 SC 249: 2009 Cri LJ 387.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: L.S. Panta and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-2008]

[6879] — S. 451 — Whether vehicle or vessel, etc. seized under S. 50(1)(c) Wild Life Act can be released by Magistrate during pendency of trial in exercise of power under S. 451 CrPC — Held, provisions of S. 50 and amendments made thereunder do not in any way affect Magistrate's power to order interim release under S. 451 CrPC — Further held, to contend that the use of a vehicle in the commission of an offence under the Act, without anything else would bar its interim release appears to be quite unreasonable — There may be a case where a vehicle was undeniably used for commission of an offence under the Act but the vehicle's owner is in a position to show that it was used for committing the offence only after it was stolen from his possession — In such situation there is no rea- son as to why the vehicle should not be released in the owner's favour during the pendency of the trial — Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972 — S. 50 (as amended by Amendment Act 44 of 1991) (Paras 1, 16 and 20 to 23). State of M.P. v. Madhukar Rao, (2008) 14 SCC 624.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2008]

Moti Lal v. CBI, (2002) 4 SCC 713: 2002 SCC (Cri) 889, relied on

State of Karnataka v. K.A. Kunchindammed, (2002) 9 SCC 90: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1085, distinguished [6880] — S. 451 — Relative scope and applicability of Ss. 39(1)(d) and 50(1)(c), Wild Life Act — S. 39(1)(d) of the Act if made the articles seized under S. 50(1)(c) of the Act government property and, therefore, there was no question of their release — Held, S. 39(1)(d) would come into play only after a court of competent jurisdiction found the accusation and the allegations made against the accused as true and recorded the finding that the seized article was, as a matter of fact, used in the commission of offence — Any attempt to operationalise S. 39(1)(d) of the Act merely on the basis of seizure and accusations/allegations levelled by the departmental authorities would bring it into conflict with the constitutional provisions and would render it unconstitutional and invalid — On facts held, provisions of S. 39(1)(d) cannot be used against exercise of the magisterial power under S. 451 CrPC to release the vehicle during pendency of the trial — Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972 — Ss. 39(1)(d) and 50(1)(c) (Para 23). State of M.P. v. Madhukar Rao, (2008) 14 SCC 624.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2008]

[6881] — S. 451 — Interim release — Power of — Forest produce — Includes sandalwood oil — Wherever word "sandalwood" used in the Act, it has to be understood as including "sandalwood oil" in view of definition under S. 2(18), Karnataka Forest Act — Therefore, where vehicle carrying sandalwood oil seized by forest officer on allegation of illegal transportation of forest produce, report about the seizure required to be submitted to the Authorized Officer under S. 62(3)(a), Karnataka Forest Act and the sandalwood oil together with the vehicle would be liable to be confiscated by the Authorized Officer under S. 71-A, who alone and not the Magistrate shall have jurisdiction under S. 71-G to make orders with regard to interim custody/release of the vehicle seized — Karnataka Forest Act, 1963 (5 of 1964), Ss. 2(7), (18), 62(3)(a), 65, 71, 71-A, 71-C, 71-D and 71-G

A lorry carrying 5 barrels of sandalwood oil was seized by the officials of the Forest Mobile Squad on the allegation of illegal transportation of forest produce. Thereupon, FIR was registered and a report about the seizure was submitted to the Authorized Officer and Deputy Conservator of Forests under Section 71-A of the Act. By an order of the Authorized Officer, custody of the seized material and the vehicle was entrusted to the Forest Range Officer as whereabouts of the driver and owner of the vehicle were not known to the Authorized Officer. After publication of a notice in the newspaper for information of all concerned, particularly the persons interested in the goods seized, when nobody came forward to claim the seized property, the Authorized Officer ordered confiscation of the seized vehicle and the sandalwood oil. The order was published in the Official Gazette as well as in the newspaper and the same, having not been challenged in appeal under Section 71-D or in any other proceeding, stood confirmed under Section 71-F of the Act and was published in the Official Gazette. The owner of the vehicle, the respondent, filed an application before the Judicial Magistrate for interim custody of the vehicle. But the Magistrate dismissed the application holding that in the circumstances of the case the power to grant interim release/custody of the vehicle was vested in the Authorized Officer. The said order was challenged by the respondent in revision before the Sessions Judge who upheld the order passed by the Magistrate. The respondent then challenged the order of the Sessions Judge by filing a petition under Section 482 CrPC. The High Court took the view that the power to order for interim custody of a vehicle seized, which was found illegally transporting sandalwood oil, is not vested in the Authorized Officer but in the Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in the area for the reason that while the expression sandalwood is included in the provisions vested in the exclusive jurisdiction of the Authorized Officer, "sandalwood oil" is not mentioned therein. Since the two terms have been separately mentioned in the inclusive definition of the term "forest produce" the High Court drew the inference that the power for interim custody of the vehicle is to be exercised only by the jurisdictional Magistrate and not by the Authorized Officer. Accordingly the High Court allowed the petition and issued a direction to the Magistrate to consider the request of the petitioner for interim custody of the vehicle on merits and further directed disposal of the matter within two weeks.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court failed to take note of the definition of the expression "sandalwood" in Section 2(18) of the Act in which "sandalwood oil" has been included within the term "sandalwood". It follows that wherever the term "sandalwood" is used under the Act, it has to be understood in terms of the definition in Section 2(18). If the provisions relating to power of confiscation in Sections 71-A, 71-C, 71-D and bar of jurisdiction in Section 71-G are so read, it is clear that "sandalwood oil" is also included within the purview of the said sections and the distinction between the two terms and their specific inclusion or exclusion in the statutory provision does not exist. Perhaps the attention of the High Court was not drawn to the amended provisions of the Act. Therefore, the Magistrate and the Sessions Judge were right in holding that on facts and in the circumstances of the case, it is the Authorized Officer who is vested with the power to pass order of interim custody of the vehicle and not the Magistrate. The High Court was in error in taking a view to the contrary and in setting aside the orders passed by the Magistrate and the Sessions Judge on that basis. (Paras 22 and 24)

The Karnataka Forest Act is a special statute enacted for the purpose of preserving the forests and the forest produce in the State. The scheme of the Act, as expressed in the sections, is to vest power in the Authorized Officers of the Forest Department for proper implementation/enforcement of the statutory provisions and for enabling them to take effective steps for preserving the forests and forest produce. For this purpose, certain powers including the power of seizure, confiscation and forfeiture of the forest produce illegally removed from the forests have been vested exclusively in them. The position is made clear by the non obstante clause in the relevant provisions giving overriding effect to the provisions in the Act over other statutes and laws. The necessary corollary of such provisions is that in a case where the Authorized Officer is empowered to confiscate the seized forest produce on being satisfied that an offence under the Act has been committed thereof the general power vested in the Magistrate for dealing with interim custody/release of the seized materials under CrPC has to give way. The Magistrate while dealing with a case of any seizure of forest produce under the Act should examine whether the power to confiscate the seized forest produce is vested in the Authorized Officer under the Act and if he finds that such power is vested in the Authorized Officer then he has no power to pass an order dealing with interim custody/release of the seized material. This will help in proper implementation of provisions of the special Act and will help in advancing the purpose and object of the statute. If in such cases power to grant interim custody/release of the seized forest produce is vested in the Magistrate then it will be defeating the very scheme of the Act. Such a consequence is to be avoided. (Para 23). State of Karnataka v. K.A. Kunchindammed, (2002) 9 SCC 90: AIR 2002 SC 1875: 2002 Cri LJ 2565.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-2002]

[6882] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Consideration of application under — Directions that can be issued at stage of — Application for interim custody of animals filed during pendency of applicant's complaint under various provisions of IPC, accusing certain persons, of illegally and with help of police, taking over possession of applicants' animals during transportation thereof in trucks — Trial court not having named any police officer as errant — Direction issued to State Government at this stage before final disposal of complaint, to take departmental action for illegal or unauthorised actions, if any, on the part of any police officer, held, harsh as well as uncalled for — Hence, set aside — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 395, 427, 506 Pt. II and S. 34

In the order passed by the Additional CJM no officer has been named at all. Whether search and seizure of the goats and sheep was illegal or not can be effectively gone into only at the stage of final disposal of the trial and not at interim stage when the court hears an application under Section 451 read with Section 457 CrPC for interim custody of the muddammal. Direction to the State Government to initiate appropriate departmental action against erring police officer for illegal or unauthorised actions at the interim stage is harsh as well as not called for on the facts of the case. Therefore, the said direction also deserves to be set aside. (Para 44). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

[6883] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Interim custody of animals seized by police — Factors relevant to decide entitlement to — Goats and sheep allegedly filled in trucks in cruel manner while in transit seized by police and kept in pinjrapole — Owners of said animals challenging the legality of seizure and seeking interim custody of animals — Taking into consideration that: (i) a long period of one-and-a-half year having elapsed, no marks of cruelty were likely to be found on the animals at the time of production before court to prove cruelty, and (ii) trade in goats and sheep, in which the applicants were engaged, was not prohibited by any law, the applicants, held, entitled to interim custody of the said animals subject to certain conditions as specified — Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960, S. 11(1)(d) — Animals seized under — Entitlement to interim custody of, under Ss. 451 and 457 for interim custody of

The fact that Respondents 1 to 6 were owners of the goats and sheep seized is not disputed. Respondents 1 to 6 by vocation trade in goats and sheep. About one-and-half year has elapsed by this time and by production of goats and sheep seized before the court, the prosecution cannot prove that they were subjected to cruelty by the accused because no marks of cruelty would be found by this time. The trade in which Respondents 1 to 6 are engaged, is not prohibited by any law. Therefore, Respondents 1 to 6 would be entitled to interim custody of goats and sheep. Therefore, Respondent 8 (the panjarapole) is directed to hand over custody of goats and sheep seized in the instant case to Respondents 1 to 6 in such proportion as the original number of seized animals bears to the number of surviving animals, on each of them depositing a sum of rupees fifty thousand with the trial court and each furnishing two sureties of Rs 50,000 to the satisfaction of the trial court. Respondents 1 to 6 are directed to see that no cruelty is meted out to the surviving animals and submit an undertaking to that effect to the trial court within two weeks. (Paras 47 to 49). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

[6884] — S. 451 — Release of vehicle — Trial under NDPS Act, 1985 — In the facts and circumstances of the case, held, High Court's order releasing vehicle during trial not sustainable — Accused directed to surrender the vehicle within one month — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 (Paras 3 and 4). Union of India v. Dinesh Kumar Verma, (2005) 9 SCC 330.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2005]

[6885] — S. 451 — Security for release of property to be produced at the time of trial — Order of High Court modified in the interests of justice — CrPC, 1898, S. 516-A. Vijay Bahadur Singh v. State of U.P., (1975) 4 SCC 113: 1975 SCC (Cri) 367: AIR 1975 SC 1512: 1975 Cri LJ 1326.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and R.S. Sarkaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-1975]

[6886] — S. 451 — Confiscation of vehicle — Burden of proof to establish no offence committed — Option to pay fine, in lieu of confiscation — Duty of court — Illegal transportation of liquor — A, driver of appellant found transporting foreign liquor — Trial court convicted and sentenced A under S. 34, M.P. Excise Act and also issued show-cause notice to appellant against confiscation of truck under S. 46, M.P. Excise Act — Stand of appellant that he was only the owner of truck and was not present in it at the time of seizure and that driver A without his consent and permission took the truck — Trial court ordered for confiscation of truck which was confirmed by the appellate court as well as High Court — Before Supreme Court it was alternatively submitted that S. 47, M.P. Excise Act as it stood before amendment, was applicable to the facts of the case and in lieu of confiscation fine can be imposed — Held, appellant could not establish his defence available under proviso to S. 46 — Despite that under S. 47 the Magistrate ought to have given appellant the option of payment of fine in lieu of confiscation of vehicle — M.P. Excise Act, 1915 (2 of 1915), Ss. 46 and 47

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

According to the proviso to Section 46, the burden is on the owner of the property to establish that he had no reason to believe that such offence was being committed or was likely to be committed. It provides that no animals, carts, vessels, rafts and other conveyance shall be liable to confiscation, if it is proved that they are not the property of the offender and if the owner establishes that he has no reason to believe that such offence was being or was likely to be committed. As noted above, the owner has to establish the aforesaid facts. The trial court, first appellate court and the High Court have concluded that the appellant has not established his lack of knowledge. (Paras 11 and 12)

Coming to the alternative submission relating to payment of fine in lieu of confiscation the Supreme Court found that the Magistrate had not indicated the alternative to the appellant. (Para 13). Kailashchandra v. State of M.P., (2007) 14 SCC 595: 2008 Cri LJ 1035.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, Tarun Chatterjee and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-2007]

[6887] — Ss. 451, 452 and 457 — Disposal of car seized by the police — Held, a car once seized can be returned only pursuant to the order of a competent court only. George v. State of Kerala, (1998) 4 SCC 605: AIR 1998 SC 1376: 1998 Cri LJ 2034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-3-1998]

[6888] — Ss. 451 and 452 — Property custodia legis — Owner entitled to its delivery, and if property lost and not traceable while in court's custody, entitled to its value. Inter Continental Agencies (P) Ltd. v. Amin Chand Khanna, (1980) 3 SCC 103: 1980 SCC (Cri) 544: AIR 1980 SC 951: 1980 Cri LJ 689: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 583.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1980]

[6889] — Ss. 451 and 452 — Prosecution under S. 411 IPC for recovery of some items of the property from the houses of the accused persons — Conviction by trial court on the basis of identification of two items — Conviction set aside by the High Court — CJM directed to make enquiry and pass appropriate orders in respect of those two items along with other articles. Sulekh Chand v. Suresh Chand, AIR 1991 SC 380: 1991 Cri LJ 469: 1990 All LJ 916.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1990]

[6890] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Ss. 6-A, 7, Essential Commodities Act, 1955 do not exclude criminal court's jurisdiction under Ss. 523 and 516-A, CrPC, 1898 — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 523 and 516-A — Essential Commodities Act, 1955, Ss. 6-A and 7

Having regard to the language used in Ss. 6-A and 7 of the Essential Commodities Act it must be held that the criminal court's jurisdiction to entertain an application under S. 523 read with S. 516-A CrPC, 1898 is not completely ousted. State of M.P. v. Rameshwar Rathod, (1990) 4 SCC 21: 1990 SCC (Cri) 522: AIR 1990 SC 1849: 1990 Cri LJ 1756.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sabyasachi Mukharji, C.J. and K.N. Saikia, J. [Date of decision: 10-7-1990]

[6891] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Disposal of mudammal articles, kept in police custody, pending trial — Expeditious and judicious exercise of power under S. 451 needed — Purpose of such exercise of power stated — Procedure for custody and disposal of valuable articles and currency notes, vehicles, seized liquor and narcotic drugs laid down

The powers under Section 451 CrPC should be exercised expeditiously and judiciously. It would serve various purposes, namely:

1. owner of the article would not suffer because of its remaining unused or by its misappropriation;

2. court or the police would not be required to keep the article in safe custody;

3. if the proper panchnama before handing over possession of article is prepared, that can be used in evidence instead of its production before the court during the trial. If necessary, evidence could also be recorded describing the nature of the property in detail; and

4. this jurisdiction of the court to record evidence should be exercised promptly so that there may not be further chance of tampering with the articles. (Para 7)

Valuable articles and currency notes

Valuable articles such as golden or silver ornaments or articles studded with precious stones, need not be kept in police custody for years till trial is over. The Magistrate should pass appropriate orders as contemplated under Section 451 CrPC at the earliest. For this purpose, if material on record indicates that such articles belong to the complainant at whose house theft, robbery or dacoity has taken place, then seized articles be handed over to the complainant after:

(1) preparing detailed proper panchnama of such articles;

(2) taking photographs of such articles and a bond that such articles would be produced if required at the time of trial; and

(3) after taking proper security.

For this purpose, the court may follow the procedure of recording such evidence, as it thinks necessary, as provided under Section 451 CrPC. The bond and security should be taken so as to prevent the evidence being lost, altered or destroyed. The court should see that photographs of such articles are attested or countersigned by the complainant, accused as well as by the person to whom the custody is handed over. Still however, it would be the function of the court under Section 451 CrPC to impose any other appropriate condition. (Para 13)

In case, where such articles are not handed over either to the complainant or to the person from whom such articles are seized or to its claimant, then the court may direct that such articles be kept in bank lockers. Similarly, if articles are required to be kept in police custody, it would be open to the SHO after preparing proper panchnama to keep such articles in a bank locker. In any case, such articles should be produced before the Magistrate within a week of their seizure. If required, the court may direct that such articles be handed back to the investigating officer for further investigation and identification. However, in no set of circumstances the investigating officer should keep such articles in custody for a longer period for the purposes of investigation and identification. For currency notes, similar procedure can be followed. (Para 14)

Vehicles

It is of no use to keep such seized vehicles at the police stations for a long period. It is for the Magistrate to pass appropriate orders immediately by taking appropriate bond and guarantee as well as security for return of the said vehicles, if required at any point of time. This can be done pending hearing of applications for return of such vehicles. (Para 17)

In case where the vehicle is not claimed by the accused, owner, or the insurance company or by a third person, then such vehicle may be ordered to be auctioned by the court. If the said vehicle is insured with the insurance company then the insurance company be informed by the court to take possession of the vehicle which is not claimed by the owner or a third person. If the insurance company fails to take possession, the vehicles may be sold as per the direction of the court. The court would pass such order within a period of six months from the date of production of the said vehicle before the court. In any case, before handing over possession of such vehicles, appropriate photographs of the said vehicle should be taken and detailed panchnama should be prepared. (Para 18)

Liquor/Narcotic drugs

For articles such as seized liquor also, prompt action should be taken in disposing of them after preparing necessary panchnama. If sample is required to be taken, the sample may be kept properly after sending it to the Chemical Analyser, if required. But in no case, a large quantity of liquor should be stored at the police station. No purpose is served by such storing. (Para 19)

Similarly for the narcotic drugs also, for its identification, procedure under Section 451 CrPC should be followed of recording evidence and disposal. Its identity could be on the basis of evidence recorded by the Magistrate. Samples also should be sent immediately to the Chemical Analyser so that subsequently, a contention may not be raised that the article which was seized was not the same. (Para 20)

However these powers are to be exercised by the Magistrate concerned. The Magistrate concerned would take immediate action for seeing that powers under Section 451 CrPC are properly and promptly exercised and articles are not kept for a long time at the police station, in any case, for not more than fifteen days to one month. This object can also be achieved if there is proper supervision by the Registry of the High Court concerned in seeing that the rules framed by the High Court with regard to such articles are implemented properly. (Para 21). Sunderbhai Ambalal Desai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 10 SCC 283: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1943: AIR 2003 SC 638.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-10-2002]

Basavva Kom Dyamangouda Patil v. State of Mysore, (1977) 4 SCC 358: 1977 SCC (Cri) 598, relied on [6892] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Disposal of mudammal property, kept in police custody pending trial — Procedure for custody and disposal of valuable articles, vehicles etc. — In furtherance of directions dated 1-10-2002 published at (2002) 10 SCC 283, where accused disputes that he is not involved in the alleged incident and no article was found on him, Supreme Court clarifying and passing directions — Court further clarifying that there may not be any necessity of producing the vehicle before the court and seizure report may be sufficient. Sunderbhai Ambalal Desai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 10 SCC 290: 2003 SCC (Cri) J 440.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2002]

Sunderbhai Ambalal Desai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 10 SCC 283, clarified

[6893] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Custody and disposal of vehicles seized in accidents — Strict compliance with orders issued in Sunderbhai, (2002) 10 SCC 283 and General Insurance Council, (2007) 12 SCC 354 mandated — Further directions issued to ensure implementation of statutory provisions, and senior police officials directed to be in charge of disposal of seized vehicles so that national waste caused by their neglect in police station be reduced/eliminated — Constitution of India — Arts. 32 and 141 — Central Motor Vehicles Rules, 1989, R. 159 — Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, Ss. 147, 149, 166 and 158(6)

Directed :

The insurer may move a separate application for release of recovered vehicle as soon as it was informed of such recovery before the jurisdictional court. Release to be made within 30 days of application and necessary photographs duly authenticated and certified may be taken and detailed panchnama prepared before release. Insurer to submit an undertaking/guarantee to remit proceeds from sale/auction of vehicle conducted by the Insurance Company in the event the Magistrate finally adjudicates that rightful ownership of vehicle does not vest with the insurer. General Insurance Council v. State of A.P., (2010) 6 SCC 768.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-2010]

Sunderbhai Ambalal Desai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 10 SCC 283: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1943; General Insurance Council v. State of A.P., (2007) 12 SCC 354: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 384, followed [6894] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Release of vehicle — Vehicle purchased under an hire-purchase agreement — Right of financier vis-à-vis hirer — Registration certificate of vehicle indicating name of financier and the factum that the vehicle was subject to hire-purchase agreement — In hire-purchase agreement, appellant financier was described as owner and Respondent 2 as hirer — Respondent 2 applying for release of vehicle — Vehicle released in his favour on certain conditions — But Respondent 2 not fulfilling those conditions — Vehicle, therefore, lying with seizing authorities for nearly 8 years — On these facts, held, vehicle could be released in favour of appellant financier subject to fulfilment of the conditions which were stipulated for Respondent 2 — T.N. Prohibition Act, 1937 (10 of 1937), Ss. 4(1)(a) & (aaa) (Para 10). Bharath Metha v. State, (2008) 5 SCC 752: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 72: AIR 2008 SC 1970: 2008 Cri LJ 2245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2008]

Charanjit Singh Chadha v. Sudhir Mehra, (2001) 7 SCC 417: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1557; Sunderbhai Ambalal Desai v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 10 SCC 283: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1943, relied on [6895] — Ss. 451 and 457 — Release of property — Property seized in connection with a case against appellants' father — Application filed by appellants before Magistrate for release of the property dismissed on ground that accused father of appellants was absconding — Writ petition filed against Magistrate's order, dismissed by High Court — But from appellant's submission as also from several proceedings pending before Supreme Court, it appearing that appellant's father was not absconding but had been admitted in AIIMS, New Delhi — Held, Magistrate was not justified in rejecting the application for release of the property on the sole ground that appellant's father was absconding — High Court also failed to correct the error in exercise of its jurisdiction under Art. 226 — Magistrate directed to consider the application for release of the property on merits. Dhananjay Kumar Pandey v. State of Bihar, (2000) 9 SCC 209: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1207.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2000]

[6896] — Ss. 451 to 457 — Provisions in Rajasthan Excise Act barring jurisdiction of courts — Constitutionality — Provisions in State Excise Act relating to seizure, etc. of vehicles, etc. for transporting exigible articles barring jurisdiction of courts under CrPC — Nature and constitutionality of — Provisions in State Act concerned (Rajasthan Excise Act, 1950 in this case), conferring jurisdiction on Excise Authorities to make order with regard to possession, delivery, disposal or release of the means of conveyance seized and barring the jurisdiction and powers of courts under CrPC in that regard — Nature and constitutionality of, and analogous provisions — Held, they are regulatory in nature and constitutional — Analogous provisions of other State Acts cited — Nature and constitutionality of — Constitution of India, Arts. 254, 14, 19, 20, 21, 301, 246(3) and Sch. VII List II Entries 8, 64 & 65 — T.N. Excise Act, 1971 (34 of 1971), Ss. 4 and 14-A — Karnataka Excise Act, 1965 (21 of 1966), Ss. 43-A and 43-B — U.P. Excise Act, 1910 (4 of 1910), S. 72 — Andhra Pradesh Excise Act, 1968 (17 of 1968), Ss. 46 and 46-A — Rajasthan Excise Act, 1950 (2 of 1950), Ss. 54-A, 69(6) to (9) (ins. in 2000) and S. 9-B (ins. in 1998) and Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Amending Act of 2000 (Paras 15, 20, 21, 23, 1, 2, 6 and 3). Oma Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 5 SCC 502.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2008]

P.N. Krishna Lal v. Govt. of Kerala, 1995 Supp (2) SCC 187: 1995 SCC (Cri) 466; State of Karnataka v. K. Krishnan, (2000) 7 SCC 80: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1289; Shambhu Dayal Agarwala v. State of W.B., (1990) 3 SCC 549: 1990 SCC (Cri) 489; Jilubhai Nanbhai Khachar v. State of Gujarat, 1995 Supp (1) SCC 596, followed

— S. 452 See also S. 517, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1280 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 452 See Ss. 164, 451, 452 and 457

See also Ss. 451 & 452

See also Ss. 451 to 457

See also Ss. 451, 452 and 457

See also Ss. 482 and 452

[6897] — S. 452 — Disposal of property — Property subject-matter of theft case lost while in custody of police — Liability of State to pay compensation to owner — CrPC, 1898, S. 517

In the instant case, it is not the case of the State that the property was lost in spite of due care and caution having been taken by it or due to circumstances beyond its control. The articles were alleged to have been kept in the guardroom of the police station and except the formality of a report that they were lost having been lodged no other action was taken by the State against the concerned police officers who were responsible for the custody. Therefore the State cannot successfully resist the application filed by the appellant and the value of the property must be paid to the appellant by the State.

Only the value of the articles recovered and seized by the police is due. Therefore Court must look for material showing value of the articles seized.

In the present case the appellant is entitled not only to the value of the goods but also the costs throughout. Basavva Kom Dyamangouda Patil v. State of Mysore, (1977) 4 SCC 358: 1977 SCC (Cri) 598: AIR 1977 SC 1749: 1977 Cri LJ 1141: 1977 MLJ (Cri) 486.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, R.S. Sarkaria and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-1977]

[6898] — S. 452 — Auction of a truck seized in connection with a theft — Thereafter criminal proceedings ending in favour of the accused from whom the truck was seized and the truck directed to be returned to the accused — Held, auction-purchaser has no right to claim the truck. Naiz Ahmed v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (3) SCC 356: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1730.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy, S. Mohan and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1993]

[6899] — S. 452 — Disposal of property by Magistrate — Appellant-company giving financial facility on hire-purchase basis to respondent for purchase of motor vehicle — On respondent committing default in the payment of purchase price, appellant taking possession of the vehicle as per terms of the agreement — Thereupon respondent filing complaint of theft against appellant — Trial Magistrate dropping the complaint but directing custody of the vehicle be returned the respondent on his executing an indemnity bond with surety — Appellant directed to have the question of title to vehicle determined by civil court — Order affirmed by Sessions Court and High Court — In appeal to Supreme Court held, the learned Magistrate was not right in passing the impugned order and thereby giving relief to a party which had invoked jurisdiction on false accusations — It was surprising that without making good the charge of theft the hirer, by using the State instrumentality, obtained possession of the vehicle — The approach of the courts below was totally unsustainable — Impugned order set aside and the vehicle directed to be restored to the possession of the appellant — Penal Code, 1860, S. 379 — Abuse of judicial process — False complaint. Manipal Finance Corpn. Ltd. v. T. Bangarappa, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 507: 1994 SCC (Cri) 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-4-1993]

[6900] — Ss. 452, 457 and 321 — Articles seized by police during investigation — Disposal of, where prosecution is withdrawn — Held, in such a case, ordinarily the articles have to be returned to the person from whom they were recovered — But, the court can consider various other aspects and can pass appropriate order for disposal of the matter — Articles alleged to have been stolen from Scindia Museum — Recovery of, from Rani Mahal occupied by appellants — Withdrawal of prosecution — Direction by courts below for handing over the recovered articles to Scindia Museum — Challenge to, by appellants — Articles in question were valuable items and some of them were antiques — Further, civil litigations pending between the parties in respect of the ownership of these properties — Held, no reason to interfere with the impugned order (Paras 3 and 4). Rajmata Vijaya Raje Scindia v. State of M.P., (2003) 12 SCC 429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-2003]

Manipal Finance Corpn. Ltd. v. T. Bangarappa, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 507: 1994 SCC (Cri) 588; Brijendra Singh v. Brij Kumar Gupta, 1976 Cri LJ 467: 1975 ACC 270 (2) (All), distinguished on facts

[6901] — Ss. 452 and 162 — Confessional part of statement of accused leading to discovery can be made use of for the purpose of disposal of property — Where the stolen property recovered at the instance of accused is disclaimed by him and he is given benefit of doubt property should be returned to owner — Forfeiture of property to State wholly unwarranted — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 27. Mahesh Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, 1990 Supp SCC 541(2): 1991 SCC (Cri) 219.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1988]

Queen Empress v. Tribhovan Manekchand, ILR 9 Bom 131; Pohlu v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Lah 312: 45 PLR 391: 209 IC 546; Dhanraj Baldeokishan v. State, AIR 1965 Raj 238: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 805: 1965 Raj LW 289; Veerabhadrappa v. Govinda, ILR (1973) 23 Mys 64, approved

[6902] — Ss. 452 and 362 — Disposal of property at conclusion of trial — Theft case ending in acquittal — High Court in revision ordering money recovered from underneath a heap of straw in the outer verandah of accused's house to be returned to the accused — Later same judge reviewing his order holding that if the money belonged to the accused he would not have kept it in the outer verandah underneath a heap of straw and ordering it to be returned to the complainant — Held, though it was true that a criminal order is not reviewed, the impugned order showed that there was a doubt and the disposal of the property was not made lightly —

Hence, in the facts and circumstances of the case no interference with the impugned order was called for. Kineshwar Singh v. Hori Lal, 1995 SCC (Cri) 706.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-1993]

[6903] — Ss. 452 and 454 — SLP — Interference with findings of HC — Practice — Accused in dacoity case acquitted by HC under S. 395 IPC — Complainant (appellant in the present case) applying to HC for return of property, which was the subject matter of the dacoity, as belonging to him — HC declining the request on the ground that ownership was not established — In appeal to SC, held the court was not inclined to interfere with the finding of HC — However, in case the appellant chose to claim the property by way of a regular suit, the findings of HC would not come in his way in establishing his ownership — Penal Code, 1860, S. 395 — Constitution of India — Art. 136. Devi Lal v. Chandan Singh, 1994 SCC (Cri) 157.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and P.B. Sawant, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-11-1992]

— S. 452(1) See also Ss. 4(2) and 452(1)

[6904] — S. 452(1) — Whether special provisions of Customs Act regarding confiscation of goods seized under that Act make the general law as to disposal of property contained in S. 452(1) inapplicable in respect of such goods — Question not considered — Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973, Ss. 13(1) and 67 — Customs Act, 1962, Ss. 135, 111 and 11. Remo Paul Altoe v. Union of India, (1977) 4 SCC 437: 1977 SCC (Cri) 629: AIR 1977 SC 2255: 1977 Cri LJ 1933: (1978) 48 Comp Cas 522.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.C. Gupta and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-10-1977]

[6905] — S. 452(1) — Held, Court's discretion to "make such order as it thinks fit" regarding disposal of the property is judicial and therefore the order must be based on reason and justice — Appellant acquitted of charge under S. 302, Indian Penal Code having caused death by licensed gun in self-defence — He never used or attempted to use the gun for commission of any offence in the past — In absence of any special circumstances, the trial Court, held, not justified in arbitrarily ordering for confiscation of the gun without giving any reason and opportunity of hearing to the appellant — CrPC, 1898, S. 517

The words "may make such order as fit" in S. 517, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, [S. 452(1), Criminal Procedure Code, 1973] vest the court with a discretion to dispose of the property in any of the three modes, viz. (i) destruction, (ii) confiscation, or (iii) delivery to any person entitled to the possession thereof. But the exercise of such discretion is inherently a judicial function. The choice of the mode or manner of disposal is not to be made arbitrarily, but judicially in accordance with sound principles founded on reason and justice, keeping in view the class and nature of the property and the material before it. One of such well-recognised principles is that when after an inquiry or trial the accused is discharged or acquitted, the court should normally restore the property which is "produced before" the court or is "in custody to the person from whose custody it was taken". Departure from this salutary rule of practice is not to be lightly made, when there is no dispute or doubt — as in the instant case — that the property in question was seized from the custody of such accused and belonged to him.

In the present case, the acquittal of the accused-appellant on the ground that the gun was used in causing the fatal injury to the deceased, only in self-defence, necessarily involved a finding that the gun was not used in the commission of any offence for which the accused was tried. The gun thus falls in the class of the property which was in the custody of the court. The trial Court neither gave any reason for its order of confiscation, nor was there any material before it warranting a departure from the general rule, nor is there anything in the record to show that it had before passing the order of confiscation, given an opportunity of being heard to the accused, specifically with regard to this matter. The order of confiscation of the gun was thus manifestly arbitrary.

The High Court also erred in justifying the confiscation order when there was nothing to show that in the past twenty years during which the appellant had been in lawful possession of this gun under a licence, he had ever used or attempted to use this gun for commission of any offence, from which, in the event of the gun being restored to him, a likelihood of his misusing the gun "again" could be reasonably predicated, or even suspected. N. Madhavan v. State of Kerala, (1979) 4 SCC 1: 1979 SCC (Cri) 883: AIR 1979 SC 1829: 1979 Cri LJ 1197.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, P.N. Shinghal and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1979]

[6906] — S. 452(1) — Magistrate convicting appellant for offence under S. 135 Customs Act, 1962 for violation of S. 13(1) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973 for illegal

importation of foreign currency into India — Currency seized by the customs authorities, however, neither produced before the Magistrate nor put in the custody or control of the Court — Held, in such circumstances, no order or direction by the Magistrate under S. 452(1), Criminal Procedure Code, was called for and hence direction for confiscation set aside — Matter left to customs authorities to proceed according to law — Plea for restoration of seized currency to the appellant not acceded to. Remo Paul Altoe v. Union of India, (1977) 4 SCC 437: 1977 SCC (Cri) 629: AIR 1977 SC 2255: 1977 Cri LJ 1933: (1978) 48 Comp Cas 522.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.C. Gupta and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-10-1977]

— S. 453 See Ss. 451 to 457

— S. 454 See Ss. 451 to 457

See also Ss. 452 and 454

— S. 455 See Ss. 451 to 457

— S. 456 See also S. 522, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1282 in Vol. 2

— S. 456 See Ss. 372 and 456

See also Ss. 451 to 457

[6907] — S. 456(2) — Appellate Court has power to make order for restoration of possession of immovable property even after disposing of the appeal — Where no time-limit prescribed order must be made within a reasonable time — "While disposing of the appeal, reference or revision" — Meaning of — CrPC, 1898, S. 522

The appellate or revisional court acting under S. 456(2) will have jurisdiction or power to pass the order for restoration of possession at any time. There is no limitation on the power to the effect that such order must be incorporated in the body of the judgment disposing of the appeal, reference or revision; but it has to be exercised with discretion within reasonable time of the disposal of the appeal, reference or revision. H.P. Gupta v. Manohar Lal, (1979) 2 SCC 486: 1979 SCC (Cri) 530: AIR 1979 SC 443: 1979 Cri LJ 199: 1979 MLJ (Cri) 322: (1978) 15 ACC 427.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.D. Tulzapurkar and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-11-1978]

— S. 457 See also S. 523, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1282 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 457 See Ss. 164, 451, 452 and 457

See also Ss. 451 to 457

See also Ss. 451, 452 and 457

See also Ss. 451 & 457

See also Ss. 452, 457 and 321

[6908] — S. 457 — Court has power to order release of property seized from any person in connection with an offence even though the property was not produced before Court and trial has not commenced — Court however has to decide on release only after considering whether property will be required to be produced at the trial or not

The Special Judge has power to release the seized property but that would not mean that whenever the claimants ask for its return he should give it back.

But the question of releasing the property to the claimant has to be decided by the Court on the merits in each case and this discretion of the Court has to be exercised after due consideration of the interests of justice including the prospective necessity of the production of the seized property at the time of the trial. If the release of the property will, in any manner, affect or prejudice the course of justice at the time of trial, it will be a wise exercise of discretion to reject the claim for return. Ram Parkash Sharma v. State of Haryana, (1978) 2 SCC 491: 1978 SCC (Cri) 309: AIR 1978 SC 1282: (1978) Cri LJ 1120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and V.D. Tulzapurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-1978]

[6909] — S. 457 — Order of High Court for return of sums of monies and documents becoming final — In the absence of a criminal case or a valid order of assessment by the Income Tax authorities, such property could not be retained and must be returned — There must be an authority of law under which money can be kept — Revenue cannot keep the money on the plea that there will be a demand — CrPC, 1898, S. 523. J.R. Malhotra v. Addl. Sessions Judge, (1976) 1 SCC 430: 1976 SCC (Cri) 48: AIR 1976 SC 219: (1976) 2 SCR 993: 1976 Tax LR 130.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: A.N. Ray, C.J. and M.H. Beg, R.S. Sarkaria and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1975]

[6910] — S. 457 — Interference by High Court if justified — Excise Commissioner directing release of seized vehicle on furnishing of bank guarantee equal to value of vehicle — Respondent instead of availing remedy of statutory appeal preferred application to High Court — High Court without assigning any reason directing release of the vehicle on executing a bond — Held, High Court ought not to have interfered in a matter where statutory remedies are provided — Though vehicle released pursuant to order of High Court, respondent directed to furnish bank guarantee of Rs 25,000 in addition to personal bond executed for release of the vehicle — Kerala Abkari Act, 1077 (1 of 1077), Ss. 55(a), 67-B, 67-E & 67-F (Paras 6 to 8). State of Kerala v. C.A. Jabbar, (2009) 15 SCC 92: (2009) 2 KLT 709.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2009]

[6911] — Ss. 457 and 102 — Illegal search and seizure — Liability to pay compensation/costs — In case of illegal seizure of jewellery and ornaments, the Department, held, liable to compensate the owner at least by way of costs — In the present case High Court directing payment of interest @ 8% p.a. on the value of the illegally seized articles which High Court had quantified at Rs 84.68 lakhs — Department not complying therewith until about one long year later when the said articles were returned — Such omission on the part of the Department, held, further aggravated the loss suffered by the owner — Hence, without examining the question of payability of interest, Department directed to pay within four weeks Rs 75,000 on account of costs in full settlement of the claim towards the quantum of interest under High Court's order — Further directed, omission to comply with the order herein would culminate in automatic dismissal of the present appeal with costs — Income Tax Act, 1961, S. 132

Certain items of jewellery and ornaments belonging to the respondents were seized by the departmental authorities on 12-1-2001. In a writ petition filed by the respondents, the High Court found the search and seizure to be illegal. Therefore, it directed the seized articles to be returned to the respondents with interest @ 8% p.a. on the value of the jewellery and ornaments which the High Court quantified at Rs 84.68 lakhs from the date of seizure till payment. The Revenue then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant Revenue contended that the writ petitioners had not sought in the writ petition, the relief of payment of interest.

On the other hand, the respondent contended that the High Court was competent to award penal interest by way of compensation. They further pointed out that the Department had not complied with the High Court's order until almost one year later when the gold, diamond, jewellery and other ornaments were returned.

In such circumstances,

Held :

Without going into the question as to the payability of interest on the value of goods found by the court to have been illegally seized, it is held that the appellants are liable to compensate the respondents at least by way of costs. The loss obviously suffered by the respondents during the pendency of the proceedings before the High Court was further aggravated by the delay in complying with the High Court's decision. In the circumstances, the appellants are directed to pay a sum of Rs 75,000 to the respondents on account of costs which the respondents will accept in full and final settlement of the claim towards the quantum of interest under the impugned order. Such payment is to be made within a period of four weeks. In the event such payment is not made, this appeal will stand dismissed with costs. (Para 5). Director General of Income Tax v. Diamondstar Exports Ltd., (2006) 5 SCC 564.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ruma Pal and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-2006]

[6912] — Ss. 457 and 451 — Seizure of vehicle used in offence under Wild Life Act — Applicable provision of CrPC — S. 457 CrPC not applicable — But S. 451 CrPC applicable in certain cases — Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972, S. 50(1) (as amended by Act 44 of 1991)

In view of the clear language of sub-section (1) of Section 50, Section 457 of the Code has no application. But there is another provision which also is relevant i.e. Section 451 of the Code that relates to the order for custody and disposal of the property pending trial in certain cases. (Para 10). State of U.P. v. Lalloo Singh, (2007) 7 SCC 334: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 353.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2007]

— S. 460 See also S. 529, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1288 et seq. in Vol. 2

— S. 460 See also Ss. 202(2) proviso, 200, 203, 204, 208, 209, 313, 208, 226 to 228, 460, 461 and 465

[6913] — Ss. 460(g), 306 and 307 — Irregularities which do not vitiate proceedings — Grant of pardon to approver by Chief Judicial Magistrate after committal of proceedings to the Court of Session is without jurisdiction — Such irregularity not a curable irregularity within S. 460(g) — Position under corresponding provision of old Code indicated — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 529(g), 337 and 338

Section 460 can have no reference to an act of a Magistrate who is empowered under Section 306 but does not possess the jurisdiction after an order of commitment is passed. The Chief Judicial Magistrate no doubt was authorised under Section 306 of the Code to tender pardon in course of an investigation, inquiry or trial before the committal of the proceedings to the Court of Session. But after commitment of the proceedings he does not have jurisdiction to grant pardon and in such a case if the said Chief Judicial Magistrate tenders pardon then that would not be a curable irregularity within the ambit of clause (g) of Section 460 of the Code.

Under Section 529(g) of the 1898 Code it was specifically stated that if any Magistrate not empowered by law to tender pardon under Section 337 or 338 did so the same would not vitiate the proceedings. But under Section 460(g) of the new Code the legislature has omitted Section 307 which is corresponding to Section 338, and therefore, such irregularity committed by the Magistrate cannot be said to be a curable irregularity under clause (g) of Section 460. A. Devendran v. State of T.N., (1997) 11 SCC 720: AIR 1998 SC 2821.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-1997]

— S. 461 See Ss. 202(2) proviso, 200, 203, 204, 208, 209, 313, 208, 226 to 228, 460, 461 and 465

— S. 462 See Ss. 221, 222 and 462

See also Ss. 409(2) & 194, 407 and 462 & 465

— S. 463 See also S. 533, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, p. 1290 in Vol. 2

— S. 463 See Ss. 164, 281 and 463

See also Ss. 164 and 463

See also Ss. 164(2) and 463

[6914] — S. 463 — Object of — Held, is to enable the court to take evidence in regard to any non-compliance and to act on such evidence if the court is satisfied that such non-compliance has not injured the accused in his defence on the merits — However, since caution to the confessor, before recording his confession, that he was not bound to make such a confession had been administered by the police officer concerned, resort to said section not felt necessary in the instant case. Nazir Ahmad Bhatt v. State of Delhi, (2002) 1 SCC 674: 2002 SCC (Cri) 234: AIR 2002 SC 30: 2002 Cri LJ 213.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-2001]

[6915] — Ss. 463 and 164 — Recording of confession of accused — Procedure to be followed — Requirements of obtaining signature of accused, appending certificate and making memorandum at the end of confession, as required under R. 15(3), TADA Rules — Omission as to — Effect — Curability of the said defect — Reiterated, said omission in obtaining signature of accused or appending certificate at the end of confession is curable in view of provision contained in S. 463 CrPC — In present case, certain confessional statements recorded without appending certificate or making memorandum in terms of R. 15(3)(b) — Confessional statements containing opening words similar to subject-matter of memorandum to be made under R. 15(3)(b) — Further, said confessional statements mainly corroborating the confession made strictly in compliance with all necessary provisions of TADA Act and Rules — Considering the facts, held, the defect, if any, present in the confessional statements got cured through reliable and trustworthy depositions made by the respective recording officers before the trial court — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Rules, 1987, R. 15(3). Ahmed Hussein Vali Mohammed Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 7 SCC 254: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 368: (2009) 79 AIC 229 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-5-2009]

[6916] — Ss. 463 and 164 — Scope of S. 463 — Judicial confession when not admissible — Held, S. 463 makes it clear that (for non-admissibility of judicial confession) it has to be established that because of non-compliance (with provisions of S. 164), an injury was occasioned to the accused in his defence on merits — On facts, that was not so (Para 18). State of Punjab v. Harjagdev Singh, (2009) 16 SCC 91.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2009]

— S. 464 See also Ss. 535 and 232, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1290 et seq. and p. 1102, respectively in Vol. 2

— S. 464 See Ss. 211 & 215 and 464 & 465

See also Ss. 215, 211, 465 and 464

See also Ss. 215, 221 and 464

See also Ss. 218, 464 and 465

See also Ss. 221 & 218 and 215 & 464

See also Ss. 221, 222 and 464

See also Ss. 222(2) & 464 and 313

[6917] — S. 464 — Defective charge — Effect on trial — Though in a given case it does not vitiate trial, but in the instant case where (i) the omission was vital, (ii) the substance of accusations was totally different from what was sought to be established by the prosecution, and (iii) there was no evidence to establish essential ingredients of relevant section, held on facts, it was an additional factor for acquitting the accused — Penal Code, 1860, S. 201 — Defective charge under — Held on facts, was an additional factor for acquittal (Para 10). Sou. Vijaya v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 8 SCC 296: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1998: AIR 2003 SC 3787.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2003]

[6918] — S. 464 — Effect of omission to frame, or absence of, or error in charge — Prejudice — Respondent-accused charged under S. 148 and S. 302 IPC and convicted by trial court — High Court in appeal while finding respondents responsible for the death of the deceased holding that in the absence of charge under S. 302 read with S. 149 IPC, they could not have been convicted under S. 302 IPC, and hence convicting them under S. 326 IPC — Held, if the view of High Court is accepted, then in absence of charge under S. 149 IPC, conviction in terms of S. 326 also could not have been done — Combined reading of Charge 1 and Charge 3 makes it clear that the court specified that the accused persons were members of unlawful assembly and in prosecution of the common object of such assembly i.e. in order to commit murder of the deceased, committed the offence and at that time they were armed with daggers, etc. to bring in the application of S. 148 IPC — In Charge 3, there is a specific reference to the transactions, as mentioned in the first charge, and the object to commit murder by hacking the body of the deceased with daggers and causing his intentional death and thereby committing offence punishable under S. 302 IPC — Hence, charge in relation to the offence punishable under S. 149 IPC is not only implicit but also patent in the charges — Apart from the question of prejudice, this aspect has also been lost sight of by the High Court — Judgment of High Court set aside and that of trial court restored — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 148, 149 & 326 — Framing of charges (Paras 2, 15 and 18). Dumpala Chandra Reddy v. Nimakayala Balireddy, (2008) 8 SCC 339: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 493: AIR 2008 SC 3069: 2008 Cri LJ 3936.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, P. Sathasivam and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2008]

Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140; Ramkishan v. State of Rajasthan, (1997) 7 SCC 518: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1106; B.N. Srikantiah v. State of Mysore, AIR 1958 SC 672: 1959 SCR 496; Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592, relied on

Rewa Ram v. Teja, (2008) 8 SCC 346: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1350, considered

[6919] — S. 464 — Effect of omission to frame, or absence of, or error in, charge — Held, mere defect in language, or in narration, or in form of charge would not render conviction unsustainable, provided accused is not prejudiced thereby — If ingredients of the section are obvious or implicit, conviction in regard thereto can be sustained irrespective of fact that said section has not been mentioned

Section 149 IPC creates constructive liability i.e. a person who is a member of an unlawful assembly is made guilty of the offence committed by another member of the same assembly in the circumstances mentioned in the section, although he may have had no intention to commit that offence and had done no overt act except his presence in the assembly and sharing the common object of that assembly. (Para 47)

Some divergence between the two decisions of the Supreme Court in Nanak Chand case, AIR 1955 SC 274 and Suraj Pal case, AIR 1955 SC 419 seems to have been noticed and the matter was referred to the Constitution Bench in Willie (William) Slaney case, AIR 1956 SC 116. Although Willie (William) Slaney case was not a case under Section 149 of the Penal Code, 1860 and the charge against the accused therein was under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC but the Constitution Bench considered the question whether the omission to frame an alternative charge under Section 302 IPC is an illegality that cuts at the root of conviction. Willie (William) Slaney case held that where the charge is a rolled-up one involving the direct liability and the constructive liability without specifying who are directly liable and who are sought to be made constructively liable, in such a situation, the absence of a charge under one or the other of the various heads of criminal liability for the offence cannot be said to be fatal by itself, and before a conviction for the substantive offence, without a charge can be set aside, prejudice will have to be made out. (Paras 48 to 53)

Section 464 specifies that a finding or sentence of a court shall not be set aside merely on the ground that a charge was not framed or that charge was defective unless it has occasioned in prejudice. Because of a mere defect in language or in the narration or in form of the charge, the conviction would not be rendered bad if the accused has not been adversely affected thereby. If the ingredients of the section are obvious or implicit, conviction in regard thereto can be sustained irrespective of the fact that the said section has not been mentioned. (Paras 54 and 55)

A fair trial to the accused is a sine qua non in our criminal justice system but at the same time procedural law contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure is designed to further the ends of justice and not to frustrate them by introduction of hypertechnicalities. Every case must depend on its own merits and no straitjacket formula can be applied; the essential and important aspect to be kept in mind is: has omission to frame a specific charge resulted in prejudice to the accused. (Para 56)

In the instant case all the accused were put to notice under Charge 1 that on 16-5-1996 in the morning near Gollalaguduru Harijanawada, they were members of an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons and in prosecution of common object of such assembly, namely, in murdering Deceased 1 and 2, they committed the offence of rioting, punishable under Section 148 IPC. A-1 to A-5 and A-6 to A-9 were noticed of the particulars under Charge 4 that during the course of same transaction as mentioned in Charge 1, they committed murder by intentionally causing death of D-1 and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 302 IPC. A-3, A-6 to A-8, A-10 to A-13 were put to notice under Charge 5 that during the course of the same transaction as mentioned in Charge 1 they committed murder by intentionally causing death of D-2 and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 302 IPC. (Paras 57 to 59)

A careful reading of Charge 4 and Charge 5 leaves no manner of doubt, since the transaction mentioned in Charge 1 has been made an integral part thereof, that all the necessary ingredients of Section 149 IPC are implicit therein except mentioning of Section 149 IPC specifically. The particulars stated in Charges 4 and 5 are reasonably sufficient to give the appellants adequate notice of Section 149 IPC although not specifically mentioned. Hence, their conviction does not stand vitiated; more so when the accused have failed to show any prejudice in this regard. At the highest it may be considered an irregularity, whereby their conviction and sentence is not at all affected. (Paras 60 and 61)

The offence, in the established facts and circumstances of the case, under Section 302 read with Section 149 IPC is implicit and applying the dictum laid down by the Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court in Willie (William) Slaney case, the omission to mention Section 149 IPC specifically in Charges 4 and 5 cannot affect their conviction. In no way their conviction is rendered bad as the appellants had assembled together armed with axes and eathapululu (sickle) and were parties to the assault on D-1 and D-2 and others. In a situation such as this it was not obligatory upon the prosecution to prove which specific overt act was done by which of the accused. (Para 62)

Hence, impugned judgment convicting appellants calls for no interference. Annareddy Sambasiva Reddy v. State of A.P., (2009) 12 SCC 546: AIR 2009 SC 2661: (2009) 78 AIC 222 (SC). Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-4-2009]

Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140, considered and followed

Pandurang v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1955 SC 216: (1955) 1 SCR 1083; ; Suraj Pal v. State of U.P., AIR 1955 SC 419: (1955) 1 SCR 1332; Nanak Chand v. State of Punjab, AIR 1955 SC 274: (1955) 1 SCR 1201; Umesh Singh v. State of Bihar, (2000) 6 SCC 89: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1026, considered

[6920] — Ss. 464, 211 and 215 — Framing of charge — Omission/error in framing of charge — Effect — Need to establish prejudice — Held, unless the convict is able to establish real prejudice to him and that he was not informed as to what was the real case against him and that he could not defend himself properly, no interference is required on mere technicalities — Conviction needs to be tested on touchstone of prejudice theory — In the instant case appellant alone was charged only under S. 120-B and convicted thereunder — No grievance was raised thereagainst while framing the charge, nor during the course of trial, and nor by filing any petition for quashing the charge — No prejudice caused to appellant could also be established — Further held, though at most charge could have been said to be incorrectly framed, but appellant was given full opportunity to defend himself against that only charge of conspiracy as there were no other allegations against him — He was specifically asked questions relating to conspiracy while examining him under S. 313 CrPC — Hence, by no stretch of imagination can it be said that accused was in any way prejudiced (Paras 21 to 29). Sanichar Sahni v. State of Bihar, (2009) 7 SCC 198: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 347: (2009) 80 AIC 136 (SC). Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-5-2009]

State of A.P. v. Thakkidiram Reddy, (1998) 6 SCC 554: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1488; Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116; Gurpreet Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 12 SCC 615: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 191, considered and followed

Ramji Singh v. State of Bihar, (2001) 9 SCC 528: 2002 SCC (Cri) 760, relied on [6921] — Ss. 464, 211 and 215 — Framing of charge — Omission/Error in — Effect — Need to establish prejudice — Whether conviction under any other provision, for which charge has not been framed, sustainable in law — Held, accused must be aware as to what is the case against him and what defence he could lead — Unless accused satisfies court that there has been a failure of justice from non-framing of charge under a particular penal provision, and some prejudice has been caused to him, conviction under such provision of law is sustainable — Hence, though charges framed only under Ss. 302/120-B IPC, conviction altered to one under Ss. 304 Pt. II/34 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302/120-B or Ss. 304 Pt. II/34 (Paras 19 and 20). S. Ganesan v. Rama Raghuraman, (2011) 2 SCC 83.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-1-2011]

Amar Singh v. State of Haryana, (1974) 3 SCC 81: 1973 SCC (Cri) 789; Sanichar Sahni v. State of Bihar, (2009) 7 SCC 198: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 347; Topandas v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 33: 1956 Cri LJ 138; Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: 1956 Cri LJ 291; Fakhruddin v. State of M.P., AIR 1967 SC 1326: 1967 Cri LJ 1197; State of A.P. v. Thakkidiram Reddy, (1998) 6 SCC 554: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1488; Ramji Singh v. State of Bihar, (2001) 9 SCC 528: 2002 SCC (Cri) 760; Gurpreet Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 12 SCC 615: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 191, relied on [6922] — Ss. 464 and 218 — Error or irregularity in charge — Effect on validity of finding by court, if any — Held, no finding by court of competent jurisdiction shall be deemed to be invalid merely on ground that no charge was framed or on ground of any error in relation to charge, including any misjoinder of charge, unless in the opinion of court of appeal, confirmation or revision, a failure of justice was occasioned thereby — Hence, High Court was not justified to say that charge was defective (Paras 18 and 19). State of Punjab v. Harjagdev Singh, (2009) 16 SCC 91.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-2009]

[6923] — S. 464 — Effect of omission to frame, or absence of, or error in charge — Charges framed against four accused including appellant for offences punishable under Ss. 147, 148, 324, 302 r/w S. 149 IPC, while appellant alone convicted under S. 302 simpliciter — Held, accused can be convicted for an offence for which no charge was framed, unless it had occasioned failure of justice — In instant case, role of appellant in assaulting deceased with knife was clearly proved by PWs — In his examination under S. 313 CrPC a specific question was put to appellant and he was made aware of basic ingredients of the offence and main facts sought to be established against him were explained to him — Thus, he can be convicted under S. 302 IPC simpliciter for having committed the murder — S. 313 (Paras 11, 27 and 28). Balraje v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 6 SCC 673.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-2010]

Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 661, relied on [6924] — Ss. 464, 215 and 223 — Conspiracy — Charge under — Only against single person — Conviction — Sustainability — Appellant alone charged only under S. 120-B but for no other offence, while co-accused charged under different provisions but not S. 120-B — Relying on Topandas case, AIR 1956 SC 33 and Fakhruddin case, AIR 1967 SC 1326 submission that one person alone could not be guilty of conspiracy because one cannot conspire with himself — Held, in the above cases, co-accused had been acquitted of charges of conspiracy, and hence, they were of no assistance to appellant since facts in instant case were quite distinct — In the instant case only one person was charged for conspiracy — At the most it could be said that charges has not been properly framed — Penal Code, 1860, S. 120-B (Paras 18 to 20). Sanichar Sahni v. State of Bihar, (2009) 7 SCC 198: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 347: (2009) 80 AIC 136 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-5-2009]

Topandas v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 33; Fakhruddin v. State of M.P., AIR 1967 SC 1326, distinguished on facts

[6925] — S. 464 — Wrong section mentioned in the charge — Effect — Conviction under S. 22, NDPS Act though appropriate section applicable in the instant case was S. 21, NDPS Act — Legality — Held, appellants not handicapped from meeting the case against them or otherwise suffered any prejudice due to citation of wrong section in charge — Trial and conviction could not be set aside on that score — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 22 and 21

On receiving a telephonic message from the Commandant, BSF that a special nakabandi (patrolling) was required to be organised, PW 1 (Police Inspector), along with other police personnel, reached the BSF Headquarters. The Commandant deputed two Inspectors including PW 2 and three more BSF personnel to accompany PW 1 for the patrolling. The Commandant instructed them to hold the naka at the canal bridge in the vicinity of village M as he had some information about smuggling. The patrolling party noticed two persons coming from the direction of village T. The said persons fired at the patrolling party. In self-defence, the Inspectors also fired. Ultimately, those persons were arrested and recovery of arms, cartridges and contraband articles was made from them. The trial court convicted the appellants under Section 22, Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985. Appellant P was also convicted under Section 307 IPC. The High Court affirmed the conviction and sentence. Hence the present appeals. The accused challenged the conviction mainly on the ground of violation of Sections 42 and 50 of the NDPS Act.

Setting aside the conviction of Appellant P under Section 307 IPC and altering the conviction under Section 22 of the NDPS Act to Section 21 of that Act,

Held:

The accused contended that the conviction under Section 22 of the NDPS Act, 1985 is illegal inasmuch as the article in question is not a psychotropic substance. It is not denied that the seized substance answers the definition of "manufactured drug" being an opium derivative containing "diacetyl morphine" and, therefore, the appropriate section providing for punishment is Section 21. The punishments prescribed under Sections 21 and 22 are the same. By reason of citation of wrong section in the charge, it cannot be said that the appellants were handicapped from meeting the case against them or otherwise suffered any prejudice. The trial and conviction cannot therefore be set aside on this score. (Para 13). Durgo Bai v. State of Punjab, (2004) 7 SCC 144: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1865: AIR 2004 SC 4170.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2004]

[6926] — Ss. 464, 211, 216 and 228 — Conviction of an offence not included in the charge — Case not covered by Ss. 236 and 237 — Trial is illegal and the defect is not curable — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 236 and 237

Where the conviction is for a totally different offence from the one charged and not covered by Ss. 236 and 237 of the Code. On a charge for a minor offence, there can be no conviction for a major offence e.g., grievous hurt or rioting and murder. The omission to frame a separate and specific charge in such cases will be an incurable irregularity amounting to an illegality. Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140: 1956 Cri LJ 291.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das[1], Vivian Bose[1], B. Jagannadhadas[2], Syed Jafer Imam[3] and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1955]

[6927] — S. 464 — Charge not properly framed — Finding/Sentence/Order of the court to become invalid only if improper framing of charge has resulted in failure of justice — Burden to prove failure of justice, held, is on the accused (Para 8). State of U.P. v. Paras Nath Singh, (2009) 6 SCC 372.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, D.K. Jain and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[6928] — Ss. 464, 222, 215 and 216 — Charge under S. 302 r/w S. 34 IPC, but conviction under Ss. 306 and 498-A IPC — Sustainability — Victim dying of burn injuries — At the stage of framing charge, trial court noting that several statements were given by deceased giving different versions, and as such it was required to be appreciated whether it was a case of murder or abetment of suicide — Trial court accordingly framing charge under S. 302 r/w S. 34, but convicting the appellant under S. 306 and S. 498-A — High Court by impugned judgment upholding the same — Following Shamnsaheb M. Multtani, (2001) 2 SCC 577, held, normally in such circumstances the matter would be remanded back so that accused could put forth his defence regarding the offence for which he was convicted — However, in the instant case no useful purpose would be served by remanding the matter since it was 20 years old and appellant had served part of the custodial sentence — Besides, no question was put to him in his examination under S. 313 CrPC relating to dowry demand or abetment of suicide — Hence, impugned judgment unsustainable — Ranbir Penal Code, 1989 Smvt., Ss. 306 & 498-A or S. 302 r/w S. 34 (Paras 6 to 8 and 10 to 16). Bimla Devi v. State of J&K, (2009) 6 SCC 629.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

Sangaraboina Sreenu v. State of A.P., (1997) 5 SCC 348: 1997 SCC (Cri) 690; Lokendra Singh v. State of M.P., 1999 SCC (Cri) 371; Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358, considered and followed

[6929] — Ss. 464, 211, 216 and 228 — Omission to frame charge — Effect — All of the accused charged for offence under S. 302 IPC — Conviction of some of them under S. 325 read with S. 149 — No prejudice caused to the accused — Held, in the circumstances of the case, conviction not illegal — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 149/302 and 149/325 — Applicability of S. 149 when charge not framed under

Section 464 is in mandatory terms and specifically provides what is to be done in cases where a charge is not framed or there is an error, omission or irregularity in framing of the charge. From the unequivocal terms of the section, it can be stated that a finding, sentence or order could be set aside only in those cases where the facts are such that no valid charge could be preferred against the accused in respect of the facts proved. Secondly, if the facts are such that a charge could be framed and yet it is not framed but no failure of justice has in fact been occasioned thereby, the finding, sentence or order of the court of competent jurisdiction is not to be set aside on that ground. Thirdly, if there is failure of justice occasioned by not framing of the charge or in case of an error, omission or irregularity in the charge, retrial of the case is to be directed under sub-section (2).

Non-framing of a charge would not vitiate the conviction if no prejudice is caused thereby to the accused. The trial should be fair to the accused, fair to the State and fair to the vast mass of the people for whose protection penal laws are made and administered. The Code of Criminal Procedure is a procedural law and is designed to further the ends of justice and not to frustrate them by the introduction of endless technicalities. In the present case, the accused were tried on the prosecution version that all of them went at 3.30 p.m. to the field of the deceased; they picked up a quarrel with him, inflicted injuries on the deceased as narrated by the prosecution witnesses, Accused 3 to 6 participated; the statements were recorded under Section 313 of the CPC and the questions were asked to the effect that they jointly came at 3.30 p.m. and caused injuries to the deceased as stated by the prosecution witnesses and the role assigned to Accused 3 to 6 was also specifically mentioned. Hence, it is apparent that no prejudice has been caused to the accused who were charged for the offence under Section 302, by not framing the charge for the offence punishable under Section 302 read with Section 149. In this view of the matter, the conviction of Accused 3 to 6 for the offence punishable under Section 325 read with Section 149 cannot be said to be in any way illegal which requires to be set aside. Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281: AIR 1999 SC 775: 1999 Cri LJ 1134.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1999]

Ramkishan v. State of Rajasthan, (1997) 7 SCC 518: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1106; Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: 1956 Cri LJ 291, followed

Panduram v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1955 SC 216: 1955 Cri LJ 572, explained

Distinguished on facts in Anil v. Admn. of Daman & Diu, Daman, (2006) 13 SCC 36: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 72*

[6930] — Ss. 464 and 211 — Omission to frame charge — If shown to have caused prejudice to accused, trial and conviction would be vitiated — Charge framed by trial court under Ss. 302/149, 307/149, 147, 148 and 307 IPC against accused persons — Accused raised plea of right of private defence and produced evidence in support — But trial court convicted accused under S. 302 r/w S. 109 IPC — Held, non-framing of charge under S. 109 IPC caused prejudice to accused, hence accused rightly acquitted by High Court — But it would not be in the interest of justice to remand the case to trial court for fresh trial from the point of framing charge in view of long lapse of time (incident occurred in 1997, trial court rendered judgment in 2000 and High Court two years thereafter). Chandrawati v. Ramji Tiwari, (2010) 13 SCC 281.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2010]

Wakil Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2000) 10 SCC 500: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1499; Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592; Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 661; Sohan Lal v. State of Punjab, (2003) 11 SCC 534: 2004 SCC (Cri) 226; Joseph Kurian v. State of Kerala, (1994) 6 SCC 535: 1995 SCC (Cri) 20, relied on

Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: 1956 Cri LJ 291, distinguished

[6931] — Ss. 464, 211 and 216 — Applicability — When applicable despite non-mention thereof in the charges — Penal Code, 1860, S. 149

Where though no specific charge indicating the applicability of Section 149 IPC was framed, but all the ingredients of Section 149 IPC were clearly indicated in the charge framed against the appellants, it must be held that the omission to mention Section 149 IPC specifically in the charge was only an irregularity and since no prejudice was shown to have been caused to the appellants by that omission it cannot affect their conviction. Ramkishan v. State of Rajasthan, (1997) 7 SCC 518: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1106: AIR 1997 SC 3997.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-1997]

Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M. P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140, followed

Followed in Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, (1999) 2 SCC 522

[6932] — Ss. 464, 216, 221 and 215 — Conviction for offence in respect of which no charge is framed (though framed for similar but higher offence) — Sustainability of — Reiterating the principles of law laid down by Supreme Court in such matter, held, where the offence (pertaining to S. 364-A IPC) in respect of which no charge was framed was a different as well as a higher offence than the one (pertaining to S. 364 IPC) in respect of which charge was framed, the conviction for offence in respect of which no charge was framed could not be sustained as it caused prejudice to the accused — Hence, conviction altered to S. 364 IPC in respect of which charge was framed — Appellant sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for life — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 364-A and 364 — Conviction under S. 364-A IPC though charge framed only in respect of S. 364 IPC — Sustainability of such conviction

As regards the cases where the accused is convicted for the offence in respect of which no charge is framed, the propositions of law which can be culled out from the judgments of the Supreme Court are:

(i) The accused should not suffer any prejudice by reason of misjoinder of charges.

(ii) A conviction for lesser offence is permissible.

(iii) It should not result in failure of justice.

(iv) If there is a substantial compliance, misjoinder of charges may not be fatal and such misjoinder must be arising out of mere misjoinder to frame charges. (Para 54)

The ingredients for commission of offence under Section 364 and 364-A IPC are different. Whereas the intention to kidnap a person in order that he may be murdered or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered satisfies the requirements of Section 364 IPC, for obtaining a conviction for commission of an offence under Section 364-A thereof it is necessary to prove that not only such kidnapping or abetment has taken place but thereafter the accused threatened to cause death or hurt to such person or by his conduct gives rise to a reasonable apprehension that such person may be put to death or hurt or causes hurt or death to such person in order to compel the Government or any foreign State or international intergovernmental organisation or any other person to do or abstain from doing any act or to pay a ransom. (Para 55)

Thus, it was obligatory on the part of the trial court to frame a charge which would answer the description of the offence envisaged under Section 364-A IPC. It may be true that the kidnapping was done with a view to get ransom but the same should have been put to the appellant while framing a charge. The prejudice to the appellant is apparent as the ingredients of a higher offence had not been put to him while framing any charge. Hence, the appellant could not have been convicted under Section 364-A IPC. The appellant is held to be guilty of commission of an offence under Section 364 IPC. He deserves the highest punishment prescribed therein i.e. the rigorous imprisonment for life. (Paras 58, 55 and 56). Anil v. Admn. of Daman & Diu, Daman, (2006) 13 SCC 36: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 72: (2007) 49 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

K. Prema S. Rao v. Yadla Srinivasa Rao, (2003) 1 SCC 217: 2003 SCC (Cri) 271; Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281; Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592; Kamalanantha v. State of T.N., (2005) 5 SCC 194: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121; Harjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (2006) 1 SCC 463: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 417, relied on

Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1999) 2 SCC 522: 1999 SCC (Cri) 281, distinguished on facts

[6933] — Ss. 464, 218 and 211(4) — Failure to frame a charge under S. 302 or S. 109 IPC — Conviction of accused-appellant under S. 302 r/w S. 109 IPC, held, illegal — Hence, liable to be set aside — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 r/w S. 109 — Conviction under, in absence of any charge being framed under S. 302 or S. 109

Accused SL was called upon to face trial only for the charge under Section 304-B IPC. Neither a charge under Section 302 IPC nor under Section 109 IPC, was levelled against him in the charge-sheet. In the absence of a charge being framed against him under Section 302 or 109 IPC, it would certainly cause prejudice to him, if he is convicted under either of these offences at the end of the trial. Thus, it was not permissible for the trial court to convict SL for the offence under Section 302 read with Section 109 IPC. His conviction under Section 302 read with Section 109 IPC is, therefore, illegal and is liable to be set aside. (Para 7). Sohan Lal v. State of Punjab, (2003) 11 SCC 534: 2004 SCC (Cri) 226: AIR 2003 SC 4466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-2003]

[6934] — Ss. 464, 218 and 223 — Misjoinder of charges due to joint trial — No objection to the joint trial raised by concerned parties either at trial stage or at appellate stage or even before Supreme Court, nor any prejudice shown to have caused to them by such trial — Held, in absence of proof that failure of justice had occasioned by the joint trial, finding and sentence recorded by the competent court valid. Prem Chand v. State of Haryana, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 286: 1989 SCC (Cri) 418: AIR 1989 SC 937: 1989 Cri LJ 1246.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Ratnavel Pandian, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1989]

[6935] — Ss. 464, 218 and 228 — Omission to frame charge — Alteration of conviction from S. 302 IPC to S. 302 r/w S. 34 IPC where charge framed under S. 302 simpliciter but not under S. 302 r/w S. 34 — Charge framed under S. 302 simpliciter, but not under S. 302 r/w S. 34 — Conviction under S. 302 r/w S. 34 — Permissibility — Accused not prejudiced in their defence merely because of non-framing of the said charge — Evidence that accused shared the common intention to cause death of the victim — Prosecution proved its case beyond reasonable doubt — In view of the above, held, conviction of appellants could be altered from S. 302 to S. 302 r/w S. 34 as fatal injury could not be attributed to them — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 and S. 302 r/w S. 34 (Paras 16 and 17). Gurpreet Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 12 SCC 615.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-11-2005]

State of A.P. v. Thakkidiram Reddy, (1998) 6 SCC 554: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1488; Ramji Singh v. State of Bihar, (2001) 9 SCC 528: 2002 SCC (Cri) 760, relied on

Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358; Atmaram Zingaraji v. State of Maharashtra, (1997) 7 SCC 41: 1997 SCC (Cri) 990; Roopa Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 SCC (Cri) 1316, distinguished on facts

[6936] — Ss. 464, 386, 401 and 399 — Passing conviction for offence for which no charge framed — Power of appellate or revisional court — Held, the said court can do so unless the court is of the opinion that failure of justice would in fact occasion — To judge whether failure of justice occasioned it would be relevant to examine whether the accused was aware of the basic ingredients of the offence for which he was being convicted and whether the main facts sought to be established against him were explained to him clearly and whether he got a fair chance to defend himself — On facts, though charge framed under S. 302 r/w S. 149 IPC, A-1 convicted under S. 302 IPC — Passing conviction under, though charge framed under S. 302 r/w S. 149 IPC — Power of appellate or revisional court

In view of Section 464 CrPC it is possible for the appellate or revisional court to convict an accused for an offence for which no charge was framed unless the court is of the opinion that failure of justice would in fact occasion. In order to judge whether a failure of justice has been occasioned it will be relevant to examine whether the accused was aware of the basic ingredients of the offence for which he is being convicted and whether the main facts sought to be established against him were explained to him clearly and whether he got a fair chance to defend himself. In the present case, the witnesses examined on behalf of the prosecution, whose testimony has been relied upon, clearly deposed that A-1 was armed with a spear and he assaulted the deceased with the said weapon. In his examination under Section 313 CrPC a specific question in this regard was put to A-1. Therefore, A-1 was made aware of the basic ingredients of the offence and the main facts sought to be established against him were explained to him. Thus, he can be convicted under Section 302 IPC for having committed the murder in question, though the Sessions Judge had framed charge under Section 302 read with Section 149 IPC against all the accused including A-1. (Para 20). Radha Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 2 SCC 450: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 661: AIR 2006 SC 951: (2006) 1 KLJ 535: (2006) 2 All LJ 242: 2006 Cri LJ 1121.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, Arun Kumar and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2006]

Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592, applied

[6937] — Ss. 464 & 215, 386, 399 and 401 — Non-framing of charge in respect of an offence — Power of appellate or revisional court to convict the accused for the said offence — Having regard to S. 464 CrPC, held, conviction possible if (i) the accused was aware of the basic ingredients of that offence, (ii) the main facts sought to be established against him were explained to him clearly, and (iii) he got a fair chance to defend himself — Hence, where charges were framed under Ss. 302, 498-A and 304-B IPC but not under S. 306 IPC, held on facts, accused could be convicted under S. 306 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 306, 498-A, 302 and 304-B — Non-framing of charge under S. 306 — Conviction under that section in appeal — In view of S. 464 CrPC, held on facts, permissible

The accused-appellant faced trial in respect of charges under Sections 302, 498-A and 304-B IPC. He was convicted by the trial court under Sections 302 and 498-A, but acquitted of the charge under 304-B. In appeal, the High Court held that the charge under Section 302 IPC was not established and accordingly, acquitted the accused in respect of the said offence. The High Court further held that the accused was guilty under Section 306 IPC for having abetted commission of suicide by his wife. But in view of the fact that no charge under Section 306 IPC was framed against him, the High Court, relying upon Sangaraboina Sreenu v. State of A.P., (1997) 5 SCC 348, held that the accused could not be convicted for the said offence. The High Court noticed that a contrary view had been taken in an earlier decision in Lakhjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 173, but chose to rely upon the later decision having regard to the settled view that if there is conflict of opinion in two decisions of the Supreme Court rendered by Benches of equal strength, it is the later decision which has to prevail. Hence, in view of the said conflict of opinion in two decisions, the instant appeals were placed for hearing before the present three-Judge Bench.

The main question for consideration by the Supreme Court was whether the accused could be convicted under Section 306 IPC if a charge for the said offence had not been framed against him.

Partly allowing the appeal filed by the State but dismissing the one filed by the accused,

Held :

In view of Section 464 CrPC, it is possible for the appellate or revisional court to convict an accused for an offence for which no charge was framed unless the court is of the opinion that a failure of justice would in fact occasion. In order to judge whether a failure of justice has been occasioned, it will be relevant to examine whether the accused was aware of the basic ingredients of the offence for which he is being convicted and whether the main facts sought to be established against him were explained to him clearly and whether he got a fair chance to defend himself. (Para 17)

In the present case, the accused had started making a demand of dowry soon after marriage. Even after his father-in-law had given him a colour TV, a scooter and money for purchasing the flat, he did not feel satisfied and continued to harass his wife. He used to frequently taunt her that some of the items given by way of gift at the time of marriage were of poor quality and were not of his standard. He had also assaulted his wife and even his seven-year-old daughter on several occasions. It was in such circumstances that his wife took the extreme step of not only setting herself on fire, but also her two daughters, one of whom was only one-year old. The letter written by the wife just before taking such an extreme step speaks volumes about the treatment meted out to her by the accused. Therefore, the basic ingredients of the offence under Section 306 IPC have been established by the prosecution. The next question to be seen is whether the accused was confronted with the aforesaid features of the prosecution case in his statement under Section 313 CrPC. His statement runs into six pages where every aspect of the prosecution case referred to above was put to him. He also gave a long written statement in accordance with Section 233(2) CrPC wherein he admitted that the wife committed suicide. He also admitted that the scooter and colour TV were subsequently given to him by his in-laws but came out with a plea that he had paid money and purchased the same from his in-laws. There is no aspect of the prosecution which may not have been put to him. Therefore, in view of the material on record, the conviction under Section 306 IPC can safely be recorded and the same would not result in failure of justice in any manner. (Para 18). Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P., (2004) 5 SCC 334: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1592: AIR 2004 SC 1990: 2004 All LJ 1448: 2004 Cri LJ 2025.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2004]

Lakhjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 173: 1994 SCC (Cri) 235, affirmed

Sangaraboina Sreenu v. State of A.P., (1997) 5 SCC 348: 1997 SCC (Cri) 690, overruled

Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: 1956 Cri LJ 291; Gurbachan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 623: 1957 Cri LJ 1009, relied on

[6938] — Ss. 464 and 228 — Scope — Omission to frame a charge or error in the charge framed — Effect of — Will depend on circumstances of different cases according to the applicability of the section — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 232, 233 to 250, 535 & 537

Per Bose, J. and S. R. Das, acting C.J.

The cases contemplated by S. 237 are just as much a departure from S. 233 as are those envisaged in Ss. 225, 226, 227, 228, 535 and 537. Sections 236, 237 and 238 deal with joinder of charges and so does S. 233. The first condition is that there shall be a separate charge for each offence and the second is that each charge must be tried separately except in the cases mentioned in Ss. 234, 235 and 236.

So far as S. 233 is concerned, there can be no doubt that it requires a separate charge for each offence and does not envisage a situation in which there is either no charge at all or where, there being a charge for some other offence of which the accused is acquitted, he can be convicted instead of something else for which he was not charged. The Code has not regarded Ss. 237 and 238 as part of normal procedure.

Sections 225, 226, 227 and 228, 535 and 537 apply with equal force to 'every' kind of departure from that part of S. 233 that requires a separate charge for each offence. Section 237 is only a corollary to S. 236 and is there to emphasise that even when a number of charges could be joined together in the cases set out in S. 236 and one or more are not put in, even then, there can be convictions in respect of those offences despite the absence of a charge or charges.

All these sections are governed by the overriding rule about prejudice mentioned in one form or another in Ss. 225, 226, 227, 228 and 537. It would be monstrous to hold that a conviction cannot be set aside even when gross prejudice is proved in cases covered by S. 237 just because it does not speak of prejudice. Such cases can be envisaged where there would be grave prejudice under that section as clearly as we can see cases where there would be none under the others.

Sections 233 to 240 deal with joinder of charges and they must be read together and not in isolation. They all deal with the same subject-matter and set out different aspects of it. When they are read as a whole, it becomes clear that Ss. 237 and 238 cover every type of case in which a conviction can be sustained when there is no charge for that offence provided there is a charge to start with.

They do not deal with a case in which there is no charge at all, and anything travelling beyond that when there is a charge would be hit by Ss. 233, 234, 235 and 239 read as a whole.

The sections between them including Ss. 535 and 537 cover every possible case that relates to the charge and they place 'all' failures to observe the rules about the charge in the category of curable irregularities. Ch. XIX deals comprehensively with charges and Ss. 535 and 537 cover every case in which there is a departure from the rules set out in that chapter.

Such departures range from errors, omissions and irregularities in charges that are framed, down to charges that might have been framed and were not and include a total omission to frame a charge at all at any stage of the trial. In all these cases the only question is about prejudice.

Sections 225, 232, 535 and 537(a) between them, cover every conceivable type of error and irregularity referable to a charge that can possibly arise, ranging from cases in which there is a conviction with no charge at all from start to finish down to cases in which there is a charge but with errors, irregularities and omissions in it. The Code is emphatic that 'whatever' the irregularity it is not to be regarded as fatal unless there is prejudice.

Per Chandrasekhara Ayyar & Jagannadhadas, JJ.

A case of complete absence of a charge is covered by S. 535, whereas an error or omission in a charge is dealt with by S. 537. The consequences seem to be slightly different. Where there is no charge, it is for the Court to determine whether there is any failure of justice. But in the latter, where there is mere error or omission in the charge, the Court is also bound to have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage in the proceedings.

Section 535 and 537 indicate that in the generality of cases the omission to frame a charge is not 'per se' fatal. The contention that where there is no charge the conviction will be illegal, prejudice or no prejudice is not sound. The wording of S. 535 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is sufficiently wide to cover every case of no charge.

Sections 225, 226 and 232 and the powers exercisable thereunder, are with reference to a trial which has already commenced or taken place. There would, therefore, normally relate to errors or omissions which occur in a trial that has validly commenced.

There is no reason to think that S. 535 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not also to be understood with reference to the same context. There may be cases where, a trial which proceeds without any kind of charge at the outset can be said to be a trial wholly contrary to what is prescribed by the Code. In such cases the trial would be illegal without the necessity of a positive finding of prejudice.

The omission to frame a charge is a grave defect and should be vigilantly guarded against. In some cases, it may be so serious that by itself it would vitiate a trial and render it illegal, prejudice to the accused being taken for granted.

In the main, the provision of S. 535 would apply to cases of inadvertence to frame a charge induced by the belief that the matter on record is sufficient to warrant the conviction for a particular offence without express specification, and where the facts proved by the prosecution constitute a separate and distinct offence but closely relevant to and springing out of the same set of facts connected with the one charged. Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140: 1956 Cri LJ 291.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das[1], Vivian Bose[1], B. Jagannadhadas[2], Syed Jafer Imam[3] and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1955]

Followed in Kammari Brahmaiah v. Public Prosecutor, (1999) 2 SCC 522

[6939] — Ss. 464(1) and 222, 221 — Non-framing of or omission to frame charge in respect of an offence — When can accused be convicted of that offence — Test — Whether failure of justice occasioned thereby — "Failure of justice" — Meaning — Accused charged under S. 302 IPC but prosecution failed to prove that charge, instead ingredients of S. 304-B IPC found established though no charge had been framed thereunder — Held, conviction under S. 304-B IPC without affording opportunity to accused to enter on his defence and disprove the presumption raised thereunder read with S. 113-B, Evidence Act would result in failure of justice — Hence conviction under S. 304-B cannot be recorded in absence of charge thereunder — Accused to be put on notice and to be allowed to enter his defence against the charge under S. 304-B

When a person is charged with an offence under Sections 302 and 498-A IPC on the allegation that he caused the death of a bride after subjecting her to harassment with a demand for dowry, within a period of 7 years of marriage, a situation may arise, as in this case, that the offence of murder is not established as against the accused. Nonetheless, all other ingredients necessary for the offence under Section 304-B IPC would stand established. Can the accused be convicted in such a case for the offence under Section 304-B IPC without the said offence forming part of the charge? In other words whether in a case where prosecution failed to prove the charge under Section 302 IPC, but on the facts the ingredients of Section 304-B have winched to the fore, can the court convict him of that offence in the absence of the said offence being included in the charge. That was the question raised before the Supreme Court, in this case.

Held :

Under Section 464(1) CrPC a conviction would be valid even if there is any omission or irregularity in the charge, provided it did not occasion a failure of justice. The crux of the matter is this: Would there be occasion for a failure of justice by adopting such a course as to convict an accused of the offence under Section 304-B IPC when all the ingredients necessary for the said offence have come out in evidence, although he was not charged with the said offence? (Para 21)

The expression "failure of justice" is perhaps too pliable or facile an expression which could be fitted in any situation of a case. The criminal court, particularly the superior court should make a close examination to ascertain whether there was really a failure of justice or whether it is only a camouflage. (Para 23)

One of the cardinal principles of natural justice is that no man should be condemned without being heard, (audi alteram partem). But courts often hesitate to approve the contention that failure of justice had occasioned merely because a person was not heard on a particular aspect. However, if the aspect is of such a nature that non-explanation of it has contributed to penalising an individual, the court should say that since he was not given the opportunity to explain that aspect there was failure of justice on account of non-compliance with the principle of natural justice. (Para 24)

The postulates needed to establish the offence under Section 304-B(1) are: (1) death of a wife should have occurred otherwise than under normal circumstances within seven years of her marriage; (2) soon before her death she should have been subjected to cruelty or harassment by the accused in connection with any demand for dowry. Reading Section 113-B of the Evidence Act, as a part of the said offence, the position is: If the prosecution succeeds in showing that soon before her death she was subjected by the husband to cruelty or harassment for or in connection with any demand for dowry and that her death had occurred (within seven years of her marriage) otherwise than under normal circumstances "the court shall presume that such person had caused the dowry death". In view of Section 4 of the Evidence Act the court has no option but to presume that the accused had caused dowry death unless the accused disproves it. It is a statutory compulsion on the court. However it is open to the accused to adduce such evidence for disproving the said compulsory presumption, as the burden is unmistakably on him to do so. He can discharge such burden either by eliciting answers through cross-examination of the witnesses of the prosecution or by adducing evidence on the defence side or by both. (Paras 27 and 28)

But where the accused is called upon to defend only a charge under Section 302 IPC, the burden of proof never shifts onto him. It ever remains on the prosecution which has to prove the charge beyond all reasonable doubt. The said traditional legal concept remains unchanged even now. In such a case the accused can wait till the prosecution evidence is over and then to show that the prosecution has failed to make out the said offence against him. No compulsory presumption would go to the assistance of the prosecution in such a situation. If that be so, when an accused has no notice of the offence under Section 304-B IPC, as he was defending a charge under Section 302 IPC alone, it would lead to a grave miscarriage of justice when he is alternatively convicted under Section 304-B IPC and sentenced to the serious punishment prescribed thereunder, because he is deprived of the opportunity to disprove the burden cast on him by law. (Paras 31 to 33)

In such a situation, if the trial court finds that the prosecution has failed to make out the case under Section 302 IPC, but the offence under Section 304-B IPC has been made out, the court has to call upon the accused to enter on his defence in respect of the said offence. Even if no such count was included in the charge, when the court affords him an opportunity to discharge his burden by putting him to notice regarding the prima facie view of the court that he is liable to be convicted under Section 304-B IPC, it is possible for the court to enter upon a conviction of the said offence in the event of his failure to disprove the presumption. (Para 34)

As the appellant was convicted by the High Court under Section 304-B IPC, without such an opportunity being granted to him, it is necessary in the interest of justice to afford him that opportunity. The case in the trial court should proceed against the appellant (not against the other two accused whose acquittal remains unchallenged now) from the stage of defence evidence. He is put to notice that unless he disproves the presumption, he is liable to be convicted under Section 304-B IPC. (Para 35). Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358: AIR 2001 SC 921.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2001]

Town Investments Ltd. v. Deptt. of the Environment, (1977) 1 All ER 813: 1978 AC 359: (1977) 2 WLR 450 (HL), relied on

[6940] — Ss. 464(2)(a) and 386 — Conviction under S. 302 IPC by appellate court, where accused was charged only under S. 201 IPC — Validity of — Held, was not valid when tested on touchstone of provision contained in S. 464(2)(a) CrPC as appellate court (High Court) had failed to follow the procedure laid down in the said section — Even on the proven facts on record, no case for conviction under S. 302 IPC made out — Hence, said conviction was liable to be set aside — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 or S. 201, Ss. 302 or 201 r/w S. 34 — Conviction passed under S. 302 IPC by appellate court, where accused was charged only under S. 201 IPC

The present appeals were filed against the judgment of the High Court which set aside the conviction of the appellants A-1 and A-2 (who were husband and father-in-law of the deceased respectively) in relation to offences under Sections 304-B and 498-A read with Section 34 IPC but found them guilty of the offences punishable under Sections 302 and 201 read with Section 34 IPC.

The case of the prosecution rested only on circumstantial evidence. The trial court observed that although PWs 11 and 12 (sister and mother of A-1 respectively) were present in their house where the offence was committed, but they had not uttered anything against A-1. On the contrary they had tried to implicate one S who had come to their house as a guest. They also denied having seen the appellants throttling the neck of the deceased and that the deceased was crying. Both the said witnesses were declared hostile. Nevertheless, the trial court observed that there were two circumstances against appellant A-1, namely, (i) motive, and (ii) last seen together.

Referring to the statement of PW 12 (mother of A-1), wherein she had said that A-1 and the deceased were sleeping in one room and she was sleeping in the other room, the trial court observed that the circumstances put forth by the prosecution may lead to inference that death of the deceased might have been caused by A-1 but that was not sufficient for convicting him for the offence of murder. However, relying on the evidence of the father, mother, sister and cousin of the deceased, the trial court came to the conclusion that the deceased was subjected to cruelty on account of demand for dowry, the motive for causing the death stood proved and that the circumstance of having been last seen together alone in the company of A-1 also stood proved. Thus, the trial court convicted the appellants under Sections 304-B and 498-A read with Section 34 IPC.

In appeal, the High Court found that there were material improvements in the evidence as regards demand of money and that A-2 had an evil eye on the deceased. The High Court observed that the prosecution failed to establish the charge against both the appellants in relation to commission of offences under Sections 498-A and 304-B IPC. Thus, it held that the trial court was not justified in convicting the appellants for the said two offences. However, the High Court noted that from the evidence of PW 12 (wife of A-2) it was borne out that on the fateful night both the accused, the deceased and PW 12 were present in the house. As per PW 8, who had performed the post-mortem, the injuries were ante-mortem and the deceased had died due to throttling and not for any other reason. Thus the High Court was of the view that the fact that the deceased was throttled to death and then thrown in a well, read with established circumstances that on the fateful night she was sleeping in the room along with her husband and even appellant A-2 was present in the house, to which there was no explanation given by both the appellants, the chain of circumstances stood completed. The High Court convicted the appellants under Sections 302 and 201 read with Section 34 IPC and sentenced them accordingly. Hence, the present appeals.

Since despite various opportunities A-1 failed to surrender, his appeal was dismissed. Therefore, the Supreme Court was only concerned with the case of A-2.

Allowing the appeal to the extent it pertained to A-2 and setting aside the conviction and sentence passed on him,

Held :

Though charge for offence punishable under Section 302 IPC had been framed against appellant A-1, no such charge was framed against appellant A-2, even with the aid of Section 34 IPC. The only charge framed against A-2 was for an offence punishable under Section 201 read with Section 34 IPC. (Para 14)

However, the High Court convicted A-2 for having committed a major offence punishable under Section 302 IPC. The said conviction cannot be held to be valid when tested on the touchstone of the provision contained in Section 464(2)(a) CrPC. If the High Court was convinced that a failure of justice had, in fact, been occasioned, the High Court was required to follow the procedure laid down in the section, which was not done. That apart, even on the proven facts on record, a case for conviction under Section 302 IPC was not made out against the said appellant. (Paras 15, 22 and 23). Sukhram v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 7 SCC 502: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 2007 SC 3050: (2007) 57 AIC 90 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2007]

— S. 465 See also S. 537, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1291 et seq. in Vol. 2

—S. 465 See Ss. 156, 157, 465, 401 and 397
See also Ss. 197 and 465
See also Ss. 202(2) proviso, 200, 203, 204, 208, 209, 313, 208, 226 to 228, 460, 461 and 465
See also Ss. 202(2) proviso, 209 and 465
See also Ss. 211 & 215 and 464 & 465
See also Ss. 215, 211, 465 and 464
See also Ss. 215 and 465
See also Ss. 216, 217 and 465
See also Ss. 218, 464 and 465
See also Ss. Ch. XVIII (Ss. 225 to 237) and S. 465
See also Ss. 235(2) and 465
See also Ss. 300, 482, 465 and 227
See also Ss. 354 and 465
See also Ss. 386 and 465
See also Ss. 409(2) & 194, 407 and 462 & 465
See also Ss. 482 and 465

[6941] — S. 465 — Error or irregularity in a sanction for prosecution — Held, prosecution not vitiated unless a failure of justice has been occasioned thereby — Merely because the defence raised this objection at the earliest opportunity not sufficient to vitiate the trial — Position under old Code compared — CrPC, 1898, S. 537

In the corresponding provision under the old Code of 1898 the words "or any error or irregularity in any sanction for the prosecution" were absent. Legal position under the old Code, as settled by the decisions of various courts, was that any defect in sanction was not curable and hence the prosecution itself would have been void.

Parliament advisedly incorporated the words "any error or irregularity in any sanction for the prosecution" in Section 465 of the present Code as they wanted to prevent failure of prosecution on the mere ground of any error or irregularity in the sanction for prosecutions. An error or irregularity in a sanction may, nevertheless, vitiate the prosecution only if such error or irregularity has occasioned failure of justice.

Sub-section (2) of Section 465 of the Code is not a carte blanche for rendering all trials vitiated on the ground of the irregularity of sanction if objection thereto was raised at the first instance itself. The sub-section only says that "the court shall have regard to the fact" that objection has been raised at the earlier stage in the proceedings. It is only one of the considerations to be weighed but it does not mean that if objection was raised at the earlier stage, for that very reason the irregularity in the sanction would spoil the prosecution and transmute the proceedings into a void trial. Kalpnath Rai v. State, (1997) 8 SCC 732: AIR 1998 SC 201.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-11-1997]

[6942] — S. 465 — Finding or sentence when reversible by reason of error, omission or irregularity — "Failure of justice" — What amounts to (Paras 23 to 25). Nishan Singh v. State of Punjab, (2008) 17 SCC 505: AIR 2008 SC 1661: (2008) 65 AIC 172 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-3-2008]

State of M.P. v. Bhooraji, (2001) 7 SCC 679: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1373; M.C. Sulkunte (Dr.) v. State of Mysore, (1970) 3 SCC 513: 1971 SCC (Cri) 119; CBI v. V.K. Sehgal, (1999) 8 SCC 501: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1494; State of Haryana v. Ram Singh, (2002) 2 SCC 426: 2002 SCC (Cri) 350, relied on [6943] — S. 465 — Irregular proceedings — High Court's judgment, well reasoned — Even if there were irregularities in the procedure, held, the judgment not open to be set aside in absence of any showing of failure of justice. Hanumant Dass v. Vinay Kumar, (1982) 2 SCC 177: 1982 SCC (Cri) 379(2): AIR 1982 SC 1052: 1982 Cri LJ 977.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1982]

[6944] — S. 465 — Non-production of seized drugs (charas and ganja) before trial court — Held, was not a mere procedural irregularity — It caused prejudice to the accused — Hence was fatal to the prosecution case (Paras 5 and 6). Jitendra v. State of M.P., (2004) 10 SCC 562: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2028: AIR 2003 SC 4236: 2003 Cri LJ 4985.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2003]

[6945] — S. 465 — Trial of a summons case as a warrant case is a mere irregularity and not illegality and does not vitiate the trial unless there is prejudice. Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Anil Kumar Bhunja, (1979) 4 SCC 274: 1979 SCC (Cri) 1038: AIR 1980 SC 52: 1979 Cri LJ 1390.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria, P.N. Shinghal and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-8-1979]

[6946] — Ss. 465, 306 and 307 — Scope and object of S. 465 — Held, S. 465 cannot be applied to a patent defect of jurisdiction or an order passed in contravention of any mandatory provision of the Code — Tender of pardon by a Chief Judicial Magistrate who had no jurisdiction to do so is a total lack of jurisdiction which cannot be cured under S. 465

Section 465 of the Code is the residuary section intended to cure any error, omission or irregularity committed by a court of competent jurisdiction in course of trial through accident or inadvertence, or even an illegality consisting in the infraction of any provisions of law. The sole object of the section is to secure justice by preventing the invalidation of a trial already held, on the ground of technical breaches of any provisions in the Code causing no prejudice to the accused. But by no stretch of imagination the aforesaid provisions can be attracted to a situation where a court having no jurisdiction under the Code does something or passes an order in contravention of the mandatory provisions of the Code. In view of the legal position that after a criminal proceeding is committed to a Court of Session it is only the Court of Session which has the jurisdiction to tender pardon to an accused and the Chief Judicial Magistrate does not possess any such jurisdiction, it would be impossible to hold that such tender of pardon by the Chief Judicial Magistrate can be accepted and the evidence of the approver thereafter can be considered by attracting the provisions of Section 465 of the Code. The aforesaid provision cannot be applied to a patent defect of jurisdiction. Then again it is not a case of reversing the sentence or order passed by a court of competent jurisdiction but is a case where only a particular item of evidence has been taken out of consideration as that evidence of the so-called approver has been held by us to be not a legal evidence since pardon had been tendered by a court of incompetent jurisdiction. To such a situation the provisions of Section 465 cannot be attracted at all. It is true that procedures are intended to subserve the ends of justice and undue emphasis on mere technicalities which are not vital or important may frustrate the ends of justice. The courts, therefore, are required to consider the gravity of irregularity and whether the same has caused a failure of justice. To tender pardon by a Chief Judicial Magistrate cannot be held to be a mere case of irregularity nor can it be said that there has been no failure of justice. It is a case of total lack of jurisdiction, and consequently the follow-up action on account of such an order of a Magistrate without jurisdiction cannot be taken into consideration at all. A. Devendran v. State of T.N., (1997) 11 SCC 720: AIR 1998 SC 2821.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-10-1997]

[6947] — Ss. 465 and 197 — Want of valid sanction for prosecution — Scope of interference by appellate or revisional court with the conviction by the trial court — Prosecution under S. 161 IPC and S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act ending in conviction — In such circumstances, reversal of conviction and sentence by appellate or revisional court merely on the ground of want of a valid sanction for prosecution, held, impermissible — More so when the plea of want of valid sanction was raised for the first time before the appellate court — Penal Code, 1860, S. 161 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 6 and 5(2) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 19 and 13

The respondent was a Section Officer in the Office of the Defence Pension Disbursement Section. He was challaned by CBI for demanding and collecting an amount of Rs 200 from a pensioner as reward for disbursing the arrears of pension due to him with the further allegation that he was trapped in the process of receiving the aforesaid amount of bribery on 20-12-1984. The Special Judge convicted him on 30-8-1990 under Section 161 IPC and Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 and sentenced him to undergo rigorous imprisonment for two years besides payment of fine. In an appeal before the High Court he contended that the sanction to prosecute him was accorded by an officer who was not competent for that purpose. Upholding his contention the High Court set aside the conviction and the sentence. Leaving aside the question of competence of the officer concerned to grant the sanction, the Supreme Court took up the question whether at all the appellate court could reverse the conviction and sentence merely on the ground of want of a valid sanction, and

Held :

Section 465 CrPC debars a court of appeal or revision from reversing a finding (or even an order of conviction and sentence) on account of any error or irregularity in the sanction for the prosecution, unless failure of justice had been occasioned on account of such error or irregularity. For determining whether want of valid sanction had in fact occasioned failure of justice the sub-section (2) of S. 465 enjoins on the court a duty to consider whether the accused had raised any objection on that score at the trial stage. Even if he had raised any such objection at the early stage it is hardly sufficient to conclude that there was failure of justice. It has to be determined on the facts of each case. But an accused who did not raise it at the trial stage cannot possibly sustain such a plea made for the first time in the appellate court. (Para 10)

In a case where the accused failed to raise the question of valid sanction the trial would normally proceed to its logical end by making a judicial scrutiny of the entire materials. If that case ends in conviction there is no question of failure of justice on the mere premise that no valid sanction was accorded for prosecuting the public servant because the very purpose of providing such a filtering check is to safeguard public servants from frivolous or mala fide or vindictive prosecution. But once the judicial filtering process is over on completion of the trial the purpose of providing for the initial sanction would bog down to a surplusage. (Para 11). Central Bureau of Investigation v. V.K. Sehgal, (1999) 8 SCC 501: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1494: AIR 1999 SC 3706.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-1999]

Kalpnath Rai v. State (through CBI), (1997) 8 SCC 732: 1998 SCC (Cri) 134, relied on [6948] — S. 465 — Cognizance taken on defective sanction order — Cognizance taken on a defective sanction order — No objection raised at the trial — Held, defect is curable under S. 465 CrPC — Appellant not allowed to raise the plea of defect in sanction — Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987, Ss. 20-A(2) and 14(3). Lal Singh v. State of Gujarat, (1998) 5 SCC 529: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1360: AIR 1999 SC 1475.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas, S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-1998]

[6949] — S. 465 — Acquittal on the basis of erroneous finding of absence of proper sanction for prosecution — Non-interference with, by Supreme Court at a delayed stage — In view of 20 long years having elapsed since the commission of the offence, instead of remanding the matter for disposal on merits, order of acquittal left undisturbed — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, Ss. 20 and 16(1)(a)(i). State of Maharashtra v. Gopalprasad Govindprasad Agarwal, (1998) 9 SCC 274: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1003: AIR 1999 SC 1507.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-1997]

[6950] — S. 465 — Error, omission or irregularity in sanction for prosecution — Effect of — Held, it is not fatal unless it has occasioned or resulted in failure of justice — Requirement of sanction under S. 19(1) is a matter of procedure and does not go to the root of the jurisdiction — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19

The effect of Sections 19(3) and (4) of the PC Act, 1988 is of considerable significance. In Section 19(3), the stress is on "failure of justice" and that too "in the opinion of the court". In Section 19(4), the stress is on raising the plea at the appropriate time. Significantly, the "failure of justice" is relatable to error, omission or irregularity in the sanction. Therefore, mere error, omission or irregularity in sanction is not considered fatal unless it has resulted in failure of justice or failure of justice has been occasioned thereby. Section 19(1) is a matter of procedure and does not go to the root of the jurisdiction. Section 19(3)(c) reduces the rigour of prohibition. (Para 8). Paul Varghese v. State of Kerala, (2007) 14 SCC 783: AIR 2007 SC 2618: (2007) 2 KLT 529: (2007) 53 AIC 43 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-4-2007]

Central Bureau of Investigation v. V.K. Sehgal, (1999) 8 SCC 501: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1494; State v. T. Venkatesh Murthy, (2004) 7 SCC 763: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2140; Parkash Singh Badal v. State of Punjab, (2007) 1 SCC 1: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 193, relied on [6951] — S. 465 — Sanction order — Validity of — Challenge to — When not sustainable — Held, in absence of anything to show that any defect or irregularity in sanction caused failure of justice, plea relating to sanction was without substance — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19 (Para 7). Shankerbhai Laljibhai Rot v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 13 SCC 487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2004]

[6952] — Ss. 465 and 401 — Offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act — Invalid sanction — Effect of — Merely because there is any omission, error or irregularity in the matter of according sanction that does not affect the validity of the proceeding unless the court records the satisfaction that such error, omission or irregularity has resulted in failure of justice — The said logic applies to the appellate or revisional court also — On facts, sanction granted by the Superintending Engineer of the Karnataka Electricity Board was not sufficient to prosecute the accused — Trial court discharging accused, but granting liberty to prosecution to obtain fresh sanction and file a fresh charge-sheet — Revision before High Court by State — Dismissal of — Held, courts below had not kept in view the requirements of sub-ss. (3) and (4) relating to "failure of justice" — Orders of the courts below set aside — Trial court directed to record findings in terms of sub-ss. (3)(b) and (4) — Karnataka Electricity Board Employees' (Classification, Disciplinary Control and Appeal) Regulations, 1987 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 19(3) and (4)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

A combined reading of sub-sections (3) and (4) of Section 19 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 makes the position clear that notwithstanding anything contained in the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, no finding, sentence and order passed by a Special Judge shall be reversed or altered by a court in appeal, confirmation or revision on the ground of the absence of, or any error, omission or irregularity in the sanction required under sub-section (1), unless in the opinion of that court a failure of justice has in fact been occasioned thereby. (Para 7)

Clause (b) of sub-section (3) shows that no court shall stay the proceedings under the Act on the ground of any error, omission or irregularity in the sanction granted by the authority, unless it is satisfied that such error, omission or irregularity has resulted in a failure of justice. (Para 8)

Sub-section (4) postulates that in determining under sub-section (3) whether the absence of, or any error, omission or irregularity in the sanction has occasioned or resulted in a failure of justice, the court shall have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at any earlier stage in the proceedings. (Para 9)

In the instant case neither the trial court nor the High Court appear to have kept in view the requirements of sub-section (3) relating to question regarding "failure of justice". Merely because there is any omission, error or irregularity in the matter of according sanction, that does not affect the validity of the proceeding unless the court records the satisfaction that such error, omission or irregularity has resulted in failure of justice. The same logic also applies to the appellate or revisional court. The requirement of sub-section (4) about raising the issue at the earliest stage has not been also considered. Unfortunately, the High Court by a practically non-reasoned order, confirmed the order passed by the learned trial Judge. The orders are, therefore, indefensible. (Para 14). State v. T. Venkatesh Murthy, (2004) 7 SCC 763: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2140.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-2004]

[6953] — Ss. 465 and 482 — Reopening of the case — When not proper — Plea of alibi raised by the acquitted co-accused accepted by the trial court and upheld by the High Court — No appeal against acquittal filed by State — Supreme Court while hearing appeal against conviction of the convicted co-accused expressing doubt about the genuineness of the said plea of alibi taken by the acquitted co-accused — However, since no appeal had been filed against their acquittal it would not be proper to reopen the case for the occurrence which took place in 1976 and reconsider their acquittal recorded in 1984 — Criminal Trial — Practice and Procedure. Amrik Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1994) 1 SCC 563: 1994 SCC (Cri) 447.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1993]

[6954] — S. 465 — Necessity of enquiry report — Provision in statutory rules [R. 55-A, Civil Services (CCA) Rules in this case] for furnishing copy of enquiry report — Nature of, and effect of non-compliance with — Such a rule, held, is procedural and mandatory — However, the delinquent seeking the order of his dismissal to be quashed on the ground of non-compliance with the said provision, held, must show that he was prejudiced thereby — Otherwise the said omission would not be fatal to the impugned order — Provisions in other statutes saving an order suffering from defect, error, irregularity or omission, from being set aside unless prejudice or failure of justice is shown, noticed — On facts, held, the delinquent failed to discharge that burden — Hence further held, Service Tribunal erred in quashing the dismissal order — Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1930, R. 55-A (as amended in U.P.) — CPC, 1908, Ss. 99-A & 115 and Or. 21 R. 90

The respondent was a confirmed Assistant Engineer in the Irrigation Department of U.P. and was later promoted as Executive Engineer. In response to a charge sheet from the Administrative Tribunal, he submitted his explanation. Thereafter a full-fledged enquiry was conducted. The Administrative Tribunal found him guilty and recommended his dismissal. The State Government issued to him a notice to show cause against the proposed dismissal and after obtaining the respondent's reply, obtained the Administrative Tribunal's comments thereon. Thereafter the State Government passed an order on 13-3-1973 dismissing the respondent from service. The U.P. State Public Services Tribunal quashed the order of dismissal principally on the ground that a copy of the enquiry report as required under Rule 55-A of the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1930 (as amended in U.P.) was not furnished to the respondent. The High Court upheld the Services Tribunal's order. Relying on Managing Director, ECIL case (1993) 4 SCC 727, the appellant State contended that in the absence of anything to show that the respondent was prejudiced by the non-furnishing of the enquiry report, the omission would not warrant the setting aside of the dismissal order. On the other hand, the respondent contended that since in the rules governing the service conditions of the respondent there was a requirement of furnishing a copy of the proceedings of the enquiry, which would obviously include the enquiry report, the prejudice theory laid down in ECIL case would not apply. The respondent added that in the ECIL case there was no such requirement under the statutory rules, rather the requirement was by virtue of interpretation put forth upon Article 311(2) of the Constitution of India. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

From the case of ECIL it is plain that in cases covered by the constitutional mandate i.e. Article 311(2), non-furnishing of enquiry report would not be fatal to the order of punishment unless prejudice is shown. Therefore, requirement in the statutory rules of furnishing copy of the enquiry report cannot be made to stand on a higher footing by laying down that question of prejudice is not material therein. (Para 12)

Moreover, every infraction of statutory provisions would not make the consequent action void and/or invalid. The statute may contain certain substantive provisions, e.g., who is the competent authority to impose a particular punishment on a particular employee. Such provision must be strictly complied with as in such cases the theory of substantial compliance may not be available. But in respect of many procedural provisions, it would be possible to apply the theory of substantial compliance or the test of prejudice, as the case may be. Even amongst procedural provisions, there may be some provisions of a fundamental nature which have to be complied with and in whose case the theory of substantial compliance may not be available, but the question of prejudice may be material. In respect of procedural provisions other than of a fundamental nature, the theory of substantial compliance would be available and in such cases objections on this score have to be judged on the touchstone of prejudice. The test would be, whether the delinquent officer had or did not have a fair hearing. (Para 13)

Even in the CPC there are various provisions viz. Sections 99-A and 115 besides Order 21 Rule 90 where merely because there is defect, error or irregularity in the order, the same would not be liable to be set aside unless it has prejudicially affected the decision. Likewise, in the CrPC also, Section 465 lays down that no finding, sentence or order passed by a competent court shall be upset merely on account of any error, omission or irregularity unless in the opinion of the court a failure of justice has, in fact, been occasioned thereby. There is no reason why the principle underlying the aforesaid provisions would not apply in case of the statutory provisions like Rule 55-A of the CCS (CCA) Rules in relation to disciplinary proceeding. Rule 55-A embodies in it nothing but the principles of reasonable opportunity and natural justice. (Para 14)

The provision in Rule 55-A of the Rules for furnishing a copy of enquiry report is a procedural one and of a mandatory character, but even then a delinquent has to show that he has been prejudiced by its non-observance and consequently the law laid down by the Constitution Bench in the case of ECIL to the effect that an order passed in a disciplinary proceeding cannot ipso facto be quashed merely because a copy of the enquiry report has not been furnished to the delinquent officer, but he is obliged to show that by non-furnishing of such a report he has been prejudiced, would apply even to cases where there is requirement of furnishing a copy of enquiry report under the statutory provisions and/or service rules. (Para 23)

Undisputedly, after submission of enquiry report the State Government sent a show-cause notice to the delinquent pursuant to which he had shown cause and the disciplinary authority after considering the said show-cause reply, passed the order of dismissal. It is not the stand of the respondent that in the absence of the enquiry report he could not submit an effective show-cause reply before the order of dismissal was passed. Neither from the order passed by the Services Tribunal nor the High Court would it appear that the respondent had raised this point there that he could not file an effective show-cause reply in the absence of enquiry report nor has it been stated that in the show-cause reply it was complained that the delinquent had not been served with a copy of the enquiry report. From these facts, it is not possible to hold that the respondent was prejudiced by non-furnishing of the enquiry report. (Para 24). State of U.P. v. Harendra Arora, (2001) 6 SCC 392: 2001 SCC (L&S) 959: AIR 2001 SC 2319: 2001 All LJ 1185: (2001) 3 LLN 42.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

Managing Director, ECIL v. B. Karunakar, (1993) 4 SCC 727: 1993 SCC (L&S) 1184: (1993) 25 ATC 704; Russell v. Duke of Norfolk, (1949) 1 All ER 109 (CA), relied on

R. v. Secy. of State for Transport, ex p Gwent County Council, (1987) 1 All ER 161 (CA); Davis v. Carew-Pole, (1956) 1 WLR 833: (1956) 2 All ER 524; Jankinath Sarangi v. State of Orissa, (1969) 3 SCC 392; K.L. Tripathi v. State Bank of India, (1984) 1 SCC 43: 1984 SCC (L&S) 62; Sunil Kumar Banerjee v. State of W.B., (1980) 3 SCC 304: 1980 SCC (L&S) 369; State Bank of Patiala v. S.K. Sharma, (1996) 3 SCC 364: 1996 SCC (L&S) 717; Krishan Lal v. State of J&K, (1994) 4 SCC 422: 1994 SCC (L&S) 885: (1994) 27 ATC 590, followed

Managing Director, ECIL v. B. Karunakar, (1993) 4 SCC 727: 1993 SCC (L&S) 1184: (1993) 25 ATC 704, applied

Ridge v. Baldwin, 1964 AC 40: (1963) 2 All ER 66 (HL), considered

— S. 465(1) See also Ss. 209, 323 and 465(1)

[6955] — S. 465(1) — "A failure of justice has in fact been occasioned" — Onus of proof, held, is on the accused (Para 17). State of M.P. v. Bhooraji, (2001) 7 SCC 679: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1373: AIR 2001 SC 3372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2001]

[6956] — S. 465(1) — "Court of competent jurisdiction" — Meaning — Competence will remain unaffected by procedural lapse — No effect of statutory bar to take cognizance of certain cases on the question whether the court was of competent jurisdiction or not

There is no substance in the contention that Section 465 is restricted to any findings, sentence or order passed by "a court of competent jurisdiction" and that a Special Court under the SC/ST Act which is essentially a Sessions Court would have remained incompetent until the case is committed to it. The expression "a court of competent jurisdiction" envisaged in Section 465 is to denote a validly constituted court conferred with jurisdiction to try the offence or offences. Such a court will not get denuded of its competence to try the case on account of any procedural lapse and the competence would remain unaffected by the non-compliance with the procedural requirement. The inability to take cognizance of an offence without a committal order does not mean that a duly constituted court became an incompetent court for all purposes. If an objection was raised in that court at the earliest occasion on the ground that the case should have been committed by a Magistrate, the same specified court has to exercise a jurisdiction either for sending the records to a Magistrate for adopting committal proceedings or return the police report to the Public Prosecutor or the police for presentation before the Magistrate. Even this could be done only because the court has competence to deal with the case. Sometimes that court may have to hear arguments to decide that preliminary issue. (Paras 19 and 21)

The bar against taking cognizance of certain offences or by certain courts cannot govern the question whether the court concerned is "a court of competent jurisdiction", e.g. courts are debarred from taking cognizance of certain offences without sanction of certain authorities. If a court took cognizance of such offences, which were later found to be without valid sanction, it would not become the test or standard for deciding whether that court was "a court of competent jurisdiction". It is now well settled that if the question of sanction was not raised at the earliest opportunity the proceedings would remain unaffected on account of want of sanction. This is another example to show that the condition precedent for taking cognizance is not the standard to determine whether the court concerned is "a court of competent jurisdiction". (Para 22). State of M.P. v. Bhooraji, (2001) 7 SCC 679: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1373: AIR 2001 SC 3372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2001]

[6957] — S. 465(1) — Procedural irregularity — "Failure of justice" — Essential to show for exercise of power under — Taking cognizance of certain offence by a particular court despite bar against the same is a procedural lapse for which appellate court's order for a de novo trial, held, not justified — Procedural irregularity or illegality, which does not affect the core of the case, would not justify the appellate court to order a fresh trial — Specified court under SC and ST (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, being a Sessions Court, taking cognizance of offence under the Act without the case being committed by a Magistrate, in accordance with the legal position then prevailing in State of M.P. by virtue of a decision of a Full Bench of High Court of M.P. — But during pendency of appeal before the High Court against the order of conviction and sentence of the trial court, Supreme Court taking the view that committal proceedings are necessary for a specified court under the said Act to take cognizance of offences to be tried — Trial court having not adopted that procedure, High Court quashing the entire trial proceedings and directing commencement of the trial de novo by initiating committal proceedings — Held, High Court erred in doing so — It was for the accused to show that "a failure of justice" had occasioned on account of such irregularity in the trial proceedings which accused failed to show — Specified court under the said Act would not cease to be a "court of competent jurisdiction" merely because of such procedural lapse

The police charge-sheeted eleven persons in connection with an incident for various offences including Section 302 r/w Section 149 IPC and Section 3(2) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act. The case started in January 1992 before the Court of Addl. Sessions Judge (MP) which was the specified court as per Section 14 of the said Act. The court proceeded with the trial and in 1996 convicted all the eleven persons under Sections 148, 323, 302/149 IPC and sentenced them to various punishments including imprisonment for life. All the convicted persons filed appeal before the High Court of M P.

In the State of M.P., by virtue of a decision of a Division Bench of the High Court in Meerabai v. Bhujbal Singh, 1995 Cri LJ 2376 (MP), the legal position that was prevailing was that committal proceedings were necessary for a specified court under the SC/ST Act to take cognizance of the offences to be tried. But that legal position was changed in the State when a Full Bench of the High Court by its judgment dated 23-8-1995 in Anand Swaroop Tiwari v. Ram Ratan Jatav, 1996 MPLJ 141 (FB) overruled the aforesaid dictum and held "Section 193 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not apply to proceedings under the (SC/ST) Act and committal orders are not required". The Full Bench, in order to prevent repetition of trials already held or started, took the precautionary measure of directing that "where cognizance has already been taken on the basis of committal orders in police challan cases, it is not necessary for the courts to retrace their steps or to take cognizance afresh". During the pendency of the appeal preferred by the said eleven convicted persons, the Supreme Court in Gangula Ashok v. State of A.P., (2000) 2 SCC 504 reiterated the same legal position as was adopted by the Division Bench of the High Court in Meerabai case. Consequently, the legal position as was held by the Division Bench of the High Court got revived and the Full Bench decision got eclipsed. Thereupon all the eleven convicted persons filed application before the High Court seeking quashment of the trial proceedings on the ground that the trial was without jurisdiction inasmuch as the specified Court of Session did not acquire jurisdiction to take cognizance of and try the case, in the absence of it being committed by a Magistrate. The High Court upheld the said contention and ordered "the entire trial held by the court below shall stand quashed and the trial court is directed to return the charge-sheet and the connected papers to the prosecution for resubmission to the Magistrate for further proceedings in accordance with law". Hence the present appeal by special leave by the State. The real question before the Supreme Court was whether the High Court necessarily should have quashed the trial proceedings to be repeated again only on account of the declaration of the legal position made by the Supreme Court concerning the procedural aspect about the cases involving offences under the SC/ST Act? Setting aside the judgment of the High Court,

Held :

The trial held by the Sessions Court reaching the judgment impugned before the High Court in appeal was conducted by a court of competent jurisdiction and the same cannot be erased merely on account of a procedural lapse, particularly when the same happened at a time when the law which held the field in the State of Madhya Pradesh was governed by the decision of the Full Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court. The High Court should have dealt with the appeal on merits and on the basis of the evidence already on record. To facilitate the said course, the case is remitted back to the High Court for disposal of the appeal afresh on merits in accordance with law and subject to the observations made below. (Para 23)

Section 465 of the Code falls within Chapter XXXV under the caption "Irregular Proceedings". The entire purport of the provisions subsumed in Chapter XXXV is to save the proceedings linked with erroneous steps, unless the error is of such a nature that it had occasioned a failure of justice. Section 465(1) makes it clear that the error, omission or irregularity in the proceedings held before or during the trial or in any enquiry were reckoned by the legislature as possible occurrences in criminal courts. Yet the legislature disfavoured axing down the proceedings or to direct repetition of the whole proceedings afresh. Hence, the legislature imposed a prohibition that unless such error, omission or irregularity has occasioned "a failure of justice" the superior court shall not quash the proceedings merely on the ground of such error, omission or irregularity. (Paras 12, 13 and 15)

It is an uphill task for the accused in this case to show that failure of justice had in fact occasioned merely because the specified Sessions Court took cognizance of the offences without the case being committed to it. The normal and correct procedure, of course, is that the case should have been committed to the Special Court because that court being essentially a Court of Session can take cognizance of any offence only then. But if a specified Sessions Court, on the basis of the legal position then felt to be correct on account of a decision adopted by the High Court, had chosen to take cognizance without a committal order, what is the disadvantage of the accused in following the said course? (Para 17)

After enactment of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1973, the committal court, in police charge-sheeted cases, cannot examine any witness at all. The Magistrate in such cases has only to commit the cases involving offences exclusively triable by the Court of Session. Therefore, after commencement of the 1973 Code it is not possible for an accused to raise a contention that skipping committal proceedings had deprived him of the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses in the committal court and that had caused prejudice to his defence. (Para 18). State of M.P. v. Bhooraji, (2001) 7 SCC 679: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1373: AIR 2001 SC 3372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2001]

State of H.P. v. Gita Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 452: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1390; Shamnsaheb M. Multtani v. State of Karnataka, (2001) 2 SCC 577: 2001 SCC (Cri) 358, relied on

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: 1955 Cri LJ 526; Ballabhdas Agarwala v. J.C. Chakravarty, AIR 1960 SC 576: 1960 Cri LJ 752, distinguished

[6958] — S. 465(1) — Reversal of finding, sentence or order of trial court — De novo trial — Factors to be considered before passing order for — While ordering de novo trial, appellate court should have regard to the impact thereof on the bulk of pending cases as well as hardship caused to the persons who had come to depose their versions before the court

A de novo trial should be the last resort and that too only when such a course becomes so desperately indispensable. It should be limited to the extreme exigency to avert "a failure of justice". Any omission or even the illegality in the procedure which does not affect the core of the case is not a ground for ordering a de novo trial. This is because the appellate court has plenary powers for re-evaluating and reappraising the evidence and even to take additional evidence by the appellate court itself or to direct such additional evidence to be collected by the trial court. But to replay the whole laborious exercise after erasing the bulky records relating to the earlier proceedings, by bringing down all the persons to the court once again for repeating the whole deposition would be a sheer waste of time, energy and costs unless there is miscarriage of justice otherwise. Hence the said course can be resorted to when it becomes unpreventable for the purpose of averting "a failure of justice". The superior court which orders a de novo trial cannot afford to overlook the realities and the serious impact on the pending cases in trial courts which are crammed with dockets, and how much that order would inflict hardship on many innocent persons who once took all the trouble to reach the court and deposed their versions in the very same case. To them and the public the re-enactment of the whole labour might give the impression that law is more pedantic than pragmatic. Law is not an instrument to be used for inflicting sufferings on the people but for the process of justice dispensation. (Para 8). State of M.P. v. Bhooraji, (2001) 7 SCC 679: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1373: AIR 2001 SC 3372.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-2001]

State of H.P. v. Gita Ram, (2000) 7 SCC 452: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1390, relied on

— S. 465(2) See Ss. 306(4)(a) and 465(2)

— Ch. XXXVI See Ss. 467 to 473

— S. 467 See also S. 197 and 420, 467, 468, 471

[6959] — Ss. 467 to 473 (Ch. XXXVI) — Object of — Explained

The object of having Chapter XXXVI in CrPC is to protect persons from prosecution based on stale grievances and complaints which may turn out to be vexatious. The reason for engrafting the rule of limitation is that due to a long lapse of time necessary evidence will be lost and persons prosecuted will be placed in a defenceless position. This may even result in miscarriage of justice. At the same time it is necessary to ensure that due to delays on the part of the investigating and prosecuting agencies and the application of rules of limitation, the criminal justice system is not rendered toothless and ineffective and the perpetrators of crime are not placed in an advantageous position. Parliament obviously taking note of various aspects, classified offences into two categories. Grave offences for which the punishment prescribed is imprisonment for a term exceeding three years are not brought within the ambit of Chapter XXXVI. The period of limitation is prescribed only for offences for which the punishment specified is imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years and even in such cases a wide discretion is given under Section 473 to the court in the matter of taking cognizance of an offence after the expiry of the period of limitation. (Para 10). Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas, (1999) 4 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 629: AIR 1999 SC 2071.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Venkataswami and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-1999]

— S. 468 See Ss. 167(2) and 468

See also Ss. 167(5) (as substituted for W.B. by Act 24 of 1988) and 468

See also Ss. 190(1)(b) & 204, 200, 156(3), 468 and 401

See also Ss. 197 and 420, 467, 468, 471

See also Ss. 239, 240, 227, 190(1), 156(3) and 468

See also Ss. 374 and 468

See also Ss. 378(4) and 468

See also Ss. 469 and 468

See also Ss. 473 and 468

See also Ss. 482 and 197, 173, 309, 437(6) and 468

See also Ss. 482 and 468

See also Ss. 482, 468, 469(b) & (c), 154 and 473

[6960] — S. 468 — Question of limitation — Nature of — Held on facts, was not a pure question of law but a mixed question of law and facts and for deciding the said question certain disputed questions of facts were required to be adjudicated upon after giving opportunity to parties to adduce evidence — Said procedure having not been adopted, the trial court committed an error in dismissing the complaint on the ground that the same was barred by limitation and the High Court was not justified in upholding the said order — Hence impugned orders set aside and matter remitted to trial court for decision afresh (Paras 3 and 4). Gurubachan Singh Gill v. J.S. Bagga, (2005) 13 SCC 381: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 249.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2005]

[6961] — S. 468 — Bar of limitation to taking cognizance of offence — Object — Maxim vigilantibus, et non dormientibus, jura subveniunt (the vigilant, and not the sleepy, are assisted by the laws) — Inapplicable to offence relating to cruelty on women in matrimonial cases

The object of introducing S. 468 CrPC was to put a bar of limitation on prosecutions and to prevent the parties from filing cases after a long time, as it was thought proper that after a long lapse of time, launching of prosecution may be vexatious, because by that time even the evidence may disappear. But that consideration cannot be extended to matrimonial offences, where the allegations are of cruelty, torture and assault by the husband or other members of the family to the complainant. The general rule of limitation is based on the Latin maxim: vigilantibus, et non dormientibus, jura subveniunt (the vigilant, and not the sleepy, are assisted by the laws). That maxim cannot be applied in connection with offences relating to cruelty against women. Victim is subjected to such cruelty repeatedly and it is more or less like a continuing offence. It is only as a last resort that a wife openly comes before a court to unfold and relate the day-to-day torture and cruelty faced by her, inside the house, which many of such victims do not like to be made public. As such, courts while considering the question of limitation for an offence under S. 498-A IPC i.e. subjecting a woman to cruelty by her husband or the relative of her husband, should judge that question, in the light of S. 473 CrPC. Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1993]

[6962] — S. 468 — Bar of limitation under — Invocation of — Computation of period of limitation — Date relevant for — Held, the same is the date when the complaint is filed or criminal proceedings are initiated and not the date when the court/Magistrate takes cognizance or issues process — Applying the doctrine of actus curiae neminem gravabit, further held, a view contrary to the one taken above would lead to injustice and defeat the primary object of procedural law — Connecting provision of limitation in S. 468 CrPC with date of issue of process or taking of cognizance by the court may make it unsustainable and ultra vires Art. 14 of the Constitution — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 294 and 323

What should be the relevant date for computation of period of limitation prescribed under Section 468 CrPC was the question involved in the present case.

The instant incident took place on 2-2-1996. A complaint in respect thereof was filed against the respondent within three days of the incident. But the Magistrate took cognizance of the matter and issued summons against the respondent in respect of offences under Sections 294 and 323 IPC after more than one year of the incident. The respondent filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the said proceedings on the ground that the said complaint was barred by limitation under Section 468 CrPC. The High Court allowed the said petition. It held that the date relevant and material for deciding the bar of limitation under Section 468 CrPC was the date of taking cognizance by the court and not the date of filing of the complaint. Thus, the High Court opined that since the cognizance in the present case was taken after the expiry of the limitation period prescribed under Section 468 CrPC in relation to offences in question (i.e. one year), the instant complaint was barred by limitation. Hence, the present appeal.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant (complainant) contended that the question of limitation should be considered on the basis of the date of filing of the complaint. Whereas the respondent (accused) argued that the said question must be considered on the basis of the date of taking cognizance by the court.

Allowing the appeal by setting aside the order of the High Court and directing the Magistrate to proceed with the case,

Held :

For the purpose of computing the period of limitation under Section 468 CrPC, the relevant date must be considered as the date of filing of complaint or initiating criminal proceedings and not the date of taking cognizance by a Magistrate or issuance of process by a court. (Para 52)

The two things, namely, (1) filing of complaint or initiation of criminal proceedings; and (2) taking cognizance or issuing process are totally different, distinct and independent. So far as the complainant is concerned, as soon as he files a complaint in a competent court of law, he has done everything which is required to be done by him at that stage. Thereafter, it is for the Magistrate to consider the matter, to apply his mind and to take an appropriate decision of taking cognizance, issuing process or any other action which the law contemplates. The complainant has no control over those proceedings. Because of several reasons it may not be possible for the court or the Magistrate to issue process or take cognizance. But a complainant cannot be penalised for such delay on the part of the court nor can he be non-suited because of failure or omission by the Magistrate in taking appropriate action under CrPC. No criminal proceeding can be abruptly terminated when a complainant approaches the court well within the time prescribed by law. In such cases, the doctrine actus curiae neminem gravabit (an act of court shall prejudice none) would indeed apply. One of the first and highest duties of all courts is to take care that an act of court does no harm to suitors. (Paras 47 to 49)

CrPC imposes an obligation on the aggrieved party to take recourse to appropriate forum within the period provided by law and once he takes such action, it would be wholly unreasonable and inequitable if he is told that his grievance would not be ventilated as the court had not taken an action within the period of limitation. Such interpretation of law, instead of promoting justice would lead to perpetuate injustice and defeat the primary object of procedural law. (Para 50)

The matter can be looked at from different angle also. Once it is accepted (and there is no dispute about it) that it is not within the domain of the complainant or prosecuting agency to take cognizance of an offence or to issue process and the only thing which the former can do is to file a complaint or initiate proceedings in accordance with law, if that action of initiation of proceedings has been taken within the period of limitation, the complainant is not responsible for any delay on the part of the court or Magistrate in issuing process or taking cognizance of an offence. Now, if he is sought to be penalised because of the omission, default or inaction on the part of the court or Magistrate, the provision of law may have to be tested on the touchstone of Article 14 of the Constitution. It can possibly be urged that such a provision is totally arbitrary, irrational and unreasonable. It is settled law that a court of law would interpret a provision which would help sustaining the validity of law by applying the doctrine of reasonable construction rather than making it vulnerable and unconstitutional by adopting rule of litera legis. Connecting the provision of limitation in Section 468 CrPC with issuing of process or taking of cognizance by the court may make it unsustainable and ultra vires Article 14 of the Constitution. (Para 51)

In the instant case, the complaint was filed within a period of three days from the date of the alleged offence. The complaint, therefore, must be held to be filed within the period of limitation even though cognizance was taken by the Magistrate after the limitation period. (Para 53). Japani Sahoo v. Chandra Sekhar Mohanty, (2007) 7 SCC 394: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 2007 SC 2762: (2007) 3 KLT 760: 2007 Cri LJ 4068.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2007]

Bharat Damodar Kale v. State of A.P., (2003) 8 SCC 559: 2004 SCC (Cri) 39, affirmed and followed

Kamal H. Javeri v. Chandulal Gulabchand Kothari, 1985 Cri LJ 1215 (Bom); Basavantappa Basappa Bannihalli v. Shankarappa Marigallappa Bannihalli, 1990 Cri LJ 360 (Kant); Anand R. Nerkar (Dr.) v. Rahimbi Shaikh Madar, 1991 Cri LJ 557 (Bom); Zain Sait v. Intex-Painter, 1993 Cri LJ 2213 (Ker); Malabar Market Committee v. Nirmala, (1988) 2 Ker LT 420; Labour Enforcement Officer (Central) v. C.V. Avarachan, 2004 Cri LJ 2582 (Ker); Hari Jai Singh v. Suresh Kumar Gupta, 2004 Cri LJ 3768 (HP), approved

Surinder Mohan Vikal v. Ascharaj Lal Chopra, (1978) 2 SCC 403: 1978 SCC (Cri) 215; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; State of H.P. v. Tara Dutt, (2000) 1 SCC 230: 2000 SCC (Cri) 125; Alexander Rodger v. Comptoir D' Escompte, (1871) LR 3 PC 465: 17 ER 120, relied on

Jagannathan v. State, 1983 Cri LJ 1748 (Mad); Court on its own motion v. Sh. Shankroo, 1983 Cri LJ 63 (HP); Shyam Sunder Sarma v. State of Assam, 1988 Cri LJ 1560 (Gau); Bipin Kalra v. State, 2003 Cri LJ 51 (NOC) (Del); Harihar Nath Garg (Dr.) v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 Crimes 412 (MP); Dandapani v. State, (2002) 1 Crimes 675 (Mad); ARU v. State, 1993 LW (Cri) 127, overruled

[6963] — S. 468 — Prescription of period of limitation for initiating criminal proceedings in relation to petty offences — Rationale behind

The provisions as to limitation have been inserted by Parliament in the larger interest of administration of criminal justice keeping in view two conflicting considerations:

(i) the interest of persons sought to be prosecuted (prospective accused);

(ii) and organs of State (prosecuting agencies). (Para 20)

The general rule of criminal justice is that "a crime never dies". The principle is reflected in the well-known maxim nullum tempus aut locus occurrit regi (lapse of time is no bar to Crown in proceeding against offenders). The Limitation Act, 1963 does not apply to criminal proceedings unless there are express and specific provisions to that effect, for instance, Articles 114, 115, 131 and 132 of the Act. It is settled law that a criminal offence is considered as a wrong against the State and the society even though it has been committed against an individual. Normally, in serious offences, prosecution is launched by the State and a court of law has no power to throw away prosecution solely on the ground of delay. Mere delay in approaching a court of law would not by itself afford a ground for dismissing the case though it may be a relevant circumstance in reaching a final verdict. (Para 14)

But it also cannot be overlooked that no person can be kept under continuous apprehension that he can be prosecuted at "any time" for "any crime" irrespective of the nature or seriousness of the offence. "People will have no peace of mind if there is no period of limitation even for petty offences." (Para 16). Japani Sahoo v. Chandra Sekhar Mohanty, (2007) 7 SCC 394: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 2007 SC 2762: (2007) 3 KLT 760: 2007 Cri LJ 4068.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2007]

Asstt. Collector of Customs v. L.R. Melwani, AIR 1970 SC 962: (1969) 2 SCR 438: 1970 Cri LJ 885, relied on

[6964] — Ss. 468, 473 and 482 — Bar of limitation to taking cognizance of offence — Not absolute — Court wherever S. 468 is applicable must consider applicability of S. 473 and condone the delay having regard to explanation for the delay and interest of justice — Matrimonial offences relating to cruelty of husband on wife are in the nature of continuing offences to which bar of S. 468 cannot be applied in the interest of justice — Wife (appellant) leaving matrimonial house in 1985 but filing complaint in 1990 alleging maltreatment, torture and harassment for dowry by her husband (respondent) and mother-in-law and remarriage by husband in 1990 — Cognizance of the offences under Ss. 498-A and 494 IPC taken by Magistrate — Petition under S. 482 filed by the husband for quashing the criminal proceedings against him — Held, High Court erred in taking the view that cognizance of offence under S. 498-A IPC barred under S. 468 and quashing the entire proceedings on that ground under S. 482 — Moreover bar under S. 468 not applicable to offence under S. 494 IPC

In view of the allegation regarding the second marriage by the respondent during the continuance of the first marriage, prima facie an offence under S. 494 IPC was disclosed in the complaint and there was no question of S. 468 CrPC being applicable to an offence under S. 494 IPC as the punishment is for a term extending up to seven years. But nothing has been said by the High Court in respect of the offence under S. 494 IPC. Even in respect of allegation regarding an offence under S. 498-A IPC, the attention of the High Court was not drawn to S. 473 CrPC. In view of the allegation that the complainant was being subjected to cruelty by the respondent, the High Court should have held that it was in the interests of justice to take cognizance even of the offence under S. 498-A IPC ignoring the bar of S. 468 CrPC. Therefore, the order of the High Court has to be set aside.

Courts while considering the question of limitation for an offence under S. 498-A IPC i.e. subjecting a woman to cruelty by her husband or the relative of her husband, should judge that question, in the light of S. 473 CrPC.

In view of S. 473 CrPC a court can take cognizance of an offence not only when it is satisfied on the facts and in the circumstances of the case that the delay has been properly explained, but even in absence of proper explanation if the court is satisfied that it is necessary so to do in the interests of justice. By virtue of the non-obstante clause in S. 473 that section has an overriding effect on S. 468, if the court is satisfied on the facts and in the circumstances of a particular case, that either the delay has been properly explained or that it is necessary to do so in the interests of justice. As such whenever the bar of S. 468 is applicable, the court has to apply its mind on the question, whether it is necessary to condone such delay in the interests of justice. While examining the question, the Court has to take note of the nature of offence, the class to which the victim belongs, including the background of the victim. If the power under S. 473 is to be exercised in the interests of justice, then while considering the grievance by a lady, of torture, cruelty and inhuman treatment, by the husband and the relatives of the husband, the interest of justice requires a deeper examination of such grievances, instead of applying the rule of limitation and saying that with lapse of time the cause of action itself has come to an end.

There is a basic difference between S. 5 of the Limitation Act and S. 473 CrPC. For exercise of power under S. 5 of the Limitation Act, the onus is on the appellant or the applicant to satisfy the court that there was sufficient cause for condonation of the delay, whereas S. 473 enjoins a duty on the court to examine not only whether such delay has been explained but as to whether it is the requirement of the justice to condone or ignore such delay. Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1993]

[6965] — Ss. 468 and 482 — Unreasonably long delay in investigation and trial violates accused's right under Art. 21 — But court should look at the matter with a realistic and practical approach having regard to the facts of each case — In case of alleged offence under S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act against appellant public servant where voluminous documents had to be scrutinised, period of 4 years taken in conducting investigation and period of 2 years taken by Govt. in according sanction for prosecution, held on facts, not unreasonably long so as to violate Art. 21 — Benefit of S. 468 CrPC also inapplicable — Constitution of India — Art. 21

On the basis of some information received by the Anti-Corruption Bureau (ACB) a preliminary enquiry was conducted and on 26-6-1986 an FIR was lodged against the appellant public servant for the offence under Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947. This was immediately followed by raids conducted at the places which the ACB officials believed to be the buildings of the appellant public servant situated at Mumbai and Nasik. The raids and certain other enquiries conducted by them revealed that the appellant public servant had acquired assets worth Rs 33.44 lakhs in the year 1986, which were far in excess of his known sources of income. The investigation was completed by the Assistant Commissioner of Police attached to ACB and he submitted the final report to the Director of ACB in July 1990. After the draft final report was approved, ACB approached the Government of Maharashtra on 6-4-1991 for obtaining sanction to prosecute the appellant public servant. The Government accorded sanction on 22-1-1993 and thereupon the charge-sheet was laid against all the appellants on 4-3-1993 before the Special Court dealing with offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act. The offence alleged against the appellant public servant was under Section 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. The offence alleged against the appellant ladies was abetment of the main offence pitted against the appellant public servant. All the appellants appeared before the Special Judge on 14-1-1994 when process was issued to them, but the case moved at a slow pace and reached the stage of hearing preliminary arguments for considering whether charge should be framed or not. The appellants filed a writ petition before the High Court on 15-4-1997 for quashing the criminal proceedings on the ground that there was gross delay of 11 years for filing the charge-sheet and that such delay violated Article 21 of the Constitution. According to the appellants, such delay had caused unbearable mental trauma, fear psychosis and tension to them as well as to the other members of the family, besides tremendous humiliation and defamation heaped on them. They also said that the abnormal delay had caused colossal financial losses to the appellants and the impact of it had shattered the prospects of personal, professional and business development of the members of the family. The Assistant Commissioner of Police attached to ACB in his affidavit stated before the High Court that the case involved voluminous records as well as a large number of properties which were situated at various places and that hundreds of documents regarding shares, debentures, fixed deposits and receipts pertaining to hundreds of companies were also to be scrutinized. According to him such a heavy work turned out to be a time-consuming job. However, a Division Bench of the High Court dismissed the writ petition merely because two other writ petitions filed by some others, in some other cases were dismissed. Dismissing the appeal filed by the appellant public servant but allowing the appeals filed by the two ladies,

Held :

There is need for speeding up investigation and trial as undue delay in culminating the criminal proceedings is antithesis to the constitutional protection enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution. Nonetheless the court has to view it from pragmatic perspectives and the question of delay cannot be considered entirely from an academic angle. In other words, the High Court and the Supreme Court, when approached by the accused to quash proceedings on the ground of delay, must consider each case on its own facts, without being pedantically persuaded merely because delay had occasioned during investigation stage. (Paras 10 and 16)

Viewing the investigation in this case from a realistic angle it is seen that it has spread over to a period of four years i.e. from June 1986 to July 1990. The documents sought to be produced by the prosecution run into fourteen large volumes. Officials of ACB had to take a lot of time to conduct the investigation relating to every item of assets which was suspected to be belonging to the appellant public servant. (Para 18)

For the first time the Code of Criminal Procedure provided periods for completing investigation in regard to offences punishable with sentences up to imprisonment not exceeding three years. Provisions have been incorporated in Chapter 36 of the Code imposing a legal bar on the court to take cognizance of such offences after the lapse of the period of limitation fixed in respect of different categories of offences the punishment of which does not exceed the aforesaid limit. However, the offences relating to corruption were among those excluded from the purview of such periods of limitation. The offence alleged against the appellant is punishable with imprisonment up to seven years. Therefore, criminal proceedings against the appellants cannot be quashed on the mere ground that the investigation consumed a period of four years. (Paras 11 and 19)

The delay of two years taken for obtaining sanction from the Government cannot be attributed to the investigating officers. Though the said time of two years for the Government to decide the question of giving sanction cannot be approved, but considering the number of desks over which the matter had to pass and the voluminous records to be studied at all levels, the said interval cannot be said to be so unreasonably long as to affect the fundamental right of the appellants. The charge-sheet was laid within a few days of obtaining the sanction. Therefore, the criminal prosecution cannot be quashed merely on the ground of delay highlighted by the appellants. (Paras 20 and 21). Seeta Hemchandra Shashittal v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 4 SCC 525: 2001 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2001 SC 1246: 2001 Cri LJ 1242.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2001]

Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93; Hussainara Khatoon (I) v. Home Secy., State of Bihar, (1980) 1 SCC 81: 1980 SCC (Cri) 23; State of A.P. v. P.V. Pavithran, (1990) 2 SCC 340: 1991 SCC (Cri) 7, relied on

[6966] — Ss. 468, 473 and 472 — Belated complaint under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — Discharge — Legality — Liberal interpretation of S. 473 in case of offence under S. 498-A in favour of wife — Wife allegedly beaten by husband and in-laws and turned out of matrimonial home on 13-10-1988 — Complaint under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC filed on 18-10-1995 and charge-sheet filed by police (after investigation under Magistrate's order) on 22-12-1995 — Offence under S. 498-A IPC, being a continuing offence, in view of S. 468(3) of CrPC the limitation period for both the offences, held, commenced on 13-10-1988 and ended on 12-10-1991 under S. 468(2)(c) CrPC and the complaint was, therefore, time-barred — Hence, in absence of explanation for the delay, the Magistrate rightly discharged the accused for the offence under S. 406 IPC — However, in respect of offence under S. 498-A IPC, the provisions of S. 473 CrPC should have been liberally construed in favour of the wife — The Magistrate not having adverted to the question whether on the facts and circumstances of the case it was necessary in the interest of justice to take cognizance of the offence, his order of acquittal of the accused in respect of offence under S. 498-A IPC, held, unsustainable — High Court was right to that extent in setting aside the order of acquittal — Magistrate directed by Supreme Court to consider the question of limitation as explained herein — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406

On 18-10-1995, the respondent wife filed a complaint under, inter alia, Sections 498-A and 406 of IPC and Section 190(1) of CrPC alleging that she was beaten up by her husband, mother-in-law and sisters-in-law for want of dowry. Under the Magistrate's order, the police investigated the complaint under Section 156(3) CrPC and submitted charge-sheet (final report) under Section 498-A IPC on 22-12-1995. On that report the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC and issued summons to the appellants. The case was posted on 23-4-1996 for framing charges. On that date the Magistrate found the complaint to be time-barred and discharged the appellants. The High Court set aside the Magistrate's order and directed the Magistrate to proceed with the case. In the instant appeal, the following two questions arose before the Supreme Court:

(i) whether the Magistrate can discharge an accused after taking cognizance of an offence by him but before the trial of the case; and

(ii) whether the Magistrate was right in discharging the appellants on the grounds that the complaint was barred by limitation under Section 468 CrPC.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

The reason for engrafting the rule of limitation is that due to a long lapse of time necessary evidence will be lost and persons prosecuted will be placed in a defenceless position. This may even result in miscarriage of justice. (Para 10)

The essence of the offence in Section 498-A is cruelty. It is a continuing offence and on each occasion on which the respondent was subjected to cruelty, she would have a new starting point of limitation. The last act of cruelty was committed against the respondent, within the meaning of the explanation, on 13-10-1988. Having regard to the provisions of Sections 469 and 472, the period of limitation commenced for the offences under Sections 406 and 498-A from 13-10-1988 and ended on 12-10-1991. But the charge-sheet was filed on 22-12-1995. Therefore, it was clearly barred by limitation under Section 468(2)(c) CrPC. (Para 13)

But Section 473 of CrPC enables the court to take cognizance of an offence after the period of limitation, inter alia, if it is satisfied on the facts and in the circumstances of the case that it is necessary so to do in the interests of justice. The expression "in the interest of justice" in Section 473 does not mean in the interest of prosecution. What the court has to see is "interest of justice". The interest of justice demands that the court should protect the oppressed and punish the oppressor/offender. In complaints under Section 498-A the wife will invariably be oppressed. It is, therefore, appropriate for the courts, in case of delayed complaints, to construe liberally Section 473 CrPC in favour of a wife who is subjected to cruelty if on the facts and in the circumstances of the case it is necessary so to do in the interests of justice. When the conduct of the accused is such that applying the rule of limitation will give an unfair advantage to him or result in miscarriage of justice, the court may take cognizance of an offence after the expiry of the period of limitation in the interests of justice. This is only illustrative, not exhaustive. (Para 14)

In the instant case, the complaint was clearly barred by limitation and no explanation was offered for the inordinate delay. Therefore, in regard to Section 406 IPC, the Magistrate rightly held the complaint to be barred by limitation. But regarding offence under Section 498-A the Magistrate did not advert to the second limb of the second part in Section 473 CrPC. The order of the Magistrate on that aspect is unsustainable. (Para 17). Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas, (1999) 4 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 629: AIR 1999 SC 2071.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Venkataswami and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-1999]

Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571, followed

[Ed.: The Supreme Court directed the Magistrate to consider the question of limitation taking note of Section 473 CrPC in the light of the observations made herein. (Para 17)]

[6967] — S. 468 — Quashing of proceedings — When warranted — Petitioner entering into an agreement to sell certain property in Delhi for consideration of Rs 4.5 lakhs out of which Rs 3.5 lakhs was paid by the complainant respondent — Balance amount was to be paid at the time of registration of sale deed and delivery of possession — Respondent alleging that in spite of three legal notices having been given, the petitioner failed to honour the agreement and thus cheated him — He, therefore, filing complaint under S. 406 and S. 420 IPC in the criminal court at M since the agreement was reached there and the amount paid thereat — Held, such complaint is an abuse of process of the court and hence liable to be quashed — Even if all the averments made in the complaint are taken to be correct, yet the case for prosecution under S. 420 or S. 406 of the Penal Code is not made out so as to infer any fraudulent or dishonest inducement having been made by the petitioner pursuant to which the respondent parted with the money — Merely because the petitioner had failed to honour the agreement, it cannot be said that he had cheated the respondent — Further, on facts held, complaint filed at M against the petitioner who is a resident of Delhi, seems to be an attempt to pressurise the petitioner for coming to terms with the respondent — Respondent granted liberty to pursue such other remedy under the civil law as may be available to him — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 37, 51 and 52 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420 (Paras 1, 2, 6 and 7). Murari Lal Gupta v. Gopi Singh, (2005) 13 SCC 699: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 430.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.C. Lahoti, C.J. and G.P. Mathur and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-2005]

[6968] — Ss. 468, 469 and 470(1) — Scope — Bar of limitation to taking cognizance of offences — On facts, the bar to the offence under S. 500, IPC operated from the day of the offence under S. 469(1)(a), that is, when the complaint under Ss. 406/420, IPC was filed against the present complainant — Date of acquittal of present complainant in those proceedings not relevant — On facts S. 470(1) not applicable

A complaint for commission of offence under Ss. 406/420, Indian Penal Code was made by the appellant against the respondent on March 15, 1972 which resulted in acquittal on April 1, 1975, confirmed by the High Court on May 15, 1975. The respondent filed the present complaint under S. 500, Indian Penal Code on February 11, 1976. The appellant's application to the High Court under S. 482, Criminal Procedure Code against the issue of summons was rejected.

Held:

According to the complaint, the offence under S. 500, Indian Penal Code was committed on March 15, 1972, which was the date of the offence within the meaning of S. 469(1)(a) of the Code, and the period of three years' limitation would be calculated with reference to that date for purposes of the bar provided by S. 468. But the complaint under S. 500, Indian Penal Code was filed on February 11, 1976, much after the expiry of that period. It was therefore not permissible for the Court of the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offence after the expiry of the period of limitation.

The High Court reasoned that no "cause of action" arose till the present respondent was acquitted on April 1, 1975. But the question of "cause of action" could not really arise in this case as the controversy relates to the commission of an offence. The High Court erred in taking a contrary view.

On facts S. 470(1) has no application. It is an essential requirement of the sub-section that the person who seeks its benefit should be able to establish that he was "prosecuting" another prosecution in one court or the other referred to in the sub-section. But it is not the case of the respondent that he was prosecuting the appellant in any other prosecution. It is also not his case that that prosecution related to the "same facts" within the meaning of the proviso to the sub-section. Surinder Mohan Vikal v. A.L. Chopra, (1978) 2 SCC 403: 1978 SCC (Cri) 215: AIR 1978 SC 986: 1978 Cri LJ 764.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-1978]

[6969] — Ss. 468, 470(4), 472 and 473 — Limitation period for taking cognizance of offence under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — In matrimonial offences, court should adopt a liberal approach and should, having regard to nature of allegations, time taken by police in investigation and the fact that cruelty on wife is a continuing offence and affects society at large, take cognizance of offence even after expiry of the period of limitation specified in S. 468(2) in the interest of justice

While considering the applicability of Section 468 to the complaints made by the victims of matrimonial offences, the court can invoke Section 473 and can take cognizance of an offence after expiry of the period of limitation keeping in view the nature of allegations, the time taken by the police in investigation and the fact that the offence of cruelty is a continuing offence and affects the society at large. To put it differently, in cases involving matrimonial offences the court should not adopt a narrow and pedantic approach and should, in the interest of justice, liberally exercise power under Section 473 for extending the period of limitation. (Para 25). Sanapareddy Maheedhar Seshagiri v. State of A.P., (2007) 13 SCC 165: AIR 2008 SC 787: (2008) 61 AIC 102 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1375.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

State of Punjab v. Sarwan Singh, (1981) 3 SCC 34: 1981 SCC (Cri) 625; Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571; Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas, (1999) 4 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 629; State of H.P. v. Tara Dutt, (2000) 1 SCC 230: 2000 SCC (Cri) 125; Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735, relied on

Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Ramesh Chandra Sinha v. State of Bihar, (2003) 7 SCC 254: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1613; Ajay Aggarwal v. Union of India, (1993) 3 SCC 609: 1993 SCC (Cri) 961, considered

[6970] — S. 468 — Trial of economic offenders — Cannot be dropped merely on ground of inordinate delay — Gold (Control) Act, 1968, S. 85 — Customs Act, 1962, Ss. 111 and 135 — Constitution of India, Art. 134

That 20 years have elapsed since the date of seizure of gold under S. 111 r/w S. 135 of the Customs Act is no ground for not proceeding further with the matter inasmuch as the offence in question is a serious economic offence, which undermines the entire economy of the nation. The delay occasioned in the working of the judicial system by the ever-increasing workload cannot provide any alibi for upholding the plea of dropping the proceedings on ground of inordinate delay. V.K. Agarwal, Asstt. Collector of Customs v. Vasantraj Bhagwanji Bhatia, (1988) 3 SCC 467: 1988 SCC (Cri) 679: AIR 1988 SC 1106: (1988) 16 ECC 164: (1988) 64 Comp Cas 664.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.P. Thakkar and K.N. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1988]

[6971] — S. 468 — Taking cognizance of offence after expiry of one year from commission of offence barred under — Cannot be justified on ground that complaint was filed before the court within one year from the date of commission of offence — Date of filing complaint cannot be treated as date of taking cognizance — Taking cognizance different from filing complaint — Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, S. 9. Krishna Pillai v. T.A. Rajendran, 1990 Supp SCC 121: 1990 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Ranganath Misra, P.B. Sawant and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-11-1989]

A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, (1984) 2 SCC 500: 1984 SCC (Cri) 277, relied on [6972] — S. 468 — Bar of limitation for taking cognizance of offence — When not applicable — Held, there does not exist any period of limitation in respect of an offence under S. 494 IPC, as maximum period of punishment which can be imposed therefor is seven years — Penal Code, 1860, S. 494 (Para 13). M. Saravana Porselvi v. A.R. Chandrashekar, (2008) 11 SCC 520: AIR 2008 SC 2462: (2008) 68 AIC 192 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

[6973] — S. 468 — Delayed trial — Offence alleged committed 20 years back — Case ordered to be closed solely on ground of inordinate delay — Import and Export (Control) Act, 1947, S. 5 — Constitution of India — Art. 136

While the accused (respondent 2) has no equity in his favour and the delay after the complaint had been filed has been mostly on account of his mala fide move, but it would not be in the interest of justice to allow a prosecution to start 20 years after the offence has been committed. The magistrate should not be allowed to proceed with trial of the case at this belated stage. Accordingly, the case is directed to be closed against respondent 2 without further delay. T.J. Stephen v. Parle Bottling Co. (P) Ltd., 1988 Supp SCC 458: 1988 SCC (Cri) 690: AIR 1988 SC 994: (1988) 16 ECC 185: (1988) 64 Comp Cas 151.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-1988]

[6974] — Ss. 468, 473 and 190 — Delay of 9 1/2 years in proceeding with criminal prosecution for a not-so-grave offence of rash and negligent driving under S. 279 r/w S. 304-A/338 IPC — Held, proceedings must be quashed in view of the inordinate delay — Not saved by Cl. 32 of Assam Frontier (Administration of Justice) Regulation, 1945 — Constitution of India — Art. 21

The offence of rash and negligent driving is neither a grave and heinous offence nor an offence against the community as such, though all criminal offences are crimes against society. Having regard to the nature of offence there is enormous delay in proceeding with the criminal prosecution by the appellant — 9½ years. Quick justice is a sine qua non of Art. 21. Keeping a person in suspended animation for 9½ years without any cause at all, cannot be with the spirit of the procedure established by law. It is, therefore, just and fair and in accordance with equity to direct that the trial or prosecution of the appellant to proceed no further. If the principles of the Code of Criminal Procedure applied, the taking of cognizance of the offence was barred by S. 468 of the Code.

In the circumstances, it is not necessary in this case to decide whether cognizance was properly taken, when cognizance was taken and whether the extension of period of limitation under S. 473 must precede the taking of the cognizance of the offence? Srinivas Gopal v. Union Territory of Arunachal Pradesh, (1988) 4 SCC 36: 1988 SCC (Cri) 889: AIR 1988 SC 1729: 1988 BLJR 602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sabyasachi Mukharji and S. Ranganathan, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-7-1988]

Srinivas Gopal v. Union Territory of Arunachal Pradesh, (1988) 1 Crimes 383 (Gau), reversed

[6975] — Ss. 468 and 472 — Limitation — Offence under S. 406 IPC — Averment in complaint that the complainant demanded from the accused return of her stridhana properties on 5-12-1987 — Complaint filed on 10-9-1990 is not time barred — In view of this finding question whether it was a continuing offence not decided. Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S.B. Majmudar and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-1996]

[6976] — Ss. 468 and 473 — Appellant found in possession of opium on 31-5-1974 — Challan for offence under S. 9 of Opium Act filed on 29-8-1977 — Application for condoning delay filed only just before conclusion of trial — Trial court convicting appellant and sentencing him to three years' RI and to pay a fine of Rs 5000 — Conviction and sentence confirmed by High Court — Held, S. 473 CrPC does not lay down that application for condoning delay should be filed at the time of filing the challan itself — Court can condone delay and take cognizance if delay had been properly explained or it is necessary to do so in the interest of justice — Hence order of lower courts upheld — Opium Act, 1878, S. 9. Sukhdev Raj v. State of Punjab, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 398: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1480.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-9-1993]

[6977] — Ss. 468 and 482 — Exercise of jurisdiction under S. 482 — Consideration of admitted document — Quashing of FIR — Validity of — On facts, appellant was married to Respondent 1 around 1-12-1993 — However, they were living separately since 1996 — Appellant entered into agreement for divorce as per custom around 24-7-1996, which was registered — She received permanent alimony of Rs 25,000 which was acknowledged by granting stamped receipt therefor — Purported divorce took place accordingly — Respondent 1 married again in 1998 — Appellant filed complaint petition against Respondents 1 to 3 (husband and parents-in-law) in May 2006, inter alia, on premise that first respondent married for the second time — FIR lodged pursuant to the complaint resulted in arrest of respondents — Application for quashing FIR under S. 482 allowed by High Court — Sustainability — Respondents contending mala fide on appellant's part in view of the fact that complaint petition was filed ten years after divorce — Held, customary divorce may be legal or illegal but the fact that such an agreement was entered into and appellant had received Rs 25,000 by way of permanent alimony, stood admitted — Document was a registered one — Held, if contents of agreement are taken to be correct, indisputably parties were living separately for more than ten years — No case under S. 498-A IPC can be said to have been made out and that too at such a distant point of time is the question, particularly in view of bar of limitation as contained in S. 468 CrPC — Even otherwise it is unbelievable that appellant was really harassed by her husband or in-laws — Also, no allegation was made out in regard to commission of offence under S. 494 IPC so far as Respondents 2 and 3 were concerned — If for exercising its jurisdiction under S. 482, High Court took into consideration an admitted document, there was no legal infirmity therein — If it was a case of customary divorce, question in regard to existence of good custom may have to be gone into in a civil proceeding, but a criminal prosecution shall not lie — It was initiated mala fide — It was an abuse of process of court — Hence, FIR rightly quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 494 (Paras 2 to 7, 11, 12, 13 and 14). M. Saravana Porselvi v. A.R. Chandrashekar, (2008) 11 SCC 520: AIR 2008 SC 2462: (2008) 68 AIC 192 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3034.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

— S. 468(1) See also Ss. 468(3) (as added in 1978), (1) & (2)

[6978] — Ss. 468(1) & (2)(c) and 167(5)(iii) (as amended in the State of W.B.) — Offence under S. 7(1)(a)(ii), Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — Time-limit for taking cognizance — Maximum punishment for the said offence, held, is seven years and not two years — Proviso to S. 12-AA(1)(f), Essential Commodities Act limits the jurisdiction of the Special Court to award sentence up to two years and does not make the offence itself punishable only up to two years — Hence, where the offence was committed by contravening cl. 17 of Textile Control Order, 1988 and charge-sheet was filed more than three years after the date of FIR albeit within two years from the date of appearance of the accused in the court, held, S. 468 did not bar the court from taking cognizance of the offence — S. 167(5)(iii), held not applicable — Textile Control Order, 1988 — Cl. 17 — Essential Commodities Act, 1955, Ss. 7(1)(a)(ii), 3, 12-AA(1)(f). Nirmal Kanti Roy v. State of W.B., (1998) 4 SCC 590: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1100: AIR 1998 SC 2322.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1998]

— S. 468(2) See Ss. 468(3) (as added in 1978), (1) & (2)

See also Ss. 473 and 468(2)

See also Ss. 482, 190, 468(2) and 473

[6979] — Ss. 468(2), 470(3) and 4 — Limitation for taking cognizance of an offence — Effect, if any, of statutory departmental rule creating a bar against institution of judicial proceedings against a retired government employee after a specified time — Respondent resisting trial against him for misappropriation, bribery, etc. on the ground that he was protected by a departmental rule which provided that: "No judicial proceedings, if not instituted while the government servant was in service, whether before his retirement or during his re-employment shall be instituted in respect of a cause of action which arose or in respect of an event which took place more than four years before such institution." — Held, the departmental rule was in the context of right of the Government to withhold or withdraw pension — It did not affect criminal trial under CrPC or the Prevention of Corruption Act — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 468 and 471 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5(1)(c)(d) r/w S. 5(2) — Maharashtra Civil Services (Pension) Rules, 1982, Rr. 27 and 26

Rule 27 of the Maharashtra Civil Services (Pension) Rules, 1982 starts with the caption "Right of Government to withhold or withdraw pension.". Rule 27(1) provides that: "Government may, by order in writing, withhold or withdraw a pension or any part of it, whether permanently or for a specified period, and also order the recovery from such pension the whole or part of any pecuniary loss caused to Government, if in any departmental or judicial proceedings, the pensioner is found guilty of grave misconduct or negligence during the period of his service including service rendered upon re-employment after retirement." Rule 27(2)(b) provides that: "The departmental proceedings, if not instituted while the government servant was in service, whether before his retirement or during his retirement — (i) shall not be instituted save with the sanction of the Government, (ii) shall not be in respect of any event which took place more than four years before such institution, and (iii) shall be conducted by such authority and at such place as the Government may direct and in accordance with the procedure applicable to the departmental proceedings in which an order of dismissal from service could be made in relation to the government servant during his service." Rule 27(3) similarly provides that: "No judicial proceedings, if not instituted while the government servant was in service, whether before his retirement or during his re-employment shall be instituted in respect of a cause of action which arose or in respect of an event which took place more than four years before such institution."

Allowing the appeal by the State,

Held :

If something is to be recovered from pension payable to an employee, then judicial proceedings or departmental enquiry is required to be started within the period prescribed in Rule 27(2) or Rule 27(3) but that would not debar the prosecuting agency from launching prosecution for offence of grave misconduct. Rule 27 is to be read with the previous Rule 26 which provides that future good conduct shall be an implied condition of every grant of pension and the Government may withhold or withdraw pension or part thereof, if the pensioner is convicted of a serious crime or is found guilty of grave misconduct. Rules 26 and 27 however do not lay down any period of limitation for prosecution or cannot supersede the period of limitation prescribed under CrPC. Rule 27 is meant for the purpose of granting, withholding or withdrawing the pension and hence its operation would be in the limited field of granting or withholding pension to the government employees. (Para 9). State of Maharashtra v. Keshav Ramchandra Pangare, (1999) 9 SCC 479: 2000 SCC (L&S) 175: 2000 SCC (Cri) 247: AIR 1999 SC 3846.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-1999]

State of Punjab v. Kailash Nath, (1989) 1 SCC 321: 1989 SCC (Cri) 128; Prabhakar Govind Sawant v. State of Maharashtra, 1991 Mah LJ 1051, relied on

[Ed.: Date of commission of the offences by respondent are not indicated in the judgment but it appears that it was more than four years before institution of criminal proceedings against him. That is why, the respondent pressed into service Rule 27 of the Maharashtra Civil Services (Pension) Rules, 1982]

[6980] — Ss. 468(2) and 470(3) — Limitation for taking cognisance of an offence — Time taken for obtaining sanction for prosecution — Respondent retiring from government service on 31-12-1987 — Sanction for prosecution received from the competent authority on 25-8-1989 and thereafter charge-sheet for commission of various offences under IPC and the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 filed against him on 30-10-1990 — Held, there is no period of limitation in CrPC for an offence punishable with an imprisonment exceeding three years — In any case, time required for obtaining sanction for prosecution is excluded under S. 470(3) — Trial against respondent, therefore held, not barred by limitation

If an offence is punishable with imprisonment for a term exceeding three years then there is no period of limitation prescribed under CrPC. Further, S. 470(3) excludes the time required for obtaining sanction for prosecution. Respondent is charged with offences punishable with imprisonment exceeding three years. No limitation is prescribed under Section 468 of CrPC for such offences. In any case, S. 470(3) CrPC excludes the period required for obtaining sanction for prosecution, where period of limitation is required to be taken into consideration. If at all the limitation is applicable in the present case, the time required for obtaining sanction for prosecution is to be excluded. It cannot be said that prosecution instituted against respondent is barred by limitation. (Para 6). State of Maharashtra v. Keshav Ramchandra Pangare, (1999) 9 SCC 479: 2000 SCC (L&S) 175: 2000 SCC (Cri) 247: AIR 1999 SC 3846.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-1999]

Keshav Ramchandra Pangare v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Lab IC 371 (Bom), reversed

— S. 468(2)(a) See Ss. 469(1)(b), (a) & 468(2)(a)

See also Ss. 469(1)(b) & (a) and 468(2)(c)

See also Ss. 472 and 468(2)(a)

— S. 468(2)(c) See Ss. 468(1) & (2)(c) and 167(5)(iii) (as amended in the State of W.B.)

See also Ss. 473 and 468(2)(c)

[6981] — Ss. 468(2)(c) and 469(1)(b) — Period of limitation for commencement of trial — Entire proceedings non est if trial found barred by limitation — Limitation Act, 1963, S. 12

The object of the Criminal Procedure Code in putting a bar of limitation on prosecutions were clearly to prevent the parties from filing cases after a long time, as a result of which material evidence may disappear and also to prevent abuse of the process of the court by filing vexatious and belated prosecutions long after the date of the offence. The object which the statutes seek to subserve in clearly in consonance with the concept of fairness of trial as enshrined in Art. 21 of the Constitution of India. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that any prosecution, whether by the State or a private complainant must abide by the letter of law or take the risk of the prosecution failing on the ground of limitation.

In the instant case as the charge-sheet clearly mentions that the offence was committed on August 22, 1972, the bar of limitation contained in S. 468(2)(c) clearly applies and the prosecution, therefore, is clearly barred by limitation. Even assuming that so far as the offender is concerned, the commission of the offence came to the knowledge of the officer concerned, it would be so according to the charge-sheet on January 5, 1973, the date when the audit report was made. Even if this extreme position be accepted the prosecution would still be barred by limitation under S. 469(1)(b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.

The prosecution against the respondent being barred by limitation the conviction as also the sentence of the respondent as also the entire proceedings culminating in the conviction of the respondent therein were non est. State of Punjab v. Sarwan Singh, (1981) 3 SCC 34: 1981 SCC (Cri) 625: AIR 1981 SC 1054: (1981) 3 SCR 349: 1981 MLJ (Cri) 394: 1981 Cri LJ 722.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1981]

[6982] — Ss. 468(2)(c) and 473 — Bar of limitation — Offence under S. 418 IPC — Three-year limitation period — Filing of complaint after expiry of — Alleged action taking place in 1995 — Filing of complaint on 9-8-2002 — No explanation given by complainant regarding his long silence/inaction — Magistrate taking cognizance without even making any reference to either S. 468 or S. 473 which provides for extension of period of limitation if the Magistrate is satisfied that the delay has been properly explained or that it is necessary to do so in the interest of justice — Held, High Court erred in holding that the complaint was not hit by limitation — Penal Code, 1860, S. 418 (Para 14). Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 2005 SC 9: 2005 Cri LJ 92.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-2004]

[6983] — Ss. 468(3) (as added in 1978), (1) & (2) — Limitation — Computation of — Where the accused was charged with major offences but was convicted only for minor offences, the period of limitation, held, has to be determined with reference to the offences the accused was charged with and not with reference to the charges he was convicted under — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 468, 420 and 120-B IPC — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2)

The two respondents herein were challaned for offences under Sections 468, 420, 120-B IPC and Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, allegedly committed in the year 1983. The charge-sheet was submitted in November 1987 and cognizance was taken in December 1987. The Special Judge acquitted them of the charges under Sections 468 and 420 IPC and Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act but convicted them under Sections 417 and 465 read with Section 109 IPC. The H.P. High Court held that the cognizance of the offences under Sections 417 and 465 IPC taken by the Special Judge on 31-12-1987 was barred by limitation. The High Court further held that Section 473 although empowered court to condone the delay for cogent reasons, the Special Judge had not exercised that power as no such reasons had been recorded. The High Court added that therefore Section 473 could not be pressed into service. Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

The language of Section 473(3) (as added in 1978) makes it imperative that the limitation provided for taking cognizance in Section 468 is in respect of the offence charged and not in respect of offence finally proved. Therefore, when the respondents were charged under Section 468 read with Section 120-B, for which the imposable punishment is seven years and Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, which is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years and for such offences no period of limitation having been provided for in Section 468, the cognizance taken by the learned Special Judge cannot be said to be barred by limitation. (Para 5). State of H.P. v. Tara Dutt, (2000) 1 SCC 230: 2000 SCC (Cri) 125: AIR 2000 SC 297: 2000 Cri LJ 485.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, M. Srinivasan and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1999]

State of Punjab v. Sarwan Singh, (1981) 3 SCC 34: 1981 SCC (Cri) 625, explained and distinguished

Tara Dutt v. State of H.P., (1998) 3 Crimes 523 (HP), reversed

— S. 469 See also Ss. 468, 469 and 470(1)

[6984] — Ss. 469 and 468 — Applicability of S. 469 — In absence of prescription of any period of limitation by S. 468 in respect of offences providing punishment for more than three years, the question of applicability of S. 469 to such offences, held, does not arise (Para 6). State of H.P. v. Tara Dutt, (2000) 1 SCC 230: 2000 SCC (Cri) 125: AIR 2000 SC 297: 2000 Cri LJ 485.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, M. Srinivasan and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1999]

— S. 469(1)(a) See Ss. 469(1)(b), (a) & 468(2)(a)

— S. 469(1)(b) See also Ss. 468(2)(c) and 469(1)(b)

See also Ss. 482, 468, 469(b) & (c), 154 and 473

[6985] — Ss. 469(1)(b), (a) and 468(2)(a) — Transfer of shares — Default by company — Complaint alleging commission of offence by respondent under S. 113(2) filed by appellant Registrar of Companies, under S. 621 after expiry of period of six months from the date of the offence as prescribed under S. 468(2)(a) r/w S. 469(1)(a) CrPC but within the period of six months from the date on which the offence came to the knowledge of the Registrar — Held, the complaint was within the period of limitation in view of S. 469(1)(b) CrPC since the expression "person aggrieved" used therein includes Registrar of Companies in respect of offences (except those under S. 545) against the Companies Act — Hence there was no bar of taking cognizance of offence — Distinction between sub-sections (2) and (3) — Transferee who is not a shareholder cannot file a complaint under S. 113(2) — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 113(2) & (3) and 621

A complaint was filed by the appellant Registrar of Companies, under Section 113(2) of the Companies Act on 20-8-1992 before the CJM. It was alleged in the complaint that the Company was sent share transfer certificates along with applications for transfer in two batches — on 23-11-1990 and 18-12-1990. The first batch of applications for transfer was received by the Company on 11-12-1990, approved on 29-3-1991 and despatched on 6-4-1991. The second batch of applications was received on 26-12-1990, approved by the Company on 3-4-1991 and despatched on 16-4-1991. Apparently, Section 113(1) was not complied with. This came to the knowledge of the appellant only on 20-7-1992 when the appellant inspected the books of account of the Company under Section 209-A(1)(i) of the Act. The CJM dismissed the complaint on the ground that it was barred by limitation under Section 468 CrPC. The appellant filed a petition under Sections 397 and 401 CrPC before the High Court of Madras praying for revision of the order. The High Court not only upheld the order of the trial court but also held that the appellant was incompetent to file a complaint in respect of an offence under Section 113 of the Act. The appellant's contention that the Magistrate overlooked the provisions of Section 469(1)(b) CrPC which provides for the computation of the period of limitation from the first day on which the offence comes to the knowledge of "the person aggrieved by the offence or to the police officer" was rejected by the High Court holding that the appellant was neither the person aggrieved nor a police officer and that the prosecution under Section 113 could be launched only on the application of an affected shareholder. According to the High Court, this was clear from sub-section (3) of Section 113. The present appeal against the decision of the High Court dated 17-3-1998 was filed by the Registrar of Companies after a delay of 406 days. The application for condonation of delay filed by the appellant shows that the Department of Legal Affairs took up the matter only on 16-12-1998. No explanation whatsoever has been given for the appellant's inaction during this period of nine months. Remanding the matter back to the CJM for being decided on merits, Held :

The phrase "person aggrieved" used in Section 469(1)(b) CrPC has not been defined in the Code. However, as far as offences under the Companies Act are concerned, the words must be understood and construed in the context of Section 621 of the Companies Act under which the appellant is competent to file a written complaint in respect of offences under, inter alia, Section 113 of the Act. If the words "person aggrieved" are read to mean only "the person affected" by the failure of the company to transfer the shares or allot the shares, then the only "person aggrieved" would be the transferee or the allottee, as the case may be. Where the transferee or allottee is not an existing shareholder of the company, if the words "person aggrieved" are read in such a limited manner, it would mean that Section 469(1)(b) CrPC would be entirely inapplicable to offences under Section 113 of the Act. There is, in any event, no justification to interpret the words "person aggrieved" as used in Section 469(1)(b) restrictively particularly when, as in this case, the statute creating the offence provides for the initiation of the prosecution only on the complaint of particular persons. Having regard to the clear language of Section 621 of the Act, it must be held that the appellant would be a "person aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 469(1)(b) CrPC in respect of offence (except those under Section 545) against the Companies Act. (Paras 16 and 17)

Apart from overlooking the provisions of Section 621 of the Act, the High Court erred in construing the provisions of Section 113(2) with reference to Section 113(3). The latter deals with the civil liability of the company and its officers for a breach of Section 113(1) at the instance of the transferee of the shares. Section 113(2) deals with the criminal liability arising out of a violation of Section 113(1). The objects of the two sub-sections are disparate. Section 113(3) is primarily compensatory in nature whereas Section 113(2) is punitive. An application under Section 113(3) can only be made by the transferee. And as already seen, a transferee who is not an existing shareholder of the company cannot file a complaint under Section 113(2) at all. (Para 18). Registrar of Companies v. Rajshree Sugar & Chemicals Ltd., (2000) 6 SCC 133: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1019: AIR 2000 SC 1643.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, D.P. Mohapatra and Ruma Pal, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2000]

Nestle India Ltd. v. State, (1994) 4 Comp LJ 446 (Del); Sulochana v. State Registrar of Chits (Investigation and Prosecution), 1978 Cri LJ 116 (Mad), overruled

Vasantlal Chandulal Majmudar v. Navinchandra Manilal, (1981) 22 Guj LR 436 (Guj), distinguished

Bhagabati Prasad Tantia v. Asstt. Registrar of Companies, (1983) 53 Comp Cas 56 (Cal); Sushil Kumar Lahiri v. Registrar of Companies, (1983) 53 Comp Cas 54 (Cal); Abdul Rahim v. State represented by the Chit Registrar, (1978) 1 LW Cri 195, approved

Registrar of Companies v. Rajashree Sugars and Chemicals Ltd., (1998) 94 Comp Cas 713 (Mad), reversed

[6986] — Ss. 469(1)(b) & (a) and 468(2)(c) — Starting point of limitation — Whether on facts determinable under S. 469(1)(b) or under S. 469(1)(a) — Complaint under Ss. 18-A, 16, 17 & 17-A of Drugs and Cosmetics Act punishable under Ss. 27(d) and 27(b)(i) thereof — Sample of drugs collected and subsequently found by the public analyst to be not of standard quality — In such circumstances the period of limitation for filing the complaint, held, started under S. 469(1)(b) and not under S. 469(1)(a), i.e., from the date of receipt of the report of Government Analyst and not from the date of collection of samples — Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940, Ss. 16, 17, 17-A, 18-A, 27(b)(i) & (d)

On 29-2-1988 the Senior Drugs Inspector collected samples of certain drugs from a firm and sent the same to the Government Analyst, who in his report dated 2-7-1988 opined that the drugs were not of standard quality. Under the Drug Controller's order dated 3-2-1990, the Drugs Inspector (IB) filed a complaint under Section 18-A read with Sections 16, 17 and 17-A of Drugs and Cosmetics Act being punishable under Sections 27(d) and 27(b)(i) thereof, on 28-6-1991. The High Court held the complaint to be barred by limitation under Section 468(2)(c) of CrPC. Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

On the date of collection of samples from the respondent-firm on 29-2-1988, it could not have been said that any offence was committed as selling of drugs per se is no offence and the quality of the drugs was not known to the Drugs Inspector, the complainant, on that date. It is only when the report of the Government Analyst was received, that it came to light that the provisions of the Act were violated and offence was committed. So on the facts of the present case it cannot be said that Section 469(1)(a) is attracted. That the drugs which were offered for sale were sub-standard/adulterated within the meaning of the Act, came to the knowledge of the Drugs Inspector only on 2-7-1988 when the report of the Government Analyst was received by him; and therefore, Section 469(1)(b) will be attracted.

Therefore, in the instant case, the limitation for the purpose of Section 468(2)(c) will commence from 2-7-1988, the date of knowledge of the commission of offence to the officer concerned under Section 469(1)(b) and not from 29-2-1988 (the date of collection of samples by the Drugs Inspector) and as the complaint was filed on 28-6-1991 which is within three years, the complaint is not barred by limitation under Section 468(2)(c). State of Rajasthan v. Sanjay Kumar, (1998) 5 SCC 82: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1260: AIR 1998 SC 1919.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1998]

R.S. Arora v. State, 1987 Cri LJ 1215: (1987) 1 FAC 283 (Del); Omprakash Gulabchandji Partani v. Ashok, 1992 Cri LJ 2704 (Bom); Satyanarayana General Traders v. State, (1993) 2 Crimes 203 (AP), approved

— S. 469(1)(c) See Ss. 482, 468, 469(b) & (c), 154 and 473

— S. 470(1) See Ss. 468, 469 and 470(1)

— S. 470(3) See Ss. 468(2) and 470(3)

See also Ss. 468(2), 470(3) and 4

See also Ss. 473 and 470(3)

[6987] — S. 470(3) — Official Secrets Act, 1923 — Ss. 13(3) and 5 — Limitation for taking cognizance of offence — S. 13(3) of the Act providing that cognizance of offence under the Act can be taken only upon complaint filed by order of or under authority from the appropriate Govt. or by some officer empowered by the appropriate Govt. — Held, "consent" or "sanction" as contemplated by S. 470(3) of the Code is not required for filing complaint under the Act and the period spent for obtaining orders for filing the complaint cannot be excluded under Expln. to S. 470(3) — Granting "consent" or "sanction" under S. 470(3) is a quasi-judicial function whereas passing of order or conferment of authority or empowering an officer for filing a complaint is an administrative function

A criminal complaint was filed against the petitioner under Section 5(4) read with Sections 5(2) and (3) of the Official Secrets Act, in the Court of Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Delhi by the Union of India through Deputy Superintendent of Police, Central Bureau of Investigation, SPE, Anti-Corruption Unit, New Delhi. Limitation in the instant case had started from 24-4-1985 and the complaint was filed on 19-5-1988, apparently beyond 25 days of the period of limitation prescribed. The petitioner filed an application under Section 245 CrPC in the trial court for being discharged on the ground inter alia that the complaint was barred by limitation. The plea of the complainant was that the period of 79 days required for obtaining the sanction order should be excluded in computing the period of limitation. Accepting the plea of the complainant, the complaint was held to be within time. The trial Magistrate as well as the High Court held that Section 13(3) of the Act provided the taking of previous consent or sanction of the appropriate Government and the time required for obtaining such consent or sanction was to be excluded in terms of Section 470(3) CrPC. It was contended on behalf of the petitioner that as no sanction or consent was provided to be taken from the Government under Section 13(3) of the Act, the complaint admittedly filed after the period of limitation was required to be dismissed and the accused discharged in terms of Section 245 CrPC. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

No sanction or consent is provided to be taken from the Government under Section 13(3) of the Act and the period spent in obtaining the orders for filing the complaint cannot be excluded under explanation to sub-section (3) of Section 470 CrPC. "Consent" or "sanction" envisaged under Section 470 CrPC cannot be equated with the "order" or "authority" for the purposes of filing the complaint as envisaged by sub-section (3) of Section 13 of the Act. Specific provisions have been made in various statutes requiring previous consent or sanction for the purposes of launching of prosecution against the accused under those enactments. Explanation to sub-section (3) of Section 470 CrPC obviously refers to such consents and sanctions and not the order or authority as required under the Act. Consent or sanction as are referred to in the Prevention of Corruption Act, Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, various Foodgrains Control Orders, and other similar enactments envisage the application of mind before the grant of such consent or sanction which is a quasi-judicial function, whereas the passing of order, individual or general, or conferment of authority individually or generally, or empowering a person for the purposes of filing a complaint is only an administrative action facilitating in identifying the complainant before the court for the purposes of filing and prosecuting the case under the Act. The legislature, in its wisdom, thought it appropriate to exclude only such period which is required for obtaining the previous consent or sanction of the Government for institution of any prosecution of an offence and not obtaining of orders or authority or naming a person for the purpose of filing the complaint. (Paras 9 and 4)

Sub-section (3) of Section 13 envisages only the filing of the complaint, by order of or under authority from the appropriate Government or by an officer empowered by such Government. It is not possible to accept the contention that the intention of the legislature was to have the section in two parts, one dealing with the grant of consent or sanction by way of order and the other part dealing with the authority of the person to file the complaint. (Para 7)

The mere fact that the complaint was filed 25 days after the expiry of the period of limitation, did not entitle the accused to seek his discharge under Section 245 CrPC because the complainant has, under law, a right to seek for extension of time under Section 473 CrPC. The complainant could satisfy the Magistrate on the facts and circumstances of the case that the delay was explainable which was occasioned on account of their bona fide belief to obtain the sanction for the purpose of filing the complaint. After noticing the averments made in the complaint and perusing the record particularly the order of the Government of India dated 21-4-1988, authorising the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Central Bureau of Investigation, New Delhi to lodge the complaint, it can be safely held that the complainant was entitled to extension of period of limitation under Section 473 CrPC. No useful purpose would be served by again directing the complainant to approach the trial Magistrate for the purposes of seeking extension of the period of limitation. The complainant is held to have explained the delay in filing the complaint which required extension. The complaint is, therefore, held to be within time and the petitioner is not entitled to be discharged on this ground. (Para 10)

It is, however, made clear that the present judgment would not, in any way, affect the continuing proceedings in any court wherein the complaints, under the Act, have been filed after obtaining sanction and the courts have given remission of the period in terms of explanation to sub-section (3) of Section 470 CrPC. All such extensions shall be deemed to be valid even under Section 473 CrPC. (Para 11). Rakesh Kumar Jain v. State, (2000) 7 SCC 656: 2001 SCC (Cri) 208: AIR 2000 SC 2754: 2000 Cri LJ 3973.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-2000]

Electrical Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. D.D. Bhargava, AIR 1968 SC 247: 1968 Cri LJ 236: (1968) 1 SCR 394, relied on

— S. 470(4) See Ss. 468, 470(4), 472 and 473

— S. 471 See S. 197 and 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

— S. 472 See Ss. 468, 470(4), 472 and 473

See also Ss. 468 and 472

See also Ss. 468 and 473, 472

[6988] — S. 472 — "Continuing offence" — Meaning of

A continuing offence is one which continues and a non-continuing offence is one which is committed once and for all. This question whether a particular offence is a continuing offence must necessarily depend upon the language of the statute which creates that offence, the nature of the offence and, above all, the purpose which is intended to be achieved by constituting the particular act as an offence. Bhagirath Kanoria v. State of M.P., (1984) 4 SCC 222: 1984 SCC (Cri) 590: AIR 1984 SC 1688: 1984 Lab IC 1578: (1984) 2 LLN 731.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and O. Chinnappa Reddy, J. [Date of decision: 24-8-1984]

[6989] — Ss. 472 and 468(2)(a) — Continuing offence — Refusal to vacate company's quarter after retirement or termination of service — Held, constitutes a continuing offence within the meaning of S. 472 CrPC and hence period of limitation under S. 468(2)(a) CrPC for taking cognizance of the offence inapplicable

Continuing offence means "type of crime which is committed over a span of time." The expression 'continuing offence' has not, however, been defined in the Code. The question whether a particular offence is a 'continuing offence' or not must, therefore, necessarily depend upon the language of the statute which creates that offence, the nature of the offence and the purpose intended to be achieved by constituting the particular act as an offence. (Paras 7 and 25). Gokak Patel Volkart Ltd. v. Dundayya Gurushiddaiah Hiremath, (1991) 2 SCC 141: 1991 SCC (Cri) 315: (1991) 1 LLN 970: (1991) 71 Comp Cas 403.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.N. Saikia and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1991]

[6990] — S. 472 — Continuing offence — Reckoning of date of commission of offence — Making of ransom calls after death of victim of kidnapping — Held, the same was a continuing offence under S. 472 CrPC and offence under S. 364-A IPC did not come to an end on death of victim — Further held, even after death of victim every time a ransom call was made a fresh period of limitation commenced — Accordingly, it would be date on which last ransom call was made and not initial date of abduction, which has to be taken as date of commission of offence — Thus, Juvenile Justice Act no longer applicable to petitioner who had attained age of 18 years by then — Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000, S. 2(k) — Penal Code, 1860, S. 364-A r/w S. 472 CrPC, 1973

The main object of the kidnapping committed by the accused was to extort money from the parents of the deceased victim by way of ransom even after the death of the victim, as is evident from the subsequent phone calls asking for ransom. The offence under Section 364-A IPC did not come to an end only on account of the death of the victim since ransom calls had been made even though the victim had been killed. If Section 364-A IPC and Section 472 CrPC are to be read together, it has to be held that even after the death of the victim every time a ransom call was made a fresh period of limitation commenced. Accordingly, it would be the date on which the last ransom call was made which has to be taken to be the date of commission of the offence and, accordingly, the Juvenile Justice Act was no longer applicable to the petitioner, who had attained the age of 18 years by then. (Paras 23 and 29). Vikas Chaudhary v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 8 SCC 508.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-2010]

Vimal Chadha v. Vikas Choudhary, (2008) 15 SCC 216: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 790, relied on

State of Bihar v. Deokaran Nenshi, (1972) 2 SCC 890: 1973 SCC (Cri) 114; Hari Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 13 SCC 211: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 987, referred to

[6991] — Ss. 472 and 473 — "Continuing offence" — Meaning and effect of — Overriding provisions of S. 473 to be kept in view while considering any provision prescribing period of limitation for prosecution

As to period of statute of limitation in a continuing offence, the last act of the offence controls for commencement of the period. The concept of continuing offence under S. 472 CrPC does not wipe out the original guilt, but it keeps the contravention alive day by day. Courts when confronted with provisions which lay down a rule of limitation governing prosecutions, in cases of this nature, should give due weight and consideration to the provisions of S. 473 of the Code which is in the nature of an overriding provision. (Paras 7 and 24). Gokak Patel Volkart Ltd. v. Dundayya Gurushiddaiah Hiremath, (1991) 2 SCC 141: 1991 SCC (Cri) 315: (1991) 1 LLN 970: (1991) 71 Comp Cas 403.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.N. Saikia and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-1991]

[6992] — S. 472 — Continuing offence — Meaning of — Permission to depillar — Condition that not more than 150 metres of split galleries shall be left unstowed at any time in the whole panel — Breach of the condition — Held, offence is a continuing one — Plea that the respondents were not the officers concerned when the offence was committed not maintainable — Expression "at any time" — Meaning of — Mines Act, 1952, Ss. 79 Expln. (a) and 73 read with Regn. 100(1) of the Coal Mines Regulations, 1957

Conditions 3 and 6 of the permission to depillar ran as under:-

3. After splitting is completed all original and split galleries shall be stowed solid with sand.

6. Not more than 150 metres of split galleries shall be left unstowed at any time in the whole panel.

Two principal contentions were advanced in defence before the trial court. They were that the complaint was barred by limitation prescribed under Section 79 of the Act and in any case, Respondents 1 to 4 were not in management of the coal mines in question when the alleged offence was alleged to have been committed and, therefore, they could not be criminally proceeded against. The learned trial Judge accepted both the contentions of Respondents 1 to 4 and consequently acquitted them. In appeal preferred by the appellant, the High Court also confirmed the acquittal accepting the same contentions. Allowing the appeal by special leave,

Held :

If one looks into Conditions 3 and 6 with the object and purpose of the Act in mind, it has to be held that these conditions are not only relatable to what was required at the commencement of depillaring process, but the unstowing for the required length must exist always. The expression "at any time" finding place in Condition 6 has to mean, in the context in which it has been used, "at any point of time", the effect of which is that the required length must be maintained all the time. The accomplishment of object of the Act, one of which is safety in the mines, requires taking of such a view, especially in the backdrop of repeated mine disasters which have been taking, off and on, heavy toll of lives of the miners.

The aforesaid conditions have to be obeyed always, disobedience of which shall become a "continuing offence". So, even if other conditions are held to be falling under completed offence, violation of Conditions 3 and 6 cannot be so treated as to invoke the time-limit prescribed under Section 79 of the Act. Therefore, violation of Conditions 3 and 6 are "continuing offences" and the charge framed is not barred by limitation. Once this conclusion is reached, the plea taken by Respondents 1 to 4 that they were not the officers concerned when the offence was detected, will not hold water. Union of India v. A.B. Shah, (1996) 8 SCC 540: 1996 SCC (Cri) 688: AIR 1996 SC 3281.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.L. Hansaria and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-1996]

State of Bihar v. Deokaran Nenshi, (1972) 2 SCC 890: 1973 SCC (Cri) 114: AIR 1973 SC 908; LDA v. M.K. Gupta, (1994) 1 SCC 243, followed

Black's Law Dictionary; Stroud's Judicial Dictionary Vol. I, relied on

[6993] — S. 472 — Presumption, and determination of age of accused — Relevant factors — Continuing offence — In case of continuing offence as provided under S. 472 CrPC, age should be determined with reference to date of commission of the offence — In case of offence of kidnapping for ransom and subsequent murder where deceased was first found missing and a missing report was lodged but telephone calls demanding ransom continued from time to time even after the murder, held, it may be considered to be continuous offence — This aspect was not considered by courts while determining age of the accused, although other factors such as school leaving certificate, rough estimation based on x-ray examination report, etc. taken into consideration — Hence, the matter may be considered afresh by trial court in the light of the provisions of S. 472 CrPC — Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000, Ss. 49 and 2(k)

The age of a "juvenile in delinquency" must be determined as and when an application is filed. The relevant date for determination of the age of the accused would be the date on which the occurrence took place. What would be the date on which offence had been committed in a given case has to be decided having regard to the fact situation obtaining therein. Section 472 CrPC contemplates a continuing offence. If an offence has been a continuing offence, then the age of the juvenile in delinquency should be determined with reference to the date on which the offence is said to have been committed by the accused. (Paras 11 to 13)

In this case, the prosecution proceeded on the basis that the entire offence had taken place on the date on which the deceased was found missing and a missing report had been lodged. But from the charge-sheet it appears that the appellant had been getting calls for payment of ransom despite the fact that the deceased had, in the meanwhile, been killed. It is one thing to say that a missing report has been filed on a particular date but it is another thing to say that in a case of this nature when the actual offence(s) had taken place would remain uncertain. Giving calls for payment of ransom is an offence. In case of murder coupled with abduction in a given case it may be considered to be a continuous offence. (Para 14)

The Model Rules having come into force, the applicability thereof may have to be considered in a given case but keeping in view the facts of the case. But in the present case the matter may be considered afresh in the light of the provisions of Section 472 CrPC by the trial court. (Para 19). Vimal Chadha v. Vikas Choudhary, (2008) 15 SCC 216: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 790: (2008) 67 AIC 267 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3190.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

Ravinder Singh Gorkhi v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 584: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 632; Jitendra Ram v. State of Jharkhand, (2006) 9 SCC 428: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 623; Jyoti Prakash Rai v. State of Bihar, (2008) 15 SCC 223; Balu v. State of T.N., (2008) 14 SCC 463; Jameel v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 11 SCC 420: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 748, considered

Vikas Chaudhary v. State, (2007) 143 DLT 603, reversed

— S. 473 See Ss. 245 and 473

See also Ss. 468, 470(4), 472 and 473

See also Ss. 468 and 473

See also Ss. 468, 473 and 190

See also Ss. 468, 473 and 472

See also Ss. 468, 473 and 482

See also Ss. 468(2)(c) and 473

See also Ss. 472 and 473

See also Ss. 482, 190, 468(2) and 473

See also Ss. 482, 468, 469(b) & (c), 154 and 473

[6994] — S. 473 — Offence under S. 14-B, Employees' Provident Funds Act is a continuing one — Even otherwise, in a case of this nature, court should give due weight to S. 473 CrPC to condone the delay — However, in peculiar circumstances of the case, proceedings against the accused directed to be dropped — Employees' Provident Funds and Miscellaneous Provisions Act, 1952, S. 14-B. RPF Commr. v. K. Mohammed, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 673: 1995 SCC (L&S) 195.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-9-1993]

[6995] — S. 473 — Army Rules, 1954 — R. 14 — Bar of trial on expiry of limitation under S. 122 — Held, cannot be got over by resorting to R. 14 to terminate the services of the delinquent office — Army Act, 1950 — S. 122 (as it then stood)

So far as period of limitation of trials by court-martial is concerned Section 122 of the Act is a complete Code in itself for not only it provides in its sub-section (1) the period of limitation for such trials but specifies in sub-section (2) thereof the offences in respect of which the limitation clause would not apply. Since the terms of the above section is absolute and no provision has been made under the Act for extension of time — like Section 473 Criminal Procedure Code — it is obvious that any trial commenced after the period of limitation will be patently illegal. Such a provision of limitation prescribed under the Act cannot be overridden or circumvented by an administrative act, done in exercise of powers conferred under a Rule.

From the opening words of Rule 14(2) it follows that the satisfaction about the inexpediency or impracticability of the trial has to be obtained on consideration of the reports on the officer's misconduct. That necessarily means, that the misconduct and other attending circumstances relating thereto have to be the sole basis for obtaining such a satisfaction. But to dispense with a trial on a satisfaction dehors the misconduct — like the bar of limitation in the present case — will be wholly alien to Rule 14(2). Major Radha Krishan v. Union of India, (1996) 3 SCC 507: 1996 SCC (L&S) 761: AIR 1996 SC 3091.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-1996]

Lt. Col. (T.S.) H.C. Dhingra v. Union of India, (1988) 2 Del Law 109, approved on this point

See criticism of this case in (2001) 5 SCC 593

[6996] — S. 473 — Condonation of delay — Plea can be entertained and decided by the appellate court where matter pending and need not be remanded to the trial Magistrate for this purpose

No useful purpose would be served by again directing the complainant to approach the trial Magistrate for the purposes of seeking extension of the period of limitation. The complainant is held to have explained the delay in filing the complaint which required extension. The complaint is, therefore, held to be within time and the petitioner is not entitled to be discharged on this ground. (Para 10). Rakesh Kumar Jain v. State, (2000) 7 SCC 656: 2001 SCC (Cri) 208: AIR 2000 SC 2754: 2000 Cri LJ 3973.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-2000]

[6997] — S. 473 — Court's power to take cognizance after the expiry of limitation period — Mode of exercise of — Held, should be exercised judicially and on well-recognised principles — Hence, a speaking order is necessary — However, a non-speaking order would not stand, ipso facto, vitiated — On facts, held, no period of limitation was prescribed for the offences charged in the present case

The discretion conferred on the court by Section 473 CrPC to take cognizance after the expiry of the period of limitation under the conditions stated therein has to be exercised judicially and on well-recognised principles. This being a discretion conferred on the court taking cognizance, wherever the court exercises this discretion, the same must be by a speaking order, indicating the satisfaction of the court that the delay was satisfactorily explained and condonation of the same was in the interest of justice. In the absence of a positive order to that effect it may not be permissible for a superior court to come to the conclusion that the court must be deemed to have taken cognizance by condoning the delay whenever the cognizance was barred and yet the court took cognizance and proceeded with the trial of the offence. However, the provisions are of no application to the instant case since for the offences charged, no period of limitation has been provided in view of the imposable punishment thereunder. (Paras 7 and 8). State of H.P. v. Tara Dutt, (2000) 1 SCC 230: 2000 SCC (Cri) 125: AIR 2000 SC 297: 2000 Cri LJ 485.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, M. Srinivasan and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1999]

Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas, (1999) 4 SCC 690: 1999 SCC (Cri) 629, affirmed and explained

Tara Dutt v. State of H.P., (1998) 3 Crimes 523 (HP), reversed

[6998] — S. 473 — Delay in filing complaint against offence relating to non-compliance with provisions of a welfare legislation is condonable 'in the interest of justice' — Employees' Provident Funds and Miscellaneous Provisions Act, 1952, S. 14

In cases of this nature, courts, which are confronted with provisions which lay down a rule of limitation governing prosecutions, will give due weight and consideration to the provisions of S. 473 of the CrPC. Therefore, even otherwise, cognisance of the offence after the expiry of the period of limitation, if any such period is applicable, could be taken in this case under S. 473, CrPC, because the interest of justice so requires. Bhagirath Kanoria v. State of M.P., (1984) 4 SCC 222: 1984 SCC (Cri) 590: AIR 1984 SC 1688: 1984 Lab IC 1578: (1984) 2 LLN 731.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, CJ. and O. Chinnappa Reddy, J. [Date of decision: 24-8-1984]

[6999] — S. 473 — Effect of non-obstante clause — Difference between S. 473 and S. 5 of Limitation Act, 1963 explained

In view of S. 473 a court can take cognizance of an offence not only when it is satisfied on the facts and in the circumstances of the case that the delay has been properly explained, but even in absence of proper explanation if the court is satisfied that it is necessary so to do in the interests of justice. The said S. 473 has a non-obstante clause which means that said section has an overriding effect on S. 468, if the court is satisfied on the facts and in the circumstances of a particular case, that either the delay has been properly explained or that it is necessary to do so in the interests of justice.

At times it has come to notice that many courts are treating the provisions of S. 468 and S. 473 of the Code as provisions parallel to the periods of limitation provided in the Limitation Act and the requirement of satisfying the court that there was sufficient cause for condonation of delay under S. 5 of that Act. There is a basic difference between S. 5 of the Limitation Act and S. 473 of the Code. For exercise of power under S. 5 of the Limitation Act, the onus is on the appellant or the applicant to satisfy the court that there was sufficient cause for condonation of the delay, whereas S. 473 enjoins a duty on the court to examine not only whether such delay has been explained but as to whether it is the requirement of the justice to condone or ignore such delay. As such, whenever the bar of S. 468 is applicable, the court has to apply its mind on the question, whether it is necessary to condone such delay in the interests of justice. While examining the question as to whether it is necessary to condone the delay in the interest of justice, the Court has to take note of the nature of offence, the class to which the victim belongs, including the background of the victim. Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1993]

[7000] — S. 473 — Amendment of complaint — Extension of the period of limitation — Permissibility — Delayed amendment application introducing an additional offence under S. 420 IPC — No application for condonation of delay filed — On facts, held, the amendment should not have been allowed at a later stage — Even otherwise provisions of S. 5 of Limitation Act and S. 473 CrPC, held, are not applicable — Limitation Act, 1963, S. 5 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 142(b) proviso and 138 proviso (c)

Cheques presented to bank on 10-1-2001 were returned to Respondent 1 by the bank alleging that no such account in the name of the appellant was in operation. A legal notice dated 17-1-2001 under Section 138 proviso (b) of the NI Act was sent by speed post. A complaint petition alleging commission of an offence under Section 138 of the NI Act, however, was filed only on 20-4-2001. An application to amend the complaint petition for adding offence under Section 420 IPC was allowed by an order dated 14-8-2001. The appellant's application dated 16-12-2003 for discharge on the premise that the complaint petition was barred by limitation was dismissed. The revision application filed by the appellant before the learned Additional Sessions Judge as well as the criminal writ petition were dismissed.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the facts and circumstances of the case, the High Court was not correct in taking the view that the court as per proviso to Section 142(b) of the NI Act, had jurisdiction to allow the amendment of the complaint petition at a later stage. Ex facie, the amendment application was barred by limitation. No application for condonation of delay was filed. The matter might have been different if the Magistrate could have exercised its jurisdiction under Section 5 of the Limitation Act, 1963 or Section 473 CrPC. The provisions of the said Acts are not applicable. In any event, no such application for condonation of delay was filed. (Paras 32 and 26)

The application for amendment of complaint petition was allowed on 14-8-2001 prior to the amendment of the statute in the year 2002. Retrospective effect could not have been given to the proviso appended to Section 142(b) of the NI Act since it contains a substantive provision and not a procedural one. Likewise an application for condonation of delay is also not maintainable as the jurisdiction conferred upon the court to condone the delay under the proviso appended to Section 142(b) of the NI Act is a substantive provision and not a procedural one. A substantive law, as it is well settled, in absence of an express provision, cannot be given a retrospective effect or retroactive operation. Under the proviso appended to Section 142(b), inserted by Act 55 of 2002 additional powers have been conferred upon the court to take cognizance even after expiry of the period of limitation, by conferring on the court a discretion to waive the period of one month prescribed under Section 142(b). The provisions of the NI Act being special in nature, the jurisdiction of the court to take cognizance of an offence under Section 138 of the Act was limited to the period of thirty days in terms of the proviso appended thereto. Parliament only with a view to obviate difficulties on the part of the complainant inserted the proviso to Section 142(b) of the Act in 2002. (Paras 26, 11 and 13). Subodh S. Salaskar v. Jayprakash M. Shah, (2008) 13 SCC 689: AIR 2008 SC 3086: (2008) 3 KLT 616: (2008) 145 Comp Cas 121: (2008) 69 AIC 228 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-2008]

K. Bhaskaran v. Sankaran Vaidhyan Balan, (1999) 7 SCC 510: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1284; Madishetti Bala Ramul v. Land Acquisition Officer, (2007) 9 SCC 650, relied on [7001] — S. 473 — Invocation of — Propriety — Question whether the court below was in error in invoking S. 473 — Held on facts, not necessary to be decided (Para 12). Bharat Damodar Kale v. State of A.P., (2003) 8 SCC 559: 2004 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2003 SC 4560.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2003]

[7002] — Ss. 473 and 468 — Condonation of delay in filing complaint petition after expiry of period of limitation for taking cognizance of offences alleged against appellant under Ss. 166 and 167 IPC — Natural justice — No notice issued to appellant to show-cause why the delay should not be condoned — Held, appellant entitled to get an opportunity of being heard before the delay could be condoned — Without affording such opportunity to appellant and without applying mind to the grounds taken for condonation of the delay, Judicial Magistrate erred in taking cognizance of the alleged offences long after expiry of the period of limitation

As an option to get the appellant tried in an ordinary criminal court had been exercised by the respondent, there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that all the prerequisites therefor in regard to the period of limitation as also the necessity to obtain the order of sanction were required to be complied with. A court of law cannot take cognizance of an offence, if it is barred by limitation. Delay in filing a complaint petition therefore has to be condoned. If the delay is not condoned, the court will have no jurisdiction to take cognizance. Similarly unless it is held that a sanction was not required to be obtained, the court's jurisdiction will be barred. (Para 15). P.K. Choudhury v. Commander, 48 Brtf (Gref), (2008) 13 SCC 229: AIR 2008 SC 1937.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2008]

State of Maharashtra v. Sharadchandra Vinayak Dongre, (1995) 1 SCC 42: 1995 SCC (Cri) 16, relied on

[7003] — Ss. 473 and 468 — Court can extend period of limitation under, only where period of limitation is prescribed as per provisions of Ch. 36 of the Code and not where the period is prescribed under any other enactment

The extension of period contemplated in Section 473 CrPC is only by way of an exception to the period fixed as per the provisions of Chapter XXXVI of the Code. Section 473 of the Code therefore cannot operate in respect of any period of limitation prescribed under any other enactment. Hence Section 473 cannot be invoked for circumventing the bar contained in Section 64(3) of the KP Act. (Para 10). P.P. Unnikrishnan v. Puttiyottil Alikutty, (2000) 8 SCC 131: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1460: AIR 2000 SC 2952.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2000]

[7004] — Ss. 473 and 468 — Delay in launching prosecution — Condonation of — Notice and opportunity of hearing to the accused necessary — Court must pass speaking order — However in the circumstances of the case, High Court not justified in quashing the proceedings on such grounds — Proper course was to remit the case to the trial court with a direction to decide the application for condonation of delay afresh after hearing both sides (Para 5). State of Maharashtra v. Sharadchandra Vinayak Dongre, (1995) 1 SCC 42: 1995 SCC (Cri) 16: AIR 1995 SC 231: (1995) 1 Mah LJ 432: (1995) 32 ACC 25: 1995 Cr LR (SC) 114.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.M. Sahai, Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1994]

[7005] — Ss. 473 and 401 — Condonation of delay in filing/re-filing revision petition — Respondent-accused charge-sheeted under Ss. 121/121-A/122/124-A/120-B IPC on the allegations of being a member of TUM and for conspiring in waging war against the Government of India, discharged by Addl. Sessions Judge at the threshold, holding that prima facie there was no legal evidence to show that the respondent had committed any of the alleged acts — Revision petition along with an application for condoning the delay in filing the petition filed by appellant State — However, Registry of High Court raised certain objections, and the file was received back in the Department for curing the defects — Unfortunately, due to paucity of space, the file got mixed up with other files in the office of the Standing Counsel, and was traced only in June 2003 (order of discharge passed on 30-10-1998) — Revision petition was thereafter re-filed along with an application for condonation of delay in re-filing — High Court dismissed criminal revision petition holding that there was unexplained delay in filing and re-filing the revision petition — Submission by appellant that High Court did not even deal with the explanations given by appellant in explaining the delay and summarily rejected the same and that the conclusions of the trial Judge directing discharge were unsustainable both on facts and in law — Held, proof by sufficient cause is a condition precedent for exercise of the extraordinary discretion vested in the court — In the instant case appellant had indicated the reasons for the delay in filing and re-filing the revision petition — High Court was required to examine the correctness of the explanation given, keeping in view the principles laid down by Supreme Court in several cases — Explanation offered was plausible and deserved to be accepted — Impugned order set aside and matter remitted to it to hear the criminal revision on merits — Limitation Act, 1963, S. 5 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 121/121-A/122/124-A/120-B (Paras 4 to 8 and 13). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Ahmed Jaan, (2008) 14 SCC 582.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2008]

N. Balakrishnan v. M. Krishnamurthy, (1998) 7 SCC 123, followed

State of Nagaland v. Lipok Ao, (2005) 3 SCC 752: 2005 SCC (Cri) 906; Spl. Tehsildar, Land Acquisition v. K.V. Ayisumma, (1996) 10 SCC 634; State of Haryana v. Chandra Mani, (1996) 3 SCC 132, relied on [7006] — Ss. 473 and 468 — Provision in S. 473 for taking cognizance after expiry of limitation period — Applicability — Where the accused was charged with offences under Ss. 468, 420 and 120-B IPC but was convicted under Ss. 417 and 465 IPC, held, S. 473 was not attracted — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 468, 420, 120-B, 417 and 465. State of H.P. v. Tara Dutt, (2000) 1 SCC 230: 2000 SCC (Cri) 125: AIR 2000 SC 297: 2000 Cri LJ 485.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik, M. Srinivasan and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-1999]

Tara Dutt v. State of H.P., (1998) 3 Crimes 523 (HP), reversed

[7007] — Ss. 473 and 468(2) — Limitation — Condonation of delay — Discretion in respect of, held, should be exercised on relevant considerations — Date of occurrence 24-9-1994 — Charge-sheet filed in 1998 — Cognizance taken on 4-2-2000 by the CJM condoning the delay on the ground that the proceedings were stayed by the High Court till 5-10-1999 — Having regard to the orders passed by High Court, held, the order dated 11-11-1994, which stayed the further proceedings, stood vacated due to the subsequent order of High Court on 6-2-1995 — Hence, condonation of delay by the CJM on the said ground, held on facts, not proper (Para 12). Ramesh Chandra Sinha v. State of Bihar, (2003) 7 SCC 254: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1613: AIR 2003 SC 3635.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Shivaraj V. Patil and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2003]

[7008] — Ss. 473 and 468(2)(c) — Remand — When not warranted — Though non-application of mind by Magistrate as to the question of extended limitation under S. 473 CrPC deprecated, however, on facts and circumstances of this case, considering delays caused in investigation, etc. and given that case was one relating to offence of cruelty under S. 498-A, adopting a liberal approach that has been stressed by Supreme Court, benefit under S. 473 CrPC allowed — Matter not remanded back to Magistrate to reconsider applicability of S. 473 CrPC — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Paras 8 and 9). Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735: AIR 2005 SC 1989: 2005 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2005]

[7009] — Ss. 473 and 470(3) — Delay — If the delay deserves to be condoned under S. 473, a wrong remission given under S. 470(3) can be deemed valid under S. 473 (Para 11). Rakesh Kumar Jain v. State, (2000) 7 SCC 656: 2001 SCC (Cri) 208: AIR 2000 SC 2754: 2000 Cri LJ 3973.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-8-2000]

— S. 475 See also Ss. 428, 5 and 475, 2(h), (g)

[7010] — S. 475 — Jurisdiction of court martial and ordinary criminal court to try an offence punishable both under Air Force Act and other laws committed by a person while on active service of Air Force — Inherent jurisdiction of Criminal Courts to try civil offences not barred — Provisions of Air Force Act and S. 475 CrPC envisage an arrangement for proper exercise of such jurisdiction — Conflict of jurisdiction has to be resolved by the Central Govt. whose decision will be final — Accused has no option or right to claim trial by a particular forum — Criminal Court must give notice to the Commanding Officer of the accused for exercising his option — But no particular form of such notice prescribed — Where full and complete information is provided to the authorities requirement of law would stand complied with irrespective of the fact whether such information was given by way of notice or otherwise — On facts, handing over of the custody of the accused to civil authorities in execution of warrant of arrest issued by the criminal court indicates that the authorities did not opt to try the accused by court martial — Army Act, 1950, Ss. 125 and 126 — Criminal Courts and Court-Martial (Adjustment of Jurisdiction) Rules, 1952, Rr. 3 to 6 — Air Force Act, 1950, Ss. 124, 125 and 72

When a criminal court and court-martial each have jurisdiction in respect of the trial of the offence, it shall be in the discretion of the officer commanding the group, wing or station in which the accused is serving or such other officer as may be prescribed, in the first instance, to decide before which court the proceedings shall be instituted and if that officer decides that they should be instituted before a "court-martial", to direct that the accused persons shall be detained in air force custody. Thus, the option to try a person subject to the Air Force Act who commits an offence while on "active service" is in the first instance with the Air Force Authorities. The criminal court, when such an accused is brought before it shall not proceed to try such a person or to inquire with a view to his commitment for trial and shall give a notice to the Commanding Officer of the accused, to decide whether they would like to try the accused by a court-martial or allow the criminal court to proceed with the trial. In case, the Air Force Authorities decide either not to try such a person by a court-martial or fail to exercise the option when intimated by the criminal court within the period prescribed by Rule 4 of the 1952 Rules, the accused can be tried by the ordinary criminal court in accordance with the Code of Criminal Procedure. On the other hand if the Authorities under the Act opt to try the accused by the 'court-martial', the criminal court shall direct delivery of the custody of the accused to the Authorities under the Act and to forward to the authorities a statement of the offence of which he is accused. It is explicit that the option to try the accused subject to the Act by a court-martial is with the Air Force Authorities and the accused person has no option or right to claim trial by a particular forum. (Para 17)

The defence of the country being of paramount importance, the Air Force Authorities would know best as to whether the accused should be tried by the court-martial or by the ordinary criminal court because the trial by the ordinary criminal court would necessarily involve a member of the force being taken away for trial by the ordinary criminal court and not being available to the authorities and the like considerations. However, in the event the criminal court is of the opinion, for reasons to be recorded, that instead of giving option to the Authorities under the Act, the said court should proceed with the trial of the accused, without being moved by the competent authority under the Act and the Authorities under the Act decide to the contrary, the conflict of jurisdiction shall be resolved by the Central Government under Section 125(2) of the Act and the decision as to the forum of trial by the Central Government in that eventuality shall be final. (Para 17)

On construction of the various provisions of the Air Force Act, Section 475 CrPC and rules framed thereunder the criminal courts are not deprived of their inherent jurisdiction to take cognizance of civil offences under the Code. What those provisions, envisage is concurrent jurisdiction in the criminal courts and the court-martial and an arrangement for the proper exercise of such jurisdiction including, when necessary a way of resolving a conflict of jurisdiction. (Para 18)

The object of giving a notice as envisaged by the Act and the 1952 Rules to the authorities under the Act is to make them fully aware of the pendency of a criminal case against a member of the force and to afford them an opportunity to exercise their discretion of having the member of the force tried either by the court-martial or to allow the ordinary criminal court to proceed with the trial. Though the provisions of the Act and the Code are mandatory in character insofar as they require that the authorities under the Act shall be given the first option to decide whether to try the accused by court-martial or allow his trial by the ordinary criminal court, no particular form of notice has been prescribed either under the Act, the Rules or the Code. Whether or not the authorities have been made fully aware and put on notice by the criminal court to enable them to exercise their option, would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. It is the substance and not the form of notice which is relevant and important. All that the law envisages is that the authorities under the Act must be made fully aware of the nature of offence, status of the victim and the pendency of the criminal case against a member of the force on "active service", so that the authorities under the Act may exercise their option whether or not to try the accused by a court-martial. Where full and complete 'information' is provided to the authorities, the requirement of law would stand complied with, irrespective of the fact whether the information was given by way of a notice or otherwise. (Para 21)

In the present case since, with the full knowledge of the pendency of the criminal case against the member of the Air Force, the Authorities had voluntarily delivered the custody of the appellant, for his trial by the ordinary criminal court, the Authorities would be deemed to have exercised the option of not trying the appellant by a court-martial. The act of the authorities in voluntarily delivering the appellant to the civil authorities for trial unmistakably shows that the Air Force Authorities did not intend to claim the trial of the appellant by a court-martial. The Air Force Authorities have made no grievance at any stage that their right to decide whether or not to try the accused by court-martial had been impinged upon by the criminal court in any manner. They have not questioned the validity of the trial of the appellant by the criminal court at any forum whatsoever. The right to exercise the option is with the authorities and an accused has no right to demand or choose trial by a particular forum. The authorities under the Act have made no grievance and the grievance raised by the appellant is untenable. In the facts and circumstances of the case there has been no lack of compliance with the provisions of the 1952 Rules read with Section 475 of the Code and Sections 72, 124 and 125 of the Air Force Act, by the trial court and the trial of the appellant was not in any way vitiated. (Para 22). Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, (1995) 1 SCC 90: 1995 SCC (Cri) 202.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-1994]

Ram Sarup v. Union of India, AIR 1965 SC 247: (1964) 5 SCR 931: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 236, relied on

Ajit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1970 P&H 351: 1970 Cri LJ 1119: 72 Punj LR 396 (FB) approved

Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, W.B. v. Usha Ranjan Roy Choudhury, 1986 Supp SCC 190: 1986 SCC (Cri) 311: AIR 1986 SC 1655, distinguished [7011] — S. 475 — Jurisdiction of regular criminal courts — Non-exercise of power by Border Security Force authority to move the Magistrate/Sessions Judge for release of the accused for the purpose of trial before the Border Security Force Court — Trial by regular criminal courts in such a case — Validity — Finding the views taken in the two Division Bench decisions in Joginder Singh case, (1971) 3 SCC 86 and Usha Ranjan Roy case, 1986 Supp SCC 190 to be not identical, case referred to a larger Bench — Border Security Force Act, 1968, Ss. 80 and 81 (Paras 4 and 6). Devender Roy v. Union of India, (2008) 17 SCC 476.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2002]

[7012] — S. 475 — Even after opting for trial of an Army Officer by a court martial under the Act, if the trial is found to be not possible or feasible (in this case due to bar of limitation), held, army authorities can send back the officer to ordinary criminal court for standing trial for the same offence — Sanction of Central Government not necessary — Attachment of the officer to a different unit for completing disciplinary proceedings under the Act must be set aside on his being sent to ordinary criminal court for trial — But order of suspension pending the proceedings against the officer need not be interfered with till his trial by the criminal court is completed or given up or till he is acquitted or his character is vindicated by appropriate authorities — Army Instruction No. 31 of 1986 — Criminal Courts and Court-Martial (Adjustment of Jurisdiction) Rules, 1978 — Army Act, 1950, Ss. 127(1)

Pursuant to investigations, disciplinary proceedings were contemplated against the respondent Army Officer and he was attached to a different unit and was made to relinquish his acting rank of Lt. Colonel on the basis of Army Instruction No. 1/8/74 as amended by Army Instruction No. 2/76. The Army authorities had opted for a trial of the respondent by a general court martial and suspended the respondent pending the proceedings against him. However, the general court martial could not proceed because of retirement of one of its members and a fresh court martial was not available to be constituted as a reference thereto was barred by limitation. The court martial was therefore dissolved under S. 117 of the Army Act and the respondent was handed over to the civil authorities for being tried by a regular criminal court. A complaint was thereafter filed against the respondent before the Chief Judicial Officer under S. 190(1)(a) CrPC, 1898. The respondent filed a writ petition before the High Court praying for restoring him the rank of Lt. Colonel with a declaration that he held that rank continuously and for quashing the order of suspension. The High Court allowed the writ petition and granted the reliefs sought for.

Allowing the appeal in part,

Held :

In view of S. 127 there is no general bar as such prohibiting successive trials by a court martial and by a criminal court. Even where a person has been convicted or acquitted by a court martial of the offence in question, he can be tried for the same offence by a criminal court, with the previous sanction of the Central Government. In the present case, however the question of sanction of the Central Government never arose because the respondent was neither convicted nor acquitted by the court martial. (Para 15)

The only purpose of attachment of any army officer to a different unit is that the disciplinary proceedings against him could be speedily and satisfactorily completed without any interference by him. In view of the respondent being sent to the ordinary criminal court for trial, there was no question of his interfering thereafter with the disciplinary proceedings and in view of that, the order of attachment against him must be set aside and the respondent must be reattached to his original Unit. (Para 16)

Under Army Instruction No. 31 of 1986 the respondent had vacated his appointment and acting rank 21 days after the attachment to a different regiment for purposes of completing the proceedings against him. As he has not yet been acquitted nor has his character been vindicated to the satisfaction of the appropriate authorities at Army Headquarters and he is to be tried by the criminal court, till the trial is completed or given up or till he is acquitted or his character vindicated to the satisfaction of the appropriate authorities, there is no case for revocation of the order of his suspension or restoration of his acting rank. (Para 17). Chief of Army Staff v. Major S.P. Chadha, (1991) 2 SCC 288: 1991 SCC (Cri) 445: AIR 1991 SC 460: (1991) 2 SLJ 106: 1991 Cri LJ 494: 1991 Lab IC 1368.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra, C.J. and M.H. Kania, J. [Date of decision: 21-12-1990]

[7013] — S. 475 — Transfer of proceedings in terms of — Non-consideration of prayer in respect of, by Sessions Judge — Plea raised before Supreme Court in respect of — No definite reply to query whether such a stand was taken before the Sessions Judge — That apart, after disposal of matter by Sessions Judge, a petition was filed before SDJM with reference to S. 475 CrPC and the orders passed thereon attained finality — Hence, the above plea, held, not sustainable (Para 14). S.K. Zutshi v. Bimal Debnath, (2004) 8 SCC 31: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2096: AIR 2004 SC 4174: (2004) 3 KLT 505.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2004]

[7014] — Ss. 475, 190 & 200 to 204 — Where a Magistrate after taking cognizance of offence and issue of process against an officer of Army, Navy or Air Force transfers the case for trail by court martial, held, trial by court-martial mandatory — Preliminary investigation by departmental court of inquiry to determine existence of a case for trail by court-martial impermissible in such circumstances — Army Act, 1950, Ss. 124, 125 and 127 — Army Rules, 1950, Rr. 22 and 177 — Criminal Courts and Court-Martial (Adjustment of Jurisdiction) Rules, 1978, Rr. 3 to 8

An Army Officer, Maj. 'S' lodged a complaint in the Court of Addl. CJM that one Col. 'A' had criminally assaulted him thus committing offence under Ss. 323, 352 and 355, IPC and that his superior officer Brig. 'R', to whom he had complained about the incident, was trying to protect Col. 'A' thus committing offence under S. 217, IPC. The Addl. CJM examined Maj. 'S' under S. 200, CrPC, took cognizance of the alleged offences under S. 190(a) and on being satisfied of the existence of a prima face case directed issuance of summons to the accused officers. Thereupon Maj.-Gen. 'C' made an application to the Court of the Addl. CJM for handing over the case to the military authorities for disposal under R. 22 of the Army Rules, and S. 125 of the Army Act read with R. 197-A of the Army Rules and the Criminal Courts and Court-Martial (Adjustment of Jurisdiction) Rules, The court also directed that the progress of the case be reported to it at intervals of two months and ultimately intimating the result thereof, for the purpose of determining whether a successive trial was necessary as provided for in the Army Act. The Union of India through the GOC made applications before the Addl. CJM for modification and review of his order. The Addl. CJM maintained that trial by a court-martial was mandatory under S. 475 CrPC and that the preliminary investigations by a departmental court of inquiry was impermissible in the case. However, the Addl. CJM deleted the direction in respect of the venue of the trial and also directed the Army authorities to inform his court as to the progress of the case at intervals of four months instead of two months as directed earlier. The Union of India filed a revision petition before the High Court only questioning the Magistrate's jurisdiction to direct the court-martial to submit progress reports of the case. The High Court directed that the results of the court-martial proceedings be communicated to the Addl. CJM as soon as may be in accordance with R. 7 of the Criminal Courts and Court-Martial (Adjustment of Jurisdiction) Rules, 1978. In appeal before the Supreme Court, however, a more fundamental question was raised viz. whether it was open to the Army authorities to constitute a Court of Inquiry, enter upon an investigation of the charges under R. 22 of the Army Rules and determine whether there is a case for trial by a court-martial. Although the point was not taken before the High Court, the Supreme Court permitted the point to be raised before it. In the writ petition Maj. 'S' prayed for a number of reliefs.

Held :

The Army authority is not entitled to ignore the proceeding taken by the Addl. CJM and to invoke the provisions of R. 22 and related rules of the Army Rules. The Addl. CJM having held that there is a case for trying the two accused officers and having directed their appearance, the Army authority must proceed to hold a court-martial for their trial or take other effectual proceedings against them as contemplated by the law.

It is open to a Magistrate to inquire into a complaint of an offence alleged to have been committed by a military person, where it falls within his jurisdiction, and to take proceedings either for his trial or for committing the case to the Court of Session for trial. Ss. 200 to 203, CrPC provide the procedure to be followed by a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on a complaint. Rule 22 onwards of the Army Rules run parallel to these provisions of the CrPC. Section 475 of the Code refers to a person respecting whom the Magistrate has taken the proceedings envisaged by Ss. 200 to 204 of the Code and has found that there is a case for trial. When such person is delivered to the Commanding Officer of the unit to which he belongs it will be "for the purpose of being tried by a court-martial. Section 475 requires 'a statement of the offence of which he is accused' will also be delivered to the Commanding Officer. The relevance of delivering such statement is to enable the Army authority to appreciate the circumstances in which a court martial is required by the law. It is clear from the provisions of the Criminal Courts and Court-Martial (Adjustment of Jurisdiction) Rules, 1978 that once the criminal court determines that there is a case for trial, and pursuant to the aforesaid rule, delivers the accused to the Commanding Officer or the competent military, naval or air force authority, the law intends that the accused must either be tried by a court martial or some other effectual proceeding must be taken against him. To ensure that proceedings are taken against the accused the Rules require the Commanding Officer or the competent authority to inform the Magistrate of what has been done. This requirement under R. 7(1) of the 1978 Rules is to enable the operation and application of S. 127 of the Army Act which is an exception to Art. 20 made under Art. 33 of the Constitution. Rule 7(2) of the 1978 Rules provides that the State Government in consultation with the Central Government, on a report from the Magistrate to that effect, may take appropriate steps to ensure that the accused does not escape the attention of the law. The policy of our constitutional polity is that no person should be regarded as being above the law. Military, Naval and Air Force personnel are as much subject to the law as members of the civil population. It is not open to the Army authority to take proceedings for determining prima facie whether there is substance in the allegations made against the accused and decline to try him by a court-martial or take other effectual proceedings against him even where a Magistrate has taken cognizance of the offence and finds that there is a case for trying the accused. Section 125 of the Army Act would not authorise the Army authority to take such proceedings. Rule 177 and the connected rules of the Army Rules do not support the view that notwithstanding the proceed- ing taken by the Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate it is open to the Army authority to hold a Court of Inquiry and determine whether there is any case for trying the accused by a court martial. If it is not open to the Army authority to have recourse to R. 22 and investigate the charge directed against the accused officer in this case, for the same reason it is not open to it to hold a Court of Inquiry and supersede the proceedings already taken by the Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate. Union of India v. S.K. Sharma, (1987) 3 SCC 490: 1987 SCC (Cri) 584: AIR 1987 SC 1878: 1987 Cri LJ 1912.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak, C.J. and V. Khalid, J. [Date of decision: 29-6-1987]

[7015] — S. 477(1) — Criminal Manuals prepared under, should contain provision for allowing accused to sit down during trial unless it becomes necessary to stand up for any specific purpose — High Courts directed to take steps for making such provisions in their respective Criminal Manuals. Avtar Singh v. State of M.P., (1982) 1 SCC 438: 1982 SCC (Cri) 248: AIR 1982 SC 1260: 1982 Cri LJ 1740.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, C.J. and D.A. Desai and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1981]

— S. 479 See Ss. 406 and 479

Section 482 — Inherent Powers of High Court

— S. 482 See also S. 561-A, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pp. 1304 et seq. in Vol. 2

Synopsis

(1) Generally 656
(2) Nature and scope of inherent power 658
  (i) Generally 658
  (ii) S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC 663
  (iii) Suo motu exercise of inherent power 676
(3) Maintainability 677
(4) Alternative remedy/Exhaustion of remedies/Jurisdictional bar 679
(5) Procedure re filing of application under/Delay/laches 682
(6) Proper mode of disposal/Exercise of power under/Matters to be considered 682
(7) Exercise of power/Directions in matters other than quashment of proceedings 682
(8) Interference with investigation/FIR 689
(9) Adverse remarks and their expunction 717
(10) Practice and Procedure 722
(11) Quashment of proceedings 723
  (i) Power of quashment under — Nature and scope 724
  (ii) Anticipatory quashment — Power if any 731
  (iii) Maintainability 731
  (iv) Admission of quashment petition — Effect 739
  (v) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed 739
  (vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered 742
  (vii) Non-quashment — Issue of other directions 772
  (viii) Effect of rejection of quashment application 775
  (ix) General grounds for quashment 775
  (x) Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment 788
  (xi) Lack of jurisdiction of court/forum below 798
  (xii) Mala fides or animus of complainant 800
  (xiii) Quashment re private complaints 807
  (xiv) Errors of procedure by courts/authorities below 809
  (xv) Other specific grounds for quashment 812
  (xvi) Defence case when to be considered/Accused heard at stage of quashment 818
  (xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending 821
  (xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. 837
  (xix) Quashment re offences involving companies 865
  (xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases 875
  (xxi) Quashment re defamation allegations 890
  (xxii) Quashment re taxation offences 896
  (xxiii) Quashment/stay re ecological offences/environmental matters 902
  (xxiv) Quashment in food/liquor/drugs/chemicals offences 907
  (xxv) Quashment re NDPS Act offences 916
  (xxvi) Quashment re caste related offences 917
  (xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes 919
  (xxviii) Quashment re sexual offences 931
  (xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences 932
  (xxx) Quashment re other offences 944
  (xxxi) Multiple/Successive petitions under/Restoration/Review, etc. 951
  (xxxii) Practice and procedure re disposal of quashment application 952

— S. 482 See Ss. 4 and 482
See also Ss. 125 and 482
See also Ss. 145, 144 and 5 & 482
See also Ss. 145 and 482
See also Ss. 154 to 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 156, 157, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 159, 190 and 482
See also Ss. 154, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 154 and 482
See also Ss. 154 and 482, 156 and 157
See also Ss. 154(3) & 36, 156(3), 200 and 482
See also Ss. 156, 154, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 156 and 482
See also Ss. 156(3) & 320 and 482 & 483
See also Ss. 157, 154 and 482
See also Ss. 157, 156, 165 and 482
See also Ss. 157, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 157 and 482
See also Ss. 161 and 482
See also Ss. 170, 169, 173, 2(h), 24 and 482
See also Ss. 173(8) and 482
See also Ss. 177, 178, 482, 156, 162 and 154
See also Ss. 178(d), 177, 179 and 482
See also Ss. 190, 156(3) and 482
See also Ss. 190, 200, 202 and 482
See also Ss. 190, 200, 204, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 190, 309, 320 and 482
See also Ss. 190 and 482
See also Ss. 190(1)(a), 200, 204, 173 and 482
See also Ss. 195(1)(b)(ii) and 482
See also Ss. 197 and 482
See also Ss. 198(1) proviso (c) and 482
See also Ss. 200, 190(1)(a), 204, 300 and 482
See also Ss. 202 and 482
See also Ss. 203 and 482
See also Ss. 204, 200, 202, 203 and 482
See also Ss. 204, 200 and 482
See also Ss. 204 & 203, 202, 200, 239 and 362 & 482
See also Ss. 204 & 203, 202, 200 and 482
See also Ss. 204, 406 and 482
See also Ss. 210(1) & (3) and 482
See also Ss. 227 & 228, 239 & 240, 91 and 482
See also Ss. 227, 228, 239, 240 & 226 and 482
See also Ss. 227, 228, 239, 240 and 482
See also Ss. 227 & 228, 401&397 and 482
See also Ss. 227, 228 and 482
See also Ss. 227, 239, 245 and 482
See also Ss. 239, 227, 245 and 482
See also Ss. 239 and 482
See also Ss. 240, 228, 238, 227 and 482
See also Ss. 245, 227, 397 and 482
See also Ss. 245, 397, 399 and 482
See also Ss. 249, 256(1) and 482
See also Ss. 249 and 482
See also Ss. 257, 199 and 482
See also Ss. 300, 482, 465 and 227
See also Ss. 309, 311, 258 and 482
See also Ss. 309 and 482
See also Ss. 311 and 482
See also S. 319 r/w Ss. 209 and 193, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231 and 482
See also Ss. 319, 386 and 482
See also Ss. 319 and 482
See also Ss. 319, 482 and 161
See also Ss. 320, 239 and 482
See also Ss. 320 and 482
See also Ss. 340, 192 to 196, 227 and 482
See also Ss. 341, 340, 2(d) and 482
See also Ss. 354 and 482
See also Ss. 357 and 482
See also Ss. 362 and 482
See also Ss. 389 and 482
See also Ss. 389(1) and 482 & 373
See also S. 397 r/w Ss. 401 and 482
See also Ss. 397 or 482
See also Ss. 397(2) & 482
See also Ss. 397(3), 399 & 482
See also Ss. 397(3), 401, 482 and 125 & 126(2)
See also Ss. 397(3), 401, 482 and 483
See also Ss. 397(3) and 482
See also Ss. 401, 397 & 482 and 197
See also Ss. 401 & 482
See also Ss. 401(2), 402, 204 and 482
See also S. 401(2) r/w S. 482
See also Ss. 407 and 482
See also Ss. 427, 31 and 482
See also Ss. 427 and 482
See also Ss. 432, 433-A, 389, 482
See also Ss. 436, 437, 438, 439 and 482
See also Ss. 437, 439 and 482
See also Ss. 439(2) and 482
See also Ss. 439(2) r/w S. 482 and S. 438
See also Ss. 465 and 482
See also Ss. 468, 473 and 482
See also Ss. 468 and 482

(1) Generally

[7016] — S. 482 — Single Judge of High Court not agreeing with the view earlier expressed by another Single Judge of the same High Court on an identical point, held, should refer the matter to a Division Bench instead of deciding the same — Contract Labour (Regulation and Abolition) Act, 1970, Ss. 10(1) & 1(4). State Bank of India v. Labour Enforcement Officer (Central), (1997) 10 SCC 258: 1997 SCC (L&S) 1285.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-1997]

[7017] — S. 482 — Inherent powers can be exercised by the High Courts only — Subordinate criminal courts have no such power. Randhir Singh Rana v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1997) 1 SCC 361: AIR 1997 SC 639: 1997 Cri LJ 779.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-12-1996]

*State v. Mehar Singh, 1974 Cri LJ 970: ILR (1973) 2 Punj 561 (P&H), overruled

[7018] — S. 482 — Power under — Held, can be exercised in relation to a matter pending before a "court" — Said court in the context of CrPC would mean a "criminal court" or whence a power is exercised by the court under CrPC

From a bare perusal of Section 482 CrPC, it would be evident that the inherent power of the High Court is saved only in a case where an order has been passed by the criminal court which is required to be set aside to secure the ends of justice or where the proceeding pending before a court amounts to abuse of the process of court. It is, therefore, evident that power under Section 482 CrPC can be exercised by the High Court in relation to a matter pending before a court; which in the context of the Code of Criminal Procedure would mean "a criminal court" or whence a power is exercised by the court under the Code of Criminal Procedure. Once it is held that the criminal court had no power to deal with the property seized under the Act, the question of the High Court exercising its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC would not arise. The High Court can exercise such a power only in exercise of its power of judicial review. (Paras 33 and 46). State of W.B. v. Sujit Kumar Rana, (2004) 4 SCC 129: 2004 SCC (Cri) 984: AIR 2004 SC 1851.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2004]

Divisional Forest Officer v. G.V. Sudhakar Rao, (1985) 4 SCC 573: 1986 SCC (Cri) 34; State of W.B. v. Gopal Sarkar, (2002) 1 SCC 495: 2002 SCC (Cri) 161; State of Karnataka v. K.A. Kunchindammed, (2002) 9 SCC 90: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1085; Section Forester v. Mansur Ali Khan, (2004) 1 SCC 293; Shambhu Dayal Agarwala v. State of W.B., (1990) 3 SCC 549: 1990 SCC (Cri) 489; Commr., Dakshina Kannada District v. Rudolph Fernandes, (2000) 3 SCC 306: 2000 SCC (Cri) 632, followed

[7019] — S. 482 — Power under — Compared with power of Supreme Court under Art. 142 of the Constitution — "Complete justice" — Nature and extent of power to do — Constitution of India, Arts. 142, 32 and 136

Though there is no provision like Section 482 CrPC conferring express power on the Supreme Court to quash or set aside any criminal proceedings pending before a criminal court to prevent abuse of process of the court, but the inherent power of the Supreme Court under Article 142 coupled with the plenary and residuary powers under Articles 32 and 136 embraces power to quash criminal proceedings pending before any court to do complete justice in the matter before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court's power under Article 142(1) to do "complete justice" is entirely of different level and of a different quality. (Para 45). Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 649: AIR 2008 SC 2781: (2008) 67 AIC 106 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

[7020] — S. 482 — Powers of High Court under S. 482 CrPC and Art. 226 of the Constitution — Distinction between — Held, the said powers operate in different fields — Constitution of India — Art. 226

The whole of public law remedies available under Article 226 of the Constitution and the constituent power to issue writs in the nature of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition and quo warranto are neither echoed nor transplanted into Section 482 CrPC. May be both the powers to issue writs and pass appropriate orders under Section 482 CrPC are conferred upon the High Court but they undoubtedly operate in different fields. (Para 56). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

[7021] — S. 482 — Exercise of power under — When permissible — Writ of habeas corpus challenging detention order — Matters at large — High Court dismissing writ filed by detenu's wife imposing costs of Rs 50,000 on her and directing Department concerned to initiate criminal proceedings against detenu under various sections of IPC, exercising powers under S. 482 CrPC — Propriety of — Held, direction not warranted — Issue before High Court was validity of detention order and curtailment of personal liberty of detenu — It functioned as an appellate court, relying on S. 482 — High Court was not justified in issuing such direction and awarding exemplary costs payable to the sponsoring authority

It is unfortunate that the High Court while considering the habeas corpus petition filed under Article 226 of the Constitution by the wife of the detenu challenging the order of detention on various grounds, on going through the materials of the Department as an appellate court, relying on Section 482 CrPC directed the Commissioner of Customs to lodge a report with the police within a period of 15 days along with the complete set of relevant documents to enable them to register a case under Sections 199, 420, 468 and 471 IPC against the detenu. The said direction is not warranted considering the fact that the issue before the High Court was about the validity of the detention order and the curtailment of the personal liberty of the detenu and nothing more. The High Court was not justified in issuing such a direction and awarding exemplary costs of Rs 50,000 payable to the sponsoring authority. (Para 43). Pooja Batra v. Union of India, (2009) 5 SCC 296.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-3-2009]

[7022] — S. 482 — Inherent power — Courts subordinate to High Court, held, have no inherent power under S. 482 or otherwise

The investigating agency and/or a court exercise their jurisdiction conferred on them only in terms of the provisions of CrPC. The courts subordinate to the High Court do not even have any inherent power under Section 482 or otherwise. The power of remand in terms of Section 167 is to be exercised when investigation is not complete. Once the charge-sheet is filed and cognizance of the offence is taken, the court cannot exercise its power under Section 167(2) CrPC. Its power of remand can then be exercised in terms of Section 309(2). The appellants had been granted bail. They are not in custody of the court. They could not be taken in custody ordinarily unless their bail was cancelled. The High Court, therefore was not correct in holding that as further investigation was required, Section 167(2) of the Code gives ample power for grant of police remand. (Paras 15 to 18). Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Raghubir Singh v. State of Bihar, (1986) 4 SCC 481: 1986 SCC (Cri) 511; CBI v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141: 1992 SCC (Cri) 554; State v. Dawood Ibrahim Kaskar, (2000) 10 SCC 438: 1997 SCC (Cri) 636; Dinesh Dalmia v. CBI, (2007) 8 SCC 770: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 36; Rama Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2009) 6 SCC 346, followed

[7023] — S. 482 — Inherent power — Relevance of English case law

Inherent powers of High Court under Section 482 CrPC are meant to act ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice, for the administration of which alone it exists, or to prevent abuse of the process of court. These inherent powers can be exercised in the following category of cases: (i) to give effect to an order under the Code; (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court; and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. Extraordinary power under Section 482 CrPC should be exercised sparingly and with great care and caution. The High Court would be justified in exercising the power to prevent injustice and secure ends of justice. India has largely inherited provisions of inherent powers from English jurisprudence, and therefore principles decided by the English courts are of relevance. Crown Court has inherent power to protect its process from abuse. The English courts have also used inherent power to achieve the same objective. (Paras 17 to 20). CBI v. A. Ravishankar Prasad, (2009) 6 SCC 351.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2009]

Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1, clarified and applied

Connelly v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 1964 AC 1254: (1964) 2 WLR 1145: (1964) 2 All ER 401 (HL); Director of Public Prosecutions v. Humphrys, 1977 AC 1: (1976) 2 WLR 857: (1976) 2 All ER 497 (HL); R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Union of India v. B.R. Bajaj, (1994) 2 SCC 277: 1994 SCC (Cri) 477; B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848, relied on

(2) Nature and scope of inherent power

Synopsis

(i) Generally 658

(ii) S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC 663

(iii) Suo motu exercise of inherent power 676

(i) Generally

See also under Section 482, '(11)(i) Quashment of proceedings — Power of quashment under — Nature and scope', below

[7024] — S. 482 — Inherent jurisdiction under — Nature and scope of — Held, S. 482 does not confer any new power on High Court but only saves the inherent power possessed by it prior to enactment of new CrPC — Jurisdiction under S. 482 is not an unlimited arbitrary jurisdiction — Power thereunder to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution only where such exercise is justified by the tests laid down in S. 482 itself — The three circumstances under which inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, restated

There is nothing like unlimited arbitrary jurisdiction conferred on the High Court under Section 482 CrPC. The power under Section 482 has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution only where such exercise is justified by the tests laid down in the Section itself. Section 482 does not confer any new power on the High Court but only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973. There are three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under the CrPC, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. (Para 27). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

State of W.B. v. Sujit Kumar Rana, (2004) 4 SCC 129: 2004 SCC (Cri) 984; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613, relied on [7025] — S. 482 — Inherent power of High Court under — Availability of — When can be exercised — Held, it can be exercised by High Court either suo motu or on application (i) to secure ends of justice; (ii) to give effect to any order under CrPC; (iii) to prevent abuse of process of any court — There is no other ground on which High Court may exercise its inherent power (Paras 36 and 29). D. Venkatasubramaniam v. M.K. Mohan Krishnamachari, (2009) 10 SCC 488: (2009) 82 AIC 245 (SC): (2009) 3 APLJ 205 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

[7026] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Nature and scope — Reiterated (Paras 25 to 31). Chunduru Siva Ram Krishna v. Peddi Ravindra Babu, (2009) 11 SCC 203: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1297.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2009]

Drugs Inspector v. Dr. B.K. Krishnaiah, (1981) 2 SCC 454: 1981 SCC (Cri) 487; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129, considered and relied on [7027] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Scope, reiterated (Paras 20 to 24). Jeffrey J. Diermeier v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2010]

[7028] — S. 482 — Nature and purpose — Held, merely recognises and preserves inherent powers of the High Courts — Scope of interference with an order framing charges — Nature of jurisdiction exercised thereagainst — Three circumstances given when said power to be exercised — Considerations involved — Categories of cases in which said inherent power should be exercised as given in R.P. Kapur case, AIR 1960 SC 866, p. 869, para 6 and Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, pp. 378-79, para 102, re-enumerated — Inherent powers (Para 10). State of Punjab v. Kasturi Lal, (2004) 12 SCC 195: AIR 2004 SC 4087: 2004 Cri LJ 3866.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2004]

[7029] — S. 482 — Reasons behind grant of inherent powers to High Court under — Explained — CPC, 1908, S. 151

No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. Courts, therefore, have inherent powers apart from express provisions of law which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon them by law. That is the doctrine which finds expression in the section which merely recognises and preserves inherent powers of the High Courts. All courts, whether civil or criminal, possess in the absence of any express provision, as inherent in their constitution, all such powers as are necessary to do the right and to undo a wrong in course of administration of justice on the principle quando lex aliquid alique concedit, conceditur et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest (when the law gives a person anything, it gives him that without which it cannot exist). (Para 5) . State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1805: AIR 2004 SC 3967.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2004]

[7030] — S. 482 — Reasons behind grant of inherent powers to High Court under — Explained — CPC, 1908, S. 151

No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. Courts, therefore, have inherent powers apart from express provisions of law which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon them by law. That is the doctrine which finds expression in the section which merely recognises and preserves inherent powers of the High Courts. All courts, whether civil or criminal, possess, in the absence of any express provision, as inherent in their constitution, all such powers as are necessary to do the right and to undo a wrong in course of administration of justice on the principle "quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, concedere videtur et id sine quo res ipsae esse non potest" (when the law gives a person anything it gives him that without which it cannot exist). (Para 8). Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 2005 SC 9: 2005 Cri LJ 92.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-2004]

[7031] — S. 482 — Reasons behind grant of inherent powers to High Court under — Explained — CPC, 1908, S. 151

No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. Courts, therefore, have inherent powers apart from express provisions of law which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon them by law. That is the doctrine which finds expression in Section 482 CrPC which merely recognizes and preserves inherent powers of the High Courts. All courts, whether civil or criminal, possess, in the absence of any express provision, as inherent in their constitution, all such powers as are necessary to do the right and to undo a wrong in the course of administration of justice on the principle quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, concedere videtur id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest (when the law gives a person anything it gives him that without which it cannot exist). (Para 8). State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353: AIR 2004 SC 517: 2004 Cri LJ 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2003]

[7032] — S. 482 — Reasons behind grant of inherent powers to High Court under — Explained — CPC, 1908, S. 151

No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. Courts, therefore, have inherent powers apart from express provisions of law which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon them by law. That is the doctrine which finds expression in Section 482 CrPC which merely recognises and preserves inherent powers of the High Courts. All courts, whether civil or criminal, possess, in the absence of any express provision, as inherent in their constitution, all such powers as are necessary to do the right and to undo a wrong in course of administration of justice on the principle "quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, concedere videtur id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest" (when the law gives a person anything it gives him that without which it cannot exist). (Para 19). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

[7033] — S. 482 — Powers under — Held, have no limits — Therefore, utmost care and caution required while invoking such powers

It is well settled that the powers under Section 482 have no limits. Of course, where there is more power, it becomes necessary to exercise utmost care and caution while invoking such powers. Exercise of such power would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case but with the sole purpose to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. (Para 6). B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848: AIR 2003 SC 1386: (2003) 2 KLT 1062: 2003 Cri LJ 2028.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2003]

(2)(i) Nature and scope of inherent power - Generally (contd.)

[7034] — Ss. 482 and 465 — Interference with criminal proceedings — Called for only in case of grave illegality — Provisions for interference by superior courts should not be allowed to be misused by those who can afford to approach them

Unless a grave illegality is committed, the superior courts should not interfere. They should allow the court which is seized of the matter to go on with it. There is always an appellate court to correct the errors. One should keep in mind the principle behind S. 465 CrPC. Any and every irregularity or infraction of a procedural provision cannot constitute a ground for interference by a superior court unless such irregularity or infraction has caused irreparable prejudice to the party and requires to be corrected at that stage itself. Frequent interference by superior courts at the interlocutory stages tends to defeat the ends of justice instead of serving those ends. It should not be that a man with enough means is able to keep the law at bay. That would mean the failure of the very system. Santosh De v. Archna Guha, (1994) 2 SCC 420: 1994 SCC (Cri) 546: (1994) 1 Crimes 548: (1994) 31 ACC 250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Jeevan Reddy and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-1994]

[7035] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Nature and scope

Section 482 CrPC saves the inherent powers of the High Court and its language is quite explicit when it says that nothing in the Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent powers of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under the Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. A procedural code, however exhaustive, cannot expressly provide for all time to come against all the cases or points that may possibly arise, and in order that justice may not suffer it is necessary that every court must in proper cases exercise its inherent power for the ends of justice or for the purpose of carrying out the other provisions of the Code. It is well-established principle that every court has inherent power to act ex debito justitiae to do that real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone it exists or to prevent abuse of the process of the court. (Para 6). Hamida v. Rashid, (2008) 1 SCC 474: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 234: (2007) 54 AIC 19 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 3422: (2008) 105 Cut LT 410: (2007) 4 All LJ 206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2007]

Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18, relied on [7036] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Nature, scope and ambit of — Reiterated and discussed (Paras 12 to 26). Gorige Pentaiah v. State of A.P., (2008) 12 SCC 531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2008]

Connelly v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 1964 AC 1254: (1964) 2 WLR 1145: (1964) 2 All ER 401 (HL); Director of Public Prosecutions v. Humphrys, 1977 AC 1: (1976) 2 WLR 857: (1976) 2 All ER 497 (HL); R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259, considered and relied on

[7037] — Ss. 482 and 483 — Inherent jurisdiction of High Court — Scope — When can be exercised — High Court acts ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice — Limitations — Apart from inherent jurisdiction, High Court can also exercise supervisory jurisdiction in some cases under S. 483 and also under Art. 227 — Constitution of India, Art. 227

Whereas inherent power of a court or a tribunal is generally recognised, such power has been recognised under the Code of Criminal Procedure only in the High Court and not in any other court. The High Court apart from exercising its revisional or inherent power indisputably may also exercise its supervisory jurisdiction in terms of Article 227 of the Constitution of India and in some matters in terms of Section 483 thereof. The High Court, therefore, has a prominent place in the Code of Criminal Procedure vis-à-vis the Court of Session which is also possessed of a revisional power. (Para 24). Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

Dharam Pal v. State of Haryana, (2004) 13 SCC 9: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 273, relied on

[7038] — S. 482 — Inherent power — Doctrine of — Nature and scope of High Court's power under — When can power be exercised

Exercise of power under Section 482 of the Code in a case of this nature is the exception and not the rule. The section does not confer any new powers on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of the Code. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. The courts, therefore, have inherent powers apart from express provisions of law which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon them by law. That is the doctrine which finds expression in the section which merely recognises and preserves inherent powers of the High Courts. (Para 7)

While exercising powers under the section, the Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. (Para 7). CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233: AIR 2006 SC 2872.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2006]

[7039] — S. 482 — Applicability — Parameters for — Parameters to be observed while exercising inherent power under S. 482 by High Court either to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice and a note of caution while exercising power of quashing criminal proceeding, restated (Paras 6 and 7). Reshma Bano v. State of U.P., (2008) 5 SCC 791: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 86: (2008) 3 All LJ 607: (2008) 64 AIC 7 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on [7040] — S. 482 — Inherent jurisdiction of High Court — Scope — Reiterated (Para 7). Didigam Bikshapathi v. State of A.P., (2008) 2 SCC 403: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 434: AIR 2008 SC 527: 2008 Cri LJ 724: (2008) 106 Cut LT 313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2007]

State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310, relied on

[7041] — S. 482 — Inherent jurisdiction of High Court — Scope of — Not to be exercised in the matter covered by specific provisions of the Code — Expressions "abuse of the process of law" or "to secure the ends of justice" do not confer unlimited jurisdiction on the High Court — Trial court pronouncing judgment of conviction and posting the case for hearing on sentence — Convicted accused instead of preferring statutory appeal against conviction filing petition under S. 482 — Order of the High Court at that stage staying further proceedings, held, illegal

The accused were convicted by the trial court for offences under Sections 302 and 307 read with Section 149 IPC, and the case was posted to succeeding days for hearing on sentence. But as the accused failed to appear, the trial court issued non-bailable warrant against them. Instead of appearing before the trial court the accused filed a petition under Section 482 before the High Court alleging misconduct on the part of the trial Judge. The High Court stayed the further proceedings including the operation of non-bailable warrant issued by the trial court.

Allowing the appeal by special leave filed by the informant injured witness,

Held :

It is true that under Section 482 of the Code, the High Court has inherent powers to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under the Code or to prevent the abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. But the expressions "abuse of the process of law" or "to secure the ends of justice" do not confer unlimited jurisdiction on the High Court and the alleged abuse of the process of law or the ends of justice could only be secured in accordance with law including procedural law and not otherwise. Further, inherent powers are in the nature of extraordinary powers to be used sparingly for achieving the object mentioned in Section 482 of the Code in cases where there is no express provision empowering the High Court to achieve the said object. It is well-nigh settled that inherent power is not to be invoked in respect of any matter covered by specific provision of the Code or if its exercise would infringe any specific provision of the Code. In the present case, the High Court overlooked the procedural law which empowered the convicted accused to prefer statutory appeal against conviction of the offence. The High Court has intervened at an uncalled for stage and soft-pedalled the course of justice at a very crucial stage of the trial. (Para 2)

(2)(i) Nature and scope of inherent power - Generally (contd.)

The order passed by the High Court entertaining the petition of the convicted accused under Section 482 of the Code is, on the face of it, illegal, erroneous and to say the least, unfortunate. It was known to the High Court that the trial court passed proceedings to the effect that final judgment and order convicting the accused were pronounced by the trial court. It was also recorded by the trial court that as the accused were absent, the Court had issued non-bailable warrants. In such a situation, instead of directing the accused to remain present before the Court for resorting to the steps contemplated by the law for passing the sentence, the High Court has stayed further proceedings including the operation of the non-bailable warrants issued by the trial court. It is disquieting that the High Court has overlooked the important legal aspect that the accused have a right of appeal against the order of conviction purported to have been passed by the trial court. In such circumstances the High Court ought not to have entertained a petition under Section 482 of the Code and stonewalled the very efficacious alternative remedy of appeal as provided in the Code. Merely because the accused made certain allegations against the trial Judge the substantive law cannot be bypassed. (Para 9). Arun Shankar Shukla v. State of U.P., (1999) 6 SCC 146: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1076: AIR 1999 SC 2554: 1999 Cri LJ 3964.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-7-1999]

See also AIR 1959 SC 542: 1959 Cri LJ 658; (1974) 2 SCC 522: 1974 SCC (Cri) 558; (1980) 1 SCC 43: 1980 SCC (Cri) 72; (1990) 2 SCC 437: 1990 SCC (Cri) 327; (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36

[7042] — S. 482 — Inherent powers under — Limitations on exercise of — Case-law discussed (Para 21). K.M. Mathew v. K.A. Abraham, (2002) 6 SCC 670: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1480: AIR 2002 SC 2989: (2002) 3 KLT 282.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-8-2002]

[7043] — S. 482 — Power of High Court under — Object and purpose of — Held, power under S. 482 CrPC could be exercised to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under the Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice — S. 482 has been embodied to cover the lacunae which are sometimes found in the procedural law — However, this extraordinary power is to be used in extraordinary cases

The appellant, who was tried along with T for the commission of offences punishable under Section 13(1)(d) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and Section 120-B of the Indian Penal Code, was discharged by the trial court. In revision, the High Court, exercising powers under Section 482 CrPC, set aside the order of the trial court insofar as it related to the appellant and directed the Special Judge to frame charges against him. Setting aside the High Court's impugned order,

Held :

Section 482 CrPC confers upon the High Court inherent powers to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under the Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Every court has inherent power to act ex debito justitiae — to do that real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone it exists or to prevent abuse of the process of the court. The principle embodied in the section is based upon the maxim: quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, concedere videtur et id sine quo res ipsae esse non potest i.e. when the law gives anything to anyone, it gives also all those things without which the thing itself would be unavailable. The section does not confer any new power, but only declares that the High Court possesses inherent powers for the purposes specified in the section. The section has been embodied to cover the lacunae which are sometimes found in the procedural law. The use of extraordinary powers conferred upon the High Court under this section are however required to be reserved, as far as possible, for extraordinary cases. (Para 6). Dinesh Dutt Joshi v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 570: 2002 SCC (Cri) 24.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-10-2001]

[7044] — Ss. 482 and 374 & 378 — Irregular order of court of unlimited jurisdiction — Review or appeal — Whether can be corrected ex debito justitiae by the same Court — CPC, 1908, Ss. 114 and 99, 100-101 & 109

Per Mukharji, Oza and Natarajan, JJ.

Orders made by a court of unlimited jurisdiction in the course of contentious litigation are either regular or irregular. If an order is regular it can only be set aside by an appellate court; if it is irregular it can be set aside by the court that made it on application being made to that court either under rules of court dealing expressly with setting aside orders for irregularity or ex debito justitiae if the circumstances warranted, namely, where there was a breach of the rules of natural justice etc. A.R. Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1988) 2 SCC 602: 1988 SCC (Cri) 372: AIR 1988 SC 1531.

Bench Strength 7. Coram: Sabyasachi Mukharji[1], Ranganath Misra[2], G.L. Oza[1&3], B.C. Ray[4], S. Natarajan[1], M.N. Venkatachaliah[5] and S. Ranganathan[6], JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-1988]

Issacs v. Robertson, (1984) 3 All ER 140 and Nawabkhan Abbaskhan v. State of Gujarat, (1974) 2 SCC 121: 1974 SCC (Cri) 467: (1974) 3 SCR 427, relied on

(ii) S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC

[7045] — Ss. 482 and 362 — Inherent power of High Court under S. 482 — Scope — Does not extend to what is expressly barred under the Code — Hence cannot be exercised by High Court to review its own earlier decision in view of S. 362

A case was instituted on a private complaint by the appellant for offences under Ss. 452 and 323, IPC. The Judicial Magistrate First Class, in exercise of power under S. 192(2), CrPC transferred it for inquiry under S. 202, CrPC. The Court of Second Class Magistrate after examining witnesses issued processes against the accused respondents. The respondents challenged the order issuing process by application under S. 482, CrPC mainly on the ground that the First Class Magistrate had transferred the case without taking cognizance of the offence and the subsequent proceedings were, therefore, illegal. The High Court on the basis of its definite finding arrived at after perusal of the record of the proceedings before the Magistrate and on a consideration of the report of the concerned Magistrate that the complaint was taken cognizance of, dismissed the petition. But the respondents once again moved a petition under S. 482 before the High Court. The only ground on which relief was claimed is the alleged irregularity in the transfer of the proceedings. But it was alleged that the record of the proceedings on close scrutiny would indicate that the case had not been taken cognizance of before the transfer. The High Court accepted the case of the respondents and quashed the proceedings by the impugned order. It was contended on behalf a appellant before the Supreme Court that the second application under S. 482, CrPC was not entertainable, since the exercise of power under S. 482 on a second application by the same party on the same ground virtually amounted to the review of the earlier order and was contrary to the spirit of S. 362 of the CrPC and that the High Court was, therefore, clearly in error in having quashed the proceedings by adopting that course.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The inherent power of High Court under S. 482 is intended to prevent the abuse of the process of the court and to secure ends of justice. Such powers are as much controlled by principle and precedent as are its express powers by statute. It cannot be exercised to do something which is expressly barred under the Code. If a matter is covered by an express letter of law, the court cannot give a go-by to the statutory provisions and instead evolve a new provision in the garb of inherent jurisdiction. Therefore, it cannot be invoked to override bar of review under S. 362. If there had been changes in the circumstances of the case, it would be in order for the High Court to exercise its inherent powers in the prevailing circumstances and pass appropriate orders to secure the ends of justice or to prevent the abuse of the process of the court. Where there is no such changed circumstances and the decision has to be arrived at on the facts that existed as on the date of the earlier order, the exercise of the power to reconsider the same materials to arrive at a different conclusion is in effect a review.

The impugned order in this case is in effect one reviewing the earlier order on a reconsideration of the same materials. The High Court has grievously erred in doing so. Even on merits there is no compelling reason to quash proceedings at that stage. Simrikhia v. Dolley Mukherjee, (1990) 2 SCC 437: 1990 SCC (Cri) 327: AIR 1990 SC 1605: 1990 Cri LJ 1599: (1990) 2 Crimes 271.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1990]

[7046] — S. 482 — Scope — Not applicable where specific provisions provided by the Code, such as S. 369, CrPC, 1898 — CrPC, 1898, S. 561-A

Inherent power, which S. 561-A purports to save, cannot relate to any of the matters specifically dealt by the Code and as such cannot be invoked to exercise powers which would be inconsistent with any of the specific provisions of the Code. The saving of inherent power is only for giving effect to orders passed under the Code, to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

So if S. 369 is understood as applying to judgments on appeal by the High Court, S. 561-A cannot be invoked for enabling the court to review its own order which is specifically prohibited by S. 369. State of Orissa v. Ram Chander Agarwala, (1979) 2 SCC 305: 1979 SCC (Cri) 462: AIR 1979 SC 87: 1979 Cri LJ 33.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1978]

(2)(ii) Nature and scope of inherent power - S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC (contd.)

[7047] — Ss. 482, 205 and 313 — Inherent powers of High Court under S. 482 — Mode of exercise of — Not permissible contrary to other provisions of CrPC — Held, have to be exercised sparingly, with circumspection and in rare cases, to correct patent illegalities or to prevent miscarriage of justice — Herein, High Court exceeded its jurisdiction under S. 482, by laying down general directions for lower courts, regarding dispensing with personal attendance of accused and personal examination of accused by court, which were inconsistent with clear language of Ss. 205 and 313 (Paras 12 and 21). TGN Kumar v. State of Kerala, (2011) 2 SCC 772.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: D.K. Jain, A.K. Ganguly and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-2011]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10, relied on

[7048] — S. 482 — Inherent power of High Court — Scope — How and when should be exercised — Not to be resorted to if there is any specific provision in the Code for redressal

Section 482 which corresponds to S. 561-A of the old Code and to S. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code proceeds on the same principle and deals with the inherent powers of the High Court. The rule of inherent powers has its source in the maxim "Quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, concediture et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest" which means that when the law gives anything to anyone, it gives also all those things without which the thing itself could not exist.

The criminal courts are clothed with inherent power to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice. Such power though unrestricted and undefined should not be capriciously or arbitrarily exercised, but should be exercised in appropriate cases, ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. The powers possessed by the High Court under S. 482 of the Code are very wide and the very plenitude of the power requires great caution in its exercise. Courts must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of this power is based on sound principles.

The inherent power under this section can be exercised by the High Court (1) to give effect to any order passed under the Code; or (2) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court; or (3) otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The power is not to be resorted to if there is a specific provision in the Code for the redress of the grievance of the aggrieved party. It should not be exercised as against the express bar of law engrafted in any other provision of the Code. Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36: AIR 1993 SC 892.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1992]

[7049] — Ss. 482 and 362 — Review/Alteration of judgment — Reopening of a case under S. 482 CrPC against the statutory prescription of S. 362 — Permissibility of — Reopening of order passed on S. 482 CrPC petition finally decided at the instance of interlocutory applications, on grounds other than the ground of clerical or arithmetical mistake contemplated in S. 362 CrPC, held, is impermissible — Court cannot give a go-by to statutory provisions and instead evolve a new provision in the grab of inherent jurisdiction — Power under S. 482 cannot be exercised to reopen or alter an order disposing of a petition decided on merits — To require the High Court to take notice of subsequent developments and pass order accordingly a fresh S. 482 petition should be filed

The respondent, on the basis of an FIR, was arrested 27-8-1998 under Sections 177, 186 and 506(ii) IPC for impersonating himself as a reporter of Indian Express while making a hoax call on 26-8-1998 to Revenue Divisional Officer (the RDO) regarding smuggling of sandalwood and teak wood logs. On 2-9-1998, the respondent gave a complaint against the RDO and other officers for having tortured him and for having committed other illegal acts between 26-8-1998 and 28-8-1998. When the departmental proceedings against the RDO and other officers was dropped, the respondent, in October 1998, filed a criminal petition under Section 482 CrPC seeking registration of an FIR, transfer of investigation to CBI and compensation of rupees one lakh.

By a final order dated 1-3-2001, a Single Judge of the High Court disposed of Section 482 CrPC petition refusing to transfer the investigation to CBI and also held that the question of granting compensation would arise at a later stage. On two applications filed 3½ years later by the DSP (SB CID) and the complainant respondent in the disposed of criminal petition, the Single Judge of High Court, by the impugned order, transferred the investigation to CBI and directed the State police to hand over the records to CBI forthwith.

Allowing the appeal partly,

Held :

The High Court, in the exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC fell in error in reopening an issue which was refused earlier in the finally decided and disposed of Section 482 CrPC petition. Section 362 CrPC cannot apply in the facts and circumstances of the present case. There was no clerical or arithmetical error in the order. Section 362 CrPC expressly provides that no court which has signed its judgment and final order disposing of a case, shall alter or review the same except to correct clerical or arithmetical error save as otherwise provided by the court. (Paras 5, 25 and 18)

If a matter is covered by an express letter of law, the court cannot give a go-by to the statutory provisions and instead evolve a new provision in the garb of inherent jurisdiction. Section 482 CrPC cannot be exercised to reopen or alter an order disposing of a petition decided on merits. Section 362 CrPC prohibits reopening of a final order except in the cases of clerical or arithmetical errors. Section 482 CrPC enables the High Court to make such order as may be necessary to give effect to any order under CrPC or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The inherent powers, however, are as much controlled by principle and precedent as are its express powers by statutes. It was not open to the High Court to pass a fresh order in the disposed of petition or even in the pending petition of the DSP (SB CID), Nagapattinam, directing investigation to be made by the CBI Authorities. (Paras 19, 22 and 24). State v. K.V. Rajendran, (2008) 8 SCC 673: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 600: (2008) 230 ELT 577.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-2008]

Hari Singh Mann v. Harbhajan Singh Bajwa, (2001) 1 SCC 169: 2001 SCC (Cri) 113; Simrikhia v. Dolley Mukherjee, (1990) 2 SCC 437: 1990 SCC (Cri) 327; Sooraj Devi v. Pyare Lal, (1981) 1 SCC 500: 1981 SCC (Cri) 188; Sankatha Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 1208: 1962 Supp (2) SCR 817, relied on

[7050] — Ss. 482 and 397 — Interlocutory order, petition against — Inherent power under, held, overrides other provisions of CrPC including S. 397 thereof — But it cannot override a statutory bar — Also, not to be exercised when remedy under CrPC or the statute available — So the inherent power is not to be resorted to if there is a specific provision in the Code or any other enactment for redress of the grievance of the aggrieved party — General principles for exercise of power under S. 482, restated

Section 482 CrPC starts with the words "Nothing in this Code". Thus the inherent jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 can be exercised even when there is a bar under Section 397 or some other provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. However, this power cannot be exercised if there is a statutory bar in some other enactment. If the order assailed is purely of an interlocutory character, which could be corrected in exercise of revisional powers or appellate powers, the High Court must refuse to exercise its inherent power. The inherent power is to be used only in cases where there is an abuse of the process of the court or where interference is absolutely necessary for securing the ends of justice. The inherent power must be exercised very sparingly as cases which require interference would be few and far between. The most common case where inherent jurisdiction is generally exercised is where criminal proceedings are required to be quashed because they are initiated illegally, vexatiously or without jurisdiction. It must be remembered that the inherent power is not to be resorted to if there is a specific provision in the Code or any other enactment for redress of the grievance of the aggrieved party. This power should not be exercised against an express bar of law in some other enactment. (Para 29). State v. Navjot Sandhu, (2003) 6 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1545: (2003) 104 DLT 794.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2003]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Krishnan v. Krishnaveni, (1997) 4 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 544; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42; Puran v. Rambilas, (2001) 6 SCC 338: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1124; Satya Narayan Sharma v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 607: 2002 SCC (Cri) 39; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, relied on

[7051] — Ss. 482 and 397(2) — Scope — Inherent power of High Court under to quash trial proceedings at initial stages, held, not barred by S. 397(2)

Section 482 of the present Code is the ad verbatim copy of S. 561-A of the old Code. This provision confers a separate and independent power on the High Court alone to pass orders ex debito justitiae in cases where grave and substantial injustice has been done or where the process of the court has been seriously abused. It is not merely a revisional power meant to be exercised against the orders passed by subordinate courts. It was under this section that in the old Code,the High Courts used to quash the proceedings or expunge uncalled for remarks against witnesses or other persons or subordinate courts. Thus, the scope, ambit and range of S. 561-A (which is now S. 482) is quite different from the powers conferred by the present Code under the provisions of S. 397. It may be that in some cases there may be overlapping but such cases would be few and far between. It is well-settled that the inherent powers under S. 482 of the present Code can be exercised only when no other remedy is available to the litigant and not where a specific remedy is provided by the statute. Further, the power being an extraordinary one, it has to be exercised sparingly. If these consideration are kept in mind, there will be no inconsistency between Ss. 482 and 397(2) of the present Code. MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115: AIR 1983 SC 67: 1983 Cri LJ 159.

(2)(ii) Nature and scope of inherent power - S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-1982]

[7052] — Ss. 482, 341 and 397(2) — High Court has inherent jurisdiction under S. 482 to interfere with an appellate order passed under S. 341, though such order is not revisable under S. 397(2) — High Court under S. 482 must apply its mind for being satisfied whether the order directing complaint to be filed was expedient in the interest of justice — High Court's refusal to invoke its inherent power, without applying its mind, therefore, not justified — Case remitted to High Court. Lalit Mohan Mondal v. Benoyendra Nath Chatterjee, (1982) 3 SCC 219: 1982 SCC (Cri) 697: AIR 1982 SC 785: 1982 Cri LJ 625: 1982 MLJ (Cri) 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and V. Balakrishna Eradi, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-4-1981]

[7053] — Ss. 482 & 357 — S. 482 which saves the inherent powers of High Court cannot override express provision contained in S. 357 which saves that power

The application made by the heirs of the deceased for compensation cannot be made under S. 482 since S. 357 expressly confers power on the court to pass an order for payment of compensation in the circumstances mentioned therein. That does not, however, affect the power of the High Court to deal with the application because though the application was wrongly described as having been made under S. 482 the High Court could deal with it as if it were made under S. 357 of the Code. Palaniappa Gounder v. State of T.N., (1977) 2 SCC 634: 1977 SCC (Cri) 397: AIR 1977 SC 1323: 1977 Cri LJ 992: (1977) 3 SCR 132: (1978) 1 MLJ 13 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud and P.K. Goswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1977]

[7054] — Ss. 482 and 397 — Invocation of inherent power of High Court after dismissal of revision petition — Inherent power should be sparingly and cautiously exercised — When revision petition filed by accused persons under S. 397 had earlier been dismissed by High Court, held, it erred in entertaining petition filed by them under S. 482 seeking the same relief, in absence of any special circumstances — On merits also the High Court erred in passing the order it did

Pursuant to a complaint lodged with the police by the appellant against the respondents, a case was registered against Respondents 1 to 9 under various provisions of IPC. As charge under Section 395 IPC was not added and names of four persons (Respondents 10 to 13) were wrongly dropped, applications were filed by the appellant for inclusion of charge under Section 395 IPC and names of those four respondents. The Magistrate allowed the applications and committed the case to Sessions Court, whereafter the Addl. Sessions Judge, being the trial court, framed charges against all the respondents, including the four respondents and adding the charge under Section 395 IPC. The respondents, except the said four, were on bail granted under Section 436 CrPC and after addition of the non-bailable offence under Section 395 IPC the Magistrate as well as the Addl. Sessions Judge had issued non-bailable warrants against the accused persons. A revision having been preferred before the High Court under Section 397 CrPC challenging the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the offence under Section 395 IPC and for impleading the four respondents, the High Court observed that issuance of non-bailable warrants was not proper. When the High Court directed the accused persons to appear before the trial court and furnish their bail bonds, the counsel for the accused did not press his petition so far as taking of cognizance against them was concerned. Thereafter, the respondents filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC. The High Court held that the Magistrate, being the court of committal, had no power to add the four respondents as accused persons without adopting procedure as prescribed under Section 203 of the Code, and allowed the petition of the respondents and set aside the order of the court by which cognizance of offence under Section 395 IPC was taken. It remanded the case to the Magistrate to hold enquiry as per the provisions of Section 203(2) of the Code with direction that if he finds that a case under Section 395 IPC is made out, he will pass necessary orders against the accused persons and commit the case to the Sessions Judge, if necessary. Allowing the appeal, setting aside the order of the High Court and upholding the order of the Addl. Sessions Judge,

Held :

The object of criminal trial is to render public justice and to assure punishment to the criminals keeping in view that the trial is concluded expeditiously. Delaying tactics or protracting the commencement or conclusion of the criminal trial is required to be curbed effectively, lest the interest of public justice may suffer. Though the power of the High Court under Section 482 of the Code is very wide, yet the same must be exercised sparingly and cautiously, particularly in a case where the petitioner is shown to have already invoked the revisional jurisdiction under Section 397 of the Code. Only in cases where the High Court finds that there has been failure of justice or misuse of judicial mechanism or procedure, sentence or order was not correct, the High Court may, in its discretion, prevent the abuse of the process or miscarriage of justice by exercise of jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. (Para 7)

When the earlier revision petition filed under Section 397 of the Code had been dismissed as not pressed, the accused-respondents could not be allowed to invoke the inherent powers of the High Court under Section 482 of the Code for the grant of the same relief. No special circumstances were spelt out in the subsequent application for invoking the jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 and the impugned order is liable to be set aside on this ground alone. It is not possible to accept the contention that as the earlier application had been dismissed as not pressed, the accused had acquired a right to challenge the order adding the offence under Section 395 of the Code and arraying four persons as accused persons by way of subsequent petition under Section 482 of the Code. (Paras 7 and 8)

Even on merits, the High Court committed a mistake of law by referring to the provisions of Section 203 of the Code and after setting aside the impugned order directing the Judicial Magistrate to hold enquiry as per Section 203(2) of the Code before deciding the inclusion of offence under Section 395 IPC or impleadment of the respondents as accused persons. Chapter XV of the Code comprising of Sections 200 to 203 deals with the complaints to the Magistrate and the procedure prescribed for dealing with such complaints. In the instant case, no complaint was filed before the Magistrate by the complainant requiring him to follow the procedure under Chapter XV. Reference to sub-section (2) of Section 203 of the Code is misconceived inasmuch as no such sub-section exists in the statute-book. (Para 9). Rajinder Prasad v. Bashir, (2001) 8 SCC 522: 2002 SCC (Cri) 28: AIR 2001 SC 3524.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2001]

Krishnan v. Krishnaveni, (1997) 4 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 544; Raghubans Dubey v. State of Bihar, AIR 1967 SC 1167: (1967) 2 SCR 423: 1967 Cri LJ 1081; SWIL Ltd. v. State of Delhi, (2001) 6 SCC 670, relied on

(2001) 1 Raj Cri Cas 33, reversed

[7055] — Ss. 482 and 397 — Scope — High Court's power under either provision, held, is separate from that under the other. Jitender Kumar Jain v. State of Delhi, (1998) 8 SCC 770.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1995]

[7056] — Ss. 482 and 397/401 — Order obtained from High Court under S. 482 without disclosing that an earlier revision petition had been dismissed by the High Court not sustainable — However, interim order passed by the High Court will operate for 10 days — In the meantime applicants in the application under S. 482 can move the High Court to obtain appropriate order. Murlidhar v. State of U.P., 1995 Supp (3) SCC 662: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1110.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and M.K. Mukherjee and S.C. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-1-1995]

[7057] — Ss. 482 and 397(3) — High Court's inherent jurisdiction under S. 482, held, remains unaffected by provisions of S. 397(3) — Fact that the impugned order was an interlocutory order of the Court of Session, held, immaterial

Even if it is an interlocutory order, the High Court's inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 is not affected by the provisions of Section 397(3) CrPC. That the High Court may refuse to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 on the basis of self-imposed restriction is a different aspect. It cannot be denied that for securing the ends of justice, the High Court can interfere with the order which causes miscarriage of justice or is palpably illegal or is unjustified. (Para 17). Puran v. Rambilas, (2001) 6 SCC 338: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1124: AIR 2001 SC 2023: 2001 Cri LJ 2566.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-2001]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Krishnan v. Krishnaveni, (1997) 4 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 544, relied on

(2)(ii) Nature and scope of inherent power - S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC (contd.)

[7058] — Ss. 482 and 397(3) — Inherent power under S. 482 cannot be utilised for exercising powers expressly barred by the Code — Hence second revision after dismissal of the first one by Sessions Court not maintainable. Dharampal v. Ramshri, (1993) 1 SCC 435: 1993 SCC (Cri) 333: AIR 1993 SC 1361: (1993) 1 Crimes 304: (1993) 1 An WR 60 (SC): (1993) 1 BLJR 361.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Sawant and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-1993]

Overruled in (1997) 4 SCC 241

[7059] — Ss. 482 and 397(3) — Petition under S. 482 — Maintainability — Court of Session dismissing the revision petition — Petition under S. 482 filed against such revisional order, held, should not have been dismissed by High Court merely because in such a case a second revision petition before High Court did not lie — It was otherwise open to High Court not to interfere in the matter when examining the case under S. 482. Jitender Kumar Jain v. State of Delhi, (1998) 8 SCC 770.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1995]

[7060] — Ss. 482 and 397(3) — Second revision after dismissal of the first one by the Sessions Court not maintainable — Inherent power cannot be utilised for exercising powers expressly barred by the Code. Deepti v. Akhil Rai, (1995) 5 SCC 751: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1020.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-1995]

[7061] — Ss. 482 & 399(3) and 245(1) & 246(1) — Dismissal of revision by Sessions Judge — Held, does not bar the High Court from exercising its inherent powers — However, the High Court should not act as a second revisional court — Nor can it enter into merits of the case and pronounce upon the truth and correctness of the complaint or defence — It can interfere only to prevent abuse of process of court or otherwise to secure ends of justice

While it is true that availing of the remedy of the revision to the Sessions Judge under Section 399 does not bar a person from invoking the power of the High Court under Section 482, it is equally true that the High Court should not act as a Second Revisional Court under the garb of exercising inherent powers. While exercising its inherent powers in such a matter it must be conscious of the fact that the learned Sessions Judge has declined to exercise his revisory power in the matter. The High Court should interfere only where it is satisfied that if the complaint is allowed to be proceeded with, it would amount to abuse of process of court or that the interests of justice otherwise call for quashing of the charges. (Para 12)

In the present case the High Court has gone beyond the purview of Section 482 in quashing the charge. The High Court has not held that the evidence adduced by the complainant, oral and documentary, if unrebutted, would not have warranted the conviction of the accused within the meaning of Section 245(1) CrPC nor has it held that on the evidence adduced, the learned Magistrate could not have reasonably formed an opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence, as contemplated by Section 246(1) CrPC. (Para 14)

The Sessions Judge has expressed the opinion that since the Magistrate has framed the charge on a proper consideration of oral and documentary evidence and on forming the requisite opinion, no interference is called for. As against this, the judgment of the High Court shows that it has entered into the merits of the case and pronounced upon the truth and correctness of the complaint and the defence. While acting under Section 482 and that too after the learned Sessions Judge had declined to interfere in the matter, the High Court ought not to have entered the arena of appreciation of evidence nor should it have recorded a finding that the complaint was the result of political differences or that it was more a matter of prestige than a genuine proceeding. (Paras 16 and 17). Ganesh Narayan Hegde v. S. Bangarappa, (1995) 4 SCC 41: 1995 SCC (Cri) 634: 1995 Cri LJ 2935.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Jeevan Reddy and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1995]

Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27, followed

S. Bangarappa v. Ganesh N. Hegde, 1992 Cri LJ 3788 (Kant), reversed

[7062] — Ss. 482 and 401 — Maintainability — Review application before High Court under S. 482 for review of its judgment and order passed in revision, held, cannot be entertained — Appeal against trial court's order of conviction dismissed by appellate court — In revision High Court found that appellate court had elaborately dealt with the evidence on record and rightly dismissed the appeal — Application filed before High Court purportedly under S. 482 for recalling its judgment and order passed in revision — Held, High Court rightly took the view that application under S. 482 was not maintainable. Mohd. Yaseen v. State of U.P., (2007) 7 SCC 49: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 297: (2007) 5 All LJ 326: (2007) 56 AIC 10 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-7-2007]

State of Orissa v. Ram Chander Agarwala, (1979) 2 SCC 305: 1979 SCC (Cri) 462; Hari Singh Mann v. Harbhajan Singh Bajwa, (2001) 1 SCC 169: 2001 SCC (Cri) 113, relied on

[7063] — Ss. 482 and 401 — Revisional jurisdiction of High Court — Power to act suo motu where punishment inadequate — Effect of S. 377 — Supreme Court would not interfere with such exercise of power — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 561-A and 499

The High Court is not required to act in revision merely through a conduit application at the instance of an aggrieved party. The High Court, as an effective instrument for administration of criminal justice, keeps a constant vigil and wherever it finds that justice has suffered, it takes upon itself as its bounden duty to act suo motu where there is flagrant abuse of the law. The character of the offence and the nature of disposal of a particular case by the subordinate court prompt remedial action on the part of the High Court for the ultimate social good of the community, even though the State may be slow or silent in preferring an appeal provided for under the new Code. The High Court in a given case of public importance reacts to public concern over the problem and may act suo motu on perusal of newspaper reports disclosing imposition of grossly inadequate sentence upon such offenders.

Section 377 does not exclude revisional jurisdiction of the High Court to act suo motu for enhancement of sentence in appropriate cases. What is an appropriate case has to be left to the discretion of the High Court.

The Supreme Court will be slow to interfere with exercise of such discretion under Art. 136 of the Constitution.

Section 401 expressly preserves the power of the High Court, by itself, to call for the records without the intervention of another agency and has kept alive the ancient exercise of power when something extraordinary comes to the knowledge of the High Court. The provisions under S. 401 read with S. 386(c)(iii) CrPC, 1973 are clearly supplemental to those under S. 377 whereby appeals are provided for against inadequacy of sentence at the instance of the State Government or Central Government, as the case may be. Nadir Khan v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1975) 2 SCC 406: 1975 SCC (Cri) 622: AIR 1976 SC 2205: 1976 Cri LJ 1721.

Bench Strength 1. Coram: P.K. Goswami, J. [Date of decision: 3-6-1975]

[7064] — Ss. 482 and 397 — Availability of alternative remedy of filing revision under S. 397, held, could not be a ground to dismiss application under S. 482 — Even where a revision application is barred, remedies under Arts. 226/227 of the Constitution would be available — Even in cases where a second revision before High Court after dismissal of first one by Sessions Court is barred under S. 397(3), the inherent power of the Court is available — Inherent power of High Court is not conferred by statute but has merely been saved thereunder — On facts, criminal complaint filed against the appellants — Cognizance taken thereof and summons issued to them — High Court dismissing their application under S. 482, without entering into the merits, inter alia, on the ground of availability of alternative remedy of filing revision under S. 397 — Sustainability — Held, High Court's judgment unsustainable, hence, set aside, with the direction for considering the matter afresh on merits — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 227 — CPC, 1908, S. 115 (Paras 1, 6, 7, 2 and 12). Dhariwal Tobacco Products Ltd. v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 2 SCC 370.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2008]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866; Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910; Surya Dev Rai v. Ram Chander Rai, (2003) 6 SCC 675; Krishnan v. Krishnaveni, (1997) 4 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 544; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927; Amar Nath v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 137: 1977 SCC (Cri) 585; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233, relied on

Vishwanath Ramkrishna Patil v. Ashok Murlidhar Sonar, (2006) 5 Mah LJ 671; Keki Bomi Dadiseth v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 3 Mah LJ 246, approved

V.K. Jain v. Pratap V. Padode, (2005) 30 Mah LJ 778, overruled

[7065] — Ss. 482 and 483 — Exercise of power under — Scope — Held, power of High Court can be exercised not only in terms of S. 482 but also in terms of S. 483 thereof (Para 7). Dhariwal Tobacco Products Ltd. v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 2 SCC 370.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2008]

[7066] — Ss. 482 and 407 — High Court's power to transfer cases pending before different courts within its jurisdiction to a single court — Cases lodged against a company and its former Director (respondent) by different people who were said to have been defrauded by them — Despite the fact that the order in V.K. Sharma case stated that the said order was not to be treated as a precedent, High Court mechanically following the said case and transferring the cases pending in different courts in the State of Punjab against the respondent to the Special Judicial Magistrate, Patiala — Decisions in V.K. Sharma and P.K. Sharma cases on the point in question, held, were passed contrary to law — Hence, overruled — Reliance placed by respondent on Ss. 218 and 220 CrPC to justify his plea for the consolidation of cases, held, was of no assistance — Further, it was also not a case where the High Court had sought to invoke its jurisdiction under S. 482 and transfer the cases so as to prevent the abuse of the process of any court or to secure the ends of justice — Hence, High Court's impugned order set aside (Paras 3, 7, 8, 9 and 6). State of Punjab v. Rajesh Syal, (2002) 8 SCC 158: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1867: AIR 2002 SC 3687.

(2)(ii) Nature and scope of inherent power - S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Kirpal, K.G. Balakrishnan and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-10-2002]

V.K. Sharma v. Union of India, (2000) 9 SCC 449: 2001 SCC (Cri) 467; P.K. Sharma v. Union of India, WP (Crl.) Nos. 72-75 of 2000, dated 5-5-2000 (SC), overruled

[7067] — Ss. 482, 436 and 81 — Bailable offence — Forfeiture/Cancellation of bail granted by Magistrate under S. 482 on ground of violation of principles of natural justice — Bail cancelled on ground that complainant's right of being heard not complied with by Magistrate while granting bail — Sustainability — Magistrate in an alleged offence under Ss. 399 and 500 IPC for defamatory remarks made by accused against complainant on a TV channel granting bail the very same day by noticing that offences alleged to have been committed were bailable — High Court cancelling bail on the ground that opportunity of hearing was not given to the complainant, held, unsustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 399 and 500

The respondent filed a complaint case against the appellant-accused on the ground that the appellant-accused gave a defamatory interview against him on a TV channel. When the appellant-accused approached the Magistrate for grant of bail, the same was granted the very same day without hearing the respondent complainant by noticing that the offences alleged to have been committed were bailable offences under Sections 499 and 500 IPC. The High Court in a Section 482 CrPC petition filed by the respondent complainant cancelled the bail of the appellant-accused on the ground that the principles of natural justice had not been followed in as much as the complainant was not heard on the issue of grant of bail. Aggrieved thereagainst, the appellant-accused invoked the remedy under Article 136 of the Constitution of India.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The bail granted to the appellant for alleged commission of bailable offence could not have been cancelled by the High Court on the ground that the respondent complainant was not heard by the Magistrate while granting bail and that the principles of natural justice were violated. Principles of natural justice are not a "mantra" to be applied in a vacuum in all cases. The question as to what extent, the principles of natural justice are required to be complied with, will depend upon the facts of the case. They are not required to be complied with when it will lead to an empty formality. Therefore, the order of the High Court cancelling the bail granted to the appellant is hereby set aside and the order passed by the Magistrate is restored. (Paras 19 to 21)

The right to claim bail granted by Section 436 CrPC in a bailable offence is an absolute and indefeasible right. In bailable offences there is no question of discretion in granting bail as the words of Section 436 are imperative. As soon as it appears that the accused person is prepared to give bail, the police officer or the court before whom he offers to give bail, is bound to release him on such terms as to bail as may appear to the officer or the court to be reasonable. It would even be open to the officer or the court to discharge such person on his executing a bond as provided in Section 436 instead of taking bail from him. (Paras 10 and 9)

The only choice available to the officer or the court is as between taking a simple recognizance of the accused and demanding security with surety. The persons contemplated by Section 436 cannot be taken into custody unless they are unable or willing (sic unwilling) to offer bail or to execute personal bonds. There is no manner of doubt that bail in a bailable offence can be claimed by the accused as of right and the officer or the court, as the case may be, is bound to release the accused on bail if he is willing to abide by reasonable conditions which may be imposed on him. (Para 10). Rasiklal v. Kishore, (2009) 4 SCC 446.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-2009]

State Bank of Patiala v. S.K. Sharma, (1996) 3 SCC 364: 1996 SCC (L&S) 717; Karnataka SRTC v. S.G. Kotturappa, (2005) 3 SCC 409: 2005 SCC (L&S) 484, relied on

[7068] — Ss. 482, 436 and 81 — Forfeiture/Cancellation of bail granted by Magistrate in a bailable offence — Illustrations of subsequent conduct given that might be prejudicial to fair trial, thereby enabling invocation of inherent power under S. 482 to cancel bail

A person accused of a bailable offence is entitled to be released on bail pending his trial, but he forfeits his right to be released on bail if his conduct subsequent to his release is found to be prejudicial to a fair trial. And this forfeiture can be made effective by invoking the inherent powers of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC. Bail granted to an accused with reference to bailable offence can be cancelled only if the accused (1) misuses his liberty by indulging in similar criminal activity, (2) interferes with the course of investigation, (3) attempts to tamper with evidence of witnesses, (4) threatens witnesses or indulges in similar activities which would hamper smooth investigation, (5) attempts to flee to another country, (6) attempts to make himself scarce by going underground or becoming unavailable to the investigating agency, (7) attempts to place himself beyond the reach of his surety, etc. These grounds are illustrative and not exhaustive. (Paras 12 and 13). Rasiklal v. Kishore, (2009) 4 SCC 446.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-2009]

Arun Kumar v. State of Bihar, (2008) 3 SCC 203: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 716, distinguished [7069] — Ss. 482 and 433 — Premature release of convict — High Court has no jurisdiction under Art. 226 or S. 482 to commute the sentence and release a prisoner — It can only direct the appropriate Govt. to consider the commutation of sentence and prematurely release a particular convict if he has served the mandatory minimum sentence — High Court erred in directing release of the convict on ground that the State had not filed any counter-affidavit — Constitution of India, Art. 226. UT, Chandigarh v. Charanjit Kaur, (1996) 7 SCC 492.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-2-1996]

[7070] — Ss. 482 and 439 — Powers under S. 482 — Invocation of, for grant of bail — Held, not permissible when there is a specific provision in the Code for the same — Said power when to be exercised, explained

The High Court has also invoked powers under Section 482 CrPC while granting bail to the respondents. Section 482 CrPC saves the inherent power of the High Court. The High Court possesses the inherent powers to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone courts exist. The power has to be exercised to prevent abuse of the process of the court or to otherwise secure the ends of justice. But this power cannot be resorted to if there is a specific provision in the Code for the redressal of the grievance of the aggrieved party. There being a specific provision for grant of bail, the High Court clearly erred in taking recourse to Section 482 CrPC while enlarging the respondents on bail. (Para 16). State of Gujarat v. Salimbhai Abdulgaffar Shaikh, (2003) 8 SCC 50: AIR 2003 SC 3224.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-9-2003]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10, relied on [7071] — Ss. 482 and 451 — Release of confiscated vehicle involved in a forest offence during pendency of proceedings — Grounds for — High Court directing release of such vehicle since expeditious disposal of proceedings not possible and on grounds of equity — Propriety of — Held, though power of the High Court to direct interim release is undisputed but it is to be exercised for good reasons and in exceptional cases only — Delay in disposal of proceedings, held, not a sufficient ground — Further held, while doing so minimum condition of furnishing a bank guarantee is to be strictly complied with — Karnataka Forest Rules, 1969, R. 69 — Forest Act, 1927, S. 53 — Karnataka Forest Act, 1963 (5 of 1964), Ss. 62, 63, 71-A and 71-G (Paras 6, 8 to 10). Section Forestor v. Mansur Ali Khan, (2004) 1 SCC 293: 2004 SCC (Cri) 333: AIR 2004 SC 1251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

State of Karnataka v. K. Krishnan, (2000) 7 SCC 80: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1289, relied on [7072] — S. 482 and Ss. 438/439 — Conversion of application filed under S. 482 to one for bail — Impermissibility — Bail granted to Respondent 1-accused without serving notice on the appellant, inspite of such direction given by the court — Hence, impugned order set aside and matter remanded for fresh consideration (Paras 2, 4 and 5). Savitri Goenka v. Kusum Lata Damani, (2007) 14 SCC 373: (2007) 60 AIC 31 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 441.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-11-2007]

[7073] — Ss. 482, 397, 401, 239, 240 and 173 — Jurisdiction of High Court to quash criminal proceedings — Held, once charges are framed High Court, in its revisional jurisdiction, not justified in quashing the same relying upon documents other than those referred to in Ss. 239 and 240 — Nor would the High Court be justified in invoking its inherent jurisdiction to quash the proceedings except where forensic exigencies and formidable compulsions justify such a course — Even in such exceptional cases High Court can look into only those documents which are relevant and unimpeachable — Quashing of criminal proceedings on the basis of affidavits filed by the parties not proper

(2)(ii) Nature and scope of inherent power - S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC (contd.)

If charges are framed in accordance with S. 240 CrPC on a finding that a prima facie case has been made out the person arraigned may, if he feels aggrieved invoke the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court or the Sessions Judge to contend that the charge-sheet submitted under S. 173 CrPC and documents sent with it did not disclose any ground to presume that he had committed any offence for which he is charged and the revisional court if so satisfied can quash the charges framed against him. To put it differently, once charges are framed under S. 240 CrPC the High Court in its revisional jurisdiction would not be justified in relying upon documents other than those referred to in Ss. 239 and 240 CrPC; nor would it be justified in invoking its inherent jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC to quash the same except in those rare cases where forensic exigencies and formidable compulsions justify such a course. Even in such exceptional cases the High Court can look into only those documents which are unimpeachable and can be legally translated into relevant evidence.

In the present case instead of adverting to and confining its attention to the documents referred to in Ss. 239 and 240 CrPC the High Court has dealt with the rival contentions of the parties raised through their respective affidavits at length and on a threadbare discussion thereof passed the impugned order. The course so adopted cannot be supported; firstly, because finding regarding commission of an offence cannot be recorded on the basis of affidavit evidence and secondly, because at the stage of framing of charge the Court cannot usurp the functions of a trial court to delve into and decide upon the respective merits of the case. Minakshi Bala v. Sudhir Kumar, (1994) 4 SCC 142: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1181.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Agrawal and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-1994]

[7074] — Ss. 482, 397, 166-A and 401 — Public interest litigation — Standing — Revision petition — Maintainability — Bofors gun deal case — FIR registered by CBI against named and unnamed persons including politicians and govt. officials already involved in receiving bribe/kickbacks in the deal — Investigation commenced — Application moved by CBI before Special Judge for issue of letter rogatory to Switzerland for assistance in investigation — Miscellaneous petition filed under Art. 51-A before Special Judge by an advocate claiming to be Secretary of an organisation devoted to uphold rule of law, fight against injustice and abide by the Constitution, inter alia for not issuing the letter rogatory on mere formal request of CBI unless allegations against named persons established — Petition dismissed — Revision petition filed before High Court by the advocate challenging not only the order of dismissal but also the very registration of FIR and investigation carried on by CBI — Revision petition dismissed on ground of absence of locus standi of the petitioner-advocate but suo motu cognizance taken in exercise of powers under Ss. 397, 401 and 482 and the office directed to register a case under title 'Court on its own Motion v. State and CBI' — Held, the advocate had no locus standi and High Court's suo motu action interfering with FIR and investigation illegal and perverse — Constitution of India, Arts. 51-A & 136. Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36: AIR 1993 SC 892.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1992]

[7075] — Ss. 482, 227 and 190 — Magistrate issuing process against more persons on the basis of private complaint — Power of High Court to interfere with such exercise of power — Propriety of High Court going into merits at such stage — Right of such accused to pray for discharge upon committal under S. 227. Hareram Satpathy v. Tikaram Agarwala, (1978) 4 SCC 58: 1978 SCC (Cri) 496: AIR 1978 SC 1568: 1978 Cri LJ 1687.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-1978]

[7076] — Ss. 482 and 204 — Recourse to S. 482 — Estoppel to taking recourse to, based on conduct — Challenge to process issued under S. 204 — Held, party aggrieved cannot be estopped from having recourse to S. 482 (it being the only course open to it to challenge process issued under S. 204, as affirmed in this case) because of his conduct in successfully having kept trial in abeyance by filing one proceeding after another — Complaint filed against company and four of its Directors under S. 138, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — Company challenging validity of statutory notice issued under and issuance of process based thereon all the way to Supreme Court under Art. 136 — However, SLP dismissed as withdrawn — Thereafter appellant, a Director of said company, challenging validity of said statutory notice and issuance of process based thereon all the way up to the present appeal — Supreme Court and High Court in earlier proceedings had directed question of validity of said statutory notice issued under S. 138, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 to be considered at trial stage — Even in light of the same, and conduct of appellant in initiating one proceeding after another, even up to the Supreme Court, thereby successfully managing to keep trial in abeyance in proceedings initiated in 1996, held, an accused person (the appellant) cannot be prevented from taking recourse to a remedy which is available in law — Hence, while permission sought by the appellant from Supreme Court to file a petition under S. 482 is not being granted, the statutory right available to him in law cannot be denied — The court concerned entertaining the application under S. 482, would undoubtedly take the said conduct of appellant into account — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 115 (Para 19). Subramanium Sethuraman v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 13 SCC 324: 2005 SCC (Cri) 242: AIR 2004 SC 4711: 2004 Cri LJ 4609: (2005) 1 Mah LJ 626.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2004]

[Ed.: See also Art. 136, '(g)(3) Exercise of power under by Supreme Court — Relief — Conduct of parties', pp. 783 et seq.,

'(b)(2) Plenary jurisdiction under Art. 136', pp. 247 et seq., and

'(c)(4) Equity jurisdiction — Conduct of parties', pp. 291 et seq. in Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, Vol. 8.]

[7077] — Ss. 482 and 227, 239 & 245 — Jurisdiction of High Court under, for quashing criminal proceedings — Held, can be exercised even when application for discharge of the accused pending with the trial Judge — Such power should be exercised cautiously to prevent abuse of process of court — FIR lodged by GM of a Finance Company roping in the appellants and their family members in order to coerce them to refund the amount borrowed by them from the Company — Consequent proceedings initiated for alleged offence under Ss. 406/420 IPC — Complaint under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act already pending against the appellants and others — Held on facts, FIR and the criminal prosecution for the alleged offence under Ss. 406/420 IPC amounted to abuse of process of law and hence the proceedings liable to be quashed — Constitution of India, Art. 227

Respondent 2, GM of a Finance Company, lodged a first information report against seven persons including the two appellants alleging that they as Directors of an Automobile Company had taken a short-term loan of Rs 50 lakhs from the Finance Company but the cheques drawn by them by way of repayment of the loan with interest on presentation were dishonoured by the bank for insufficient funds. Police submitted a charge-sheet for offence under Sections 406/420 IPC against the two appellants and their family members describing all of them as Directors of the said Automobile Company. But during investigation the appellants were found to be not Directors of the said Company. In counter-affidavit filed on behalf of the complainant, apart from making an omnibus statement that the first appellant with dishonest intention and misrepresentation got the loan, nothing had been said as to what those misrepresentations were, how the Finance Company was duped, what were the roles played by the appellants and others in the alleged offence and why the charge-sheet was filed only against the appellants and their family members leaving out the other Directors of the Automobile Company. Though criminal complaint under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act was already pending at the time of filing the FIR but the charge-sheet relating to the alleged offence under Sections 406/420 IPC did not show if the investigating agency looked into the complaint filed under Section 138 of the said Act. The appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashing of the criminal proceedings pending against them under Sections 406/424 IPC in the Court of CJM. The High Court dismissed the application.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case the whole attempt of the complainant is evidently to rope in all the members of the family particularly the appellants who are the parents of the Managing Director of the Automobile Company without regard to their role or participation in the alleged offences with the sole purpose of getting the loan due to the Finance Company by browbeating and tyrannising the appellants with criminal prosecution. A criminal complaint under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is already pending against the appellants and other accused. They would suffer the consequences if offence under Section 138 is proved against them. In any case there is no occasion for the complainant to prosecute the appellants under Sections 406/420 IPC and in his doing so it is clearly an abuse of the process of law and prosecution against the appellants for those offences is liable to be quashed. Accordingly, the judgment of the High Court is set aside and prosecution of the appellants under Sections 406/420 IPC is quashed. (Paras 14 and 15)

Jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code has to be exercised with great care. In exercise of its jurisdiction the High Court is not to examine the matter superficially. It is to be seen if a matter, which is essentially of a civil nature, has been given a cloak of criminal offence. Criminal proceedings are not a short cut of other remedies available in law. Before issuing process a criminal court has to exercise a great deal of caution. For the accused it is a serious matter. The Supreme Court has laid certain principles on the basis of which the High Court is to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Jurisdiction under this section has to be exercised to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Merely because the accused persons had already filed an application in the Court of Additional Judicial Magistrate for their discharge, it cannot be urged that the High Court cannot exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Though the Magistrate trying a case has jurisdiction to discharge the accused at any stage of the trial if he considers the charge to be groundless but that does not mean that the accused cannot approach the High Court under Section 482 of the Code or Article 227 of the Constitution to have the proceeding quashed against them when no offence has been made out against them and still why must they undergo the agony of a criminal trial. (Paras 8 and 7). G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513: AIR 2000 SC 754: 2000 Cri LJ 824: 2000 All LJ 496.

(2)(ii) Nature and scope of inherent power - S. 482 and other provisions of CrPC (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2000]

State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1704, relied on

Followed in All Cargo Movers India (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776*

[7078] — Ss. 482 and 250 — Quashment — Commercial transactions — Misuse of — Criminal proceedings — Need for exercise of power under S. 250 — If allegations in the complaint, taken at their face value, disclose a criminal offence, complaint cannot be quashed merely because it relates to a commercial transaction or breach of contract for which civil remedy is available or has been availed — A commercial transaction or dispute may also involve criminal offence — If it is found that a frivolous criminal complaint had been filed knowing well that remedy lay only in civil law, person who filed such complaint should himself be made accountable in accordance with law at the end of such proceeding — Court should exercise power under S. 250 CrPC frequently where there is malice or frivolousness or ulterior motives on the part of the complainant

The appellant Indian Oil Corporation (IOC) entered into a contract with the respondent NEPC India Ltd., agreeing to supply aircraft fuel. According to the appellant, in respect of the fuel supplied under the contract, the respondent committed default in making payments. The respondent hypothecated its two aircrafts to the appellant under a deed. It was stipulated in clause (2) of the deed that the hypothecation was by way of charge and as security for payment of the amounts due. Clause (3) read with the schedule set out the instalments' schedule for payment of the amount due. Under clause (6), NEPC India declared that it would not assign, sell, pledge, charge, underlet or otherwise encumber or part with the possession, custody or beneficial interest in respect of the two aircrafts without the previous written consent of IOC. It also undertook not to do any act which may diminish the value of the hypothecated property without clearing the entire outstanding amount. Clause (9) provided that if NEPC India failed to pay any of the instalments with interest within the stipulated time, or if any undertaking or assurance given by NEPC India was found to be false, IOC shall have the "right to take possession of the hypothecated property" and sell the same by public auction or by private contract and appropriate the sale proceeds towards the outstanding dues without recourse to court of law. Clause (12) confirmed that NEPC India had handed over the title deeds relating to the aircraft to IOC, and agreed to receive them back only after paying the amounts due. As the respondent failed to pay the first two instalments as per the schedule, appellant stopped supply of fuel. However, subsequently, under a fresh agreement, a revised payment schedule was agreed upon and the appellant agreed to recommence supply of aircraft fuel on "cash-and-carry" basis. But this agreement also came to an end as the instalments were not paid. Apprehending that the respondent may remove one of the hypothecated aircraft from Coimbatore Airport to a place outside its reach, the appellant filed a suit in the High Court seeking a mandatory injunction to the authorities concerned to detain the aircraft so as to enable it to take possession thereof. The High Court granted an interim injunction. In regard to the other hypothecated aircraft kept at Chennai Airport the appellant filed another suit in City Civil Court for a similar mandatory injunction. The appellant then filed two complaints against NEPC India and its two directors under Section 200 CrPC alleging that NEPC India unauthorisedly and clandestinely removed the engines and certain other parts from the two hypothecated aircrafts so as to defeat IOC's right to take possession of the two aircrafts in view of default in payments made by NEPC India and further that such act was against the terms of the hypothecation deed and would amount to offences punishable under Sections 378 (theft), 403 (dishonest misappropriation of property), 405 (criminal breach of trust), 415 (cheating), 425 (mischief) of the Penal Code, 1860. The respondents thereupon filed petitions under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the said two complaints on the following grounds:

(i) The complaints related to purely contractual disputes of a civil nature in respect of which IOC had already sought injunctive reliefs and money decrees.

(ii) Even if all the allegations in the complaints were taken as true, they did not constitute any criminal offence as defined under Sections 378, 403, 405, 415 or 425 IPC.

The High Court by a common judgment allowed both the petitions and quashed the two complaints. It accepted the second ground urged by the respondents herein, but rejected the first ground. The said order of the High Court is under challenge in these appeals. On the rival contentions urged, the following points arose for consideration:

(i) Whether existence or availment of civil remedy in respect of disputes arising from breach of contract, bars remedy under criminal law?

(ii) Whether the allegations in the complaint, if accepted on face value, constitute any offence under Sections 378, 403, 405, 415 or 425 IPC?

Held :

A given set of facts may make out: (a) purely a civil wrong; or (b) purely a criminal offence; or (c) a civil wrong as also a criminal offence. A commercial transaction or a contractual dispute, apart from furnishing a cause of action for seeking remedy in civil law, may also involve a criminal offence. As the nature and scope of a civil proceeding are different from a criminal proceeding, the mere fact that the complaint relates to a commercial transaction or breach of contract, for which a civil remedy is available or has been availed of, is not by itself a ground to quash the criminal proceedings. The test is whether the allegations in the complaint disclose a criminal offence or not. (Para 12)

In this case, it is no doubt true that IOC has initiated several civil proceedings to safeguard its interests and recover the amounts due. These acts show that civil remedies were and are available in law and IOC has taken recourse to such remedies. But it does not follow therefrom that criminal law remedy is barred or IOC is estopped from seeking such remedy. (Para 15)

The respondents, no doubt, have stated that they had no intention to cheat or dishonestly divert or misappropriate the hypothecated aircraft or any parts thereof. But these are defences that will have to be put forth and considered during the trial. Defences that may be available, or facts/aspects when established during the trial, may lead to acquittal, are not grounds for quashing the complaint at the threshold. At this stage, the only question relevant is whether the averments in the complaint spell out the ingredients of a criminal offence or not. (Para 16)

The High Court was, therefore, justified in rejecting the contention of the respondents that the criminal proceedings should be quashed in view of the pendency of several civil proceedings. (Para 17)

However, there is a growing tendency in business circles to convert purely civil disputes into criminal cases. This is obviously on account of a prevalent impression that civil law remedies are time consuming and do not adequately protect the interests of lenders/creditors. Such a tendency is seen in several family disputes also, leading to irretrievable breakdown of marriages/families. There is also an impression that if a person could somehow be entangled in a criminal prosecution, there is a likelihood of imminent settlement. Any effort to settle civil disputes and claims, which do not involve any criminal offence, by applying pressure through criminal prosecution should be deprecated and discouraged. (Para 13)

While no one with a legitimate cause or grievance should be prevented from seeking remedies available in criminal law, a complainant who initiates or persists with a prosecution, being fully aware that the criminal proceedings are unwarranted and his remedy lies only in civil law, should himself be made accountable, at the end of such misconceived criminal proceedings, in accordance with law. One positive step that can be taken by the courts, to curb unnecessary prosecutions and harassment of innocent parties, is to exercise their power under Section 250 CrPC more frequently, where they discern malice or frivolousness or ulterior motives on the part of the complainant. (Para 14). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

(2)(iii) Nature and scope of inherent power - Suo motu exercise of inherent power

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Central Bureau of Investigation v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045; State of Bihar v. Rajendra Agrawalla, (1996) 8 SCC 164: 1996 SCC (Cri) 628; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; M. Krishnan v. Vijay Singh, (2001) 8 SCC 645: 2002 SCC (Cri) 19; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283, relied on

(iii) Suo motu exercise of inherent power

[7079] — Ss. 482, 374(2), 386 and 397 — High Court can exercise its inherent jurisdiction suo motu in the interest of justice — It can do so while exercising other jurisdiction such as appellate or revisional jurisdiction — No formal application for invoking inherent jurisdiction necessary — Inherent jurisdiction can be exercised in respect of substantive as well as procedural matters — It can be exercised in respect of incidental or supplemental power irrespective of nature of proceedings

In respect of the incidental or supplemental power, the High Court can exercise its inherent jurisdiction irrespective of the nature of the proceedings. It is not trammelled by procedural restrictions in that:

(i) Power can be exercised suo motu in the interest of justice. If such a power is not conceded, it may even lead to injustice to an accused.

(ii) Such a power can be exercised concurrently with the appellate or revisional jurisdiction and no formal application is required to be filed therefor.

(iii) However, the power under Section 482 CrPC is not unlimited. It can inter alia be exercised where the Code is silent, where the power of the court is not treated as exhaustive, or there is a specific provision in the Code; or the statute does not fall within the purview of the Code because it involves application of a special law. It acts ex debito justitiae. It can, thus, do real and substantial justice for which alone it exists. (Para 30). Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Raj Kapoor v. State, (1980) 1 SCC 43: 1980 SCC (Cri) 72; State v. Navjot Sandhu, (2003) 6 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1545; State of W.B. v. Sujit Kumar Rana, (2004) 4 SCC 129: 2004 SCC (Cri) 984, relied on

[7080] — Ss. 482 and 156 — Suo motu exercise of inherent powers — Interference with police investigation — Change of IO in midway (on basis of anonymous petition addressed to a named High Court Judge in this case) — Impermissibility — Held, High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction cannot change the IO in the midstream and appoint any agency of its own choice to investigate into a crime on whatsoever basis — More particularly on basis of complaints or anonymous petitions addressed to a named Judge — Accused or complainant/informant cannot choose its own investigating agency to investigate a crime in which it may be interested

The investigation of an offence is the field exclusively reserved for the police officers whose powers in that field are unfettered so long as the power to investigate into the cognizable offences is legitimately exercised in strict compliance with the provisions under Chapter XII CrPC. However, unfettered discretion does not mean any unaccountable or unlimited discretion and act according to one's own choice. The power to investigate must be exercised strictly on the condition of which that power is granted by CrPC itself. (Para 39)

Therefore, the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction cannot change the investigating officer in the midstream and appoint any agency of its own choice to investigate into a crime on whatsoever basis and more particularly on the basis of complaints or anonymous petitions addressed to a named Judge. Such communications cannot be converted into suo motu proceedings for setting the law in motion. Neither the accused nor the complainant or informant is entitled to choose its own investigating agency to investigate a crime in which it may be interested. (Para 40)

In the present case, the contents of the petition submitted by the victim and also the allegations made in the anonymous complaint reveal no cause for issuing directions relieving the investigating officer of his statutory power and duty to investigate the crime in question. Neither has the anonymous petition nor the complaint made by the victim been directed against the investigating officer complaining of any bias or any attempt on his part to destroy the available evidence. It is difficult to discern the basis for arriving at the conclusion that the entire attempt of the investigating officer was to exonerate the accused and make the complainant as the accused. The investigation was in progress as is evident from the case diary. The special investigation team also proceeded on the same lines as that of the investigating officer and similar observations as the one made by the investigating officer are found in the report of the special investigation team. (Paras 34, 35 and 37). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628; State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 2 SCR 52; Hazari Lal Gupta v. Rameshwar Prasad, (1972) 1 SCC 452: 1972 SCC (Cri) 208; Nirmaljit Singh Hoon v. State of W.B., (1973) 3 SCC 753: 1973 SCC (Cri) 521, relied on

M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor Scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264, considered

CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233; Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404, distinguished

(3) Maintainability

[7081] — Ss. 482 and 397 — High Court's inherent jurisdiction can be invoked against final and not purely interlocutory orders — Availability of revisional jurisdiction under S. 397 does not exclude jurisdiction under S. 482 — However, court should exercise its inherent jurisdiction only in extraordinary situations

Per Krishna Iyer, J.

Nothing in the Code, not even Section 397 can affect the amplitude of the inherent power preserved in S. 482. Even so, easy resort to inherent power is not right except under compelling circumstances. Inherent power should not invade areas set apart for specific power under the same Code. However, there is no total ban on the exercise of inherent power where abuse of the process of the court or other extraordinary situation excites the court's jurisdiction. The limitation is self-restraint, nothing more. Interlocutory orders pure and simple, should not be taken up to the High Court resulting in unnecessary litigation and delay. At the other extreme, final orders are clearly capable of being considered in exercise of inherent power, if glaring injustice stares the court in the face. In between is a tertium quid, where it is more than a purely interlocutory order and less than a final disposal. The present case falls under that category where the accused complain of harassment through the court's process. In this case the High Court can exercise its inherent power. Raj Kapoor v. State, (1980) 1 SCC 43: 1980 SCC (Cri) 72: AIR 1980 SC 258: 1980 MLJ (Cri) 439: (1980) 17 ACC 110.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer[1] and R.S. Pathak[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-1979]

[7082] — S. 482 — Non-exercise of discretionary power under — Propriety — Question whether appellants were partners of the firm and responsible for conduct of its business, held, was a disputed question of fact — Hence, High Court was absolutely right in dismissing the petition — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Paras 1 to 3). Venkateshwaran v. Singaravel Yarn Traders, (2009) 16 SCC 757.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2009]

[7083] — S. 482 — High Court's interference at interlocutory stage — Held, High Court cannot arrive at a conclusion under, on the guilt or innocence of the accused on the basis of material on record at a stage prior to the leading of evidence by the prosecution — Prosecution should be afforded sufficient opportunity to adduce all the available evidence before such a conclusion is drawn. State of Punjab v. Devinder Kumar, (1983) 2 SCC 384: 1983 SCC (Cri) 501: AIR 1983 SC 545: 1983 Cri LJ 980.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and A.N. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-4-1983]

[7084] — Ss. 482 and 397 — Interlocutory order, petition against — Inherent power under, held, overrides other provisions of CrPC including S. 397 thereof — But it cannot override a statutory bar — Also, not to be exercised when remedy under CrPC or the statute available — So the inherent power is not to be resorted to if there is a specific provision in the Code or any other enactment for redress of the grievance of the aggrieved party — General principles for exercise of power under S. 482, restated

Section 482 CrPC starts with the words "Nothing in this Code". Thus the inherent jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 can be exercised even when there is a bar under Section 397 or some other provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. However, this power cannot be exercised if there is a statutory bar in some other enactment. If the order assailed is purely of an interlocutory character, which could be corrected in exercise of revisional powers or appellate powers, the High Court must refuse to exercise its inherent power. The inherent power is to be used only in cases where there is an abuse of the process of the court or where interference is absolutely necessary for securing the ends of justice. The inherent power must be exercised very sparingly as cases which require interference would be few and far between. The most common case where inherent jurisdiction is generally exercised is where criminal proceedings are required to be quashed because they are initiated illegally, vexatiously or without jurisdiction. It must be remembered that the inherent power is not to be resorted to if there is a specific provision in the Code or any other enactment for redress of the grievance of the aggrieved party. This power should not be exercised against an express bar of law in some other enactment. (Para 29). State v. Navjot Sandhu, (2003) 6 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1545: (2003) 104 DLT 794.

(3) Maintainability (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2003]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Krishnan v. Krishnaveni, (1997) 4 SCC 241: 1997 SCC (Cri) 544; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42; Puran v. Rambilas, (2001) 6 SCC 338: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1124; Satya Narayan Sharma v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 607: 2002 SCC (Cri) 39; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, relied on

[7085] — S. 482 — Power of High Court to interfere with a criminal proceeding in a Subordinate Court — Scope of — Interference at interlocutory stage

The High Court was right in declining to grant relief to the appellants, as it is now well-settled that the High Court does not ordinarily interfere at an interlocutory stage of a criminal proceeding pending in a subordinate court. It is also not a matter in which the Supreme Court would interfere in exercise of its extraordinary powers under Art. 136 of the Constitution, especially when the case is at its threshold and evidence has still to be adduced as to whether the minerals extracted could or could not be used as a major mineral for certain purposes. P. Vijayapal Reddy v. State, (1978) 4 SCC 63: 1978 SCC (Cri) 501: AIR 1978 SC 1590: (1978) 37 FLR 228.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-1978]

[7086] — Ss. 482, 156 & 154 — Petition under S. 482 — Maintainability — Anonymous petition seeking direction for investigation sent directly in name of a Judge of High Court — No information/complaint lodged with police — Held, such a petition ought not to have been entertained by High Court under S. 482

What is the scope, content and ambit of the inherent power conferred on the High Court under Section 482 CrPC was under consideration in the present appeal.

The High Court exercising power under Section 482 CrPC directed investigation of the crime in question to be taken away from the investigating officer concerned and entrusted the same to a special investigation team constituted by it. The High Court also directed the said authority to investigate/inquire into various other allegations levelled in an anonymous petition filed against the appellant institution. The said judgment arose out of the proceedings suo motu initiated by the Court on the basis of anonymous petition addressed to the Judge concerned.

As regards the facts of the case, one M, a female remand prisoner, sent a petition to the District Judge concerned. In that petition she alleged that while she was taking shelter in the appellant institution, she had been subjected to molestation and exploitation and became pregnant from the Head of that institution. When she came out of the said institution to attend her sister's marriage, she was implicated in a false theft case and lodged in the jail.

The District Judge forwarded the said petition to the Magistrate concerned to do the needful. The Magistrate recorded the statement of the victim and thereafter an investigation into the matter was ordered. Subsequently, a case was registered under Section 376(g) IPC at the police station concerned.

Thereafter, the District Judge received an anonymous petition addressed to a High Court Judge. The District Judge addressed a letter to the Registrar General, High Court enclosing the said petition. The petition was accompanied by photocopies of certain press reports and three video CDs. In his covering letter, the District Judge referred to the facts leading to the registration of the above case under Section 376(g) IPC.

The matter was placed before the High Court Judge concerned who ordered the Registry to verify and report whether M had sent any petition to the High Court and if so, what action was taken on that petition. The Registry resubmitted to the High Court an earlier file and informed that M had earlier sent a complaint to the High Court, narrating her agonies. The matter was placed before Justice K. As per the order of Justice K, the petition was sent to the Superintendent of Police for an enquiry. As per the report of the Registry, presumably, in pursuance of the said direction, a case was registered under Section 376(g) IPC and consequently the matter before the High Court was closed.

On resubmission of the file, the High Court after noticing the facts leading to the closing of the matter before the High Court, observed that in the meanwhile another petition was received from M by the High Court. The High Court noticed that in the said petition, M had raised serious allegations regarding the investigation. Hence, the High Court opined that even though there was an earlier order to close the file before the High Court, the subsequent petition ought to have been treated as a separate petition praying for an order for proper investigation and separate action taken. As per the High Court, the said petition could also be clubbed with the anonymous petition. Thus, the High Court directed the Registry to treat the anonymous petition along with the subsequent petition received in the court as petitions praying for an order for proper investigation and register the same as a suo motu criminal miscellaneous case. The Registry complied with said directions. Thereafter the High Court passed the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Here is a case where no information has been given to the police by any informant alleging commission of any cognizable offence by the appellant and the persons associated with the appellant institution. It is a peculiar case of its own kind where an anonymous petition is sent directly in the name of a Judge of the High Court, which was suo motu taken up as a proceeding under Section 482 CrPC. The High Court ought not to have entertained such a petition for taking the same on file under Section 482 CrPC. (Para 54). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

(4) Alternative remedy/Exhaustion of remedies/Jurisdictional bar

[7087] — S. 482 — Maintainability of application under — Statutory appeal pending — Held, not barred due to pendency of appeal before tribunal under Smugglers and Foreign Exchange Manipulators (Forfeiture of Property) Act, 1976 against forfeiture of properties. Union of India v. Haji Mastan Mirza, (1984) 2 SCC 427: 1984 SCC (Cri) 271: AIR 1984 SC 681: 1984 Cri LJ 610: (1984) 2 ECC 137.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, A. Varadarajan and Ranganath Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-1984]

[7088] — S. 482 — Exercise of power under — Stay of proceedings under Forest Act — Held, High Court in exercise of such power erred in staying proceedings under S. 44(2-A) of A.P. Forest Act, 1967 merely because of subsequent initiation of prosecution under S. 45 of that Act. Divl. Forest Officer v. G.V. Sudhakar Rao, (1985) 4 SCC 573: 1986 SCC (Cri) 34: AIR 1986 SC 328.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and D.P. Madon, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1985]

[7089] — S. 482 — Exercise of power under, where bar of jurisdiction of criminal court in the matter concerned existing under the relevant Act — Legality — Confiscation proceeding before authorised officer under Forest Act — Interim release of vehicles involved in forest offence during pendency of — Direction in respect of, made by High Court exercising jurisdiction under S. 482 — Held, not justified — Forest Act, 1927 — S. 52 [as amended by W.B. Act 22 of 1988, S. 10] and Ss. 59-A to 59-G [as inserted by W.B. Act 22 of 1988, S. 17]

The High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in releasing the vehicles in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. Once a confiscation proceeding is initiated in terms of Section 59-G of the Act, the jurisdiction of the criminal court in this behalf stands excluded. The criminal court although indisputably has the jurisdiction to deal with the property which is the subject-matter of offence in terms of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure but once a confiscation proceeding is initiated, the said power cannot be exercised by the Magistrate. (Paras 41 and 31). State of W.B. v. Sujit Kumar Rana, (2004) 4 SCC 129: 2004 SCC (Cri) 984: AIR 2004 SC 1851.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2004]

Divisional Forest Officer v. G.V. Sudhakar Rao, (1985) 4 SCC 573: 1986 SCC (Cri) 34; State of W.B. v. Gopal Sarkar, (2002) 1 SCC 495: 2002 SCC (Cri) 161; State of Karnataka v. K.A. Kunchindammed, (2002) 9 SCC 90: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1085; Section Forester v. Mansur Ali Khan, (2004) 1 SCC 293; Shambhu Dayal Agarwala v. State of W.B., (1990) 3 SCC 549: 1990 SCC (Cri) 489; Dy. Commr., Dakshina Kannada District v. Rudolph Fernandes, (2000) 3 SCC 306: 2000 SCC (Cri) 632, followed

[7090] — S. 482 — Inherent jurisdiction cannot be exercised if an enactment contains a specific bar — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19(3)(c)

Per Variava, J.

Section 19(3)(c) Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 provides:

(a) that no court should stay the proceedings under the Act on any ground, and

(b) that no court shall exercise the powers of revision in relation to any interlocutory order passed in any inquiry, trial, appeal or other proceedings.

The latter part of clause (c) of Section 19(3) as stated in (b) above is identical to Section 397(2) CrPC which deals with the revisional power of the court. If Section 19 was only to deal with revisional powers then the portion set out in (b) above would have been sufficient. The legislature has, therefore, by adding the words "no court shall stay the proceedings under this Act on any other ground" clearly indicated that no stay could be granted by use of any power on any ground. This therefore would apply even where a court is exercising inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. (Para 14)

(4) Alternative remedy/Exhaustion of remedies/Jurisdictional bar (contd.)

Further, Section 482 CrPC starts with the words "Nothing in this Code". Thus the inherent power can be exercised even if there was a contrary provision in the Criminal Procedure Code. Section 482 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not provide that inherent jurisdiction can be exercised notwithstanding any other provision contained in any other enactment. Thus if an enactment contains a specific bar then inherent jurisdiction cannot be exercised to get over that bar. (Para 15)

There is no substance in the submission that Section 19 would not apply to a High Court. Section 5(3) of the said Act shows that the Special Court under the said Act is a Court of Session. Therefore the power of revision and/or the inherent jurisdiction can only be exercised by the High Court. (Para 16)

Since in a large number of cases stays have been granted by the High Courts in matters under the Prevention of Corruption Act, even though there is a specific bar against the grant of any stay the Registrars of all the High Courts are directed to list all cases in which such stay is granted before the Court concerned so that appropriate action can be taken by that Court in the light of this decision. The Registrar of the Supreme Court is directed to send a copy of this order to the Registrars of all the High Courts. (Para 20)

Per Thomas, J. (concurring)

Clause (b) of Section 19(3) contains the prohibition against stay of proceedings under this Act, but it is restricted to the sanction aspect alone. The mere fact that yet another prohibition was also tagged with the above does not mean that the legislative ban contained in clause (c) is restricted only to a situation when the High Court exercises powers of revision. It would be a misinterpretation of the enactment if a court reads into clause (c) of Section 19(3) a power to grant stay in exercise of the inherent powers of the High Court. (Paras 26 and 28)

The prohibition contained in clause (c) of Section 19(3) is couched in a language admitting of no exception whatsoever. When Parliament imposed an undiluted ban against granting stay of any proceedings involving an offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 on any ground whatsoever, no court shall circumvent the said ban through any means. The reason which prompted Parliament to divest all the courts in India of the power to stay the proceedings in the trial courts involving any such offence, is to foreclose even the possible chance of delaying such trials on account of any party to such proceedings raising any question before the High Court during the pendency of trial proceedings. (Para 22). Satya Narayan Sharma v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 607: 2002 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2001 SC 2856.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2001]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Indra Sawhney v. Union of India, (2000) 1 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (L&S) 1, relied on

ITO v. M.K. Mohd. Kunhi, AIR 1969 SC 430: (1969) 2 SCR 65, distinguished [7091] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Scope — Limits of — Alternative remedy — Availability of — Effect — Held, inherent power has to be exercised sparingly with circumspection and in rare cases and that too to correct patent illegalities or when some miscarriage of justice is done — Practice of High Courts in entertaining petitions under S. 482, when there was an effective alternative remedy available, deprecated — Ends of justice would be better served if valuable time of the Court is spent in hearing those appeals rather than entertaining petitions under S. 482 CrPC at an interlocutory stage which are often filed with some oblique motive in order to circumvent the prescribed procedure, as in the instant case, or to delay the trial which enable the accused to win over the witnesses by money or muscle power or they may become disinterested in giving evidence, ultimately resulting in miscarriage of justice (Paras 7, 8 and 13). Hamida v. Rashid, (2008) 1 SCC 474: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 234: (2007) 54 AIC 19 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 3422: (2008) 105 Cut LT 410: (2007) 4 All LJ 206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2007]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; State v. Navjot Sandhu, (2003) 6 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1545, relied on

[7092] — S. 482 — Maintainability of petition under — Alternative remedy/Exhaustion of remedies — Bail granted to accused for alleged offences under Ss. 324, 352 and 506 IPC (bailable offences) on the same day (13-6-2005) they were arrested and produced before the CJM for seeking remand — He, however, clarifying that if the case was converted into a more serious offence, the accused would not get any benefit of the bail being granted to them — Victim succumbing to injuries on night intervening 16-6-2005/17-6-2005 — Offence thereafter converted into S. 304 IPC —

Petition filed by respondent-accused under S. 482 seeking a direction to CJM to permit them to remain on same bail even after conversion of the offence into one under S. 304 IPC, allowed by impugned order — Held, petition could not have been entertained when there was specific provision (S. 439) in CrPC for redressal of the grievance of the aggrieved party

The respondent-accused could have applied for bail afresh after the offence had been converted into one under Section 304 IPC. They deliberately did not do so and filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC in order to circumvent the procedure whereunder they would have been required to surrender as the bail application could be entertained and heard only if the accused were in custody. No order adverse to the respondent-accused had been passed by any court nor was there any miscarriage of justice or any illegality. In such circumstances, the High Court committed manifest error of law in entertaining a petition under Section 482 CrPC and issuing a direction to the subordinate court to accept the sureties and bail bonds for the offence under Section 304 IPC. The effect of the order passed by the High Court is that the accused after getting bail in an offence under Sections 324, 352 and 506 IPC on the very day on which they were taken into custody, got an order of bail in their favour even after the injured had succumbed to the injuries and the case had been converted into one under Section 304 IPC without any court examining the case on merits, as it stood after conversion of the offence. The procedure laid down for grant of bail under Section 439 CrPC, though available to the respondent-accused, having not been availed of, the exercise of power by the High Court under Section 482 CrPC is clearly illegal and the impugned order passed by it has to be set aside. (Para 10)

Further, charge under Sections 302/34 was framed against the respondent-accused by the trial court and some subsequent orders were passed by the High Court by which the accused were ordered to remain on bail for the offence under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC on furnishing fresh sureties and bail bonds only on the ground that they were on bail in the offence under Section 304 IPC. These orders also deserve to be set aside on the same ground. (Para 11)

The respondent-accused directed to be taken into custody and made clear that it will be open to the respondent-accused to apply for bail for the offences for which they are charged before the appropriate court and in accordance with law. (Para 12). Hamida v. Rashid, (2008) 1 SCC 474: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 234: (2007) 54 AIC 19 (SC): 2007 Cri LJ 3422: (2008) 105 Cut LT 410: (2007) 4 All LJ 206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2007]

Arun Shankar Shukla v. State of U.P., (1999) 6 SCC 146: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1076, relied on [7093] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Cognizance of offence by criminal court not barred under the RBI Act — Criminal proceedings, hence, not quashed — Offence under Ss. 420 and 120-B IPC, as well as S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act — Held, taking cognizance of criminal proceedings is not barred under the RBI Act — Bar under Ss. 45-QA and 58-E of the RBI Act applies only to offences committed under the RBI Act — High Court, held, rightly acted by not quashing the order of cognizance taken by the criminal court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420 and 120-B — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, Ss. 45-QA and 58-E. Prudential Capital Mkt. Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (2000) 9 SCC 539: 2001 SCC (Cri) 644: AIR 2000 SC 3668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2000]

[7094] — Ss. 482, 190, 228, 240 and 246 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Relevant considerations — Consideration of the relevant statute to decide whether it provided complete immunity to the accused from prosecution — Permissibility of — Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme, 1998, S. 91 [of Finance (No. 2) Act, 1998]

In the present case, the High Court came to the conclusion that it was permissible to look into the Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme (KVSS), 1998 (which granted immunity from prosecution for any offence under any direct/indirect tax enactment on settlement of tax dues) to decide as to whether the present prosecution was legally launched or not and could continue or not. The Public Prosecutor argued that for the purposes of framing charges under the provisions of CrPC what could be seen was the material produced by the prosecution in charge-sheet and no other material. Therefore, the High Court could not have looked into the KVSS, 1998.

Held :

The High Court was right in examining the KVSS, 1998 to decide whether it provided complete immunity from the prosecution since that was the mainstay of the appellants' attack against the prosecution. (Para 17). M. Natarajan v. State, (2008) 8 SCC 413: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 507: (2008) 226 ELT 679.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

(5) Procedure re filing of application under/Delay/laches

[7095] — S. 482 — Quashing of charges — Delay in filing of petition for — Condonation of — Propriety — Respondent approaching High Court after the order of discharge passed in favour of the main accused attained finality in 1994 as a result of dismissal of SLP by Supreme Court — In such circumstances, held, High Court rightly condoned the delay — No illegality or perversity in the exercise of power by High Court (Para 6). CBI v. Akhilesh Singh, (2005) 1 SCC 478: AIR 2005 SC 268: 2005 All LJ 195.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-2004]

(6) Proper mode of disposal/Exercise of power under/Matters to be considered

See also Section 482, '(11)(vi) Quashment of proceedings — Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered', below

[7096] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Mode of exercise of — Held, have to be exercised sparingly and judiciously and only for the purposes mentioned in S. 482 in most appropriate cases. Mary Angel v. State of T.N., (1999) 5 SCC 209: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1296: AIR 1999 SC 2245: 1999 Cri LJ 3513.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1999]

[7097] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court under — Ingredients required for exercising — Held, while exercising inherent powers under S. 482, High Court must be satisfied that either: (i) an order passed under CrPC would be rendered ineffective; or (ii) process of any court would be abused; or (iii) ends of justice would not be secured (Para 7). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

[7098] — S. 482 — High Court not justified in going into the merits of the case when exercising inherent jurisdiction — CrPC, 1898, S. 561-A. Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Ashutosh Ghosh, (1979) 4 SCC 381: 1979 SCC (Cri) 991: AIR 1979 SC 1195.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1979]

[7099] — S. 482 — Plenary power of High Court — Exercise of, is vitiated when based on irrelevant or extraneous considerations

Every court has its plenary powers to deliberate upon every issue agitated before it as well as any other issue arising on the materials placed before it in the manner known to law after giving a prior notice and affording an opportunity of being heard. This power of discharging the statutory functions whether discretionary or obligatory should be in the interest of justice and confined within the legal permissibility. In doing so, the Judge should disengage himself of any irrelevant and extraneous materials which come to his knowledge from any source other than the one presented before him in accordance with law and which are likely to influence his mind one way or the other. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171: AIR 1993 SC 1082: 1993 Cri LJ 859.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-1992]

[7100] — S. 482 — Disposal of petition under, by a cryptic and unreasoned order, held, not justified — Matter remitted to High Court for fresh disposal with a direction to pass a reasoned order (Paras 4 and 5). Manjit Kaur v. State of Punjab, (2005) 12 SCC 310.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-2005]

(7) Exercise of power/Directions in matters other than quashment of proceedings

[7101] — S. 482 — Interlocutory order — Ineffectual and/or needless interference by High Court must be avoided — Terrorist attack on Parliament — Terrorists shot dead — Telephone numbers recovered from them — Communication intercepted thereby, during course of investigation — Prosecution using intercepted communication as evidence — Accused-respondents H, S and N filing Criminal Misc. Appln., appeal under S. 34 POTA r/w S. 482 CrPC and petition under S. 482 CrPC r/w Arts. 226 and 227 respectively to challenge the interlocutory order passed by Special Court which dismissed the applications made by respondents for eschewing/exclusion of evidence relating to intercepted communication — Single Judge of High Court setting aside the interlocutory order of Special Judge — But by that time the evidence had already been recorded and no abuse of process of court could then be prevented — Even ends of justice did not warrant interference at that stage — Matter should have been relegated for statutory appeal after final hearing — So, on facts, there was no miscarriage of justice or palpable illegality which justified interference by the High Court

On facts, the order dated 11-7-2002 passed by the Special Judge was clearly an interlocutory order. The order of the Special Judge is based on an interpretation of the various provisions of POTA. The Special Judge undoubtedly had authority and jurisdiction to interpret the various provisions of POTA and other laws. The Special Judge had jurisdiction to decide whether the evidence collected by interception could be used for proving a charge under POTA. The Special Judge was acting within the limits of his authority in passing the impugned order. Neither the power under Article 227 nor the power under Section 482 enabled the High Court to correct an error in interpretation even if the High Court felt that the order of the Special Court was erroneous. Even if the High Court did not agree with the correctness of that order, the High Court should have refused to interfere as the order could be corrected in the appeal under Section 34 POTA. To be remembered that by the time the impugned order was passed, the evidence had already been recorded. Thus there was no abuse of process of court which could now be prevented. Even the ends of justice did not require interference at this stage. In fact the ends of justice required that the statutory intent of Section 34 POTA be given effect to. The High Court should have directed the respondents to raise all such points in the statutory appeal, if any required to be filed, under Section 34 POTA. If in the appeal the Division Bench felt that the order was not correct or that it was erroneous it would set aside the order, eschew the evidence and not take the same into consideration. Thus no prejudice was being caused or would be caused to the respondents. Their rights were fully protected as per the provisions of POTA. At this stage there was no miscarriage of justice or palpable illegality which required immediate interference. Thus, even if powers under Article 227 or under Section 482 could have been exercised, this was a case where the High Court should not have exercised those powers. (Paras 30 and 31). State v. Navjot Sandhu, (2003) 6 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1545: (2003) 104 DLT 794.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2003]

[7102] — S. 482 — Direction to fail authorities as to proper treatment in jail — Convicts of tender age found guilty of dacoity — Action of accused motivated by sincere but misguided attempt to relieve the poor — Proper sentence and proper treatment in jail needed — Direction to jail authorities under S. 482 given

The court has responsibility to see that punishment serves social defence which is a validation of deprivation of citizen's liberty. Correctional treatment with a rehabilitative orientation is an imperative of modern penology which has abandoned jus talionis. A hospital setting and a humanitarian ethos must pervade our prisons if the retributive theory, which is but vengeance in disguise, is to disappear and deterrence as a punitive objective gain success not through the hardening practice of inhumanity inflicted on prisoners but by reformation and healing whereby the creative potential of the prisoner is unfolded. These values have their roots in Art. 19 of the Constitution which sanctions deprivation of freedoms provided they render a reasonable service to social defence, public order and security of the State. By cruel treatment within the cell the psyche of the accused is injured and the injury never improves. Therefore, within the jail, the seven appellants shall not be treated with any tinge of brutality — a caveat which has become necessary when it is remembered that they are treated as 'Naxalites' and the witnesses who have given evidence against them have been hurriedly rewarded officially by the Chief Minister. The writ of the rule of law, runs within the jail system and it shall not permit inhumanity. On appropriate motion made to the court showing violation of the residual rights of the prisoner by unnecessary cruelty and unreasonable impositions and denials and deprivations within the prison setting, the judicial process will call to order the prison authorities and make them respect the fundamental rights of the appellants. More importantly these adolescents, when ushered into jail with sex-starved inmates, become homosexual offerings with nocturnal dogfights. These unspeakable prison facts perhaps receive indifferent attention on Home Ministry files, but must weigh with the court in inducing it to direct that the young appellants are separated dusk to dawn from sadistic adults. Hence, these prisoners must be oriented on a human course, be treated as 'B' class prisoners, allowed opportunities of improving themselves and nourishing their minds with wholesome reading so that on return thence they turn a new leaf retaining the flavour of their self-sacrificing spirit to change 'the sorry scheme of things entire' but without blood-letting barbarities and boomeranging terrorism. Prison justice is part of social justice.

The fact that in another State under the same circumstances, the accused would have been treated as 'children' has a vicarious impact on the sentencing discretion. Lingala Vijay Kumar v. Public Prosecutor, (1978) 4 SCC 196: 1978 SCC (Cri) 579: AIR 1978 SC 1485: 1978 Cri LJ 1527.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer, D.A. Desai and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-1978]

(7) Exercise of power/Directions in matters other than quashment of proceedings (contd.)

[7103] — S. 482 — Application for extension of time for the payment of fine imposed by the court — Where the first application for the said relief was rejected, filing of two more applications for extension of time, which also stood dismissed, held, was not proper — However, even though the accused was ill-advised to file so many applications after each rejection, appeal allowed granting one month's time to make the deposit of fine — Penal Code, 1860, S. 324. Mahendra Singh v. State of Bihar, (2002) 10 SCC 678: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1158: AIR 2002 SC 387.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2001]

[7104] — S. 482 — Compensation — Claim petition under S. 482 misconceived — Belated claim, when not fatal — Petition under S. 482 claiming compensation of Rs 3 lakhs for permanent disability (amputation of hand above forearm) as a result of bullet injuries sustained by respondent during terrorist upsurge in State of Punjab — Claim made in addition to "special ex gratia grant" of Rs 20,000 provided by State Govt. for such disability sustained "in terrorist violence/security forces acting in aid of civil power" as also Rs 3378 as medical expenses — Claim made 10 years after payment of these amounts by Govt. — Respondent since appointed as a Chowkidar in a govt. school — High Court directed State Govt. to pay a further sum of Rs 80,000 to respondent within 3 months in final settlement of the claim — Held, claim misconceived, as it was claimed under S. 482 CrPC and not in a writ petition — However, belated approach not to be treated as fatal — In view of "special ex gratia grant" fixing limit of the amount to be paid under the Govt. notification, question of respondent making any claim in terms of the notification for a higher amount did not arise — But the medical expenses paid were low compared to the normal expenses which appear to have been spent for operations and treatment; hence respondent entitled to Rs 20,000 towards medical expenses — An additional amount of Rs 17,000 shall be paid to respondent within two months in view of the claim made by him — Constitution of India — Arts. 226, 136 and 134. State of Punjab v. Kuldip Singh, (2007) 6 SCC 218: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 68: 2007 Cri LJ 3751: (2007) 56 AIC 265 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-6-2007]

[7105] — S. 482 — During pendency of civil suit for injunction petitioner filing an application under, before the High Court alleging that he was dispossessed with the help of police while giving effect to ad interim injunction order — Direction for police assistance issued — Similar directions issued on petitioner's contempt petition — Civil court granting absolute injunction in favour of the petitioner — Appeal against such order pending before the appellate court — Held, orders passed by the High Court have become infructuous — In view of subsequent events namely, passing of absolute injunction and pendency of appeal against said order appellate court directed to dispose of the matter without being influenced by the order of the High Court. Govindamma v. Veluswami, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 758: AIR 1994 SC 751: 1994 Cri LJ 256.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-3-1993]

[7106] — S. 482 — Exercise of power by High Court under, when justified — Film producer utilising deposits made by public in his investment company for production of film — On closure of the investment company film remaining unfinished — Semi-processed film and negatives seized by police during investigation in criminal case against accused — Held, High Court justified in invoking power under S. 482 for directing handing over the semi-processed film and negatives to another experienced producer and willing producer having regard to various factors including requirement of further investments and expertise — High Court's refusal to hand over the semi-processed film and negatives to the accused- producer for completing the film also justified as accused had no funds and as factors of prudence and equity constitute sufficient deterrents for taking the risk of accepting accused's prayer. Sajan K. Varghese v. State of Kerala, (1989) 2 SCC 208: 1989 SCC (Cri) 339: AIR 1989 SC 1058: (1989) 2 KLT 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak, C.J. and S. Natarajan, J. [Date of decision: 15-2-1989]

[7107] — Ss. 482 and 24 — High Court rejecting the prayer for change of prosecutor, in exercise of its inherent powers — Applicability — No further challenge to the said order — Hence, held, the order attained finality and could not be assailed before the Supreme Court — More so when the appointment had been unsuccessfully challenged in a separate proceeding and was not incidental to the present proceedings — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Paras 6 and 7). Varada Rama Mohana Rao v. State of A.P., (2004) 4 SCC 427: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1289.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2004]

Satyadhyan Ghosal v. Deorajin Debi, AIR 1960 SC 941: (1960) 3 SCR 590, distinguished

[7108] — S. 482 — Nature of power under — Release of property confiscated under PCA — Whether can be released on deposit of appropriate amount — Appellants' father convicted by trial court and punished with imprisonment of one year and fine of Rs 20,000 — Certain items of property, including a house, directed to be sold by public auction and sale proceeds to be taken by the State — Father dying during pendency of appeal — However, High Court in due course sustaining the conviction though the sentence of imprisonment stood abated due to death — Legal heirs filing application under S. 482 CrPC for release of confiscated items on account of their sentimental attachment with them and offering to deposit Rs 6 lakhs plus, or such other sum as considered appropriate by court — Application dismissed by High Court on the ground that it had no power under S. 482 CrPC to pass such order — Held, the present value and not the past value of the seized property was relevant — High Court rightly rejected appellants' prayer — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 16, 13(2) and 13(1)(e) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) proviso (Para 7). N. Naveen Kumar v. State of A.P., (2008) 9 SCC 800: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 880.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2008]

[7109] — S. 482 — Scope of High Court's jurisdiction under — Magistrate's order to release the goods seized by Sales Tax Authorities in favour of respondent subject to furnishing a personal bond — High Court passing order under S. 482 modifying the Magistrate's order to the extent that respondent shall not be required to furnish the bond — Pursuant to a subsequent application under S. 482 filed by respondent, order passed by High Court directing appellants not to search and seize the goods and not to interfere with the functioning of business of respondent — Held, order beyond jurisdiction of High Court — Such order could be passed in exercise of its writ jurisdiction and not under S. 482

Pursuant to a prayer made by the respondent the Magistrate passed an order directing release of certain goods, seized by Sales Tax authorities, in favour of the respondent subject to his furnishing a personal bond of Rs one lakh. The respondent filed an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court praying that the part of the order of the Magistrate by which the respondent was required to file the personal bond be quashed and that the Magistrate be directed not to compel him to file the said bond and the opposite party be directed that they may check and seize the goods only after delivery of the goods to the consignee by the respondent. The High Court allowed the application and modified the order of the Magistrate to the extent that the respondent shall not be required to file the personal bond. After disposal of that application, the respondent moved another application for modification of the order of the High Court made under Section 482 praying that the appellants be restrained from conducting search and seizure of the goods prior to their delivery to the consignees and also restraining from interfering with the functioning of the Agency in which he was a partner. The High Court allowed the application and passed an order accordingly. In the present appeal the appellant State questioned the subsequent order passed by the High Court under Section 482.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

After the High Court allowed the first application of the respondent under Section 482 CrPC directing that the respondent shall not be required to furnish the personal bond, nothing further remained to be done. In the garb of an application for modification of that order, the respondent could not file an application which was in effect a review application praying for other reliefs. Yet the High Court passed an order directing the appellants not to search and seize the goods and not to interfere with the Agency. These are matters which were entirely beyond the scope of the application under Section 482 CrPC and beyond the jurisdiction of the High Court exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. It does not arise out of any order passed by a court, nor was there any allegation of abuse of the process of the court, nor was it a case of manifest injustice caused to a party. A direction like the one which the High Court has given in its impugned order could be given by the High Court in exercise of its writ jurisdiction in an appropriate case and not under Section 482 CrPC. In any event, since the application under Section 482 stood disposed of, the review of that order by the High Court in the garb of modifying that order is wholly unwarranted. (Para 8). State of U.P. v. Surendra Kumar, (2005) 9 SCC 161.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2004]

[7110] — Ss. 482, 144 and 145 — Abuse of the process of court — Appellants put in possession of house in execution of eviction decree with the aid of police force — But respondent 4 continuing to assert his possession and filing a title suit — Pursuant to a firing

(7) Exercise of power/Directions in matters other than quashment of proceedings (contd.)

incident proceeding under S. 144 drawn up by SDM and both the parties restrained from entering upon the property but later appellants allowed to take possession — Three months thereafter application moved by respondent 4 for initiating proceedings under S. 145 but the same dismissed in view of delivery of possession to appellants in execution of the eviction decree and the order becoming final in absence of challenge — Application then made by respondent 4 under S. 482 before High Court substantially for the same relief as claimed before SDM — High Court directing that the house shall be in possession of police till disposal of a title suit of respondent 4 — Held, application was a gross abuse of process of court and hence High Court's order liable to be set aside. Ravi Raman Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1993) 2 SCC 3: 1993 SCC (Cri) 489: AIR 1994 SC 109: (1993) 1 Crimes 709.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: L.M. Sharma, C.J. and K. Ramaswamy and N. Venkatachala, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-1993]

[7111] — Ss. 482, 148(3), 342, 359, 357, 358 and 227 — Inherent powers of High Court — Scope — Power to award costs if included — Frivolous and vexatious petition — Held, S. 482 is independent of other provisions of the Code — Where no express power is available to do a particular thing but the existence of such power is not negated by the express provisions either, held, High Court can exercise inherent powers for doing justice according to law — Hence, although under CrPC the specific provisions for awarding costs are only Ss. 148(3), 342 and 359, held, in appropriate cases High Court can award costs for the purposes of S. 482, albeit this jurisdiction is to be exercised sparingly and judiciously — Maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius" cannot be applied to deny such power to High Court — On facts, High Court's order imposing exemplary costs of Rs 10,000 on each of the applicants while rejecting their frivolous/vexatious application under S. 482, upheld — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A, 406, 420 and 315 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4

Consequent to an FIR and investigation pursuant thereto, a charge-sheet was filed against the first informant's husband and five others under Sections 498-A, 406, 420, 315 IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. The case was committed to the Sessions Court. Four of the said five others were subsequently discharged by the trial court under Section 227 CrPC. In the revision case filed by the complainant, the High Court set aside the order of discharge and held that there was sufficient material to frame charges. Accordingly, the trial court framed charges against those four accused persons also. The said four persons then filed a revision case on the ground that there was no prima facie case for framing charges against them. While dismissing this revision case, the High Court observed that the proceedings had been dragged on for eight years and that the revisionists had suppressed the decision of the High Court in the complainants' revision case and had not, despite the High Court's direction to the trial court to finish the trial expeditiously, allowed the trial court to do so. The High Court, therefore, imposed costs of Rs 10,000 each on the appellants to be paid to the informant (complainant), and directed the trial court to dispose of the case within two months. In the instant appeal, the appellants (revisionists before the High Court) contended that the High Court had no jurisdiction to impose costs except as provided under Sections 148(3), 342 and 359 of the CrPC and that the inherent powers of the High Court could not be exercised contrary to the said provisions. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Section 482 CrPC stands independently from the other provisions of the Code and it expressly saves the inherent powers of the High Court. Therefore, to prevent abuse of the process of the court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice, the High Court is empowered to pass "such order" which may include order to pay costs to the informant (complainant) and the language of the section does not in terms place any fetter. This power is not conditioned or controlled by any other section nor is curtailed by any provisions which empower the court to award costs. (Paras 8 and 22)

If there is an express provision governing the particular subject-matter then there is no scope for invoking or exercising the inherent powers of the Court because the Court is required to apply, in the manner and mode prescribed, the provisions of the statute. But the highest court in the State could exercise inherent powers for doing justice according to law where no express power is available to do a particular thing and express power does not negative the existence of such power. It is true that under the Criminal Procedure Code, specific provisions for awarding costs are only Sections 148(3), 342 and 359 of the CrPC. At the same time, there is no specific bar that in no other case, costs could be awarded. Further, in view of provision for awarding costs under Section 59 in non-cognizable cases, it may be inferred that in a cognizable case and in an appeal or revision arising therefrom, the High Court cannot exercise its inherent power for awarding costs dehors the said provisions. But such an inference is not possible in cases where the High Court is exercising powers under Section 482. In cognizable cases also under Section 357 while awarding compensation out of the fine imposed on the accused, inter alia, the Court is required to take into consideration expenses properly incurred in the prosecution. Hence, exercise of such power would, on the contrary, be in conformity and not in conflict with the powers conferred under Sections 148(3), 342 and 357 or 359 of the CrPC. In appropriate cases, where it is necessary to pass such an order, the Court may award costs for the purposes mentioned in Section 482. (Paras 8, 12, 16 and 22)

The operation of the maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius" has to be restricted with regard to the sections which empower the Court to grant costs in certain cases by holding that for the cases mentioned in those sections, the Court cannot exercise its inherent jurisdiction of granting costs or pass an order of granting costs in a method and mode different from what is provided by the said sections. Application of this maxim in the present case would lead to inconsistency and injustice because in cases where the Court finds that a petition under Section 482 is an abuse of the process of law and an unjustifiable petition for some ulterior motive including dragging of the proceedings of the court, it can pass any other order, but not the order for costs. (Para 18). Mary Angel v. State of T.N., (1999) 5 SCC 209: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1296: AIR 1999 SC 2245: 1999 Cri LJ 3513.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-1999]

A.T. Sankaralinga Mudaliar v. Narayana Mudaliar, AIR 1922 Mad 502: 23 Cri LJ 583 (FB), overruled

Lasu Janu Pawar v. Emperor, AIR 1948 Bom 169: 49 Cri LJ 203; P. Veerappa Naidu v. Avudayammal, AIR 1925 Mad 438: 26 Cri LJ 707, impliedly overruled

Pampapathy v. State of Mysore, AIR 1967 SC 286: 1966 Supp SCR 477; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 2 SCR 336; Guardians of West Ham Union v. Churchwardens of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, 1896 AC 477: 75 LT 286; Bombay Civil Fund Act, 1882, Re, Pringle v. Secy. of State for India, (1888) 40 Ch D 288: 60 LT 796, relied on

State of Orissa v. Ram Chander Agarwala, (1979) 2 SCC 305: 1979 SCC (Cri) 462, explained and distinguished

[7112] — S. 482 — Abuse of the process of court — Forum shopping — Impermissibility — Imposition of costs — Obtaining ad interim order in a contempt application after failing to get such order in suit from the trial court and Division Bench of High Court, held, amounted to abuse of process of court and forum shopping and disentitled the person doing so to equity — Hence, such act condemned — Appeal dismissed with costs of Rs 50,000 — CPC, 1908, Ss. 151, 35 and 35-A — Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, Ss. 10 and 17

TM Bank Ltd. (the company) was incorporated and registered under the Companies Act, 1956. Members of the appellant Association held a large number of shares in the company. As its annual general meetings (AGM) for a number of years could not be held, a date was fixed for holding of the 82nd AGM. The appellant, however, filed a suit before a Single Judge of the High Court. In Tamilnad Mercantile Bank (1) case, (2008) 15 SCC 529 the Supreme Court directed the Single Judge to consider the application for grant of injunction filed by the appellants afresh on merits. It also allowed the Single Judge to issue necessary directions for the 83rd AGM including extension of time therefor.

The 83rd AGM was proposed to be held on a certain date. In the said suit, the Single Judge passed an order of injunction dated 26-7-2006 allowing the AGM to be held in respect of certain items of the agenda but to be adjourned in respect of items relating to election of new Directors in place of those retiring by rotation. The AGM was held complying therewith.

On an application filed by a party, the Board of Directors passed a resolution on 13-5-2007 to transfer a certain number of shares.

At the instance of the Bank, a Single Judge of the High Court by an order dated 27-3-2008: (i) appointed R, a retired High Court Judge to chair the 83rd, 84th and 85th AGMs, (ii) extended the time for the said AGMs up to 6-6-2008.

In a subsequent suit, challenging the transfer of a certain number of shares and seeking permanent injunction restraining the transferees thereof from exercising any rights as shareholders, the Single Judge by an order dated 29-4-2008, declined to postpone the AGM scheduled to be held on 5-6-2008 but added that any resolution passed therein should not be implemented until further orders of that Court. He added that disputes relating to the AGM would be dealt with only by that Court and none other. After consulting all the shareholders the AGM was held under the chairmanship of R on the scheduled date. The appellant had not submitted any petition at that stage but did so at a later stage.

The appellant filed an application in the said subsequent suit for an order of injunction restraining the election of Directors but prior to hearing thereof the AGM had already been held.

The appellant preferred an intra-court appeal against the order dated 29-4-2008 which was, in turn, dismissed by a Division Bench.

(7) Exercise of power/Directions in matters other than quashment of proceedings (contd.)

Thereafter, a contempt petition was filed against one G, the MD of the Bank for disobedience of the order of the Single Judge dated 26-7-2006. The contempt petition sought: (i) G to be punished for contempt, (ii) annulment of the 83rd, 84th and 85th AGMs on the ground of being contrary to the Court's order dated 26-7-2006. The said matter came up before another Single Judge. The orders passed by the earlier Single Judge from time to time were not disclosed therein. Therefore, the Single Judge passed an ad interim ex parte order restraining G, the MD from implementing the resolution or item of business in relation to the election of Directors passed at the AGM till the disposal of the contempt petition.

T and S who were elected in the AGM, preferred intra-court appeals under Section 19(1) of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 against the said order passed in the contempt petition. A Division Bench of the High Court held the said appeals to be maintainable. The appellant then filed the present appeal by special leave. The question involved in the appeal was whether the purported interim order passed by the Single Judge in contempt proceeding should have been interfered with or not by the Division Bench.

In the subsequent suit, noting that the plaintiff therein had obtained in the contempt petition the same relief which they had failed to get in the said suit, from the Single Judge, from the Division Bench and from the Supreme Court and that they had been concealing the said facts in the contempt case, the Single Judge held them to be disentitled to the equitable relief of injunction. A Division Bench upheld that order.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that (i) T and S being not a party to the contempt proceeding could not have maintained an appeal, (ii) an appeal under Section 19(1) of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 was not maintainable against an ad interim order of injunction, (iii) the ad interim order of injunction passed in the contempt case did not satisfy the test of a "judgment" and thus the Division Bench could not even have entertained an intra-court appeal.

The respondents contended (i) as an interim order of injunction was obtained upon suppression of facts, an intra-court appeal was maintainable both under Section 19(1) of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 as also under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent of the Madras High Court, (ii) no interference was called for with the impugned judgment as the appellant had taken recourse to forum shopping, and, the appellant being guilty of the abuse of the process of the court, was not entitled to any equitable relief.

Dismissing the appeals with costs assessed at Rs. 50,000,

Held :

The chain of events clearly show that although in the subsequent orders it was not expressly stated that it was in continuation of the earlier order dated 26-7-2006, undoubtedly agenda items relating to election of new Directors were allowed to be taken up in the 83rd Annual General Meeting resulting in the election of the Directors. (Para 29)

The High Court appointed R to chair the meeting. Strangely enough the contempt petition was filed against the Managing Director alone who had no role to play in the matter of holding of the meeting. Action of the Court was not sought for against R who acted as an officer of the Court. Full disclosure as regards the subsequent proceedings was not made therein. The contempt petition was taken up by a Judge who was not acquainted with the fact of the matter. (Para 31)

The orders of the High Court speak in two voices. The doctrine of amity or comity requires that different courts exercising separate jurisdiction pass similar orders. (Para 48)

It is also well settled that even an irregular order can be set aside by the same court or by a higher court. (Para 49)

Argument (i) of the appellant if accepted, would lead to strange results. Admittedly T and S were not parties to the suit. They were elected during the pendency of the suit, whether legally or otherwise. The order granting injunction against the Managing Director had affected their valuable right. They were elected for a limited period. The principle of corporate democracy demands that the Bank functions through its elected Directors. The endeavour on the part of the appellant had been to see that old Directors may continue despite the expiry of their tenure. When, however, day-to-day affairs of the Bank were left at the hands of the Managing Director and the two representatives of Reserve Bank of India, an attempt was made to see that the newly elected Directors do not assume their office. In this attempt the appellant has succeeded so far by adopting measures which amount to an abuse of process of court. (Paras 29 to 32)

The superior courts of the country must discourage forum shopping. A person seeking equity must do equity. A party cannot take recourse to a machination which amounts to abuse of process of court. (Para 51)

If two views are possible, a contempt petition would not lie. (Para 52)

Apart from the fact that the appellant did not approach the Court with clean hands and was thus not entitled to any equitable relief, the manner in which the interim order was passed by the Single Judge in the contempt proceedings was not justified. The suit related to the 83rd Annual General Meeting. The contempt application related to election of Directors of the Bank at the 83rd, 84th and 85th Annual General Meetings. Although the sub-application was directed to be posted for 23-7-2008 the order of injunction was not limited to that date. It was directed to continue till disposal of the contempt application; though it was stated earlier that the ad interim injunction was till 21-7-2008. It does not contain any reason. There is no finding as regards existence of a prima facie case. There is no finding that G had prima facie committed the contempt. The order is not a speaking one. Ordinarily a direction could not be issued in contempt proceedings without arriving at a finding as to how the Managing Director of the Bank could be said to have flouted the order. Indisputably, in view of the interim order dated 20-6-2008 the respondents were prejudiced. They were, thus, "persons aggrieved". As persons aggrieved they could move the higher court. If an interim order was passed wholly without jurisdiction, an appeal would lie thereagainst. In a situation where order has been passed adverse to the interest of the alleged contemnor an appeal would be maintainable particularly where a judgment has been passed by a court which is beyond its jurisdiction. (Paras 35, 37 and 40). Tamilnad Mercantile Bank Shareholders Welfare Assn. (2) v. S.C. Sekar, (2009) 2 SCC 784.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2008]

Lewis & Spelling: The Law of Injunctions, p. 10, referred to

Isaacs v. Robertson, 1985 AC 97: (1984) 3 WLR 705: (1984) 3 All ER 140 (PC); V.R. Dalal v. Yougendra Naranji Thakkar, (2008) 15 SCC 625; Udyami Evam Khadi Gramodyog Welfare Sanstha v. State of U.P., (2008) 1 SCC 560; Sushila Raje Holkar v. Anil Kak, (2008) 14 SCC 392; Municipal Corpn., Jabalpur v. Om Prakash Dubey, (2007) 1 SCC 373: (2007) 1 SCC (L&S) 256; Purshotam Dass Goel v. Justice B.S. Dhillon, (1978) 2 SCC 370: 1978 SCC (Cri) 195; R.N. Dey v. Bhagyabati Pramanik, (2000) 4 SCC 400; Midnapore Peoples' Coop. Bank Ltd. v. Chunilal Nanda, (2006) 5 SCC 399, relied on

D.N. Taneja v. Bhajan Lal, (1988) 3 SCC 26: 1988 SCC (Cri) 546; Ashoke Kumar Rai v. Ashoke Arora, 96 CWN 278; Ashis Chakraborty v. Hindusthan Lever Sramik Karmachari Congress, 96 CWN 673: (1992) 1 CHN 160, considered

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR

See also extensively under '(11) Quashment of proceedings', below

See also under Sections 155-159 in Vol. 1, pp. 390 et seq.

[7113] — S. 482 — Arrest and search by an officer not empowered or authorised, in violation of Ss. 41 and 42, ADPS Act being per se illegal would vitiate the trial — In such case powers under S. 482 CrPC can be invoked to quash the proceedings — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 41 & 42

The appellant was searched by the Excise Inspector, Devikulam. On the allegation of recovering "ganja" from his possession the appellant was taken into custody. Under Section 20(b)(i) of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 a charge was laid against him by the Excise Inspector whereas the statutory notification under which he became competent so to do, was issued by the Government of Kerala in GOMs No. 168/92/TD, authorising officers of and above the rank of Excise Inspectors of the Excise Department to file complaints under Section 36-A(1)(d) of the NDPS Act, on the ground that the Excise Inspector was not authorised to file the charge-sheet against the appellant and, therefore, the complaint was not maintainable, the appellant was discharged under Section 227 CrPC. The said Excise Inspector, Devikulam, however, filed a fresh charge-sheet against the appellant. The case was committed to the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge. The appellant filed a Crl. MC before the High Court of Kerala praying that the entire proceedings in sessions case be quashed. By the order under challenge the High Court dismissed the petition. Allowing the appeal and setting aside the order of the High Court, allowing the Crl. MC and quashing the proceedings in the sessions case,

Held :

No officer than an empowered officer can resort to Section 41(2) or exercise powers under Section 42(1) of the NDPS Act or make a complaint under clause (d) of sub-section (1) of Section 36-A of the NDPS Act. It follows that any collection of materials, detention or arrest of a person or search of a building or conveyance or seizure effected by an officer not being an empowered officer or an authorised officer under Section 41(2) of the NDPS Act, lacks sanction of law and is inherently illegal and as such the same cannot form the basis of a proceeding in respect of offences under Chapter IV of the NDPS Act and use of such a material by the prosecution vitiates the trial. (Para 16)

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

The power under Section 482 CrPC has to be exercised by the High Court, inter alia, to prevent the abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Where criminal proceedings are initiated based on illicit material collected on search and arrest which are per se illegal and vitiate not only a conviction and sentence based on such material but also the trial itself, the proceedings cannot be allowed to go on as it cannot but amount to abuse of the process of the court; in such a case not quashing the proceedings would perpetuate abuse of the process of the court resulting in great hardship and injustice to the accused. So, exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC to quash proceedings in a case like the one on hand, would indeed secure the ends of justice. (Para 18)

In the present case the search and recovery were by an officer who was not empowered so to do. If the proceedings in the instant case are not quashed, the illegality will be perpetuated resulting in grave hardship to the appellant by making him to undergo the ordeal of trial which is vitiated by the illegality and which cannot result in conviction and sentence. It is a fit case to exercise power under Section 482 CrPC to quash the impugned proceedings. (Para 20). Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42: AIR 2001 SC 137.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2000]

State of Punjab v. Baldev Singh, (1999) 6 SCC 172: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1080, distinguished

State of Punjab v. Balbir Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 299: 1994 SCC (Cri) 634, relied on

[7114] — S. 482 — Investigation — Persons authorised to carry out — Investigation if on facts was not by authorised officer — Pursuant to an information, case registered under Ss. 13(1)(e) and 13(2), PC Act, 1988 and investigation started by Deputy Superintendent of Police, SPE, but under order of Superintendent of Police, SPE, completed by Inspector (SPE) — The said order containing reasons for entrustment of investigation to the Inspector — Moreover, the time-lag (about two-and-a-half years in this case) between registration of FIR and the said order itself showing application of mind by the Superintendent of Police to the authorisation — In such circumstances, held, High Court erred in concluding that the investigation was not conducted by an officer authorised under S. 17, PC Act — Hence, High Court's order under S. 482 CrPC quashing the investigation and consequent proceedings, set aside — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 17 second proviso, 13(1)(e) & 13(2)

After receiving a secret information on 4-7-1992, it was found on verification that the respondent while posted as an officer in the Excise Department had earned moveable and immovable properties allegedly disproportionate to his known sources of income during the check period commencing from 1-1-1982 to 4-8-1992. Resultantly a case under Sections 13(1)(e) and 13(2) of the Act was registered against him. The initial investigation was conducted by a Deputy Superintendent of Police, Special Police Establishment, Gwalior and thereafter by an Inspector, SPE, who was stated to have been duly authorised by the Superintendent of Police, SPE, vide Order No. SPE/2766/94 dated 12-12-1994 issued under Section 17 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. After investigation, sanction was obtained and charge-sheet was filed. Exercising its powers under Section 482 CrPC, the M.P. High Court quashed the investigations and consequent proceedings on the ground that for the offence punishable under Section 13(1)(e) of the Act the investigation had not been conducted by an authorised officer in terms of Section 17 of the Act. Similar was the question involved in the connected cases.

Allowing the State's appeals,

Held :

Admittedly in the instant cases, even in the absence of the authority of the SP the investigating officer was in law authorised to investigate the offence falling under Section 13 of the Act with the exception of one under sub-section (1)(e) thereof. After registration of the FIR the Superintendent of Police is shown to be aware and conscious of the allegations made against the respondents, the FIR registered against them and pending investigations. The reasons for entrustment of investigation to the Inspector can be discerned from the order itself. The appellant State is, therefore, justified in submitting that the Superintendent of Police had applied his mind and passed the order authorising the investigation by an Inspector under the peculiar circumstances of the case. The High Court should not have construed liberally in favour of the accused the provisions of an Act which had been legislated to curb the illegal and corrupt practices of public officers. (Para 14)

The High Court was not right in holding that merely because the order of the Superintendent of Police was in typed pro forma that showed the non-application of mind or could be held to have been passed in a mechanical and casual manner. The order rather clearly indicates the name of the accused, the number of the FIR, the nature of the offence and power of the Superintendent of Police permitting him to authorise a junior officer to investigate. The time between the registration of the FIR and authorisation in terms of the second proviso to Section 17 shows further the application of mind and the circumstances which weighed with the Superintendent of Police to pass the order. (Para 15). State of M.P. v. Ram Singh, (2000) 5 SCC 88: 2000 SCC (Cri) 886: AIR 2000 SC 870: 2000 Cri LJ 1401.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2000]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, distinguished

[7115] — S. 482 — FIR — Second FIR — Quashment, refused — Second FIR covering partly the same subject-matter and period — Legality of such FIR and investigation pursuant thereto — If to be quashed — Offence under S. 13(1)(e) read with S. 13(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act — FIR against, in respect of the period 1-8-1978 to 24-8-1989 and investigation pursuant thereto culminating in submission of 'B' report which, after a public notice accepted by the trial court — Subsequently another FIR filed making the same allegation against the same officer for the period 1-8-1978 to 25-7-1995 — Such a second FIR, held, not by itself illegal — Hence, could not be quashed and investigation pursuant thereto could not be restrained under S. 482 — However, the investigating authority will have essentially to take into account the results of the earlier investigation — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(e) and 13(2)

The appellant was a Class I officer in the Karnataka Administrative Service. At the instance of the police, an FIR lodged against him under Sections 13(1)(e) and 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act in respect of check period of 1-8-1978 to 24-8-1989 alleging that he had assets disproportionate to his known sources of income. The Investigating Officer submitted a 'B' Report before the Special Judge, who after issuing a public notice inviting objections, accepted the report. On 25-7-1995 another FIR was filed at the instance of the police against the appellant in respect of the period 1-8-1978 to 25-7-1995 under the same provisions and making similar allegations. The appellant filed a petition under Section 482, CrPC before the Karnataka High Court seeking quashment of the second FIR on the ground that in view of the result of the earlier investigation the inclusion of the same check period in the second FIR was not proper. However, the High Court refused relief and observed that the second FIR contained a set of fresh allegations in respect of fresh alleged assets during a fresh check period. Disapproving of the said observations but otherwise approving of the High Court's decision,

Held :

There is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code or the Prevention of Corruption Act to sustain the appellant's contention that the present FIR itself is bad in law. There is no provision in the CrPC which debars the filing of an FIR and investigating into the alleged offences merely because for an earlier period, namely, 1-8-1978 to 24-8-1989, there was an FIR which was duly investigated into and culminated in a 'B' Form Report which was accepted by a competent court. At the same time, it has to be held that the conclusion of the High Court that the present proceeding relates to fresh alleged assets and a fresh check period is not wholly correct. Though the earlier period also could be a subject-matter of investigation for a variety of reasons like some assets not being taken into account or some materials brought during investigation not being taken into account, yet at the same time, the results of the earlier investigation cannot be totally obliterated and ignored by the investigating agency. But that cannot be a ground for quashing of the FIR itself and for injuncting the investigating authority to investigate into the offence alleged.

The appellant is right in contending that the assets which were valued in the earlier investigation proceeding at a particular value cannot be valued higher in the present proceedings unless any positive ground is there for such revaluation. M. Krishna v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 3 SCC 247: 1999 SCC (Cri) 397: AIR 1999 SC 1765.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-1999]

[7116] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Criminal writ petition seeking — High Court's view that writ jurisdiction need not be exercised as even if charge-sheet filed, remedies were open for seeking discharge from appropriate court — Writ petition pending for nine years in High Court — Proceedings arising out of the complaint having been stayed — High Court not correct in opining that writ jurisdiction cannot be exercised for quashing the FIR, though quashing of FIR to be resorted to rarely — After lapse of nine years, having regard to facts and circumstances of the case, held, it would not be fair not to examine grievance of the writ petitioner on the ground that they could seek discharge

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

if charge-sheet filed — Writ petition must be decided afresh on its own merits — Constitution of India — Art. 226. P.N. Poddar v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 15 SCC 705.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-2004]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on [7117] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Held, can be ordered when FIR does not disclose the offence alleged — FIR registered against Appellant 1, a constituted attorney and MD of Oxford University Press; Appellant 2, publisher and printer of the offending book; and author of the book alleging commission of offences under Ss. 153, 153-A and 34 IPC — Supreme Court directed in its earlier decision dated 15-4-2007 [(2007) 5 SCC 1] that as FIR did not disclose offences alleged therein, respondents shall not proceed against the author for those offences — Present two appellants seeking clarification about their position — Held, manifestly tenor and import of the judgment reported at (2007) 5 SCC 1 was to grant the same and identical relief to the appellants which was granted to the author, though by inadvertence or mistake names of appellants had not been recorded in the judgment — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 153, 153-A and 34 — Constitution of India — Arts. 226, 136 and 19(1)(a). Manzar Sayeed Khan v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 12 SCC 157.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and L.S. Panta and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-4-2009]

Manzar Sayeed Khan v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 5 SCC 1: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 417, clarified and followed [7118] — S. 482 — Power to quash FIR/charge-sheet — Scope — Held, said power is exercised by the court to prevent abuse of the process of law and court but such a power could be exercised only when the complaint filed by the complainant or the charge-sheet filed by the police did not disclose any offence or when the said complaint is found to be frivolous, vexatious or oppressive — Case law pertinent thereto discussed (Paras 14 to 25). Shakson Belthissor v. State of Kerala, (2009) 14 SCC 466: (2009) 80 AIC 192 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513, followed

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; Drugs Inspector v. Dr. B.K. Krishnaiah, (1981) 2 SCC 454: 1981 SCC (Cri) 487; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567, considered and relied on

Chunduru Siva Ram Krishna v. Peddi Ravindra Babu, (2009) 11 SCC 203: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1297; V.V.S. Rama Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 234: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 356, relied on [7119] — Ss. 482, 190 and 157 — Investigation and trial — Superior Court's inherent powers or writ jurisdiction to interfere with, when and how can be exercised — Legal position summarised — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 32 (Paras 16 to 20). S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Deepak Verma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2010]

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Shakson Belthissor v. State of Kerala, (2009) 14 SCC 466: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 1412; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516, relied on

[7120] — Ss. 482, 154, 190, 204 and 173 — Refusal to quash FIR — Arising of new cause of action for invocation of S. 482 CrPC after cognizance of offence is taken subsequent to filing of charge-sheet — Permissibility of

The High Court has refused to quash a first information report as a different standard therefor was required to be applied. However, when materials are collected and a charge-sheet is filed on the basis whereof the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence, the same would give rise to a new cause of action. An order taking cognizance of an offence on the basis of a charge-sheet filed by the investigating officer and/or directing issuance of summons on a complaint petition, would attract the provisions of Section 482 CrPC if a case has been made out for invocation thereof. (Para 26). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[7121] — S. 482 — Exercise of jurisdiction — Stay of proceedings — Bona fides of applicant — Non-appearance of accused applicant before trial court — Relevance — Held, a S. 482 application on plea that investigation not proper at instance of accused who did not choose to even appear before Sessions Judge before whom matter was pending, should immediately have put High

Court on guard before entertaining petition which had no bona fides whatsoever — Said application was liable to be dismissed straightaway (Paras 32 and 39). Virender Prasad Singh v. Rajesh Bhardwaj, (2010) 9 SCC 171: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1169: 2010 Cri LJ 4275: (2010) 95 AIC 182 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2010]

Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631, relied on

Rubabbuddin Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 2 SCC 200: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1006, distinguished on facts

[7122] — Ss. 482, 154 and 155 — Exercise of power under S. 482 to quash FIR which made out prima facie commission of offence — Impermissibility — Held, neither the jurisdiction under Art. 226 nor power under S. 482 CrPC can be exercised to quash an FIR which made out prima facie commission of offence — Penal Code, 1860, S. 279 — FIR under, prima facie indicating commission of offence by accused — Quashment of, by High Court under Art. 226 — Impermissibility — Bombay Animal Preservation Act, 1954 (72 of 1954), Ss. 5, 6 and 8 — Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1960, S. 11(1)(d)

Respondents 1 to 6, who had filed writ petition before the High Court, were not accused. Therefore, they could not have prayed for and, in fact, had not prayed to quash the FIR filed by Appellant 1 and the proceedings pursuant thereto. Prayer for quashing the FIR could have been made only by the accused, who had been named therein. But none of them had chosen to invoke jurisdiction of the High Court either under Section 482 CrPC or under Article 226 of the Constitution to get the FIR quashed. The quashing of FIR at the instance of third parties is unknown to law. Further, it is well settled that neither power under Section 482 CrPC nor jurisdiction under Article 226 can be exercised by the High Court to quash the complaint if prima facie commission of offences is made out. (Paras 20 and 19)

Appellant 1 had averred in his complaint that close to 2000 goats and sheep were being transported in eight trucks, in a cramped manner, denying them even food and water in the process that carrying of more than 200 animals in a truck was cruelty by itself. The complaint has been quashed without taking into account the contents thereof or discussing them. The examination of the complaint lodged by Appellant 1 prima facie indicates commission of offences mentioned therein by the accused. (Para 21)

Even before the investigation could be completed and report submitted to the competent court by the investigating agency, the High Court arrived at a premature conclusion that no offences under Section 279 IPC and under Sections 5, 6 and 8 of the Bombay Animal Preservation Act, 1954 were made out against the accused and quashed the criminal proceedings. Such a relief to the accused, who had not approached the High Court for quashing the FIR, could not have been granted in a petition filed by the owners of goats and sheep seeking custody of the livestock notwithstanding wide amplitude of power available under Article 226 of the Constitution. (Para 22)

The High Court has concluded that the offences as alleged in the FIR under Section 279 IPC and Section 11(1)(d) of the Act or Sections 5, 6 and 8 of the Bombay Animal Preservation Act, 1954 were not made out and also recorded another finding that excessive number of animals were carried in the vehicles due to which they were subjected to unnecessary pain and suffering. These findings are contradictory to each other in terms. (Para 24). Bharat Amratlal Kothari v. Dosukhan Samadkhan Sindhi, (2010) 1 SCC 234.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2009]

Dosukhan Samdakhan Sindhi v. State of Gujarat, 2009 Cri LR 101 (Mah & Guj), reversed

[7123] — Ss. 482, 157, 169, 170, 173 and 190 — Inherent power under S. 482 — Scope of — Interference with investigation — Suo motu invocation of S. 482 on basis of a letter to High Court — When permissible — Informant wife writing letter to High Court that police were inactive in not arresting all accused persons who were involved in murder of her husband — Informant wife also stating that main culprits were moving freely — Senior police officers at intervention of MLA discarding a supervision report implicating all accused persons and making a new report on the basis of polygraph test and alibi provided by MLA — Effect — High Court quashing second supervision report of senior officers and directing additional charge-sheet to be filed based on first supervision report — Whether within scope of S. 482 — Though normally courts cannot interfere, High Court in exercise of its inherent power under S. 482, held, can interfere with investigation to do justice to the parties — Suo motu invocation of power by High Court not interfered with

The High Court in exercise of inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC entertained a letter written by the informant wife of the deceased. The wife was aggrieved by the inaction of the police in not arresting all the accused persons who had murdered her husband. The supervisory report of the Additional SP was sufficient for the Magistrate to frame charges against all the accused persons. The polygraph test performed by the Additional SP confirmed the presence of all the accused persons who had participated in the assault with different types of weapons. Even the senior police officers accepted the same. The Additional SP was of the view that investigation of other twelve accused required thorough investigation. But later at the intervention of an MLA, the senior police officers conducted a second test and differed with the original test note of the Additional SP.

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

The Division Bench of the High Court by its impugned order strongly disapproved the role played by the MLA and senior police officers in interfering with the process of investigation. The Division Bench of the High Court, therefore, directed the appropriate authorities to take action against all the accused persons, according to law, based upon the supervision note issued by the Additional SP and quashed all actions taken on the basis of the test report of the IG of Police. Further directions were given to the investigating authority to act in accordance with the decision in Dinesh Dalmia case, (2007) 8 SCC 770, regarding filing of charge-sheet even if the accused persons had not been arrested.

It was submitted on behalf of the appellant-accused that the direction to file additional charge-sheet was contrary to the provisions of law and could not, therefore, be sustained.

Dismissing the appeal of the accused,

Held :

No interference is called for with the impugned order of the High Court. The High Courts in exercise of their inherent and plenary powers are entitled to intervene to set right the illegality and/or mala fide action on the part of the investigating authorities when it notices such illegality and/or mala fide action on the part of the investigating authorities. While the courts should not intervene in matters of investigation, which power, under the scheme of CrPC has been vested in the police authorities, an exception has also been made that in certain circumstances the court could intervene in order to do justice to the parties. The courts and in particular the High Courts, are the guardians of the life and liberty of the citizens and if there is any flavour of deliberate misuse of the authority vested in the investigating authority, the High Court or the Supreme Court may certainly step in to correct such injustice or failure of justice. (Paras 48 to 52)

The High Court, therefore, had power to interfere with the directions given by the Director General of Police to the Inspector General of Police to submit a fresh test note despite the supervisory report which had been submitted by the Additional SP indicating that a case had been made out to go to trial as against all the nineteen accused. Although the supervisory report submitted by the Additional SP had been duly accepted not only by the Inspector General of Police, but also by the Director General of Police, which was sufficient for the Magistrate to frame a charge against all the accused persons, a fresh direction was given to the Inspector General of Police, to submit a test note. Such a direction given after the intervention of an MLA who has gone to the extent of providing an alibi for two of the accused, J and S, claiming that they were present in his house when the incident had occurred, not only exudes an unpleasant flavour, but raises doubts about the bona fides of the police authorities at the highest level. In fact, it is on account of such intervention that initially charge was filed only against four of the accused and thereafter three more. No steps were taken as far as the remaining twelve accused were concerned and it is only when the action of the said MLA was questioned before the High Court, that charge was also filed against the remaining twelve accused persons. (Paras 49 and 50)

In the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case, it was necessary for such a direction to be given by the High Court in order to prevent an injustice from being done on account of the intervention of influential persons, which not only had the effect of negating the supervisory report of the Additional SP but also resulted in an attempt to shield some of the accused persons. (Para 53). Kedar Narayan Parida v. State of Orissa, (2009) 9 SCC 538.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2009]

Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: (1967) 3 SCR 668; Comptroller and Auditor General of India v. K.S. Jagannathan, (1986) 2 SCC 679: 1986 SCC (L&S) 345: (1986) 1 ATC 1; H.S. Bains v. State (UT of Chandigarh), (1980) 4 SCC 631: 1981 SCC (Cri) 93, relied on

[7124] — Ss. 482 and 156 — Interference by High Court under S. 482 during investigation by police — Limitations of — Overstepping limits of judicial interference — Impermissibility — Offences under Ss. 406/420 IPC — Held, it is statutory obligation and duty of police to investigate into crime and courts normally ought not to inter-

fere and guide investigating agency as to in what manner investigation has to proceed — Jurisdiction under S. 482 conferred on High Court has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution, only where such exercise is justified by the test laid down in provision itself — Herein, interference by High Court, without recording any reasons, with investigation, which is within exclusive domain of police, by virtually directing police to investigate case from a particular angle and take certain steps, which the police, depending upon evidence collected and host of other circumstances, may or may not have attempted to take in its discretion, held, was overstepping limits of judicial interference — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420

In the instant case, the respondent lodged an FIR against the appellants alleging commission of offences under Sections 406 and 420 IPC. The police, having registered the case against the appellants, commenced its investigation. Even while the investigation was in progress, for some inexplicable reasons, the respondent moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC, seeking directions to the police. The petition was filed within one week of registration of the crime, by which time the police had already started serious investigation. None of the appellants were impleaded as party-respondents to the petition filed under Section 482 CrPC. The State alone was impleaded as the respondent.

The High Court disposed of the same observing, inter alia, that it was obligatory on the part of the police to conduct investigation in accordance with law, including recording of statements from witnesses, arrest, seizure of property, perusal of various documents and filing of charge-sheet. The High Court accordingly directed the police to expedite and complete the investigation. The impugned order resulted in drastic consequences far-reaching in nature. Hence the present appeals.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

It is the statutory obligation and duty of the police to investigate into the crime and the courts normally ought not to interfere and guide the investigating agency as to in what manner the investigation has to proceed. The High Court, without recording any reason whatsoever, directed the police that it is obligatory on their part to record statements from witnesses, arrest, seize property and file charge-sheet. It is difficult to discern as to how such directions resulting in far-reaching consequences could have been issued by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, which also resulted in much harassment of the appellants. The High Court interfered with the investigation of crime, which is within the exclusive domain of the police, by virtually directing the police to investigate the case from a particular angle and take certain steps which the police, depending upon the evidence collected and host of other circumstances, may or may not have attempted to take any such steps in its discretion. (Paras 24, 25 and 31)

It is not necessary that every investigation should result in arrest, seizure of the property and ultimately in filing of the charge-sheet. The police, in exercise of its statutory power coupled with duty, upon investigation of a case, may find that a case is made out requiring it to file charge-sheet or may find that no case as such is made out. It needs no reiteration that the jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC conferred on the High Court has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution only where such exercise is justified by the test laid down in the provision itself. (Para 32)

There was no allegation of dereliction of any duty on the part of the investigating agency. There was also no allegation of any collusion and deliberate delay on the part of the investigating agency in the matter of investigation into the case, that had been promptly registered on the information lodged by the respondent. (Para 17)

The impugned order must be held to be an order passed overstepping the limits of judicial interference. Even in public interest litigation proceedings, appropriate directions may be issued and the purpose in issuing such directions is essentially to ensure performance of statutory duty by the investigating agency. The duty of the court in such proceedings is to ensure that the agencies do their duties in compliance with law. (Paras 28 and 29)

The High Court, in the instant case, did not even advert to the relevant facts. As stated in the order itself, it was more guided by the arguments made across the Bar that the police has not taken any steps to arrest the persons and seize the amounts involved in this case from the appellants though there is no such factual foundation as such laid in the petition. The High Court has altogether ignored the counter filed by the police that the police had already examined ten witnesses within a short span of time after the registration of crime and recorded their statements. (Para 30)

The submission made by the respondent that the High Court did not issue any directions but merely disposed of the petition with the observations reminding the police of its duty, is not impressive.

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

The question that arises for consideration is whether there was any occasion or necessity to make those "observations" even if they are to be considered to be observations and not any directions. It is not even remotely suggested that there was any deliberate inaction or failure in the matter of discharge of duties by the police. There was no allegation of any subversion of processes of law facilitating the accused to go scot-free nor is there any finding as such recorded by the High Court in its order. (Para 35)

For the aforesaid reasons, the impugned judgment of the High Court cannot be sustained, and hence, is set aside. (Para 42). D. Venkata- subramaniam v. M.K. Mohan Krishnamachari, (2009) 10 SCC 488: (2009) 82 AIC 245 (SC): (2009) 3 APLJ 205 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1943-44) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 2 SCR 52; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor Scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264; M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628, relied on

[7125] — S. 482 — Inherent power — Doctrine of — Nature and scope of High Court's power under — When can power be exercised

Exercise of power under Section 482 of the Code in a case of this nature is the exception and not the rule. The section does not confer any new powers on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of the Code. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. The courts, therefore, have inherent powers apart from express provisions of law which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon them by law. That is the doctrine which finds expression in the section which merely recognises and preserves inherent powers of the High Courts. (Para 7)

While exercising powers under the section, the Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. (Para 7). CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233: AIR 2006 SC 2872.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2006]

[7126] — S. 482 — Deficiency alleged in authorisation by Superintendent of Police authorising Inspector to investigation — Quashment on basis of — Sustainability — Quashing of proceedings was improper since impugned order was elaborate with reasons clearly discernible — Besides, High Court failed to take into consideration provisions of S. 19(3), PC Act — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 17 r/w Ss. 13(1)(e) & (2) and 19(3)

On the authorisation of Superintendent of Police, an FIR was registered against the respondent on 12-6-2000 in respect of offences punishable under Section 13(1)(e) read with Section 13(2) of the PC Act. Search was conducted in the house of the respondent on 15-6-2000/16-6-2000 and certain records and documents relating to the respondent, his son-in-law, his daughter and son were seized. By the impugned order the High Court accepted the Section 482 CrPC petition dated 11-7-2000 filed by the respondent and quashed the proceedings.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The second reason indicated by the High Court to quash the proceedings also has no substance. The question relates to the alleged deficiency in authorisation made by the Superintendent of Police authorising the Inspector to investigate the case. If one looks at the order passed, which formed the subject-matter of challenge in Ram Singh case, (2000) 5 SCC 88 it is crystal clear that the order passed in the present case by the Superintendent of Police is more elaborate and the reasons are clearly discernible. Even otherwise, the effect of Section 19(3) of the PC Act relating to prejudice has been completely lost sight of by the High Court. (Paras 13 and 16). Supdt. of Police, Karnataka Lokayukta v. B. Srinivas, (2008) 8 SCC 580: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 587: (2008) 69 AIC 49 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2008]

State of M.P. v. Ram Singh, (2000) 5 SCC 88: 2000 SCC (Cri) 886, relied on

[7127] — S. 482 — Where criminal proceedings are initiated on the basis of illicit material collected on search and arrest which are per se illegal and vitiate the trial itself, power under S. 482 can be exercised to quash the proceedings as continuance of such proceedings would amount to abuse of process of the court

The power under Section 482 CrPC has to be exercised by the High Court, inter alia, to prevent the abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Where criminal proceedings are initiated based on illicit material collected on search and arrest which are per se illegal and vitiate not only a conviction and sentence based on such material but also the trial itself, the proceedings cannot be allowed to go on as it cannot but amount to abuse of the process of the court; in such a case not quashing the proceedings would perpetuate abuse of the process of the court resulting in great hardship and injustice to the accused. So, exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC to quash proceedings in a case like the one on hand, would indeed secure the ends of justice. (Para 18). Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42: AIR 2001 SC 137.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2000]

[7128] — Ss. 482 and 173(8) — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Initially case not registered against appellant but subsequently having regard to fresh materials coming to light pursuant to a preliminary inquiry, case registered under S. 13(1)(d) of Prevention of Corruption Act and under S. 120-B IPC against persons including appellant — Registration of case, held on facts, not actuated by mala fides or extraneous considerations — Fresh facts having come to notice, investigating agency was justified in registering the case — High Court was justified in declining to interfere with the statutory functions of the investigating officer and to quash the criminal proceedings — Constitution of India — Art. 226

The appellant was the Chief Minister of the State of Kerala for the period 1991-95. Kerala State Civil Supplies Corporation entered into a contract with M/s Power & Energy Pvt. Limited, Singapore for the purchase of import of 15,000 MT of Palmolein. The Comptroller & Auditor General of India (CAG) submitted his report dated 11-2-1994 for the year ending on 31-3-1993. One V who was the opposition MLA in the Kerala Assembly raised the allegation of corruption with regard to import of Palmolein in the Assembly. One K, Chief Editor of a newspaper filed a petition in the High Court under Art. 226 for the issuance of appropriate direction directing the respondent State to conduct investigation and register appropriate crime against the persons guilty in the matter of import of Palmolein. The writ petition was dismissed. V then presented a first information report before the Superintendent of Police, Vigilance (Hqrs.) praying for registering a case for offences under Section 13(1)(c) and (d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and Sections 406, 409, 420, 201, 34 and 120-B IPC against the persons named therein which included the appellant as one of the accused persons. The Superintendent of Police informed that the Vigilance Department was not to initiate inquiry suo motu even when a complaint is made in person or in a signed petition. V thereupon filed a writ petition in the High Court praying for issuance of direction to the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Vigilance (Hqrs.) to register a crime case pursuant to the FIR lodged by him and to investigate the same in accordance with law. A Single Judge of the High Court referred to various documents attached with the FIR and found that as the complaint under Section 154 CrPC had not been filed before the officer in charge of the police station, the fifth respondent was not obliged to register a case. The writ petition was therefore, dismissed. The writ appeal filed against the order of the Single Judge was also dismissed by a Division Bench. The appellant laid down his office as Chief Minister in March 1995 whereafter elections to the State Assembly were held, in which the party and the Front of the appellant lost and the Left Democratic Front Government came into power on 20-5-1996. On 18-6-1996 the Commissioner-Secretary requested the Director of Vigilance, Investigation to submit inquiry report to the Government at the earliest after conducting a preliminary inquiry into the allegations raised in the Legislative Assembly pertaining to the Palmolein deal in which corruption worth crores of rupees had been alleged. The Superintendent of Police, Vigilance conducted a preliminary inquiry up to March 1997 whereafter a criminal case was registered under Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and under Section 120-B IPC against 7 persons including the appellant. The appellant filed a criminal miscellaneous case under Section 482 CrPC in the High Court praying therein that all proceedings pursuant to the aforesaid criminal case be quashed. The High Court dismissed the petition on the ground that as fresh matter had come into the notice of the investigating agency, there was no bar for it to register a case and conduct investigation. The present appeal has been filed against the aforesaid order of the High Court. Referring to letter dated 18-6-1996 filed as Annexure R-2 with the counter-affidavit in the Supreme Court, terming it to be actuated by extraneous considerations and assailing the government order dated 12-5-1992 (Annexure R-1) as illegal, the appellant prayed for quashing of the FIR and the subsequent proceedings initiated against him. It is submitted that the source of power for registering the FIR referable to the aforesaid government order being illegal and violative of the mandate of judgment of the Supreme Court in Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226 the appellant cannot be subjected to the harassment of a criminal trial. The impugned FIR is stated to be amounting to overriding the judgments of the High Court and the Supreme Court passed in earlier litigation praying for registration of the FIR against the appellant. The registration of the FIR has been termed to be amounting to contempt of court having been filed without any new material. Political rivalry is alleged to be the prime consideration for registration of the case against the appellant. Dismissing the appeal by the accused,

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

Held :

After going through the pleadings of the parties and keeping in view the rival submissions, it is clear that the registration of the FIR against the appellant and others cannot be held to be the result of mala fides or actuated by extraneous considerations. The menace of corruption cannot be permitted to be hidden under the carpet of legal technicalities. In such matters probes conducted are required to be determined on facts and in accordance with law. The allegations of mala fides were, admittedly, not the basis for challenging the registration of the FIR in the High Court. If during the conduct of a preliminary inquiry the commission of an offence comes to light on the basis of new materials, the respondent officials were obliged to register a case and present it in a competent court of jurisdiction for holding of trial and adjudication. The government order (Annexure R-1) is not shown to have been used against the appellant in any way. The aforesaid order in fact protects the interests of the officials saving them from unnecessary harassment. Mere apprehension of the order being used against some persons is no ground to hold it illegal or unconstitutional particularly when its legality or constitutionality has not been challenged. Prima facie it does not hamper or interfere with the statutory functions of an investigating officer who has, otherwise, statutory rights to hold and complete the investigation in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The aforesaid government order has not been shown to be in any way illegal or unconstitutional so far as the rights of the appellant are concerned. (Para 8). K. Karunakaran v. State of Kerala, (2000) 3 SCC 761: 2001 SCC (Cri) 183: AIR 2000 SC 3381: 2000 Cri LJ 2278.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2000]

K. Karunakaran v. State of Kerala, 1997 Cri LJ 3618 (Ker), affirmed

[7129] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Sought on the grounds of (i) bar of limitation, and (ii) lack of authority of Drugs Inspector, Vijayawada, A.P. to lodge the complaint as he could not have assumed jurisdiction under the notification issued by Govt. of A.P. which was confined to Telangana area of A.P. only — Complaint filed within the period of limitation (i.e. one year), but cognizance taken by court beyond the limitation period — Held, complaint not barred by limitation — Further held, the notification was applicable to the entire State of A.P. and not restricted to Telangana area only — Thus, High Court was justified in dismissing the petition under S. 482 CrPC (Paras 10, 11, 8 and 13). Bharat Damodar Kale v. State of A.P., (2003) 8 SCC 559: 2004 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2003 SC 4560.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2003]

[7130] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings by High Court (i) where investigation was not completed; and (ii) where charge-sheet had been filed; by appreciating the evidence — Permissibility — Held, impermissible — Where investigation was incomplete, it was impermissible for the High Court to look into materials, the acceptability of which is essentially a matter for trial — Further held, even at the stage where charge is framed, the Court has to only prima facie be satisfied about the existence of sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused and for that limited purpose it can evaluate material and documents on record but it cannot appreciate the evidence — On facts further held, High Court in exercise of its powers under S. 482 erred in directing renewal of licence — Moreover, conclusions of High Court, after referring to submissions made by a person who was not even a party to the proceedings are utterly fallacious, were based on surmises and conjectures, unsupported by evidence — Hence, impugned orders set aside

FIR No. 61 of 2000 was registered for alleged commission of offences under Sections 120-B, 420, 468 and 471 of Penal Code, 1860 read with Sections 13(2) and 13(1)(a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, against respondent S. Criminal Appeal No. 920 of 2003 and the appeal relatable to SLP (Crl.) No. 3199 of 2004 relates to this FIR where investigation was in progress.

Vigilance PS Case No. 25 of 2000 was registered against respondent B (father of respondent N) on the allegation that he had acquired assets disproportionate to his known source of income. During investigation business premises of N were searched and incriminating materials/documents were seized for which FIR No. 43 of 2000 was lodged against N and S. Appeal relatable to SLP (Crl.) No. 3190 of 2004 relates to FIR No. 43 of 2000 where charge-sheet had been filed.

The High Court in each case while exercising power under Section 482 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, quashed the proceedings. While doing so, it even directed grant of renewal of licence to a company where N was a Director and in one of the cases referred to submissions purportedly made on behalf of B who was not even a party to the proceedings. Hence the present appeal by the appellant State.

Setting aside High Court's orders and directing completion of investigation within six months in proceedings related to FIR No. 61 of 2000,

Held :

The exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC is the exception and not the rule. The section does not confer any new powers on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of CrPC. The inherent powers have been conferred, apart from express provisions of law, which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon it by law. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under CrPC, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. (Para 8)

While exercising the powers under the Section 482 CrPC, the High Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section, though wide, has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. In exercise of the powers the court would be justified in quashing any proceeding if it finds that initiation/continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. (Para 8)

However, the inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. But no hard-and-fast rule as regards cases in which such power can be exercised can be laid down. (Para 11)

Some categories of cases in which inherent power can and should be exercised to quash the proceedings are:

(i) Where it manifestly appears that there is a legal bar against the institution or continuance e.g. want of sanction;

(ii) where the allegations in the first information report or complaint taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not constitute the offence alleged;

(iii) where the allegations constitute an offence, but there is no legal evidence adduced or the evidence adduced clearly or manifestly fails to prove the charge.

However, in dealing with the last category, it is important to bear in mind the distinction between a case where there is no legal evidence or where there is evidence which is clearly inconsistent with the accusations made, and a case where there is legal evidence which, on appreciation, may or may not support the accusations. When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge. Judicial process should not be an instrument of oppression, or, needless harassment. At the same time the section is not an instrument handed over to an accused to short-circuit a prosecution and bring about its sudden death. The inherent power should be exercised sparingly and that too in the rarest of rare cases. (Paras 9 and 10)

When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in the court which decides the fate of the accused person. The allegations of mala fides against the informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Para 11)

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

In the instant case the investigation was not complete and at that stage it was impermissible for the High Court to look into materials, the acceptability of which is essentially a matter for trial. While exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, it is not permissible for the Court to act as if it was a trial court. Even when charge is framed at that stage, the Court has to only prima facie be satisfied about the existence of sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. For that limited purpose, the Court can evaluate material and documents on records but it cannot appreciate the evidence. (Para 14)

The learned Single Judges did not keep in view the correct position in law while allowing the petitions filed by the respondents. It is baffling as to how a learned Single Judge while exercising powers under Section 482 CrPC could even direct grant of renewal of licence. It is also baffling how the learned Single Judge referred to submissions purportedly made by the learned counsel for B who was not even a party. The conclusions are based on surmises and conjectures without any material to support them and are utterly fallacious. Besides, grant of relief to B who was not a party is equally indefensible. (Para 15)

When the factual position of the case at hand is considered in the light of principles of law highlighted, the inevitable conclusion is that the High Court was not justified in quashing the investigation and proceedings in the connected case and the charge-sheet filed. Therefore the High Court's impugned orders are indefensible and are accordingly quashed. (Paras 16 and 17). State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272: (2006) 1 KLT 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2005]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, (1964) 2 SCR 336: AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, (1960) 3 SCR 388: AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353; Jehan Singh v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 4 SCC 522: 1974 SCC (Cri) 558; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, relied on

Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636, considered

[7131] — Ss. 482, 156, 154 and 157 — Inherent jurisdiction — Exercise of power under S. 482 CrPC/Art. 226 of the Constitution — Extent of — Suo motu direction to police to investigate in cognizable offence — Passing of, on basis of vague allegations made in an anonymous petition/letter and without even arriving at any prima facie conclusion that said allegations revealed commission of any cognizable offence — Held, was not justified — High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction either under S. 482 or Art. 226 could not have directed investigation by constituting a special investigation team on strength of anonymous petition

Investigation cannot be ordered by the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC based on vague and indefinite allegations made in an unsigned petition without even arriving at any prima facie conclusion that the contents thereof reveal commission of any cognizable offence. (Paras 46 and 50)

Even a police officer can act on the basis of information received or otherwise and proceed to investigate provided he has reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence which he is empowered to investigate under Section 156 CrPC. If the essential requirements of the penal provisions are not prima facie disclosed by a first information report and the police officer has no reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence, no investigation can be undertaken by him based on the information received or otherwise. (Para 49)

Thus, the High Court cannot set the law in motion against the named and unnamed individuals based on the information received by it without recording the reasons that the information received by it prima facie disclosed the commission of a cognizable offence. Setting criminal law in motion is fraught with serious consequences, which cannot lightly be undertaken by the High Court even in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution. The High Court in exercise of its whatsoever jurisdiction cannot direct investigation by constituting a special investigation team on the strength of anonymous petitions. The High Courts cannot be converted into station houses. (Para 50)

On a careful perusal of the order passed by the High Court Judge, it is found that the said Judge initiated suo motu proceedings without even examining as to whether the contents of the anonymous letter and material sent along with it disclosed any prima facie case for ordering an investigation. The High Court has merely quoted certain allegations made against the appellant and others and proceeded on the basis of those allegations made in the anonymous petition without forming any prima facie opinion with regard to those allegations. (Paras 46 and 48). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

Minor Irrigation & Rural Engg. Services, U.P. v. Sahngoo Ram Arya, (2002) 5 SCC 521: 2002 SCC (L&S) 775, relied on

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400, distinguished on facts

[7132] — Ss. 482, 156, 190(1)(b) and 204 — Power under S. 482 to interfere with police investigation — Held, High Court was not justified in quashing police investigation pending against respondent — CBI directed to investigate the case against respondent and submit final form to court concerned after completion of investigation — Court to apply its mind and pass appropriate order upon receipt of said report — In case the court decides to summon the respondent, she could move the High Court for quashing the proceeding under S. 482 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B & 420 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) (Paras 3 and 4). CBI v. Laxmi Dhaul, (2007) 14 SCC 497.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2006]

[7133] — Ss. 482, 156 and 154 — Petition under S. 482 — Maintainability — Anonymous petition seeking direction for investigation sent directly in name of a Judge of High Court — No information/complaint lodged with police — Held, such a petition ought not to have been entertained by High Court under S. 482

What is the scope, content and ambit of the inherent power conferred on the High Court under Section 482 CrPC was under consideration in the present appeal.

The High Court exercising power under Section 482 CrPC directed investigation of the crime in question to be taken away from the investigating officer concerned and entrusted the same to a special investigation team constituted by it. The High Court also directed the said authority to investigate/inquire into various other allegations levelled in an anonymous petition filed against the appellant institution. The said judgment arose out of the proceedings suo motu initiated by the Court on the basis of anonymous petition addressed to the Judge concerned.

As regards the facts of the case, one M, a female remand prisoner, sent a petition to the District Judge concerned. In that petition she alleged that while she was taking shelter in the appellant institution, she had been subjected to molestation and exploitation and became pregnant from the Head of that institution. When she came out of the said institution to attend her sister's marriage, she was implicated in a false theft case and lodged in the jail.

The District Judge forwarded the said petition to the Magistrate concerned to do the needful. The Magistrate recorded the statement of the victim and thereafter an investigation into the matter was ordered. Subsequently, a case was registered under Section 376(g) IPC at the police station concerned.

Thereafter, the District Judge received an anonymous petition addressed to a High Court Judge. The District Judge addressed a letter to the Registrar General, High Court enclosing the said petition. The petition was accompanied by photocopies of certain press reports and three video CDs. In his covering letter, the District Judge referred to the facts leading to the registration of the above case under Section 376(g) IPC.

The matter was placed before the High Court Judge concerned who ordered the Registry to verify and report whether M had sent any petition to the High Court and if so, what action was taken on that petition. The Registry resubmitted to the High Court an earlier file and informed that M had earlier sent a complaint to the High Court, narrating her agonies. The matter was placed before Justice K. As per the order of Justice K, the petition was sent to the Superintendent of Police for an enquiry. As per the report of the Registry, presumably, in pursuance of the said direction, a case was registered under Section 376(g) IPC and consequently the matter before the High Court was closed.

On resubmission of the file, the High Court after noticing the facts leading to the closing of the matter before the High Court, observed that in the meanwhile another petition was received from M by the High Court. The High Court noticed that in the said petition, M had raised serious allegations regarding the investigation. Hence, the High Court opined that even though there was an earlier order to close the file before the High Court, the subsequent petition ought to have been treated as a separate petition praying for an order for proper investigation and separate action taken. As per the High Court, the said petition could also be clubbed with the anonymous petition. Thus, the High Court directed the Registry to treat the anonymous petition along with the subsequent petition received in the court as petitions praying for an order for proper investigation and register the same as a suo motu criminal miscellaneous case. The Registry complied with said directions. Thereafter the High Court passed the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Here is a case where no information has been given to the police by any informant alleging commission of any cognizable offence by the appellant and the persons associated with the appellant institution. It is a peculiar case of its own kind where an anonymous petition is sent directly in the name of a Judge of the High Court, which was suo motu taken up as a proceeding under Section 482 CrPC. The High Court ought not to have entertained such a petition for taking the same on file under Section 482 CrPC. (Para 54). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

[7134] — Ss. 482, 156 and 173 — Power under S. 482 — When can be exercised, restated — Interference under S. 482 with statutory power of police to investigate in cognizable offence, held, not permissible — Hence, where investigation in matter still under progress and no police report under S. 173 CrPC submitted to Magistrate concerned, quashing of entire proceedings by High Court under S. 482, held, was not justified

Section 482 CrPC saves inherent powers of the High Court and such a power can be exercised to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. This power can be exercised to quash the criminal proceedings pending in any court but the power cannot be exercised to interfere with the statutory power of the police to conduct investigation in a cognizable offence. (Para 15)

In the present case, the High Court ought not to have interfered with and quashed the entire proceedings in exercise of power conferred by Section 482 CrPC when the matter was still at the investigation stage. No report as contemplated by Section 173 CrPC had been submitted by the in-charge of the police station concerned to the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence. The sweeping remark made by the High Court that the initiation of criminal proceedings was abuse of process of court and miscarriage of justice, was wholly unjustified in the circumstances of the case. (Paras 15 and 16). State of Karnataka v. Pastor P. Raju, (2006) 6 SCC 728: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 179: AIR 2006 SC 2825: (2006) 102 Cut LT 612: (2006) 3 KLT 830.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2006]

Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314; H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, (1955) 1 SCR 1150: AIR 1955 SC 196: 1955 Cri LJ 526; State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, (1963) 2 SCR 52: AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 341; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, (1967) 3 SCR 668: AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272, followed

King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1943-44) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18, relied on

[7135] — Ss. 482, 156(3) and 154 — Quashing of subsequent complaints/FIRs filed by same party after lodging an FIR — Permissibility — Held, prayer made for, on ground that second FIR is not legally permissible — Held, subsequent complaints were not in relation to same offence or occurrence and did not pertain to same parties as alleged in the first report — Distinctions made by High Court between the subsequent complaints and the first report, were fully justified — Hence, subsequent complaints could not be quashed — High Court rightly declined to exercise its powers under S. 482 to quash the said complaints — Exercise of extraordinary powers under Art. 136 of the Constitution to interfere in the matter, held, not called for

The complaints, which were filed in respect of malfeasance and misfeasance within the jurisdiction of the Ahmedabad Police, were not in respect of the same cognizable offence or the same occurrence giving rise to one or more cognizable offences, nor were they alleged to have been committed in the course of the same transaction or the same occurrence as the ones alleged in First CR No. 67 of 2001. (Para 13)

There is a further distinction in that while First CR No. 67 of 2001 pertained to cases concerning one K and entities associated with him in the crime, the subsequent complaints pertained to other parties. Further, the FIR being investigated pertained only to criminal acts relating to the Mandvi branch (Mumbai) of the bank in question, while the subsequent complaints being investigated by the State Police pertained to criminal acts at the Shahibaug

(Ahmedabad) branch of the Bank. The distinctions drawn by the High Court are fully justified. The High Court was right in observing that the FIRs, which were under challenge before it, were regarding independent and distinct offences. Hence, the FIRs could not be prohibited on the ground that some other FIR had been filed against the petitioner in respect of other allegations made against the petitioner. (Para 14)

The High Court was correctly cognizant of limitations while exercising its powers under Section 482 CrPC, which should not in any event, be exercised lightly. The High Court was justified in declining to exercise its powers under Section 482 CrPC and in refusing to interfere with the orders passed by the learned Chief Metropolitan Magistrate. Finally, considering the nature of the allegations involved and the facts and circumstances of the present case, the Supreme Court too is not inclined to exercise its extraordinary powers under Article 136 of the Constitution to interfere. (Para 15). Rameshchandra Nandlal Parikh v. State of Gujarat, (2006) 1 SCC 732: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 481: AIR 2006 SC 915: (2006) 194 ELT 140: (2006) 2 Guj LR 1365: 2006 Cri LJ 964.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, C.J. and B.N. Srikrishna, J. [Date of decision: 13-1-2006]

T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048, considered and distinguished on facts

[7136] — Ss. 482, 173 and 197 — High Court's power to quash criminal proceedings under — Scope — Petition for quashing criminal proceeding at a stage anterior to trial court's decision on taking cognizance of offence on the basis of police report submitted to it — Maintainability — High Court, treating the affidavits filed and documents produced before it by the petitioner-accused as evidence, quashing the proceeding — Held, High Court committed serious error in putting an end to the prosecution at its inception by going into merits in a pre-trial on consideration of the affidavits and documents which, unless proved to be true and reliable in regular trial, cannot form the basis of any decision regarding commission of offence — High Courts by easily entertaining such writ petitions encouraged accused to delay the trials by diverse tricks — Constitution of India — Art. 226

Per Kuldip Singh, J.

At a stage when the police report under S. 173 CrPC has been forwarded to the Magistrate after completion of the investigation and the material collected by the Investigating Officer is under the gaze of judicial scrutiny, the High Court would do well to discipline itself not to undertake quashing proceedings in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. In this case the High Court fell into grave error in appreciating the documents and affidavits produced before it by treating them as evidence, delving into the disputed questions of fact in its jurisdiction under Art. 226/227 and pronouncing the respondents to be innocent and quashing the criminal proceedings by converting itself into a trial court. This was not at all a case where High Court should have interfered in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. The appreciation of evidence is the function of the criminal courts the Special Judge was seized of the matter. He had heard the arguments on the question of cognisance and had reserved the orders. The High Court did not even permit the Special Judge to pronounce the orders. The High Court, under the circumstances, could not have assumed jurisdiction and put an end to the process of investigation and trial provided under the law.

Per K. Ramaswamy, J. (supplementing)

Entertaining the writ petitions against charge-sheet and considering the matter on merit on the guise of prima facie evidence to stand an accused for trial amounts to pre-trial of a criminal trial under Art. 226 or 227 even before the competent Magistrate or the Sessions Court takes cognizance of the offence. The charge- sheet and the evidence placed in support thereof form the base to take or refuse to take cognizance by the competent court. It is not the case that no offence had been made out in the charge-sheets and the first information report. Grossest error of law has been committed by the High Court in making pre-trial of a criminal case in exercising its extraordinary jurisdiction under Art. 226. Once the proceedings are entertained the further proceedings get stayed.

The documents relied on by the accused-respondents were subject to proof at the trial and if proved to be true and relevant, then only they might serve as a defence for the respondents at the trial. The commission of offence cannot be decided on affidavit evidence. The High Court has taken short course "in annihilating the still-born prosecution" by going into the merits on the plea of proof of prima facie case and adverted to those facts and gave findings on merits.

Expeditious trial of a criminal case is the cardinal rule. Delay feeds injustice to social order and entertaining writ petitions would encourage to delay the trial by diverse tricks. It is not to suggest that under no circumstances a writ petition should be entertained. But an accused with a view to delay the trial, resorts to writ proceedings, raises several contentions including one on merit and have the proceedings kept pending. The result would be that the people would lose faith in the efficacy of rule of law.

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

In Swapan Kumar Guha and Madhavrao J. Scindia cases, the Supreme Court cannot be said to have laid down as a proposition of law that in every case the court would examine at the preliminary stage whether there would be ultimate chances of conviction on the basis of allegation, and should exercise the power under S. 482 or Art. 226 to quash the proceedings or the charge-sheet. State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192: AIR 1991 SC 1260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh[1] and K. Ramaswamy[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-4-1991]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388: 1960 Cri LJ 1239, relied on

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Madhavrao J. Scindia v. Sambhajirao C. Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234, distinguished [7137] — Ss. 482, 173(8) & (2) and 156(1) — Exercise of power under S. 482 CrPC — Further investigation — Choice of investigating agency — Held, the same can be decided by High Court (Para 8). Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631: (2008) 67 AIC 52 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

[7138] — Ss. 482, 173(8) and 228 — Further investigation and supplementary charge-sheet — Direction as to — Sustainability — Direction made by High Court to police to file additional investigation report and supplementary charge-sheet in relation to further investigation in which appellant's involvement in offence came to light and to secure order for committing the case to Sessions Court — Challenge to — Grounds of challenge were that (i) the said direction was not required, (ii) even on the basis of additional report, there was no material against appellant, and (iii) by the impugned order, appellant was denied opportunity to challenge before Sessions Court framing of charge by it — Held, appellant could raise all his objections/contentions at the time of framing of charges by the Sessions Court — Appeal disposed of accordingly — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149, 143, 147, 148 & 120-B (Paras 4 and 5). State of Karnataka v. T.B. Ramakrishna Reddy, (2007) 14 SCC 791.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-2006]

[7139] — Ss. 482, 311, 391, 173(8), 216 and 24 — Interference with criminal trial — Direction for further investigation after commencement of trial — When warranted — Held, can be issued by Supreme Court or High Court in case of failure of investigating agency to perform its duty and complete failure of justice — Direction for further investigation sought by appellant in case of his sister's death on ground that charge against accused husband pertaining to a less serious offence (under S. 306 IPC) was framed whereas facts and circumstances indicated commission of a more serious offence (under S. 302 IPC) — However, in this case since 47 witnesses had already been examined and a direction for further investigation may delay the trial, the trial court may alter the charge in exercise of its discretionary jurisdiction under S. 311 CrPC and recourse to S. 391 is also open — Having regard to these considerations, held, direction for further investigation need not be issued — However, appellant should be permitted to engage a lawyer on his behalf for assisting the Public Prosecutor — Constitution of India — Arts. 136, 142 and 226

The deceased was married to Respondent 4. They went to USA but there they were allegedly not leading a happy married life. The deceased came back to India with her children and purchased a house in 1994. She died in 1998. Respondent 5 gave a certificate that she died of heart failure. The appellant, the deceased's brother, made complaints to various authorities whereupon the deceased's body was exhumed and sent for post-mortem examination. As per final opinion, she died of organophosphate insecticide poisoning. The investigating officer issued a final form stating that the deceased could have committed suicide.

The appellant filed a writ petition seeking direction for further investigation in terms of Section 173(8) CrPC by CBI. The High Court directed that further investigation be conducted by CB-CID. Thereafter, another final report was submitted by CB-CID charging Respondent 4 for offence under Section 306 IPC and Respondent 5 for offence under Section 201 IPC. Cognizance of the offence was taken, trial commenced and 47 witnesses, including the appellant, were examined. The appellant filed an application before the High Court purported to be under Section 482 CrPC praying for further investigation in the case by CBI. The High Court dismissed the petition observing that the case was ripe for trial after framing of charges and that the charges could be altered at any time under Section 216 CrPC by the trial court.

In appeal before the Supreme Court it was submitted on behalf of the appellant that the High Court was not correct to take the said view without taking into consideration two important developments in the case viz. a case of heart attack was made out at an initial stage, whereafter a case of abetment of suicide was made out, which would go to show as to how the investigation had been carried out both by the general police or by CB-CID in the State. Before the Supreme Court certain circumstances were pointed out which, according to the appellant, would clearly show that Respondent 4 murdered the deceased. The Additional Solicitor General urged that it is possible that adequate materials had not been collected during investigation and in the event it is found that the investigating officers have failed to perform their statutory duties, the Supreme Court may issue appropriate direction in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution.

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

Proper and fair investigation on the part of the investigating officer is the backbone of rule of law. The job of the investigating officer is to make investigation in right direction. The investigation must be in consonance with the ingredients of the offence. It cannot be haphazard or unmethodical. A proper and effective investigation into a serious offence and particularly in a case where there is no direct evidence assumes great significance as collection of adequate materials to prove the circumstantial evidence becomes essential. Unfortunately, the appellant has not been treated fairly. When a death has occurred in a suspicious circumstance and in particular when an attempt had been made to bury the dead body hurriedly and upon obtaining apparently an incorrect medical certificate, it was expected that upon exhumation of the body, the investigating authorities of the State shall carry out their statutory duties fairly. The appellant alleges that no fair investigation has been conducted. It is clearly a matter of great concern that the authorities did not become alive to the situation. (Paras 15 and 18)

It is also not known, whether the circumstances enumerated by the appellant herein had been duly taken note of and investigation in this behalf had been carried out. Although CBI in its counter-affidavit has supported the impugned judgment of the High Court but it without looking into the documents opined that although the said circumstances are relevant but they themselves had not proved commission of offence of murder of the deceased by Respondent 4 herein. It was not expected of CBI to file such an affidavit. Even the learned Additional Solicitor General appearing on behalf of CBI was not satisfied therewith. The investigating officer and particularly CB-CID should have made a thorough investigation. If the allegations made by the appellant are correct, the same depicts a sordid state of affairs. (Paras 16 and 17)

Indisputably, in a given case, the Supreme Court can direct an investigation by CBI. The powers of the Supreme Court both under Articles 32 and 142 of the Constitution are plenary in nature. The High Court or the Supreme Court in exercise of the said power is entitled to reach injustice wherever it is found. (Paras 22, 25 and 26)

However, a Division Bench of the Supreme Court in Rajesh v. Ramdeo, (2001) 10 SCC 759 at para 2 refused to direct a fresh and further investigation opining that since the investigation agency had already filed the charge-sheet on the basis of which the accused persons were being proceeded against, in case of availability of any further material, the court may alter the charge framed. In the circumstances, the Bench concluded that the High Court overstepped its jurisdiction in issuing the direction calling upon further investigation into the matter which "would be an abuse of the process of the court". This decision albeit is not supported by any reason. It has not taken into consideration the binding precedents. But as at present advised, a contrary view need not be taken. However, in Hasanbhai Valibhai Qureshi case, the Supreme Court observed: "Coming to the question whether a further investigation is warranted, the hands of the investigating agency or the court should not be tied down on the ground that further investigation may delay the trial, as the ultimate object is to arrive at the truth." As such an option is maintainable; if any occasion arises, recourse may be taken thereto. A direction for further investigation, thus, can be issued where there had been complete failure of justice and in a case where the investigating and prosecuting agencies were found to have not performed their role in the manner they were expected to do. (Paras 29 to 31 and 33)

Although it is not beyond the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to direct further investigation by CBI as contradistinguished from reinvestigation at this stage, but it is not necessary to do so keeping in view the fact that 47 witnesses including the appellant himself have already been examined and recourse thereto can be taken if during trial a case therefor is found to be have been made out. The present is not a case where cognizance had not been taken. It is not even a case where a direction under

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

Section 173(8) CrPC can be issued at this stage. It is also not a case to interfere with the trial of the case. (Paras 38 and 26)

The trial court even is not powerless. It, if a case is made out, can exercise its discretionary jurisdiction under Section 311 CrPC as also Section 391 thereof. In the event of open marshalling of the evidence, it comes to the opinion that a case has been made out for alteration of charge; it indisputably can do so in exercise of its power under Section 311 CrPC. In a given case again it can consider the question from the viewpoint of the appellant as regards the existence of circumstances which point to the guilt of Respondent 4. The trial court is directed, if any occasion arises therefor, to exercise its power under Section 311 upon considering the facts and circumstances of this case. (Paras 35 and 37)

Further, it is a fit case where the appellant should be permitted to engage a lawyer on his behalf who would assist the Public Prosecutor. The counsel for the State assured the Supreme Court that the same shall not be objected to. It is hoped that in the event the State is of the opinion that the prosecution should be conducted by a Public Prosecutor of repute and having sufficient experience, it would not hesitate to appoint one. (Para 36). Sasi Thomas v. State, (2006) 12 SCC 421: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 72: (2007) 50 AIC 385 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-2006]

Paramjit Kaur v. State of Punjab, (1996) 7 SCC 20: 1996 SCC (Cri) 167; Gudalure M.J. Cherian v. Union of India, (1992) 1 SCC 397; Ramesh Kumari v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2006) 2 SCC 677: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 678; Shashikant v. CBI, (2007) 1 SCC 630; Amar Chand Agarwalla v. Shanti Bose, (1973) 4 SCC 10: 1973 SCC (Cri) 651; Hasanbhai Valibhai Qureshi v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 5 SCC 347: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1603; Zahira Habibulla H. Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 4 SCC 158: 2004 SCC (Cri) 999, relied on

Rajesh v. Ramdeo, (2001) 10 SCC 759: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1054, doubted

[7140] — Ss. 482, 374(2), 386 and 397 — While exercising appellate jurisdiction, High Court, in suo motu exercise of its inherent power, can direct further investigation of the case against persons who were not charge-sheeted and were not accused at the stage of trial but whom High Court felt should have been included in the challan — But High Court should exercise the inherent jurisdiction sparingly and only after applying its mind to the material on record so as to be satisfied about existence of a strong prima facie case against such persons and also whether any useful purpose is served by issuing such directions particularly after a long lapse of time — Moreover, having regard to facts and circumstances of the present case, High Court should also give an opportunity of hearing to those persons before issuing the directions — But High Court cannot direct the State to take advice of Public Prosecutor as regards the provisions whereunder those persons had to be charged, nor can it direct CB/CID to reinvestigate and prosecute those persons since it cannot direct to reinvestigate the case from a particular angle or by a particular agency

According to the prosecution, N, M and P came on a motorcycle and stopped near a bus stand. P shouted to kill the deceased and left the scene on the motorcycle leaving behind N and M. Thereupon, N took out a sickle and assaulted the deceased who started running and entered into a nearby hotel. N and M chased the deceased and both of them assaulted the deceased inside the hotel as a result of which the deceased died. A first information report in respect of the incident was lodged by PW 1.

However, no charge-sheet was filed against P and M, nor copy of the charge-sheet was sent to the first informant. The Magistrate before whom the charge-sheet was filed also did not inform the first informant which was mandatory. N alone was committed to the Court of Session. Before the Sessions Judge, all the eyewitnesses allegedly took the names of P and M as having also played active roles in the entire episode. But the Sessions Judge was neither called upon to exercise nor he suo motu exercised his jurisdiction under Section 319 CrPC. In this situation N alone was tried and convicted for commission of offence under Section 302 IPC and sentenced to life imprisonment. N filed an appeal before the High Court. A Division Bench of the High Court opined that no case was made out to interfere with the judgment of the Sessions Court. The High Court further opined that there was evidence at every stage implicating P and M in the crime. According to the High Court, action on the part of the investigating officers leaving out the names of P and M from the array of the accused was not a bona fide error. The High Court also felt that the District Judge ought to have conducted himself fairly in the matter of exercising his jurisdiction under Section 319. The High Court, therefore, made certain adverse comments against the investigating officers, the Public Prosecutors as also the trial Judge for conducting themselves in the manner in which they had discharged their duties. It directed that prosecution of P and M be launched, that State Public Prosecutor shall advise the State as to under what section they have to be charged and tried and that CB/CID shall take over the mater and reinvestigate and prosecute the appellant and M. It also directed the Director General of Police to deeply probe into the lapses on the part of the investigating officers concerned and take follow-up action irrespective of long lapse of time (10 years since the occurrence).

In view of the rival contentions raised in the case, the following questions came up for consideration before the Supreme Court:

(i) Whether the High Court while exercising its appellate jurisdiction under Section 374(2) read with Section 386 CrPC could direct further investigation of the case against the persons whom the High Court felt should have been included in the challan on the basis of the materials on record available before the appellate court?

(ii) Whether only because of the fact that the appellate power of the High Court in terms of Sections 374(2), 386 and 391 does not contain any specific power to direct further investigation, the High Court lacked jurisdiction for seeking recourse to its inherent and supervisory powers under Sections 482 and 483 CrPC in a case of this nature?

(iii) Whether the impugned judgment is wholly unsustainable as prior to issuing the impugned direction, the principles of natural justice had not been complied with?

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

Section 386 CrPC provides for the power of the appellate court. Indisputably, stricto sensu in terms thereof the appellate court cannot direct a person to stand trial. Its jurisdiction is specified thereunder. While exercising its appellate power, the jurisdiction of the High Court although is limited but there exists a distinction but a significant one being that the High Court can exercise its revisional jurisdiction and/or inherent jurisdiction not only when an application therefor is filed but also suo motu. There may not, therefore, be an embargo for the High Court to exercise its extraordinary inherent jurisdiction while exercising other jurisdictions in the matter. Keeping in view the intention of Parliament, while making the new law the emphasis of Parliament being "a case before the court" in contradistinction from "a person who is arrayed as an accused before it" when the High Court is seized with the entire case although would exercise a limited jurisdiction in terms of Section 386, the same, cannot be held to limit its other powers and in particular that of Section 482 CrPC in relation to the matter which is not before it. The High Court while, thus, exercising its revisional or appellate power, may exercise its inherent powers. Inherent power of the High Court can be exercised both in relation to substantive as also procedural matters. (Paras 26, 27 and 29)

In respect of the incidental or supplemental power, the High Court can exercise its inherent jurisdiction irrespective of the nature of the proceedings. It is not trammelled by procedural restrictions in that:

(i) Power can be exercised suo motu in the interest of justice. If such a power is not conceded, it may even lead to injustice to an accused.

(ii) Such a power can be exercised concurrently with the appellate or revisional jurisdiction and no formal application is required to be filed therefor.

(iii) However, the power under Section 482 CrPC is not unlimited. It can inter alia be exercised where the Code is silent, where the power of the court is not treated as exhaustive, or there is a specific provision in the Code; or the statute does not fall within the purview of the Code because it involves application of a special law. It acts ex debito justitiae. It can, thus, do real and substantial justice for which alone it exists. (Para 30)

There exists a distinction between two classes of cases viz. (i) where application of Section 482 is specifically excluded, and (ii) where there is no specific provision but limitation of the power which is sought to be exercised has specifically been stated. The inherent power of the High Court can be invoked in respect of the matters covered by the provisions of the Code unless there is specific provision to redress the grievance of the aggrieved party. The said power overrides other provisions of the Code but evidently cannot be exercised in violation/contravention of a statutory power created under any other enactment. (Paras 32, 34 and 35)

The power to direct enquiry may not, thus, be held to be confined only to the original but also to the appellate jurisdiction. Such a power can be exercised also as against the persons who were not the accused at the stage of trial. Such a power can be exercised even after the trial is over. (Paras 41 and 43)

But the inherent power of the High Court is required to be exercised sparingly. The High Court may or may not in a given situation, particularly having regard to lapse of time, exercise its discretionary jurisdiction. For the said purpose, it was not only required to apply its mind to the materials on record but was also required to consider as to whether any purpose would be served thereby. (Para 56)

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

The High Court, however, was not correct in issuing a direction to the State to take advice of the State Public Prosecutor as to under what section the appellant has to be charged and tried or directing CB, CID to take up the matter and reinvestigate and prosecute the appellant herein. Such a power does not come within the purview of Section 482 CrPC. Investigation of an offence is a statutory power of the police. The State in its discretion may get the investigation done by any agency unless there exists an extraordinary situation. (Para 46)

Yet again, it is for the Public Prosecutor to discharge his duties in terms of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The High Court, thus, has no role to play in such matters. Ordinarily, it is for the Public Prosecutor himself to see to whom and how to render his advice or as to whether the State would like to proceed against an accused or not. (Para 47)

The High Court while passing the impugned judgment did not bear the said principles in mind. It went beyond its jurisdiction in directing the prosecution of the appellant. In a case of this nature, where a superior court exercises its inherent jurisdiction, it indisputably should remind itself about the inherent danger in taking away the right of an accused. The High Court should have been circumspect in exercising the said jurisdiction. When a power under Section 173(8) CrPC is exercised, the court ordinarily should not interfere with the statutory power of the investigating agency. It cannot issue directions to investigate the case from a particular angle or by a particular agency. In the instant case, not only the High Court had asked reinvestigation into the matter, but also directed examination of the witnesses who had not been cited as prosecution witnesses. It furthermore directed prosecution of the appellant which was unwarranted in law. (Para 48)

In this case, the High Court was dealing with an extraordinary situation because:

(i) Rightly or wrongly the Magistrate had accepted the final form and did not direct any further enquiry.

(ii) Although the investigating officer or the court did not intimate the first informant about filing of the final form in respect of the appellant, it cannot be said that the first informant was not aware thereof.

(iii) The first informant neither filed any protest petition nor filed any complaint petition.

(iv) Even during the trial, no application was filed before the learned Sessions Judge for summoning the appellant on behalf of the State or the complainant.

(v) The learned Sessions Judge did not exercise his power suo motu.

(vi) The High Court was hearing an appeal preferred by a convicted person and exercised its extraordinary jurisdiction after 10 years.

(vii) Even if it could direct further investigation, it was required to apply its mind as regards existence of a very strong prima facie case therefor and particularly in view of the fact that a period of 10 years had lapsed in the meanwhile.

(viii) Had an opportunity of hearing been given, the State also could have shown that for valid reasons the investigating officer did not think it fit to proceed against the appellant and that there were otherwise justifiable reasons to file the final form. (Para 53)

Having regard to the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, it must be held that before issuing the impugned directions, the High Court should have given an opportunity of hearing to the appellants. (Para 57)

However, this direction is not intended to lay down the law that while the Magistrate directs a further investigation or while a Sessions Judge exercises his jurisdiction under Section 319 CrPC, an accused is entitled to be heard; he is not as he has no right therefor and, thus, the question of hearing him at that stage would not arise. (Para 52). Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

Dinesh Dutt Joshi v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 570: 2002 SCC (Cri) 24; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, (1960) 3 SCR 388: AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCR 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Raj Kapoor v. State, (1980) 1 SCC 43: 1980 SCC (Cri) 72; State v. Navjot Sandhu, (2003) 6 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1545; State of W.B. v. Sujit Kumar Rana, (2004) 4 SCC 129: 2004 SCC (Cri) 984, relied on

[7141] — Ss. 482 and 156 — Suo motu exercise of inherent powers — Interference with police investigation — Change of IO in midway (on basis of anonymous petition addressed to a named High Court Judge in this case) — Impermissibility — Held, High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction cannot change the IO in the midstream and appoint any agency of its own choice to investigate into a crime on whatsoever basis — More particularly on basis of complaints or anonymous petitions addressed to a named Judge — Accused or complainant/informant cannot choose its own investigating agency to investigate a crime in which it may be interested

The investigation of an offence is the field exclusively reserved for the police officers whose powers in that field are unfettered so long as the power to investigate into the cognizable offences is legitimately exercised in strict compliance with the provisions under Chapter XII CrPC. However, unfettered discretion does not mean any unaccountable or unlimited discretion and act according to one's own choice. The power to investigate must be exercised strictly on the condition of which that power is granted by CrPC itself. (Para 39)

Therefore, the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction cannot change the investigating officer in the midstream and appoint any agency of its own choice to investigate into a crime on whatsoever basis and more particularly on the basis of complaints or anonymous petitions addressed to a named Judge. Such communications cannot be converted into suo motu proceedings for setting the law in motion. Neither the accused nor the complainant or informant is entitled to choose its own investigating agency to investigate a crime in which it may be interested. (Para 40)

In the present case, the contents of the petition submitted by the victim and also the allegations made in the anonymous complaint reveal no cause for issuing directions relieving the investigating officer of his statutory power and duty to investigate the crime in question. Neither has the anonymous petition nor the complaint made by the victim been directed against the investigating officer complaining of any bias or any attempt on his part to destroy the available evidence. It is difficult to discern the basis for arriving at the conclusion that the entire attempt of the investigating officer was to exonerate the accused and make the complainant as the accused. The investigation was in progress as is evident from the case diary. The special investigation team also proceeded on the same lines as that of the investigating officer and similar observations as the one made by the investigating officer are found in the report of the special investigation team. (Paras 34, 35 and 37). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18; S.N. Sharma v. Bipen Kumar Tiwari, (1970) 1 SCC 653: 1970 SCC (Cri) 258; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628; State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 2 SCR 52; Hazari Lal Gupta v. Rameshwar Prasad, (1972) 1 SCC 452: 1972 SCC (Cri) 208; Nirmaljit Singh Hoon v. State of W.B., (1973) 3 SCC 753: 1973 SCC (Cri) 521, relied on

M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor Scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264, considered

CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233; Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404, distinguished

[7142] — Ss. 482, 397, 166-A and 401 — Public interest litigation — Standing — Revision petition — Maintainability — Bofors gun deal case — FIR registered by CBI against named and unnamed persons including politicians and govt. officials already involved in receiving bribe/kickbacks in the deal — Investigation commenced — Application moved by CBI before Special Judge for issue of letter rogatory to Switzerland for assistance in investigation — Miscellaneous petition filed under Art. 51-A before Special Judge by an advocate claiming to be Secretary of an organisation devoted to uphold rule of law, fight against injustice and abide by the Constitution, inter alia for not issuing the letter rogatory on mere formal request of CBI unless allegations against named persons established — Petition dismissed — Revision petition filed before High Court by the advocate challenging not only the order of dismissal but also the very registration of FIR and investigation carried on by CBI — Revision petition dismissed on ground of absence of locus standi of the petitioner-advocate but suo motu cognizance taken in exercise of powers under Ss. 397, 401 and 482 and the office directed to register a case under title 'Court on its own Motion v. State and CBI' — Held, the advocate had no locus standi and High Court's suo motu action interfering with FIR and investigation illegal and perverse — Constitution of India, Arts. 51-A & 136. Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36: AIR 1993 SC 892.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1992]

[7143] — Ss. 482, 173(8), (2) & (3), 156 and 158 — Stay on proceedings — Re-examination of completed investigation by officer of DGP rank after filing of charge-sheet and committal of proceedings to Sessions Court — Sustainability of direction for — No reason indicated in impugned order necessitating change of investigation agency — Only consideration that weighed with the High Court was that there was no supervision report of a particular level of police officer and it wanted assistance of a DGP-level police officer to advise it on correctness of investigation — Held, there was no provision under which such direction could be issued, particularly when charge-sheet had been filed — Further held, such a course was not necessary unless High Court had examined charge-sheet

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

which was filed and recorded its findings that investigation was not properly conducted or further investigation was required under S. 173(8) — High Court had not even looked into charge-sheet nor had examined the same — Merely because there appeared to be no supervision of DIG-level or IG-level officer, High Court could not have simply called for opinion of DGP without recording any finding — Direction to stay criminal proceedings until report from DGP was received unwarranted — High Court failed to consider even question of its own jurisdiction in the matter by conveniently observing that it is a matter which is to be considered at stage of final hearing of case — It thus failed to apply its mind — Impugned order unsustainable — Sessions Judge directed to proceed with the matter — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302, 201 and 120-B (Paras 2, 3, 26, 27, 29, 31 and 33). Virender Prasad Singh v. Rajesh Bhardwaj, (2010) 9 SCC 171: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 1169: 2010 Cri LJ 4275: (2010) 95 AIC 182 .

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2010]

Mithabhai Pashabhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 332: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1047; Ramachandran v. R. Udhayakumar, (2008) 5 SCC 413: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 631, relied on

Rubabbuddin Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 2 SCC 200: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1006, distinguished on facts

[7144] — Ss. 482 and 173(8) — Inherent jurisdiction under S. 482 — Scope of — High Court not interfering with Magistrate's direction for further investigation when Magistrate directed such investigation after submission of final report for the second time — Justifiability of such non-interference — High Court's power to interfere in Magistrate's direction of further investigation, reiterated, is limited — Therefore, High Court under S. 482 CrPC not interfering with Magistrate's direction for further investigation, on facts, held, justified

A son MA was involved in a dispute with his sister ME and mother S over a farmhouse. The first FIR for alleged offences under Sections 147, 148, 149, 452, 232, 427 and 506 IPC was lodged by ME for alleged raiding of the farmhouse by MA and 40 others and attacking S. The accused were allegedly arrested on the spot. SLPs (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 arose out of the first FIR (FIR No. 960 of 1999). The second FIR (FIR No. 960-A of 1999) was lodged by MA against ME and her farm employees alleging grievous hurt by a gunshot injury. MA also alleged forgery of documents whereof mutation records of the farmhouse were altered. SLP (Crl.) No. 5419 of 2008 arose out of the second FIR.

Charge-sheet was filed on the first FIR. On the second FIR, a final report was made stating that no case was made out. When a writ order (in WP No. 7230 of 1999) was passed by the High Court directed impartial inquiry, the DSP concerned, after seeking opinion of the Public Prosecutor, reopened the second FIR. Apprehending arrest, ME and S also moved the writ jurisdiction, whereupon, the High Court disposed off the matter directing fair, honest investigation without coercive steps against parties. An SLP in this regard was also disposed off directing transfer of investigation to CB CID and continuation of protection to ME.

On the first FIR, MA's trial was concluded and he was convicted. Thereafter, during pendency of appeal in the High Court, he was released on bail and his sentence was suspended. On the second FIR, charge-sheet was filed against S & ME and cognizance was taken. A petition under Section 482 CrPC (CMA No. 620 of 2006) to quash proceedings against them was dismissed but the High Court directed the trial court to consider exemption of personal attendance of S in terms of Section 205 CrPC and observed that they deserved protection. This was the impugned order in SLP (Crl.) No. 5419 of 2008.

SLPs (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 related to the issue of further investigation against ME and others with regard to embezzlement of Rs 13,50,000. The said further investigation was requested by CB CID after charge-sheet had been filed and Section 482 petition was disposed off. The said further investigation was allowed by the Magistrate and not interfered with by the High Court while exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC (CMA No. 518 of 2008).

Disposing of the appeals,

Held :

So far as the criminal appeals arising out of Special Leave Petitions (Crl.) Nos. 6061-62 of 2008 and Special Leave Petitions (Crl.) Nos. 6136-37 of 2008 are concerned, there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that the jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 is limited. (Para 42)

In Crime Case No. 960-A of 1999, the Supreme Court had directed CB CID to complete the investigation. It was, thus, obligatory on its part to complete the investigation and submit an appropriate report to the Court. Even otherwise the Magistrate has granted such permission. It is, however, not the case of S that the Magistrate had accepted the final report. Even in such a case, the Magistrate was bound to give notice to the complainant who could have objected thereto. A protest petition was also maintainable. (Paras 28, 25 and 27)

The investigation in Crime No. 960-A of 1999 runs from one extreme end to the other. Final reports were prepared twice. However, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, CB CID on the second final report so prepared sought to obtain the legal opinion of the Public Prosecutor. Such a course adopted may be irregular but it is not denied or disputed that a vital aspect of the matter of the investigation had not been carried out. It is not the case of the appellants i.e. S and ME that the opinion given by the Public Prosecutor was incorrect. (Para 25). Manoj Narain Agrawal v. Shashi Agrawal, (2009) 6 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Kamlapati Trivedi v. State of W.B., (1980) 2 SCC 91: 1980 SCC (Cri) 347; Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; State of A.P. v. A.S. Peter, (2008) 2 SCC 383: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 427; Bhagwan Samardha Sreepada Vallabha Venkata Vishwanandha Maharaj v. State of A.P., (1999) 5 SCC 740: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1047, relied on

[7145] — S. 482 — Investigation — Direction for — Quashment — When not warranted — Direction for investigation by Magistrate under — Requirements for — Power if properly exercised — Magistrate allowing application filed by respondent SEPCO under S. 156(3) CrPC, and forwarding original complaint alleging commission of offences under Ss. 405, 406, 418, 420, 427, 503, 504, 506/34 and 120-B IPC, to SHO concerned directing him to register FIR after due enquiry, and to submit charge-sheet after investigation — Sustainability — Held, for proceeding under S. 156(3) what is required is a bare reading of complaint and whether it discloses a cognizable offence — Magistrate then instead of applying his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there are sufficient grounds for proceeding, may direct police to investigate — In instant case, offences alleged were all cognizable offences, and hence, Magistrate committed no illegality in passing direction for investigation, warranting any interference by High Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution — Single Judge as well as Division Bench rightly refused to interfere with such limited order — Moreover, challenge at this stage by appellants was premature and High Court rightly rejected their request — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 136 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 405, 406, 418, 420, 427, 503, 504, 506/34 and 120-B — CrPC, 1973 — S. 156(3) (Paras 15 to 24)

The Magistrate only ordered investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. The Magistrate perused the complaint without examining the merits of the claim that there is sufficient ground for proceeding or not and directed the police officer concerned for investigation under Section 156(3) CrPC. As rightly observed by the Single Judge of the High Court, the Magistrate did not bring into motion the machinery of Chapter XV CrPC. He did not examine the complainant or his witnesses under Section 200 CrPC which is the first step in the procedure prescribed under the said Chapter. The question of taking the next step of the procedure envisaged in Section 202 did not arise. Instead of taking cognizance of the offence, the Magistrate has merely allowed the application filed by the complainant/SEPCO under Section 156(3) CrPC and sent the same along with its annexure for investigation by the police officer concerned. (Para 22)

To proceed under Section 156(3) CrPC, what is required is a bare reading of the complaint and if it discloses a cognizable offence, then the Magistrate instead of applying his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there is sufficient ground for proceeding, may direct the police for investigation. In the case on hand, the Single Judge and the Division Bench of the High Court rightly pointed out that the Magistrate did not apply his mind to the complaint for deciding whether or not there is sufficient ground for proceeding and, therefore, the Magistrate has not committed any illegality in directing the police for investigation. As a matter of fact, even after receipt of a report under Section 173, the Magistrate under Section 190(1)(b) may or may not take cognizance of offence. In other words, he is not bound to take cognizance upon submission of the police report by the investigating officer, hence, by directing the police to file charge-sheet or final report and to hold investigation, it cannot be construed that the Magistrate has exceeded his power as provided in Section 156(3). (Para 23). Srinivas Gundluri v. SEPCO Electric Power Construction Corpn., (2010) 8 SCC 206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-2010]

Devarapalli Lakshminarayana Reddy v. V. Narayana Reddy, (1976) 3 SCC 252: 1976 SCC (Cri) 380; Tula Ram v. Kishore Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 459: 1977 SCC (Cri) 621, relied on

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234, distinguished on facts

Nirmaljit Singh Hoon v. State of W.B., (1973) 3 SCC 753: 1973 SCC (Cri) 521, cited

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

[7146] — Ss. 482, 468, 469(b) & (c), 154 and 473 — Quashing of FIR after filing of charge-sheet not permissible — High Court erred in quashing the FIR on ground of delay in filing it without applying its mind to the limitation provisions contained in Ss. 468, 469(b), (c) and 473 of the Code. State of Punjab v. Dharam Vir Singh Jethi, 1994 SCC (Cri) 500.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1993]

Distinguished in Suneet Gupta v. Anil Triloknath Sharma, (2008) 11 SCC 670

[7147] — Ss. 482 and 2(c) & (d), 154 — Quashment of FIR — Contents of complaint/FIR — Relevance of — Held, for the purpose of finding out commission of a cognizable offence, High Court, while exercising power under S. 482, is only required to look into allegations made in complaint/FIR for concluding whether a prima facie offence has been made out by complainant in complaint/FIR or not (Para 22). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

[7148] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Abuse of process of court — FIR not making out any offence — Rightly quashed — Cheque given by the appellant to respondents bouncing — Appellants filing FIR under Ss. 420/406/468 alleging therein that respondents by an act of conspiracy committed criminal breach of trust by presenting for encashment blank cheques signed by the appellant for a purpose other than that for which the cheque had been given to them and thereby causing to the appellant loss of a certain amount — Apart from the fact that the said allegations did not make out the offence of cheating or criminal breach of trust, attendant circumstances indicating that FIR was lodged to pre-empt the filing of complaint under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act against the appellant — In such circumstances, held, High Court was well within its jurisdiction to quash the FIR as amounting to abuse of the process of court — Hence, High Court's decision called for no interference under Art. 136 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420/406/468 — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Para 5). Sunil Kumar v. Escorts Yamaha Motors Ltd., (1999) 8 SCC 468: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1466: AIR 2000 SC 27.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Punjab National Bank v. Surendra Prasad Sinha, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 499: 1993 SCC (Cri) 149, considered

[7149] — Ss. 482 and 154 — High Court in exercise of its inherent powers cannot quash an FIR just after it was filed, without notice to the complainant. Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613: AIR 1977 SC 2229: 1977 Cri LJ 1900.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.K. Goswami and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-1977]

[7150] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Inherent power under, to quash FIR when cannot be exercised — Allegations in FIR disclosing commission of a cognizable offence — Several aspects of the FIR still to be investigated by the police — Held, High Court erred in quashing the FIR — At that stage the High Court could not go into the question whether offences alleged in the FIR were made out or not — Statutory power of police to investigate cannot be interfered with in exercise of inherent power by High Court — Approach of the High Court in treating the whole matter as though it was an appeal against conviction not proper. Union of India v. B.R. Bajaj, (1994) 2 SCC 277: 1994 SCC (Cri) 477: AIR 1994 SC 1256: 1994 Cri LJ 2086.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1994]

State of Haryana v. Ch. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36, followed

[7151] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Power to quash criminal proceeding — Where FIR ex facie makes out no offence criminal proceeding instituted on the basis of such FIR liable to be quashed — Cheating, forgery, etc — Allegations same against all accused — Prosecution of bank officials and account-holders for withdrawing certain amount from bank by making false credit entries in books of account and connected credit and debit vouchers — No particulars of alleged entries given in FIR — Absence of deliberate intention to cause any wrongful gain or wrongful loss — High Court rightly held that allegations made in FIR did not constitute any offence of cheating or forgery as such proceedings amounted to abuse of process of court — Failure to make entries in books of account cannot be characterised as false entries — Since allegations same against all accused persons entire proceedings and not only against one, as High Court did, liable to be quashed — Penal

Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 468, 471 and 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) read with S. 5(1)(d). State of U.P. v. R.K. Srivastava, (1989) 4 SCC 59: 1989 SCC (Cri) 713: AIR 1989 SC 2222: 1989 Cri LJ 2301.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Dutt, S. Ratnavel Pandian and Dr. T.K. Thommen, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1989]

[7152] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashing of FIR — Where only FIR was registered and no investigation had yet commenced, High Court cannot quash the FIR

By lodging FIR alone no investigation is conducted by the police. It is the first step towards starting investigation by the police. If the High Court was of the opinion that investigation had to be conducted by the Bureau then also there was no need to quash the FIR. The inherent powers of the High Court as recognised in Section 482 of the Code are reserved to be used "to give effect to any orders under the Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice". The High Court overlooked the reality that by quashing the FIR it did not achieve any one of the above factors. On the contrary, the result of quashing the FIR had rendered the allegations of offences made against a person to remain consigned in stupor perennially. Hence, instead of achieving the ends of criminal justice, the impugned order would achieve the reverse of it. (Para 19). State of W.B. v. Narayan K. Patodia, (2000) 4 SCC 447: 2000 SCC (Cri) 812: AIR 2000 SC 1405: 2000 Cri LJ 1811: (2000) 120 STC 370.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2000]

[7153] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Quashing of FIR in exercise of — Scope

High Court ordinarily would not exercise its inherent jurisdiction to quash a criminal proceeding and, in particular, a first information report unless the allegations contained therein, even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, disclosed no cognizable offence. For the said purpose, the Court, save and except in very exceptional circumstances, would not look to any document relied upon by the defence. Such a power should be exercised very sparingly. If the allegations made in the FIR disclose commission of an offence, the Court shall not go beyond the same and pass an order in favour of the accused to hold absence of any mens rea or actus reus. If the allegation discloses a civil dispute, the same by itself may not be a ground to hold that the criminal proceedings should not be allowed to continue. It is furthermore well known that no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down. Each case has to be considered on its own merits. The Court, while exercising its inherent jurisdiction, although would not interfere with a genuine complaint but would not hesitate to exercise its jurisdiction in appropriate cases. One of the paramount duties of the superior courts is to see that a person who is apparently innocent is not subjected to persecution and humiliation on the basis of a false and wholly untenable complaint. (Paras 15 and 16). R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Hamida v. Rashid, (2008) 1 SCC 474: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 234; Sunita Jain v. Pawan Kumar Jain, (2008) 2 SCC 705: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 537; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272; Kailash Verma v. Punjab State Civil Supplies Corpn., (2005) 2 SCC 571: 2005 SCC (Cri) 538; Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781; Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245, considered and relied on [7154] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Specific allegations and definite material to prima facie sustain allegations — Need for — Abetment of suicide — Suicide note of deceased as well as FIR failing to depict any intention of accused (superior officer of deceased) that deceased might commit suicide — Hence held, if prosecution was allowed to continue on basis of such absurd allegations it would be difficult for every superior officer to work — Merely because a person had a grudge against his superior officer and committed suicide on account of that grudge, even honestly feeling that he was wronged, it would still not be a proper allegation for basing charge under S. 306 IPC — As far as S. 294(b) IPC was concerned, there was nothing in FIR or in suicide note to prima facie satisfy ingredients thereof — Neither was there any proximity nor any nexus between so-called suicide (if at all it was one for which also there was no material on record) and any of the alleged acts on part of appellant — Courts in such cases have to be extremely careful as main person is not available for cross-examination by appellant-accused — Unless, therefore, there is specific allegation and material of definite nature (not imaginary or inferential), it would be hazardous to ask appellant-accused to face trial — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 306 and 294(b) (Paras 13 to 18). Madan Mohan Singh v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 8 SCC 628.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2010]

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

Netai Dutta v. State of W.B., (2005) 2 SCC 659: 2005 SCC (Cri) 543; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed [7155] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashing of FIR by High Court by entering into the factual arena — Propriety — Held, the same was wholly impermissible — High Court acted more as an investigating agency at a stage when the FIR was under investigation — Hence, High Court's order set aside (Paras 2 and 3). State of Punjab v. Subhash Kumar, (2004) 13 SCC 437.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2004]

[7156] — Ss. 482 and 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170, 173 — Interference with statutory right of police to make investigation into cognizable offence pursuant to lodging of FIR — A just balance has to be struck between citizen's rights under Arts. 19 and 21 and expansive power of police to make investigation — After registering the FIR and commencing investigation, registering of second FIR or successive FIRs in respect of the same incident and crime and making of fresh investigations pursuant thereto would be irregular which call for interference by High Court under Arts. 226/227 or S. 482 CrPC and interference by Supreme Court under Art. 136 with the fresh investigation to prevent abuse of statutory power of investigation or otherwise to secure ends of justice — Constitution of India — Arts. 226/227 & 136 and 19 & 21

The scheme of CrPC is that an officer in charge of a police station has to commence investigation as provided in Section 156 or 157 CrPC on the basis of entry of the first information report, on coming to know of the commission of a cognizable offence. On completion of investigation and on the basis of the evidence collected, he has to form an opinion under Section 169 or 170 CrPC, as the case may be, and forward his report to the Magistrate concerned under Section 173(2) CrPC. However, even after filing such a report, if he comes into possession of further information or material, he need not register a fresh FIR; he is empowered to make further investigation, normally with the leave of the court, and where during further investigation he collects further evidence, oral or documentary, he is obliged to forward the same with one or more further reports; this is the import of sub-section (8) of Section 173 CrPC. (Para 19)

In the case on hand the second FIR was filed in respect of the same incident and on the same facts after about three years. (Para 22)

The right of the police to investigate into a cognizable offence is a statutory right over which the court does not possess any supervisory jurisdiction under CrPC. This plenary power of the police to investigate a cognizable offence is, however, not unlimited. It is subject to certain well-recognised limitations. (Paras 23 and 24)

A just balance between the fundamental rights of the citizens under Articles 19 and 21 of the Constitution and the expansive power of the police to investigate a cognizable offence has to be struck by the court. The sweeping power of investigation does not warrant subjecting a citizen each time to fresh investigation by the police in respect of the same incident, giving rise to one or more cognizable offences, consequent upon filing of successive FIRs whether before or after filing the final report under Section 173(2) CrPC. It would clearly be beyond the purview of Sections 154 and 156 CrPC, nay, a case of abuse of the statutory power of investigation in a given case. A case of fresh investigation based on the second or successive FIRs, not being a counter-case, filed in connection with the same or connected cognizable offence alleged to have been committed in the course of the same transaction and in respect of which pursuant to the first FIR either investigation is under way or final report under Section 173(2) has been forwarded to the Magistrate, may be a fit case for exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC or under Articles 226/227 of the Constitution. Where the police transgresses its statutory power of investigation the High Court under Section 482 CrPC or Articles 226/227 of the Constitution and the Supreme Court in an appropriate case can interdict the investigation to prevent abuse of the process of the court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. (Paras 27 and 25)

In the present case in truth and substance the essence of the offence in Crimes Nos. 353 and 354 of 1994 is the same as in Crime No. 268 of 1997. In sending information in regard to the same incident, duly enclosing a copy of the report of the Commission of Inquiry to the Inspector General of Police for appropriate action, the Additional Chief Secretary adopted the right course of action. Perhaps the endorsement of the Inspector General of Police for registration of a case misled the subordinate police officers and the said letter with regard to the incident was registered again under Section 154 CrPC which would be the second FIR and, on the facts of this case, was irregular and a fresh investigation by the investigating agency was unwarranted and illegal. On that date the investigations in the earlier cases (Crimes Nos. 353 and 354 of 1994) were pending. The correct course of action should have been to take note of the findings and the contents of the report, streamline the investigation to ascertain the true and correct facts, collect the evidence in support thereof, form an opinion under Sections 169 and 170 CrPC, as the case may be, and forward the report/reports under Section 173(2) or Section 173(8) CrPC to the Magistrate concerned. The course adopted in this case, namely, the registration of the information as the second FIR in regard to the same incident and making a fresh investigation is not permissible under the scheme of the provisions of CrPC. Therefore, the investigation undertaken and the report thereof cannot but be invalid. The same is, therefore, quashed leaving it open to the investigating agency to seek permission in Crime No. 353 or 354 of 1994 of the Magistrate to make further investigation, forward further report or reports and thus proceed in accordance with law. (Para 28). T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, (2001) 6 SCC 181: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048: AIR 2001 SC 2637.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-7-2001]

Ram Lal Narang v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1979) 2 SCC 322: 1979 SCC (Cri) 479; M. Krishna v. State of Karnataka, (1999) 3 SCC 247: 1999 SCC (Cri) 397, distinguished

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18: 46 Cri LJ 413, relied on [7157] — Ss. 482 and 154, 211 & 210 — Quashing of FIR for offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — Stage up to which possible — Where charge-sheet already filed and charges also framed, held, question of quashing FIR does not arise — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406 (Para 14). Manjula Sinha v. State of U.P., (2007) 12 SCC 503: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 271: (2007) 5 All LJ 245.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-2007]

[7158] — Ss. 482 and 156 — Locus standi of institution against which investigation ordered by High Court without providing any opportunity of hearing to it — Held, was entitled to invoke jurisdiction under Art. 136

No judicial order can ever be passed by any court without providing a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the person likely to be affected by such order and particularly when such order results in drastic consequences of affecting one's own reputation. The impugned order of the High Court directing enquiry and investigation into allegations against the appellant institution in respect of which not even a complaint/information has been lodged with the police is violative of principles of natural justice. The Director of the appellant institution has been impleaded as a party respondent in the criminal petition and the whole of the allegations in the anonymous petition are levelled against the appellant and in such a situation it was imperative for the High Court to put the appellant on notice before passing the impugned order. The appellant undoubtedly is aggrieved by the impugned order and, therefore, entitled to invoke the jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution. (Paras 51 to 53). Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9: AIR 2008 SC 1614: (2008) 1 KLT 1042: 2008 Cri LJ 1891: (2008) 64 AIC (SC) 44.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.H. Kapadia and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-2008]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 260: 1993 SCC (Cri) 1171, distinguished on facts

[7159] — Ss. 482, 154 and 156(2) — Quashing of FIR — High Court to proceed entirely on the basis of allegations made in the complaint — If the FIR prima facie discloses commission of an offence the High Court should be reluctant to interfere — Hence High Court erred in quashing the FIR at the stage of investigation overlooking the clear provisions of S. 156(2)

The legal position is well settled that if an offence is disclosed the court will not normally interfere with an investigation into the case and will permit investigation into the offence alleged to be completed. If the FIR, prima facie, discloses the commission of an offence, the court does not normally stop the investigation, for, to do so would be to trench upon the lawful power of the police to investigate into cognizable offences. It is also settled by a long course of decisions of the Supreme Court that for the purpose of exercising its power under Section 482 CrPC to quash an FIR or a complaint, the High Court would have to proceed entirely on the basis of the allegations made in the complaint or the documents accompanying the same per se; it has no jurisdiction to examine the correctness or otherwise of the allegations. (Para 14)

Hence, in the present case, the High Court committed a grave error in accepting the contention of the respondent that the investigating officer had no jurisdiction to investigate the matters on the alleged ground that no part of the offence was committed within the territorial jurisdiction of the police station at Delhi. The appreciation of the evidence is the function of the courts when seized of the matter. At the stage of investigation, the material collected by an investigating officer cannot be judicially scrutinized for arriving at a conclusion that the police station officer of a particular police station would not have territorial jurisdiction. (Para 15). Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503: AIR 1999 SC 3596.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-10-1999]

(8) Interference with investigation/FIR (contd.)

[7160] — Ss. 482 and 157 & 154 — Investigation by police — Judicial review — Investigation stayed at the outset by High Court under Art. 226 — State's appeal before Supreme Court — Court will not go into the question of reliability and proof of allegations made in FIR — Non-filing of written statement on behalf of the State in reply to averments made by accused before High Court explaining and denying the allegations contained in FIR will not lead to any averse inference

As the entire matter stands only at the stage of the registration of the case and the investigation has not at all proceeded with on account of the order of stay granted by the High Court, it is not necessary for the Court at this stage to embark upon an enquiry whether the allegations in the first information report are reliable or not and thereupon to render a finding whether any of the allegations is proved. These are matters which can be examined only by the concerned court after the entire materials are placed before it on a thorough investigation. Court is not called upon to examine the truth or otherwise of each of the instances of the alleged corruption indicted in complaint in snippet form and thereafter string them together and express any opinion either way, since in our view any such opinion may affect the case of either party or cripple the course of investigation.

The non-filing of a written statement by a competent authority of the State Government by way of reply to the averments made in the writ petition cannot also be said to be such a serious flaw at this stage on the part of the appellants that the averments of the respondents can be held as having disproved the entire crimination alleged in the FIR. No adverse inference could be drawn on the mere non-filing of a written statement by the State Government in cases of this nature especially when the matter relates to serious disputed facts, yet to be investigated. The stage is premature and as such the government could not be expected to have in its possession all the details in support of the allegations made in the complaint before any enquiry or investigation is launched and completed. The police officials also cannot be expected to give a detailed reply to the averments made in the writ petition when the investigation has not at all been proceeded with. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[7161] — Ss. 482 and 173(2) — Quashing of FIR by relying on investigation report under S. 173(2) — Permissibility — Question whether High Court entitled to consider investigation report submitted before it — Investigation report neither filed before Magistrate nor a copy of the same supplied to appellant — On facts, held, High Court was wrong in directing report to be submitted before it — It acted in excess of its jurisdiction by relying on investigation report — It is well settled that it is for investigating agency to submit report to Magistrate who may accept or reject it — In compliance with S. 173(2), after completion of investigation, the officer in charge of police station shall forward his report not to High Court where proceedings under S. 482 is pending but to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of offence on such police report — Using report of investigating agency for quashing the FIR or a criminal proceeding, held, cannot be sustained — Hence, it was impermissible for High Court to entertain report of investigating agency before the same could be forwarded and filed before Magistrate concerned in compliance with S. 173(2) — Nor can the High Court direct report to be submitted before it (Paras 17, 18, 20 and 21). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117; Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314, relied on

[7162] — Ss. 482 and 173(8) — Quashing of investigation when not justified — Case registered under Ss. 420, 408 r/w 34 IPC against respondents pursuant to complaint made by appellant company — Nine months later case closed by Investigating Officer — But after transfer of the Investigating Officer, further investigation commenced under direction of Superintendent of Police — State representing that investigation not yet complete and definite conclusion would be reached only on its completion — High Court taking the view that necessary ingredients to make out offence under S. 415 IPC not satisfied, quashing the investigation under S. 482 — Held, High Court was not justified in quashing the investigation which was still under way — Constitution of India — Art. 226

The investigation into an offence is a statutory function of the police and the superintendence thereof is vested in the State Government and the court is not justified without any compelling and justifiable reason to interfere with the investigation. Jayant Vitamins Ltd. v. Chaitanyakumar, (1992) 4 SCC 15: 1992 SCC (Cri) 793: AIR 1992 SC 1930: (1992) 2 An WR 41 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-1992]

(9) Adverse remarks and their expunction

[7163] — S. 482 — Expunction of remarks — Observation of High Court against a doctor that he was not fit to be retained in Government service — Such observation mainly based on statement of the Investigating Officer who was himself responsible for the irregularities alleged to have been committed by the doctor — Doctor not disowning those irregularities which by themselves could happen in discharge of official duty — Held, observation of the High Court amounts to condemning the doctor without being heard — Observation quashed — Constitution of India — Art. 136. I.B. Gupta (Dr.) v. State of U.P., 1994 Supp (2) SCC 37: 1994 SCC (Cri) 691.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-1993]

[7164] — S. 482 — Disparaging remarks made by High Court against a non-material witness on the basis of erroneous view taken in the case, held in the circumstances, uncalled for and must be expunged — Constitution of India — Art. 136

Harsh or disparaging remarks are not to be made against persons and authorities whose conduct comes into consideration before courts of law unless it is really necessary for the decision of the case, as an integral part thereof to animadvert on that conduct. Having regard to the hearsay nature of evidence of the appellant who was not a material witness in the case, it was not necessary at all for the High Court to have animadverted on the conduct of the appellant for the purpose of allowing the appeal of the first respondent. Even assuming that a serious evaluation of the evidence of the appellant was really called for in the appeal, the remarks of the appellate Judge should be in conformity with the settled practice of courts to observe sobriety, moderation and reserve. The higher the forum and the greater the powers, the greater the need for restraint and the more mellowed the reproach should be. Niranjan Patnaik v. Sashibhusan Kar, (1986) 2 SCC 569: 1986 SCC (Cri) 196: AIR 1986 SC 819: 1986 Cri LJ 911.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Balakrishna Eradi and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-1986]

[7165] — S. 482 — Uncalled for observations — Restraint — Necessity — Held, observations coming from higher courts may have their own effect of influencing course of events and process of law — Hence, no uncalled-for observations should be made while disposing of matters, more so, without hearing persons likely to be affected

In the present case, the High Court did not record any reasons whatsoever why and for what reasons, the matter required its interference. The High Court is not expected to make any casual observations without having any regard to the possible consequences that may ensue from such observations. Observations coming from the higher courts may have their own effect of influencing the course of events and process of law. For that reason, no uncalled-for observations are to be made while disposing of the matters and that too without hearing the persons likely to be affected. The case on hand is itself a classic illustration as to how such observations could result in drastic consequences of far-reaching in nature. (Para 37). D. Venkatasubramaniam v. M.K. Mohan Krishnamachari, (2009) 10 SCC 488: (2009) 82 AIC 245 (SC): (2009) 3 APLJ 205 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

[7166] — S. 482 — Expunging of remarks made by High Court under — Interim order of stay preventing a person, charged with serious offences under Official Secrets Act and Atomic Energy Act, from going abroad obtained by State from a Single Judge of High Court by filing fresh petition under Art. 227 of the Constitution read with S. 482 CrPC, stating correct facts, instead of approaching the Division Bench before which the main writ petition of that person was pending — Held, procedure adopted being legal and correct facts having been stated for obtaining the stay order, no mala fides, legal or factual, can be imputed to the State and Public Prosecutor — Hence strictures passed against them by High Court of 'sharp practice', suppression of facts, fraud etc. unwarranted. State of Maharashtra v. Dr. Budhikota Subbarao, (1993) 3 SCC 71: 1993 SCC (Cri) 597.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1993]

[7167] — S. 482 — High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction may, in certain cases, pass adverse remarks against investigator, prosecutor or judicial officer even though they may not be before it and may also later on direct expunction thereof suo motu or at the instance of the person aggrieved

In certain situations, the court exercises a wider jurisdiction e.g. it may pass adverse remarks against an investigator or a prosecutor or a judicial officer, although they are not before it. Expunction of such remarks may also be directed by the High Court at a later stage even suo motu or at the instance of the person aggrieved. (Para 28). Popular Muthiah v. State, (2006) 7 SCC 296: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 245.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-7-2006]

Distinguished in Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542

(9) Adverse remarks and their expunction (contd.)

[7168] — S. 482 — Passing of strictures by High Court — Passing of strictures by higher court against the lower court/authority merely because the higher court prefers a different view not justified (Para 16). Amresh Tiwari v. Lalta Prasad Dubey, (2000) 4 SCC 440: 2000 SCC (Cri) 806: AIR 2000 SC 1504: 2000 Cri LJ 2226: 2000 All LJ 1095.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, D.P. Mohapatra and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-4-2000]

[7169] — S. 482 — Petition for expunction of adverse remarks by member of subordinate judiciary — In limine dismissal of — Propriety — Adverse remarks made against appellant Judicial Magistrate, First Class by Sessions Judge — Appellant Magistrate acquitting two accused in a dowry case — Sessions Judge convicting one of the two accused in a trial for altogether different offences, and making said remarks against appellant in its judgment — High Court dismissing appellant's petition under S. 482 CrPC for expunction of said remarks, in limine — The evidence relating to the dowry case which had been heard by the appellant not before the Sessions judge in the case in which strictures were passed but only a copy of the judgment given by the appellant on record in the sessions trial — Held, it cannot be understood how the Sessions Judge without record and evidence of the case came to the conclusion that acquittal by the appellant was not justified — Instead of remanding the case back to the High Court, having regard to the long pendency of the matter and having perused the material before it, Supreme Court itself ordering expunction of said remarks — Constitution of India — Art. 136

The appellant as a judicial officer (Judicial Magistrate, Ist Class, Dhanbad), by judgment dated 6-5-1997 trying a case under Section 498-A IPC and Sections 3/4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, acquitted the two accused who had been charged for the said offence, giving them the benefit of doubt. The Sessions Judge, Dhanbad, trying altogether a different case for offences under Sections 364, 302 and Section 201 read with Section 34 of the Penal Code, by judgment dated 7-2-1998 convicted one of the accused and acquitted the other. In the course of the judgment, the Sessions Judge made observations in respect of the order of acquittal dated 6-5-1997 which had been passed by the appellant. Soon after passing the judgment, learned District and Sessions Judge by issue of notice dated 3-3-1998 to the appellant, asked him to furnish explanation as to the circumstances under which the order of acquittal was passed. In that notice it was stated that the order of acquittal was based on extraneous considerations.

This appeal was directed against the judgment of the High Court whereby petition filed under Section 482 CrPC by the appellant for expunging the remarks against him as contained in the judgment of learned Sessions Judge dated 7-2-1998, was dismissed.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It does not appear that the evidence that had been led in the case decided by the appellant was before the Sessions Judge in the case in which the said strictures were passed. Only a copy of the judgment was placed on the record of the sessions trial by the accused by way of defence. Moreover, it was a detailed judgment setting out the evidence in the case and recording reasons for the order of acquittal. It cannot be understood how the Sessions Judge without record and evidence of the case came to the conclusion that the acquittal by the appellant was not justified and the accused should have been convicted. (Para 5)

In this appeal the question is not about the validity or otherwise of the show-cause notice dated 3-3-1998 issued to the appellant asking him to furnish explanation as to the circumstances under which the order of acquittal was passed but is about the correctness of the strictures passed and the order of the High Court declining to expunge the remarks when a petition under Section 482 was filed by the appellant. The only reason given by the High Court is that the case does not require interference. The petition was dismissed in limine without issuance of notice to the respondents. Further, it appears that the observations in the impugned judgment of the High Court that no show-cause notice had been issued to the appellant, are also not correct, since the show-cause notice dated 3-3-1998 had been issued. A perusal of petition under Section 482 CrPC shows that the notice dated 3-3-1998 had been annexed thereto. (Para 5)

In view of the aforesaid factual position, ordinarily the case would have been remanded to the High Court for fresh decision of the petition under Section 482 CrPC. But, having regard to the long pendency of the matter and having perused the material placed before it, the Supreme Court has no doubt that on the present facts and circumstances, there was no justification for passing the strictures against the appellant. In this view, the strictures passed against the appellant in para 20 of the judgment dated 7-2-1998 rendered in Sessions Trial No.

364 of 1995 by the Sessions Judge, Dhanbad are expunged. (Paras 6 and 7). Anjani K. Verma v. State of Bihar, (2004) 11 SCC 188.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

[7170] — Ss. 482 and 156(3) — Powers of High Court under S. 482 against a complaint case — Held, do not extend to making comments on averments contained in the complaint — Petition under S. 482 for issuing directions to CJM and CBI regarding investigation in cases — CJM under S. 156(3) directing CBI to conduct investigation — High Court upholding no necessity of entrusting investigation to CBI or any other agency — Sessions Judge setting aside CJM's order — Setting aside impugned judgment, held, High Court should not have commented on averments made in complaint when it was yet to be forwarded by the Magistrate to the police — Finding on merits at a premature stage of pending investigation, held, would be prejudicial to investigation agency and accused as well. Om Prakash Chugh v. State of Haryana, (2000) 10 SCC 612: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1515: AIR 2000 SC 2477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2000]

[7171] — Ss. 482 and 354 — Disparaging remarks affecting character, professional competence and integrity made by High Court against a police officer conducting investigation — CMP filed before High Court by certain other police personnel for expunction of strictures passed against them by Sessions Judge — Held, adverse comments against the appellant police officer were beyond the scope of inquiry in the CMP — High Court committed procedural error in not affording hearing to the appellant in compliance with principles of natural justice and also failed to keep in mind the settled principles laid down in Mohd. Naim case before making the disparaging remarks — On merits also such comments unwarranted — High Court not justified in passing remarks of such serious nature against the appellant — Hence the remarks expunged — CPC, 1908, Or. 20, R. 4. S.K. Viswambaran v. E. Koyakunju, (1987) 2 SCC 109: 1987 SCC (Cri) 289: AIR 1987 SC 1436: 1987 Cri LJ 1175.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.C. Ray and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1987]

[7172] — Ss. 482 and 437 — Adverse remarks — If warranted — Granting bail on the ground of an infirmity in evidence in the criminal trial, held, was not a glaring mistake or impropriety so as to attract adverse remarks and suggestion for initiation of action against the Judge-Subordinate, from the High Court Judge — Proper course to be adopted in such a case, stated — Constitution of India, Art. 235

The appellant was a Judicial Officer in the Superior Judicial Service in the State of Bihar. In a case, in which a bail application had been rejected by his predecessor, he granted bail on the ground that the evidence of test identification parade of the culprits gathered by the investigation, an evidence important in a dacoity case, was highly suspicious inasmuch as the witnesses who were made to participate in the same, had already on their own disclosed the names of the accused committing the crime, to the Investigating Officer. A Single Judge of the High Court, while setting aside the appellant's order and cancelling the bail, passed serious remarks against the appellant and proposed disciplinary action against him. Allowing his appeal and expunging the said remarks,

Held :

The courts exercising bail jurisdiction normally do and should refrain from indulging in elaborate reasoning in their orders in justification of grant or non-grant of bail. For, in that manner, the principle of "presumption of innocence of an accused" gets jeopardized; and the structural principle of "not guilty till proved guilty" gets destroyed, even though all sane elements have always understood that such views are tentative and not final, so as to affect the merit of the matter. Here, the appellant has been caught and exposed to a certain adverse comment and action solely because in reasoning he had disclosed his mind while granting bail. This may have been avoidable on his part, but in terms not such a glaring mistake or impropriety so as to visit the remarks that the High Court has chosen to pass on him as well as to initiate action against him, as proposed.

Whenever any such intolerable error is detected by or pointed out to a superior court, it is functionally required to correct that error and may, here and there, in an appropriate case, and in a manner befitting, maintaining the dignity of the court and independence of judiciary, convey its message in its judgment to the officer concerned through a process of reasoning, essentially persuasive, reasonable, mellow but clear, and result-orienting, but rarely as a rebuke. The premise that a Judge committed a mistake or an error beyond the limits of tolerance, is no ground to inflict condemnation on the Judge-Subordinate, unless there existed something else and for exceptional grounds. Kashi Nath Roy v. State of Bihar, (1996) 4 SCC 539: 1996 SCC (Cri) 789: AIR 1996 SC 3240.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-1996]

Lala Pandey v. State of Bihar, Cri Misc. No. 12034 of 1991, modified

(9) Adverse remarks and their expunction (contd.)

[7173] — S. 482 r/w Art. 227 of Constitution of India — Adverse remarks by High Court against Metropolitan Magistrate — On facts directed to be expunged — Conduct of subordinate judiciary — Power of superior court to express its opinion and make even critical observations regarding the conduct of judicial and quasi-judicial authorities, held, is undeniable, but the power is to be exercised only when necessary for the purpose of reaching a decision on the main controversy before it and only after giving the person or authority criticised a chance to explain — Any passage in an order or judgment may be expunged if (i) the passage is wholly irrelevant and unjustifiable; (ii) retaining it would cause serious harm to the persons to whom it refers; and (iii) expunction would not affect the reasons for the judgment — Petitioner a Metropolitan Magistrate issuing process under Ss. 380, 201 and 120-B IPC against PWD officials who had constructed, for courtroom of Metropolitan Magistrate, a judge's dais, which was not fit to be used as it was too high, almost reaching the ceiling fan, and later without consultation or authority had cut off a portion of it — Officials filing petition under S. 482 CrPC r/w Art. 227 of Constitution of India, seeking to have proceedings quashed — Held, High Court rightly quashed the criminal proceedings against the PWD officials, but erred in observing that petitioner Metropolitan Magistrate had been guilty of "gross abuse of process of court" of "defying all judicial norms" and that she had aimed to "pressurise" the officials into functioning as "desired by her" — These remarks were not necessary for the decision of the case — Adverse remarks expunged from order of High Court and also CR of petitioner — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 380, 201 and 120-B

K, the special leave petitioner in the present case was a serving judicial officer posted as Metropolitan Magistrate in Delhi. The controversy arose after the construction of a judge's dais for the petitioner's courtroom. The dais according to the petitioner K was not fit to be used, being shaped like a box and much too high; if she were to use it, her head would touch the ceiling fan and also the angle was such that she would be unable to see the arguing counsel, the litigants and the courtroom staff. The PWD officials responsible for the job made no response even to the District and Sessions Judge, who tried to communicate with them. The petitioner K then initiated proceedings under the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 and issued show-cause notices to some of the PWD officials.

While the contempt proceedings were pending, PWD people came and cut off part of the dais and removed that portion. At this point K took cognizance of offences under Sections 380, 201 and 120-B IPC and issued process against the PWD officers and directed them to appear before her.

The accused persons filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC r/w Article 227 of the Constitution and sought the quashing of both sets of proceedings. Meanwhile, being satisfied with their response to the contempt notice, K herself directed that it be discharged. The High Court ultimately heard the petition only in respect of the offences under IPC. The High Court directed that the criminal proceedings be quashed and observed in the operative part of its order that "the Magistrate wanted to rope in the petitioners in a criminal case in order to pressurise them to have the dais in Courtroom No. 8 and other civil work as noted in the petition carried out as desired by her"; that K was guilty of "defying all judicial norms" and that her order was a "gross abuse of the process of court".

Aggrieved by the critical observations of the High Court, K came in SLP before the Supreme Court and sought to have the remarks expunged. It was pointed out on her behalf that the remarks had been mentioned in her annual confidential record and would thus adversely affect her future career.

Disposing of the petition,

Held :

A Judge entrusted with the task of administering justice should be bold and feel fearless while acting judicially and giving expression to his views and constructing his judgment or order. It should be no deterrent to formation and expression of an honest opinion and acting thereon so long as it is within four-corners of law that any action taken by a subordinate judicial officer is open to scrutiny in judicial review before a superior forum with which its opinion may not meet approval and the superior court may upset his action or opinion. The availability of such fearlessness is essential for the maintenance of judicial independence. However, sobriety, cool, calm and poise should be reflected in every action and expression of a Judge. (Para 7)

The primary purpose of pronouncing a verdict is to dispose of the matter in controversy between the parties before it. A Judge is not expected to drift away from pronouncing upon the controversy, to sitting in judgment over the conduct of the judicial and quasi-judicial authorities whose decisions or orders are put in issue before him, and indulge in criticising and commenting thereon unless the conduct of an authority or subordinate functionary or anyone else than the parties comes of necessity under review and expression of opinion thereon going to the extent of commenting or criticising becomes necessary as a part of reasoning requisite for arriving at a conclusion necessary for deciding the main controversy or it becomes necessary to have animadverted thereon for the purpose of arriving at a decision on an issue involved in the litigation. This applies with added force when the superior court is hearing an appeal or revision against an order of a subordinate judicial officer and feels inclined to animadvert on him. (Para 8)

Again, derogatory remarks ought not to be made against persons or authorities whose conduct comes into consideration unless it is absolutely necessary for the decision of the case to animadvert on their conduct. (Para 14)

The courts do have power to express opinion, make observations and even offer criticism on the conduct of anyone coming within their gaze of judicial review but the question is one of impelling need, justification and propriety. (Para 9)

A Subordinate Judge faced with disparaging and undeserving remarks made by a court of superior jurisdiction is not without any remedy. He may approach the High Court invoking its inherent jurisdiction seeking expunction of objectionable remarks which jurisdiction vests in the High Court by virtue of its being a court of record and possessing inherent powers as also the power of superintendence. (Para 11)

However, if a similar relief is sought for against remarks or observations contained in judgment or order of the High Court the aggrieved judicial officer can, in exceptional cases, approach the Supreme Court also invoking its jurisdiction under Articles 136 and/or 142 of the Constitution. (Para 11)

Any passage from an order or judgment may be expunged or directed to be expunged subject to satisfying the following tests: (i) that the passage complained of is wholly irrelevant and unjustifiable; (ii) that its retention on the records will cause serious harm to the persons to whom it refers; (iii) that its expunction will not affect the reasons for the judgment or order. (Para 11)

Though the power to make remarks or observations is there but on being questioned, the exercise of power must withstand judicial scrutiny on the touchstone of following tests: (a) whether the party whose conduct is in question is before the court or has an opportunity of explaining or defending himself; (b) whether there is evidence on record bearing on that conduct justifying the remarks; and (c) whether it is necessary for the decision of the case, as an integral part thereof, to animadvert on that conduct. The overall test is that the criticism or observation must be judicial in nature and should not formally depart from sobriety, moderation and reserve. (Para 12)

Under the constitutional scheme control over the district courts and courts subordinate thereto has been vested in the High Courts. The control so vested is administrative, judicial and disciplinary. The role of High Court is also of a friend, philosopher and guide of judiciary subordinate to it. The strength of power is not displayed solely in cracking a whip on errors, mistakes or failures; the power should be so wielded as to have propensity to prevent and to ensure exclusion of repetition if committed once innocently or unwittingly. "Pardon the error but not its repetition". (Para 15)

The existence of power in higher echelons of judiciary to make observations even extending to criticism incorporated in judicial orders cannot be denied. However, the High Courts have to remember that criticisms and observations touching a subordinate judicial officer incorporated in judicial pronouncements have their own mischievous infirmities. Firstly, the judicial officer is condemned unheard which is violative of principles of natural justice. A member of subordinate judiciary himself dispensing justice should not be denied this minimal natural justice so as to shield against being condemned unheard. (Para 15)

Secondly, the harm caused by such criticism or observation may be incapable of being undone. Such criticism of the judicial officer contained in a judgment, reportable or not, is a pronouncement in the open and therefore becomes public. (Para 15)

Thirdly, human nature being what it is, such criticism of a judicial officer contained in the judgment of a higher court gives the litigating party a sense of victory not only over his opponent but also over the Judge who had decided the case against him. This is subversive of judicial authority of the deciding Judge. Fourthly, seeking expunging of the observations by a judicial officer by filing an appeal or petition of his own reduces him to the status of a litigant arrayed as a party before the High Court or Supreme Court — a situation not very happy from the point of view of the functioning of the judicial system. (Para 15)

And last but not the least, the possibility of a single or casual aberration of an otherwise honest, upright and righteous Judge being caught unawares in the net of adverse observations cannot be ruled out. Such an incident would have a seriously demoralising effect not only on him but also on his colleagues. If all this is avoidable why should it not be avoided? (Para 15)

Also, the remarks made in a judicial order of the High Court against a member of subordinate judiciary even if expunged would not completely restitute and restore the harmed Judge from the loss of dignity and honour suffered by him. (Para 17)

However, the foregoing must not be understood as meaning that any conduct of a subordinate judicial officer unbecoming of him and demanding a rebuff should be simply overlooked. But there is an alternate safer and advisable course available to choose. The conduct of a judicial officer, unworthy of him, having come to the notice of a Judge of the High Court hearing a matter on the judicial side, the lis may be disposed of by pronouncing upon the merits thereof as found by him but avoiding in the judicial pronouncement criticism of, or observations on the "conduct" of the subordinate judicial officer who had decided the case under scrutiny. Simultaneously, but separately, in-office proceedings may be drawn up inviting attention of Hon'ble Chief Justice to the facts describing the conduct of the Subordinate Judge concerned by sending a confidential letter or note to the Chief Justice. It will thereafter be open to the Chief Justice to deal with the subordinate judicial officer either at his own level or through the Inspecting Judge or by placing the matter before the full court for its consideration. The action so taken would all be on the administrative side. The Subordinate Judge concerned would have an opportunity of clarifying his position or putting forth the circumstances under which he acted. He would not be condemned unheard and if the decision be adverse to him, it being on administrative side, he would have some remedy available to him under the law. He would not be rendered remediless. (Para 16)

In the present case it may be that the learned Metropolitan Magistrate in initiating contempt proceedings and taking cognizance of substantive offences under the Indian Penal Code against the officials of Public Works Department was not properly advised or was at the worst indulging in a misadventure and therefore to the extent of quashing of the proceedings by the High Court no interference may be required. Also no one has come up to the Supreme Court complaining against the merits of that part of the order of the High Court by which criminal proceedings have been quashed. Nevertheless, the ill-advised move or misadventure of the learned Metropolitan Magistrate was neither a misconduct nor an outcome of malice. Though she acted in a way which did not meet the approval of the High Court, the facts and the circumstances of the case point out that her only desire was to make her courtroom functional. Probably she felt aggrieved, rather agitated, by the apathy of the Public Works Department people who were taking things too easy, unmindful of the practical difficulties faced by the Presiding Judge occupying the courtroom and discharging judicial functions. The fact remains that the observations were made by the High Court without affording the Metropolitan Magistrate an opportunity of explaining or defending herself. The remarks were not necessary for the decision of the case by the High Court as an integral part thereof. (Para 19)

Expunging of the remarks will not affect the reasons for the judgment of the High Court. On the other hand, the remarks have a potential to prejudice the career of the appellant. (Para 19)

The following portions occurring in the judgment of the High Court are directed to be expunged:

"The manner in which the cognizance of the said offences came to be taken clearly suggest that the Magistrate wanted to rope in the petitioners in a criminal case in order to pressurise them to have the dais in Courtroom No. 8 and other civil work as noted in the petition carried out as desired by her"

"defying all judicial norms"

"being gross abuse of process of court". (Para 21). K, A Judicial Officer, In re, (2001) 3 SCC 54: AIR 2001 SC 972: 2001 Cri LJ 1157: (2001) 1 KLT 707: (2001) 1 SLR 581.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and R.C. Lahoti, J. [Date of decision: 8-2-2001]

A.M. Mathur v. Pramod Kumar Gupta, (1990) 2 SCC 533; Niranjan Patnaik v. Sashibhusan Kar, (1986) 2 SCC 569: 1986 SCC (Cri) 196; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 2 SCR 336: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; State of U.P. v. Mohd. Naim, AIR 1964 SC 703: (1964) 2 SCR 363: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 549, relied on

Panchanan Banerji v. Upendra Nath Bhattacharji, AIR 1927 All 193: 27 Cri LJ 1407: 25 All LJ 100; Philip William Ravanshawe Hardless v. Gladys Isabel Hardless, AIR 1940 Lah 82, approved

(10) Practice and Procedure

[7174] — S. 482 — New plea — Contention of law — Held, contention of law not urged in application under S. 561-A to the High Court can be allowed to be taken at the stage of arguments — CrPC, 1898, S. 561-A. Deepak Sarkar v. State of Bihar, (1977) 1 SCC 494: 1977 SCC (Cri) 128: AIR 1977 SC 1665: 1977 Cri LJ 1437.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.C. Gupta and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-12-1976]

[7175] — Ss. 482, 203 and 227 — Issue of show-cause before setting aside impugned order — Before setting aside the discharge order passed by the trial court in favour of the appellant, the High Court should have served a notice upon him asking him to show cause as to why the aforesaid order be not set aside — Matter remanded to High Court for disposal afresh — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(d) r/w S. 13(2) — Penal Code, 1860, S. 120-B

The admitted position is that before exercising the powers under Section 482, the High Court did not think it proper to serve a notice upon the appellant asking him to show cause against the proposed order for setting aside the order of discharge passed in his favour by the trial court. Under such circumstances, without commenting upon the merits of the case, it is held that the ends of justice would be served if the case is remanded back to the High Court for passing fresh orders after affording the appellant an opportunity of being heard. (Para 7). Dinesh Dutt Joshi v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 570: 2002 SCC (Cri) 24.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-10-2001]

[7176] — S. 482 — Procedure of oral applications and oral appeals and grant of interim orders of stay by Court on that basis deprecated — Constitution of India, Art. 226. Eastern Spg. Mills v. Rajiv Poddar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 385: AIR 1985 SC 1668.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: D.A. Desai, V. Balakrishna Eradi and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1984]

See Samarias Trading Co. (P) Ltd. v. S. Samuel, (1984) 4 SCC 666

[7177] — Ss. 482/397 — Whether High Court has jurisdiction under, to grant relief in respect of which no specific prayer made by the party in the petition — Whether Supreme Court in appeal under Art. 136 would take serious notice where High Court grants such a relief

Per A.P. Sen, J.

The High Court was not justified in quashing the entire proceedings when no such prayer was made in the application under S. 482, CrPC. In the revision all that the respondent wanted was that the magistrate should not proceed to record the plea of the accused persons under S. 251 without perusing the enquiry report under S. 91.

Per Chinnappa Reddy, J. (concurring)

The prayer in the application before the High Court was merely to quash the order of the magistrate and not to quash the complaint itself as the High Court has done. But that was only a technical defect and the Supreme Court does not take serious notice of it in an appeal under Art. 136 where the Court is very naturally concerned with substantial justice and not with shadow puppetry.

Per Baharul Islam, J. (dissenting)

The omission in the prayer portion of a petition of a part of the claim, particularly in a criminal case, is not fatal. The High Court in its revisional jurisdiction can always grant suitable relief justified by law as well as facts and circumstances of a particular case.

That apart, Art. 136 of the Constitution gives wide and discretionary power to the Supreme Court. This power is to be sparingly exercised to meet ends of justice, to enhance justice and remove miscarriage of justice in a particular case. It does not exercise such powers for academic reasons but for practical purpose. Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjia, (1981) 3 SCC 208: 1981 SCC (Cri) 698: AIR 1981 SC 1514.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy[2], A.P. Sen[1] and Baharul Islam[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1981]

(11) Quashment of proceedings

Synopsis

(i)	Power of quashment under — Nature and scope	724
(ii)	Anticipatory quashment — Power if any	731
(iii)	Maintainability	731
(iv)	Admission of quashment petition — Effect	739
(v)	Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed	739
(vi)	Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered	742
(vii)	Non-quashment — Issue of other directions	772
(viii)	Effect of rejection of quashment application	775
(ix)	General grounds for quashment	775
(x)	Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment	788
(xi)	Lack of jurisdiction of court/forum below	798
(xii)	Mala fides or animus of complainant	800
(xiii)	Quashment re private complaints	807

Synopsis (contd.)

(xiv) Errors of procedure by courts/authorities below 809
(xv) Other specific grounds for quashment 812
(xvi) Defence case when to be considered/Accused heard at stage of quashment 818
(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending 821
(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. 837
(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies 865
(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases 875
(xxi) Quashment re defamation allegations 890
(xxii) Quashment re taxation offences 896
(xxiii) Quashment/stay re ecological offences/environmental matters 902
(xxiv) Quashment in food/liquor/drugs/chemicals offences 907
(xxv) Quashment re NDPS Act offences 916
(xxvi) Quashment re caste related offences 917
(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes 919
(xxviii) Quashment re sexual offences 931
(xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences 932
(xxx) Quashment re other offences 944
(xxxi) Multiple/Successive petitions under/Restoration/Review, etc. 951
(xxxii) Practice and procedure re disposal of quashment application 952

(i) Power of quashment under — Nature and scope

[7178] — S. 482 — Expression "the rarest of rare cases" used after "sparingly and with circumspection" — Use of, while describing scope of S. 482 CrPC, considered — Held, those words merely emphasise and reiterate what is intended to be conveyed by the words "sparingly and with circumspection" — Expression "the rarest of rare cases" is not used in the sense in which it is used with reference to punishment for offences under S. 302 IPC, but to emphasise that power under S. 482 CrPC to quash the FIR or criminal proceedings should be used sparingly and with circumspection — It may not therefore be correct to say that the words "the rarest of rare cases" are appropriate only when considering death sentence for an offence under S. 302 IPC or that those words are inappropriate when referring to the ambit of the power to be exercised under S. 482 CrPC

The appellant filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC for setting aside the order passed by the court below taking cognizance of an offence punishable under Section 30(3) of the Karnataka Shops and Commercial Establishments Act, 1961 for violation of Section 25 of the Act, in the complaint lodged against him, and for quashing the complaint. The High Court rejected the prayer for quashing the complaint, but altered the offence in respect of which cognizance was taken. The said order of the High Court was challenged by the appellant in appeal before the Supreme Court.

In view of the difference of opinion on legal issues, the appeal was directed to be placed before the Chief Justice of India for appropriate orders, though both the learned Judges concurred that the appeal should be dismissed. The matter was accordingly placed before the Bench of three Judges.

Though the learned Judges did not set down the legal issues, the following two issues were discerned from their opinions:

(i) Whether the power under Section 482 CrPC should be exercised "sparingly" or "sparingly and with circumspection and in the rarest of rare cases"?

(ii) Whether the recommendations and directions relating to anticipatory bail and enforcement of the directions relating to arrest laid down in Joginder Kumar case, (1994) 4 SCC 260 were warranted in this case?

Answering the said questions,

Held :

When the words "the rarest of rare cases" are used after the words "sparingly and with circumspection" while describing the scope of Section 482 CrPC, those words merely emphasise and reiterate what is intended to be conveyed by the words "sparingly and with circumspection". They mean that the power under Section 482 CrPC to quash proceedings should not be used mechanically or routinely, but with care and caution, only when a clear case for quashing is made out and failure to interfere would lead to a miscarriage of justice. The expression "the rarest of rare cases" is not used in the sense in which it is used with reference to punishment for offences under Section 302 IPC, but to emphasise that the power under Section 482 CrPC to quash the FIR or criminal proceedings should be used sparingly and with circumspection. It may not therefore be correct to say that the words "the rarest of rare cases" are appropriate only when considering death sentence for an offence under Section 302 IPC or that those words are inappropriate when referring to the ambit of the power to be exercised under Section 482 CrPC. (Paras 9 and 7). Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2008 SC 1528: 2008 Cri LJ 1927: (2008) 63 AIC 42 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2008]

Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

[7179] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Scope of High Court's power to quash criminal proceedings in exercise of power under Arts. 226 and 227 or S. 482 CrPC — Nomenclature under which petition filed not relevant — Petition under Art. 226 can be treated as one under Art. 227 or S. 482 CrPC — Power of the court to discharge the accused at the stage of framing of charge or existence of remedy of appeal and revision not a bar to invoke the jurisdiction of the High Court under Art. 227 or 482 CrPC — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 227

It is settled that the High Court can exercise its power of judicial review in criminal matters. Under Article 227 the power of superintendence by the High Court is not only of administrative nature but is also of judicial nature. This article confers vast powers on the High Court to prevent the abuse of the process of law by the inferior courts and to see that the stream of administration of justice remains clean and pure. The power conferred on the High Court under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution and under Section 482 of the Code have no limits but more the power more due care and caution is to be exercised while invoking these powers. When the exercise of powers could be under Article 227 or Section 482 of the Code it may not always be necessary to invoke the provisions of Article 226.

Nomenclature under which petition is filed is not quite relevant and that does not debar the court from exercising its jurisdiction which otherwise it possesses unless there is special procedure prescribed which procedure is mandatory. If in a case like the present one the court finds that the appellants could not invoke its jurisdiction under Article 226, the court can certainly treat the petition as one under Article 227 or Section 482 of the Code. It may not however, be lost sight of that provisions exist in the code of revision and appeal but some time for immediate relief Section 482 of the Code or Article 227 may have to be resorted to for correcting some grave errors that might be committed by the subordinate courts. The present petition though filed in the High Court as one under Articles 226 and 227 could well be treated under Article 227 of the Constitution.

No doubt the Magistrate can discharge the accused at any stage of the trial if he considers the charge to be groundless, but that does not mean that the accused cannot approach the High Court under Section 482 of the Code or Article 227 of the Constitution to have the proceeding quashed against him when the complaint does not make out any case against him and still he must undergo the agony of a criminal trial. Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400: AIR 1998 SC 128: 1998 Cri LJ 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sujata V. Manohar and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-1998]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Waryam Singh v. Amarnath, AIR 1954 SC 215: 1954 SCR 565; Bathutmal Raichand Oswal v. Laxmibai R. Tarta, (1975) 1 SCC 858; Nagendra Nath Bora v. Commr. of Hills Division, AIR 1958 SC 398: 1958 SCR 1240, followed

Distinguished on facts in Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542

[7180] — S. 482 — Nature and scope of power under Art. 142 of the constitution — Circumstances when criminal proceedings can be quashed, laid down — Considerations for exercise of power under S. 482 CrPC to be kept in view — Constitution of India, Art. 142

Regarding the nature and ambit of power under Article 142 of the Constitution it has been held advisable to leave it undefined and uncatalogued so that it remains elastic enough to be moulded to suit the given situation; even where no alternative remedy is efficacious due to lapse of time. What would be the need of "complete justice" in a cause or matter would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case and while exercising that power the Court would take into consideration the express provisions of a substantive statute. Any prohibition or restriction contained in ordinary laws cannot act as a limitation on the constitutional power of the Supreme Court. Once the Supreme Court has seisin of a cause or matter before it, it has power to issue any order or direction to do "complete justice" in the matter. There is no doubt regarding the well-settled law that in case of persons against whom prima facie case is made out and charge-sheet is filed in the competent court, it is that court which will then deal with the case on merits in accordance with law and the High Court should not, except in extraordinary circumstances, exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC so as to quash the prosecution proceedings after they have been lodged. (Paras 44 to 46)

(11)(i) Power of quashment under — Nature and scope (contd.)

Under Article 142 of the Constitution of India, the Supreme Court in exercise of its jurisdiction may pass such decree or make such order as is necessary for doing complete justice in any "cause" or "matter" pending before it. The expression "cause" or "matter" would include any proceeding pending in court and it would cover almost every kind of proceeding in court including civil or criminal. If the Court is satisfied that the proceedings in a criminal case are being utilised for oblique purposes or if the same are continued on manufactured and false evidence or if no case is made out on the admitted facts, it would be in the ends of justice to set aside or quash the criminal proceedings. Once the Supreme Court is satisfied that the criminal proceedings amount to abuse of process of court, it would quash such proceedings to ensure justice. (Para 45)

Though there is no provision like Section 482 CrPC conferring express power on the Supreme Court to quash or set aside any criminal proceedings pending before a criminal court to prevent abuse of process of the court, but the inherent power of the Supreme Court under Article 142 coupled with the plenary and residuary powers under Articles 32 and 136 embraces power to quash criminal proceedings pending before any court to do complete justice in the matter before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court's power under Article 142(1) to do "complete justice" is entirely of different level and of a different quality. (Para 45). Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 649: AIR 2008 SC 2781: (2008) 67 AIC 106 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

DDA v. Skipper Construction Co. (P) Ltd., (1996) 4 SCC 622; Vinay Chandra Mishra, In re, (1995) 2 SCC 584; Kerala SEB v. Kurien E. Kalathil, (2000) 6 SCC 293, relied on [7181] — S. 482 — Exercise of power under — Circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, reiterated: (i) to give effect to an order under the Code; (ii) to prevent an abuse of the process of court; and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice — No inflexible rule can be laid down therefor though (Para 15). V.P. Shrivastava v. Indian Explosives Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 361: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-2010]

[7182] — S. 482 — Inherent power under, when to be exercised — Reiterated, inherent power under S. 482 must be exercised in rarest of rare cases (Para 39). Sunita Jain v. Pawan Kumar Jain, (2008) 2 SCC 705: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 537: (2008) 64 AIC 212 (SC): (2008) 2 KLJ 304.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-2008]

[7183] — S. 482 — Inherent power of High Court under — Saving of — Purpose — Held, is that a court proceeding ought not to be permitted to degenerate into a weapon of harassment or persecution — Herein, it is exercise of inherent power by High Court that had ultimately resulted in harassment of appellants, which was unfortunate (Para 23). D. Venkatasubramaniam v. M.K. Mohan Krishnamachari, (2009) 10 SCC 488: (2009) 82 AIC 245 (SC): (2009) 3 APLJ 205 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

[7184] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Scope and ambit — Reiterated

Though the powers possessed by the High Court under Section 482 are very wide but these should be exercised in appropriate cases, ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. The inherent powers possessed by the High Court are to be exercised very carefully and with great caution so that a legitimate prosecution is not stifled. Nevertheless, where the High Court is convinced that the allegations made in the first information report or the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety, do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused or where the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint are so absurd and inherently improbable on the basis of which no prudent person can ever reach a just conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused, the powers of the High Court under Section 482 should be exercised. (Para 20). Fakhruddin Ahmad v. State of Uttaranchal, (2008) 17 SCC 157: (2008) 6 All LJ 249: (2009) 1 ECrN 455 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4377: (2008) 3 APLJ 163 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[7185] — S. 482 — Scope and power under — Restated — Further held, Court must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of this power is based on sound principles — Power should not be exercised to stifle legitimate prosecution but

Court's failing to use the power for advancement of justice can also lead to grave injustice (Paras 13 to 26). Preeti Gupta v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 7 SCC 667.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and K.S. Radhakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2010]

Connelly v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 1964 AC 1254: (1964) 2 WLR 1145: (1964) 2 All ER 401 (HL); Director of Public Prosecutions v. Humphrys, 1977 AC 1: (1976) 2 WLR 857: (1976) 2 All ER 497 (HL); R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259, relied on [7186] — S. 482 — Principles for exercise of power under, reiterated — Applicability of Bhajan Lal, principles, explained — Held, though powers possessed by High Courts under S. 482 are very wide but these should be exercised in appropriate cases, ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone courts exist — However, inherent powers do not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on High Court to act according to whim or caprice — Powers have to be exercised sparingly, with circumspection and in the rarest of rare cases, where the Court is convinced, on the basis of material on record, that allowing proceedings to continue would be an abuse of process of court or that ends of justice require that proceedings ought to be quashed — Although in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, Supreme Court by way of illustration formulated as many as seven categories of cases, wherein extraordinary power under S. 482 could be exercised by High Court to prevent abuse of process of court, yet it was clarified that it was not possible to lay down precise and inflexible guidelines or any rigid formula or to give an exhaustive list of circumstances in which such power could be exercised — In the facts and circumstances of instant case, High Court, in exercise of its jurisdiction under S. 482, should have quashed complaint under S. 138, NI Act — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Paras 17 to 19, 21 and 22). Jugesh Sehgal v. Shamsher Singh Gogi, (2009) 14 SCC 683: (2009) 80 AIC 9 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-2009]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1, relied on

[7187] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Limitations in exercise of inherent powers possessed by High Court under S. 482 or Art. 227 and how and when can the powers be exercised, discussed — Constitution of India, Art. 227

Though the powers possessed by the High Courts under Section 482 CrPC or Article 227 of the Constitution are very wide but these should be exercised in appropriate cases, ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. The inherent powers do not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on the High Court to act according to whim or caprice. The powers have to be exercised sparingly, with circumspection and in the rarest of rare cases, where the court is convinced, on the basis of material on record, that allowing the proceedings to continue would be an abuse of the process of the court or that the ends of justice require that the proceedings ought to be quashed. (Para 14). Pankaj Kumar v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 16 SCC 117: AIR 2008 SC 3077: (2008) 68 AIC 93 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3944: (2009) 2 LLN 798: (2009) 122 FLR 790.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-2008]

Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

[7188] — S. 482 — Quashment of criminal proceedings — Jurisdiction of High Court under — Scope, reiterated

The High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC cannot go into the truth or otherwise of the allegations and appreciate the evidence if any available on record. Normally, the High Court would not intervene in the criminal proceedings at the preliminary stage, when the investigation/enquiry is pending. (Para 29)

Interference by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC can only be where a clear case for such interference is made out. Frequent and uncalled for interference even at the preliminary stage by the High Court may result in causing obstruction in progress of the inquiry in a criminal case which may not be in the public interest. But at the same time the High Court cannot refuse to exercise its jurisdiction if the interest of justice so required where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint are so absurd and inherently improbable on the basis of which no fair minded and informed observer can ever reach a just and proper conclusion as to the existence of sufficient grounds for proceeding. In such cases refusal to exercise the jurisdiction may equally result in injustice more particularly in cases where the complainant sets the criminal law in motion with a view to exert pressure and harass the persons arrayed as accused in the complaint. (Para 30). M.N. Ojha v. Alok Kumar Srivastav, (2009) 9 SCC 682: (2009) 82 AIC 134 (SC).

(11)(i) Power of quashment under — Nature and scope (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2009]

State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613, relied on

[7189] — Ss. 482, 397 and 401 — Quashing of charges/complaint/FIR — Principles restated

Where there could be some material found in the charge-sheet, then it would not be the function of the court to examine the charge-sheet with a view as to whether the accused could be convicted or not. That would be a premature exercise. (Para 12). CBI v. V.K. Bhutiani, (2009) 10 SCC 674.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-2009]

State v. M. Krishna Mohan, (2007) 14 SCC 667: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 922; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on [7190] — S. 482 — Inherent powers — Exercise of — Scope — Reiterated — Court, under its inherent powers can neither intervene at an uncalled for stage nor can it "soft-pedal the course of justice" at crucial stage of investigation/proceedings — Power to be exercised with due care and caution — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — Nature and scope of Art. 226 — Inherent power, Arts. 226 and 227 (Paras 13 to 25). State of Maharashtra v. Arun Gulab Gawali, (2010) 9 SCC 701.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2010]

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Ajay Mitra v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 11: 2003 SCC (Cri) 703; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; Ganesh Narayan Hegde v. S. Bangarappa, (1995) 4 SCC 41: 1995 SCC (Cri) 634; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272; B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; M.N. Damani v. S.K. Sinha, (2001) 5 SCC 156: 2001 SCC (Cri) 823, relied on [7191] — S. 482 — Exercise of inherent power — Scope of — Issues referred to larger Bench — Held [per H.K. Sema, J.], exercise of power under S. 482 CrPC is not the rule but an exception — Said power must be exercised sparingly, with circumspection and in the rarest of rare cases — Inherent power can be invoked either to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure ends of justice — Said power is not intended to scuttle justice at the threshold — Per Markandey Katju, J. [partly dissenting], though power under S. 482 CrPC is to be exercised sparingly, it cannot be said that it should be exercised in the rarest of rare cases — In present case, refusal by High Court to quash the order taking cognizance of offence under Karnataka Shops and Commercial Establishments Act, 1961 (8 of 1962), held, not liable to be interfered with — Maintainability of complaint to be decided at the time of consideration of charge — Karnataka Shops and Commercial Establishments Act, 1961 (8 of 1962), Ss. 25 & 30(1)

Per H.K. Sema, J.

It has been consistently held that the power under Section 482 CrPC must be exercised sparingly, with circumspection and in the rarest of rare cases. Exercise of inherent power under Section 482 CrPC is not the rule but it is an exception. The exception is applied only when it is brought to the notice of the court that grave miscarriage of justice would be committed if the trial is allowed to proceed where the accused would be harassed unnecessarily if the trial is allowed to linger when prima facie it appears to court that the trial would likely to end in acquittal. In other words, the inherent power of the court under Section 482 can be invoked by the High Court either to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. (Para 9)

Thus, while it is true that so long as the inherent power of Section 482 CrPC is in the statute book, exercise of such power is not impermissible but it must be noted that such power has to be exercised sparingly with circumspection and in the rarest of rare cases, the sole aim of which is to secure the ends of justice. The power under Section 482 is not intended to scuttle justice at the threshold. (Para 18)

Per Markandey Katju, J. (partly dissenting)

It is agreed that the power under Section 482 CrPC is to be exercised sparingly. But it cannot be agreed that the said power should be exercised in "the rarest of rare cases". The expression "the rarest of rare cases" was used in connection with Section 302 IPC to hold that death penalty should only be imposed in the rarest of rare cases vide the Constitution Bench decision in Bachan Singh case, (1980) 2 SCC 684.

The said expression cannot be extended to a petition under Section 482 CrPC. (Paras 36 and 37)

In the present case, there is no infirmity in the order passed by the High Court warranting interference under Article 136 of the Constitution. The trial court shall decide the matter expeditiously uninfluenced by any observations made by the Supreme Court or the High Court. It shall decide the maintainability of the complaint at the time of consideration of the charge. (Paras 20, 24 and 21). Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 753: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 895: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 73: AIR 2008 SC 1126: (2008) 2 LLN 690: (2008) 65 AIC 187 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1610.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema[1] and Markandey Katju[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 29-1-2008]

State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; Hazari Lal Gupta v. Rameshwar Prasad, (1972) 1 SCC 452: 1972 SCC (Cri) 208; Jehan Singh v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 4 SCC 522: 1974 SCC (Cri) 558; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580, considered

East India Commercial Co. Ltd. v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1962 SC 1893: (1963) 3 SCR 338; T. Prem Sagar v. Standard Vacuum Oil Co., AIR 1965 SC 111: (1964) 5 SCR 1030; Boothalinga Agencies v. V.T.C. Poriaswami Nadar, AIR 1969 SC 110: (1969) 1 SCR 65; S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2005) 8 SCC 89: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1975, distinguished on facts

Followed in Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781

[Ed.: The legal issues referred to a larger Bench have been disposed of by a three-Judge Bench decision reported at (2008) 3 SCC 574.]

[7192] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — Guarantee against injustice — High Court is invested with tremendous powers thereunder to pass any order in interests of justice — It must look into allegations with openness and then to decide whether to pass any order in interests of justice (Paras 7, 11 and 12). Manoj Mahavir Prasad Khaitan v. Ram Gopal Poddar, (2010) 10 SCC 673.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[7193] — Ss. 482 and 320 — Quashing of non-compoundable offences in view of compromise arrived at between parties — Guidelines for — Constitution of India — Art. 226

Per Markandey Katju, J.

There can be no doubt that a case under Section 302 IPC or other serious offences like those under Sections 395, 307 or 304-B cannot be compounded and hence proceedings in those provisions cannot be quashed by the High Court in exercise of its power under Section 482 CrPC or in writ jurisdiction on the basis of compromise. However, in some other cases (like those akin to a civil nature), the proceedings can be quashed by the High Court if the parties have come to an amicable settlement even though the provisions are not compoundable. Where a line is to be drawn will have to be decided in some later decisions of this Court, preferably by a larger Bench (so as to make it more authoritative). Some guidelines will have to be evolved in this connection and the matter cannot be left at the sole unguided discretion of Judges, otherwise there may be conflicting decisions and judicial anarchy. A judicial discretion has to be exercised on some objective guiding principles and criteria, and not on the whims and fancies of individual Judges. (Para 27). Manoj Sharma v. State, (2008) 16 SCC 1: (2008) 4 KLT 417: (2009) 73 AIC 187 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2008]

[7194] — S. 482 — Quashment — Exercise of power — Scope — To prevent abuse of process of court — High Court is required to exercise its inherent powers under S. 482 CrPC sparingly, carefully and cautiously — Allegations in FIR or complaint taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety not constituting offence alleged — Held, High Court would be justified in invoking its powers (Para 16). Asoke Basak v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 10 SCC 660.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, followed [7195] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court under — Exercise of — Scope — Held, power under S. 482 has to be exercised sparingly and in the rarest of rare cases — Present case did not warrant such exercise by High Court (Para 23). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

[7196] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Exercise of inherent power — Approach — Reiterated, power under S. 482 is very wide in amplitude, yet not unlimited — No absolute rule, but powers under to be exercised sparingly and with caution

(11)(i) Power of quashment under — Nature and scope (contd.)

Though the inherent powers of the High Court under Section 482 of the Code are very wide in amplitude, yet they are not unlimited. However, it is neither feasible nor desirable to lay down an absolute rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction of the Court. Nevertheless, powers under the said provision have to be exercised sparingly and with caution to secure the ends of justice and to prevent the abuse of the process of the court. Where the allegations in the first information report or the complaint taken at its face value and accepted in their entirety do not constitute the offence alleged, the High Court would be justified in invoking its powers under Section 482 of the Code to quash the criminal proceedings. (Para 18). Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co. Ltd. v. Datar Switchgear Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 479: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 545.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, relied on

Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259; K.L.E. Society v. Siddalingesh, (2008) 4 SCC 541: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 455: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 1071; Baijnath Jha v. Sita Ram, (2008) 8 SCC 77: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 428; Suneet Gupta v. Anil Triloknath Sharma, (2008) 11 SCC 670: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 920; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Sunita Jain v. Pawan Kumar Jain, (2008) 2 SCC 705: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 537, referred to

[7197] — S. 482 — Nature, scope, purpose and exercise of power under — Explained — Held, inherent power is to be exercised sparingly and that too in the rarest of rare cases — It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae, to do real and substantial justice and not to stifle legitimate prosecution

The exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC is the exception and not the rule. The section does not confer any new powers on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of CrPC. The inherent powers have been conferred, apart from express provisions of law, which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon it by law. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under CrPC, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. (Para 8)

While exercising the powers under the Section 482 CrPC, the High Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section, though wide, has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. (Para 8). State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272: (2006) 1 KLT 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2005]

[7198] — S. 482 — Exercise of power ex debito justitiae — Power to be exercised sparingly and only when prosecution is launched maliciously or with ulterior motive — Inherent power ought not be exercised to stifle legitimate prosecution — Criminal complaint filed against respondent Company on the ground that appellant Company was dishonestly induced to make investment in a subsidiary company floated by respondent Company thereby respondent Company committed offence of cheating — Complaint filed by appellant Company prima facie disclosing offence of cheating when allegations made in complaint taken on their face value — Both the parties had much to say in support of their respective cases — The case was of considerable importance not only to parties but also world of trade and commerce — There was nothing on record that complaint was filed with any mala fide motive — High Court quashing criminal proceedings at stage when trial court ordered issue of process — Held, High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in quashing the proceedings — Prosecution proceedings therefore allowed to continue

Both the appellants and the respondents have much to say in support of their respective viewpoints. Which of the views is ultimately to be accepted, could only be decided when the parties have had the opportunities to place the entire materials before the trial court. The Supreme Court has repeatedly held that power to quash proceedings at the initial stage has to be exercised sparingly with circumspection and in the rarest of rare cases. The power is to be exercised ex debito justitiae. Such power can be exercised where a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fides and have been instituted maliciously with ulterior motive.

This inherent power ought not to be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. (Para 76)

The parties are yet to place on the record the entire material in support of their claims. The issues involved are of considerable importance to the parties in particular, and the world of trade and commerce in general. In such circumstances the High Court ought to have refrained from indulging in detailed analysis of very complicated commercial documents and reaching any definite conclusions. (Para 77)

The High Court clearly exceeded its jurisdiction in quashing the criminal proceeding in the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case. The High Court noticed that while exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC the complaint in its entirety will have to be examined on the basis of the allegations made therein. But the High Court has no authority or jurisdiction to go into the matter or examine its correctness. The allegations in the complaint will have to be accepted on the face of it and the truth or falsity cannot be entered into by the Court at this stage. Having said so, the High Court proceeded to do exactly the opposite. (Para 78). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568: 2005 SCC (Cri) 415; M.N. Ojha v. Alok Kumar Srivastav, (2009) 9 SCC 682: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 101; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; Raj Kapoor v. State, (1980) 1 SCC 43: 1980 SCC (Cri) 72; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9, considered and relied on

Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; Central Railway Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, 1867 LR 2 HL 99; New Brunswick and Canada Railway Co. v. Muggeridge, (1860) 1 Dr & Sm 363 at pp. 381-82: 62 ER 418; Redgrave v. Hurd, (1881) 20 Ch D 1 at p. 13: (1881-85) All ER Rep 77 (CA); Aaron's Reefs v. Twiss, 1896 AC 273 (HL); Commr. (Assessment) v. Velliappa Textiles Ltd., (2003) 11 SCC 405: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1214; Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2005) 4 SCC 530: 2005 SCC (Cri) 961; Kalpnath Rai v. State, (1997) 8 SCC 732: 1998 SCC (Cri) 134; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; M.V. Javali v. Mahajan Borewell & Co., (1997) 8 SCC 72: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1239; A.K. Khosla v. T.S. Venkatesan, 1992 Cri LJ 1448 (Cal), cited

(ii) Anticipatory quashment — Power if any

[7199] — S. 482 — Power of High Court under — Anticipatory quashment — Held, power of quashment does not extend to quashing a prosecution, which though apprehended by the petitioner, has not yet been instituted. State of W.B. v. Rashmoy Das, (2000) 1 SCC 76: 2000 SCC (Cri) 103: AIR 2000 SC 228.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-1999]

(iii) Maintainability

See also S. 482, '(3) Maintainability', above

[7200] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Territorial jurisdiction of High Court — Cause of action — Meaning — Whether it arose within the jurisdiction of the High Court before which writ petition filed — Complaint petition filed by appellant before CJM, Birbhum, West Bengal alleging dishonour of cheques issued to him by respondent Company towards payment for supply of material for construction work undertaken by respondent in W.B. — Cognizance of the offence under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act taken by the CJM under S. 190 CrPC and summons issued on the respondents — Writ petition filed by respondents before Kerala High Court seeking declaration that they were not liable to be proceeded against on the basis of the complaint and quashing of the complaint — Held, Kerala High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the said writ petition — None of the facts constituting cause of action, which were required to be proved by complainant for the purpose of attracting ingredients of S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act, arose within the jurisdiction of Kerala High Court — Facts that registered Head Office of the respondent Company was at Ernakulam in Kerala, that the amount due under the cheques in question was meant to be payable at Ernakulam and that payment in respect of one of the dishonoured cheques was later sent from Ernakulam not relevant for holding that a part of the cause of action arose within the territorial jurisdiction of Kerala High Court — CPC, 1908, S. 20 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 142(b) and 138 — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 227

The appellant entered into a contract with Respondent 1 Company, for supply of stone chips in connection with the work of construction of major bridges between Dhankuni and Kharagpur in the State of West Bengal undertaken by the respondent as a part of ongoing project of the National Highway Authority of India. For the purpose of executing the said work the Company entered into an engineering contract with the NHA. The Company used to hand over post-dated cheques to the appellant for securing payment for supply of stone chips. The Company issued six cheques, which were deposited by the appellant with the bank in Birbhum, Suri branch. On dishonour of the said cheques, a demand notice was sent to the respondent by the appellant demanding payment of the said cheques. Payment in respect of one of the cheques was however later sent by the respondent Company from Ernakulam in State of Kerala where it had its registered Head Office. The appellant filed a complaint petition in the Court of CJM, Birbhum at Suri alleging that the cheques issued by the respondents having been dishonoured, they committed offence under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. The CJM upon examining the appellant on oath took cognizance of the offence and directed issuance of summons on the respondents. Despite receipt of the summons, instead of appearing before the CJM, Birbhum at Suri, the respondents filed a writ petition in the High Court of Kerala at Ernakulam praying inter alia for a declaration that they were not liable to be proceeded against on the basis of the complaint and for issuance of appropriate writ, order or direction quashing the complaint. Interim relief by way of stay of all further proceedings pursuant to the said complaint petition was also prayed for which the Single Judge of the High Court granted. In the writ petition it was stated that there was no question of the Company running away from its responsibility of paying the amount due, but it needed some time to augment its resources in the context of its financial entanglement. The jurisdiction of the High Court was invoked by stating in the writ petition that part of the cause of action arose within the territorial jurisdiction of the Kerala High Court. It was stated that the registered head office of the Company was at Ernakulam, that the amount due under the cheques was meant to be payable at Ernakulam and that out of the six dishonoured cheques, payment in respect of one cheque was sent from Ernakulam. A Single Judge of the High Court passed an order granting the interim stay prayed for. Before the Supreme Court the primary question was as to whether the Kerala High Court had jurisdiction in the matter.

(11)(iii) Maintainability (contd.)

Allowing the appeal with costs,

Held :

The averments made in the writ petition filed by the respondent herein even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety would not confer any jurisdiction upon the Kerala High Court. The agreement was entered into within the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court. The project for which the supply of stone chips and transportation was being carried out was also within the State of West Bengal. Payments were obviously required to be made within the jurisdiction of the said Court where either the contract had been entered into or where payment was to be made. A bare perusal of the complaint petition would clearly go to show that according to the complainant the entire cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the District Court of Birbhum and in that view of the matter it is that court which will have jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence. In fact the jurisdiction of the Court of CJM, Birbhum, Suri, is not in question.

It is not contended that the complainant had suppressed material fact and which if not disclosed would have demonstrated that the offence was committed outside the jurisdiction of the said court. Even if Section 178 CrPC is attracted, the Court of the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Birbhum will alone have jurisdiction in the matter. (Paras 33 and 31)

For the purpose of proving the ingredients of the offence under Section 138 of the NI Act, the complainant appellant was required to prove the facts constituting the cause of action therefor none of which arose within the jurisdiction of the Kerala High Court. Cause of action within the meaning of Section 142(b) of the Act can arise only once. Cause of action within the meaning of clause (2) of Article 226 shall have the same meaning as is ordinarily understood. The expression "cause of action" has a definite connotation. It means a bundle of facts which would be required to be proved. Sending of cheques from Ernakulam or the respondents having an office at that place did not form an integral part of "cause of action" for which the complaint petition was filed by the appellant and cognizance of the offence under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 was taken by the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Suri in West Bengal. (Paras 36, 19 and 32)

The object of the provision of Section 138 of the NI Act is that for proper and smooth functioning of business transaction in particular, use of cheques as negotiable instruments would primarily depend upon the integrity and honesty of the parties. It was noticed that cheques used to be issued as a device inter alia for defrauding the creditors and stalling the payments. Dishonour of a cheque by the bank causes incalculable loss, injury and inconvenience to the payee and the entire credibility of the business transactions within and outside the country suffers a serious setback. Remedy available in a civil court is a long-drawn process and an unscrupulous drawer normally takes various pleas to defeat the genuine claim of the payee. (Para 34)

In a criminal matter also the High Court may exercise its extraordinary writ jurisdiction but interference with an order of the Magistrate taking cognizance under Section 190 CrPC will stand somewhat on a different footing as an order taking cognizance can be the subject-matter of a revisional jurisdiction as well as of an application invoking the inherent jurisdiction of the High Court. A writ of certiorari ordinarily would not be issued by a writ court under Article 226 of the Constitution against a judicial officer. The High Court under Article 226 should not ordinarily interfere with an order taking cognizance passed by a competent court of law except in a proper case. Furthermore only such High Court within whose jurisdiction the order of the subordinate court has been passed, would have the jurisdiction to entertain an application under Article 227 of the Constitution unless it is established that the earlier cause of action arose within the jurisdiction thereof. The High Courts, however, must remind themselves about the doctrine of forum non conveniens also. (Paras 25, 28 and 29). Mosaraf Hossain Khan v. Bhagheeratha Engg. Ltd., (2006) 3 SCC 658: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 98: AIR 2006 SC 1288: 2006 Cri LJ 1683: (2006) 2 KLT 525.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-2-2006]

Prem Chand Vijay Kumar v. Yashpal Singh, (2005) 4 SCC 417: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1153; State of Rajasthan v. Swaika Properties, (1985) 3 SCC 217; Aligarh Muslim University v. Vinay Engg. Enterprises (P) Ltd., (1994) 4 SCC 710; ONGC v. Utpal Kumar Basu, (1994) 4 SCC 711; Union of India v. Adani Exports Ltd., (2002) 1 SCC 567; Om Hemrajani v. State of U.P., (2005) 1 SCC 617: 2005 SCC (Cri) 443; Goa Plast (P) Ltd. v. Chico Ursula D'Souza, (2004) 2 SCC 235: 2004 SCC (Cri) 499; Monaben Ketanbhai Shah v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 7 SCC 15: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1857; Naresh Shridhar Mirajkar v. State of Maharashtra, (1966) 3 SCR 744: AIR 1967 SC 1; Surya Dev Rai v. Ram Chander Rai, (2003) 6 SCC 675; Rupa Ashok Hurra v. Ashok Hurra, (2002) 4 SCC 388; Ranjeet Singh v. Ravi Prakash, (2004) 3 SCC 682; State of U.P. v. Surendra Kumar, (2005) 9 SCC 161; Kusum Ingots & Alloys Ltd. v. Union of India, (2004) 6 SCC 254; Mayar (H.K.) Ltd. v. Owners & Parties, Vessel M.V. Fortune Express, (2006) 3 SCC 100, relied on

Nakul Deo Singh v. Dy. Commandant, (1999) 3 KLT 629 (FB), approved

[7201] — Ss. 482, 190, 203, 211, 227, 239 and 245 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Merely because the accused has right to plead at the time of framing of charges that there is no material for framing of charges he is not debarred from invoking the inherent jurisdiction of the court at the earliest point of time when the Magistrate has taken cognizance — On facts, even if the allegations made in complaint and the statement of the complainant and his witnesses are taken on their face value no offence is made out — Complaint quashed not only against the appellants but also against those two accused who did not prefer any appeal — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 420, 467, 468 and 120-B

Merely because an accused has a right to plead at the time of framing of charges that there is no sufficient material for such framing of charges as provided in Section 245 of the Code, he is not debarred from approaching the court even at an earlier point of time when the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence and summons the accused to appear to contend that the very issuance of the order of taking cognizance is invalid on the ground that no offence can be said to have been made out on the allegations made in the complaint petition. Power under Section 482 has to be exercised sparingly and in the interest of justice. But allowing the criminal proceeding to continue even where the allegations in the complaint petition do not make out any offence would be tantamount to an abuse of the process of court, and therefore, there cannot be any dispute that in such case power under Section 482 of the Code can be exercised. Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: AIR 1998 SC 2796.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sujata V. Manohar and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-1998]

[7202] — Ss. 482, 203, 227 and 245 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Exercise of power under, after dismissal of SLP against framing of charges — Propriety — On facts, proceedings initiated against respondents in accordance with law with the satisfaction of trial court about prima facie case being made out — Accordingly, charges framed against respondents and said action upheld by High Court and the Supreme Court — Respondents again moved High Court under S. 482 for quashing of criminal proceedings — Held, once order was passed by the Supreme Court dismissing SLP, upholding framing of charges against respondents, High Court could not have exercised power under S. 482 quashing criminal proceedings initiated by appellant — Observation of High Court that even after dismissal of SLP by the Supreme Court, it was open for it to consider prayer of accused to quash the proceedings in exercise of inherent powers because "the extraordinary jurisdiction under S. 482 of the Code may be exercised at any stage", not proper — In substance and reality, High Court exercised power of review not conferred by CrPC on a criminal court — Therefore, High Court was clearly in error in exercising power under S. 482 — Hence, without entering into the merits, order set aside with the matter to be decided in accordance with law by an appropriate court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A, 342, 506 and 406 r/w S. 34 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4

(11)(iii) Maintainability (contd.)

Challan was filed against the respondents for offences punishable under Sections 498-A, 506, 406 read with Section 34 IPC and also under Sections 3 and 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. Charges were framed against Respondents 1 to 3 (husband, father-in-law and mother-in-law) and also against brother and sister of Respondent 1. All the accused challenged the action of framing of charge against them in the High Court by filing a revision petition. High Court partly allowed the revision and quashed charges against brother and sister of Respondent 1. It, however, held, that so far as the other respondents were concerned, charges could not be quashed and dismissed the petition.

Being aggrieved by the said order, the respondents approached the Supreme Court by filing special leave petition, but it was dismissed. The respondents then once again filed a petition in the High Court by invoking Section 482 CrPC. The High Court vide the impugned order, allowed the petition holding that there was abuse of process of law by the appellant in initiating criminal proceedings. The proceedings were, therefore, quashed. The said order was challenged in the present appeal.

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

From the facts it is clear that a complaint was lodged by the petitioner against Respondents 1 to 3 as also against the other accused for offences punishable under Sections 498-A, 342 and 406 IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act. (Para 19)

The trial court was satisfied that prima facie case was made out and accordingly charges were framed against Respondents 1 to 3 as well as against the other accused. In a petition challenging that action, the High Court partly allowed the petition and quashed charges against brother-in-law and sister-in-law of the appellant herein but upheld the order of framing of charge against the remaining respondents i.e. Respondents 1 to 3 who, then, challenged the order of the High Court in the Supreme Court by filing SLP which was dismissed. It is thus clear that all the courts including the Supreme Court were of the view that there was prima facie case for framing of charge against the respondents herein. (Paras 20, 21 and 22)

After the order passed by the Supreme Court, Respondents 1 to 3 again moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of criminal proceedings. The High Court in the impugned order noted that earlier the respondents had approached it against framing of charge and the said action was not interfered with even by the Supreme Court. But observing that "a court of law cannot be expected to remain a silent spectator and cannot be made a tool of gratifying personal vengeance of any party", it held that the case in hand was a fit one to exercise inherent power under Section 482 CrPC and accordingly the proceedings were ordered to be quashed. But after the order had been passed by the Supreme Court dismissing the special leave petition, upholding framing of charge against Respondents 1 to 3, the High Court could not have exercised power under Section 482 CrPC quashing criminal proceedings initiated by the appellant. The High Court observed that even after dismissal of SLP by the Supreme Court, it was open for it to consider the prayer of the accused to quash the proceedings in exercise of inherent powers because "the extraordinary jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code may be exercised at any stage". Thereby High Court exercised power of review not conferred by CrPC on a criminal court. (Paras 24, 29 and 30)

On the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the High Court was clearly in error in exercising power under Section 482 CrPC in quashing criminal proceedings against the respondents. The said order, hence, deserves to be set aside. The matter will be decided in accordance with law by an appropriate court. (Para 42)

Moreover, it is well settled that inherent power under Section 482 CrPC must be exercised in rarest of rare cases. (Para 39)

It is clarified that merits of the matter or allegations and counter-allegations by the parties has not been entered into. All observations made have been made only for the limited purpose of deciding the issue. As and when the matter will come before the court, it will be considered on its own merits without being inhibited or influenced by the observations made by the High Court or the Supreme Court in the present order. (Para 43). Sunita Jain v. Pawan Kumar Jain, (2008) 2 SCC 705: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 537: (2008) 64 AIC 212 (SC): (2008) 2 KLJ 304. Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-1-2008]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[7203] — Ss. 482, 190(1) & 204 — Admissibility of evidence — Stage of quashment if appropriate stage to consider — Quashing of complaint sought by accused on the ground that there was no material against him except the inadmissible retracted statement allegedly made by the co-accused — Held, the question about corroborative nature of evidence has to be considered at the appropriate stage — Hence, High Court rightly declined the prayer to quash the complaint at the initial stage when only cognizance had been taken and the accused was still to be interrogated (Para 6). Mohd. Malek Mondal v. Pranjal Bardalai, (2005) 10 SCC 608: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1640: AIR 2005 SC 2406: 2005 Cri LJ 2613.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2005]

[7204] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashing of FIR — Relevant considerations — Results of/material collected during preliminary investigations — Offences in relation to civil dispute — Though FIR disclosing only a pure civil case, preliminary investigations revealing offences under Ss. 406 and 120-B IPC and under RBI Act, 1934 — Effect — But High Court going by contents of FIR alone holding that S. 420 IPC not attracted and that it was a simple breach of contract and pure civil dispute and therefore quashing FIR — Sustainability — Held, materials collected during preliminary investigations are relevant — Hence quashment of FIR not sustainable — Fair and impartial investigation directed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B

Respondent 1, accused was the Director of a Company, which floated a car buying and rental scheme, whereby, it promised to give its investors (investing a sum of Rs 97,907), a monthly rent of Rs 4000 and also give an option to the investor to take back his car at the end of sixty months. Respondent 2 complainant invested in the scheme, got his monthly rent of Rs 4000 as agreed upon but when after the expiry of sixty months, he demanded back his car, it was not given. Instead the Company gave Respondent 2 post-dated cheques amounting to Rs 25,000, Rs 20,000 and Rs 10,000. Respondent 2, therefore, filed an FIR, which however, was quashed under Section 482 CrPC by the impugned judgment of the High Court.

Grounds taken in the memorandum of SLP revealed that during investigations statements of various witnesses had been recorded. Public at large, especially middle class and lower class people had invested their hard-earned money in the scheme. It was also complained of by an investor that no vehicle had been purchased in his name. Statements of witnesses during preliminary investigations also revealed that the Company had resorted to false registrations of vehicles in the name of investors which were actually owned and registered by non-investors who had no link with the Company. For instance, as per the statement of a non-investor his Maruti Esteem car was shown in the Company data as being registered in the name of an investor.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There cannot be any doubt or dispute whatsoever that a simple breach of contract or a case involving a pure civil dispute would not attract any offence either under Section 406 or Section 420 IPC. Had the dispute between the parties rested on the aforementioned premise, interference with the judgment of the High Court probably would not have been warranted. The petition of the complainant did not disclose any criminal offence at all much less any offence either under Section 420 or Section 120-B IPC. It was purely civil in nature. But then, certain evidences surfaced during investigation which are disclosed in the grounds stated in the memo of this appeal. (Paras 13 and 19)

The allegation made in the FIR and the materials collected during investigation, should be allowed to be taken to its logical end. A large number of illegalities were committed by the said Company including the violation of the provisions of the Reserve Bank of India Act. The High Court in its judgment only considered the case from the point of view of Section 420 IPC and not Sections 406 and 120-B thereof. The legal position in regard to exercise of jurisdiction by the High Court for quashing of an FIR is now well settled. The State contended that having regard to the well-settled principle of law, the High Court should not quash an FIR save and except sparingly and in the rarest of rare cases. In the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case and particularly in view of the materials which have surfaced during investigation, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained. It is set aside accordingly. (Paras 6, 10, 14 and 20)

The investigating officer shall conduct the investigation fairly and impartially and shall allow the Company to carry on its business without any hindrance whatsoever. If any books of account or other documents are required, the investigating officer subject to just exceptions may take the xerox copies thereof duly certified by the accused as also an undertaking that, as and when called upon, they would produce the said books of account in a court of law. Subject to the aforementioned directions, the investigating officer shall carry out the investigation in accordance with law. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Sayed Mohammed Masood, (2009) 8 SCC 787: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 945.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

(11)(iii) Maintainability (contd.)

R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, relied on

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; Radha Ballav Pal v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Cal 327; Velji Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; New India Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Sadanand Mukhi, (2009) 2 SCC 417: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 815; Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49, distinguished [7205] — Ss. 482, 204, 200 and 202 — Challenge to complaint even before issue of process — Maintainability of — Held, petitioner cannot be precluded from filing such a petition under S. 482 or Art. 226 of the Constitution. Suresh Kumar Tekriwal v. State of Jharkhand, (2005) 12 SCC 278.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-2005]

State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568: 2005 SCC (Cri) 415, followed

[7206] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Not justified where disputed questions of fact involved — Complaint filed by appellant against Directors of a company alleging commission of offence under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act — High Court quashed the proceedings against Respondent 1 on ground that he had resigned from directorship before the cheques were issued, though Form 32, which was required to be filed with Registrar of Companies, was filed after the cheques were issued — High Court also quashed proceedings against other Directors in charge of day-to-day management work of the company on ground that there were no specific allegations and some general allegations were made that all Directors were responsible — Held, factual disputes were involved which were required to be established in trial and High Court was not justified in quashing the proceedings while dealing with applications under S. 482 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 142

In these cases, factual disputes are involved. What was the effect of delayed presentation before the Registrar of Companies is essentially a matter of trial. Whether Respondent 1 had intimated the Company and whether there was any resolution accepting his resignation are matters in respect of which evidence has to be led. Therefore, the High Court was not justified in its view. (Para 7). Malwa Cotton & Spg. Mills Ltd. v. Virsa Singh Sidhu, (2008) 17 SCC 147: AIR 2008 SC 3273: 2008 Cri LJ 4316: (2008) 145 Comp Cas 61: (2008) 3 APLJ 142 (SC): (2008) 69 AIC 14 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2008]

[7207] — Ss. 482, 468, 469(b) & (c), 154 and 473 — Quashing of FIR after filing of charge-sheet not permissible — High Court erred in quashing the FIR on ground of delay in filing it without applying its mind to the limitation provisions contained in Ss. 468, 469(b), (c) and 473 of the Code. State of Punjab v. Dharam Vir Singh Jethi, 1994 SCC (Cri) 500.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and Yogeshwar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-1993]

Distinguished in Suneet Gupta v. Anil Triloknath Sharma, (2008) 11 SCC 670*

[7208] — Ss. 482 and 204 — Recourse to S. 482 — Estoppel to taking recourse to, based on conduct — Challenge to process issued under S. 204 — Held, party aggrieved cannot be estopped from having recourse to S. 482 (it being the only course open to it to challenge process issued under S. 204, as affirmed in this case) because of his conduct in successfully having kept trial in abeyance by filing one proceeding after another — Complaint filed against company and four of its Directors under S. 138, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — Company challenging validity of statutory notice issued under and issuance of process based thereon all the way to Supreme Court under Art. 136 — However, SLP dismissed as withdrawn — Thereafter appellant, a Director of said company, challenging validity of said statutory notice and issuance of process based thereon all the way up to the present appeal — Supreme Court and High Court in earlier proceedings had directed question of validity of said statutory notice issued under S. 138, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 to be considered at trial stage — Even in light of the same, and conduct of appellant in initiating one proceeding after another, even up to the Supreme Court, thereby successfully managing to keep trial in abeyance in proceedings initiated in 1996, held, an accused person (the appellant) cannot be prevented from taking recourse to a remedy which is available in law — Hence, while permission sought by the appellant from Supreme Court to file a petition under S. 482 is not being granted, the statutory right available to him in law cannot be denied — The court concerned entertaining the application under S. 482, would undoubtedly take the said conduct of appellant into account — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 115 (Para 19). Subramanium Sethuraman v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 13 SCC 324: 2005 SCC (Cri) 242: AIR 2004 SC 4711: 2004 Cri LJ 4609: (2005) 1 Mah LJ 626.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, S.B. Sinha and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2004]

[Ed.: See also Art. 136, '(g)(3) Exercise of power under by Supreme Court — Relief — Conduct of parties', pp. 783 et seq.,

'(b)(2) Plenary jurisdiction under Art. 136', pp. 247 et seq., and

'(c)(4) Equity jurisdiction — Conduct of parties', pp. 291 et seq. in Complete Digest of Supreme Court Cases, Vol. 8.]

[7209] — Ss. 482 and 227, 239 & 245 — Jurisdiction of High Court under, for quashing criminal proceedings — Held, can be exercised even when application for discharge of the accused pending with the trial Judge — Such power should be exercised cautiously to prevent abuse of process of court — FIR lodged by GM of a Finance Company roping in the appellants and their family members in order to coerce them to refund the amount borrowed by them from the Company — Consequent proceedings initiated for alleged offence under Ss. 406/420 IPC — Complaint under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act already pending against the appellants and others — Held on facts, FIR and the criminal prosecution for the alleged offence under Ss. 406/420 IPC amounted to abuse of process of law and hence the proceedings liable to be quashed — Constitution of India, Art. 227 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406/420

Respondent 2, GM of a Finance Company, lodged a first information report against seven persons including the two appellants alleging that they as Directors of an Automobile Company had taken a short-term loan of Rs 50 lakhs from the Finance Company but the cheques drawn by them by way of repayment of the loan with interest on presentation were dishonoured by the bank for insufficient funds. Police submitted a charge-sheet for offence under Sections 406/420 IPC against the two appellants and their family members describing all of them as Directors of the said Automobile Company. But during investigation the appellants were found to be not Directors of the said Company. In counter-affidavit filed on behalf of the complainant, apart from making an omnibus statement that the first appellant with dishonest intention and misrepresentation got the loan, nothing had been said as to what those misrepresentations were, how the Finance Company was duped, what were the roles played by the appellants and others in the alleged offence and why the charge-sheet was filed only against the appellants and their family members leaving out the other Directors of the Automobile Company. Though criminal complaint under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act was already pending at the time of filing the FIR but the charge-sheet relating to the alleged offence under Sections 406/420 IPC did not show if the investigating agency looked into the complaint filed under Section 138 of the said Act. The appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashing of the criminal proceedings pending against them under Sections 406/424 IPC in the Court of CJM. The High Court dismissed the application. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case the whole attempt of the complainant is evidently to rope in all the members of the family particularly the appellants who are the parents of the Managing Director of the Automobile Company without regard to their role or participation in the alleged offences with the sole purpose of getting the loan due to the Finance Company by browbeating and tyrannising the appellants with criminal prosecution. A criminal complaint under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is already pending against the appellants and other accused. They would suffer the consequences if offence under Section 138 is proved against them. In any case there is no occasion for the complainant to prosecute the appellants under Sections 406/420 IPC and in his doing so it is clearly an abuse of the process of law and prosecution against the appellants for those offences is liable to be quashed. Accordingly, the judgment of the High Court is set aside and prosecution of the appellants under Sections 406/420 IPC is quashed. (Paras 14 and 15)

Jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code has to be exercised with great care. In exercise of its jurisdiction the High Court is not to examine the matter superficially. It is to be seen if a matter, which is essentially of a civil nature, has been given a cloak of criminal offence. Criminal proceedings are not a short cut of other remedies available in law. Before issuing process a criminal court has to exercise a great deal of caution. For the accused it is a serious matter. The Supreme Court has laid certain principles on the basis of which the High Court is to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Jurisdiction under this section has to be exercised to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Merely because the accused persons had already filed an application in the Court of Additional Judicial Magistrate for their discharge, it cannot be urged that the High Court cannot exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Though the Magistrate trying a case has jurisdiction to discharge the accused at any stage of the trial if he considers the charge to be groundless but that does not mean that the accused cannot approach the High Court under Section 482 of the Code or Article 227 of the Constitution to have the proceeding quashed against them when no offence has been made out against them and still why must they undergo the agony of a criminal trial. (Paras 8 and 7). G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513: AIR 2000 SC 754: 2000 Cri LJ 824: 2000 All LJ 496.

(11)(iii) Maintainability (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Saghir Ahmad and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2000]

State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1704, relied on

Followed in All Cargo Movers India (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776*

[7210] — Ss. 482 and 227, 239 & 245 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Availability of remedy of discharge, held, does not bar petition under S. 482 — Effect of delay — Further held, well-deserved case for quashing of criminal proceedings should not have been thrown out even if there was some delay on petitioner's part — High Court ought to have adjusted equities

Availability of remedy of filing of application for discharge does not mean that petition under Section 482 should be rejected in a case where no offence is made out even if allegations in the complaint are presumed to be true. There might have been some delay on appellant's part in approaching the High Court but while adjusting equity, High Court was required to take into consideration the fact that in a case of this nature, the appellants would face harassment although allegations contained in complaint-petition, even if assumed to be true, were trivial in nature. (Paras 19 and 20). Keki Hormusji Gharda v. Mehervan Rustom Irani, (2009) 6 SCC 475.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2009]

[7211] — Ss. 482, 173 and 240 — Quashment of proceedings — Whether justified — Proper stage for exercise of power — Associate unit of a body corporate violating order under S. 3 of Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — At the stage of filing charge-sheet, final report to supplementary challan specifically mentioning officers of unit as liable under S. 10 of 1955 Act — Trial court summoning officers — High Court however quashing trial court's order holding unit was not covered by S. 10 of 1955 Act — Propriety — Held, the stand taken by accused officers before High Court was a defence to be taken at the stage of trial — Hence, High Court's order set aside (Para 14). State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi) v. D.A.M. Prabhu, (2009) 3 SCC 264.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2009]

Dulichand Laxminarayan v. CIT, AIR 1956 SC 354; Sheoratan Agarwal v. State of M.P., (1984) 4 SCC 352: 1984 SCC (Cri) 620; State of Punjab v. Kasturi Lal, (2004) 12 SCC 195: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 168, applied

[7212] — Ss. 482, 204 and 205 — Inherent jurisdiction — Interim orders — High Court's interference in the issue of process — When can be made — Interim orders under S. 482 in criminal trials can be made (1) when no case is made out from the FIR, and (2) when allegations of mala fide are made against the State — Matter, therefore, remanded for consideration afresh to High Court

The jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 is limited. It can interfere with an order of summoning an accused by the Magistrate inter alia in the event if a finding is arrived at that the accused were being prosecuted mala fide and/or even if the allegations contained in the FIR are given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, no case has been made out for taking cognizance of the offence. It is furthermore made clear that the parties hereto may approach the High Court in Criminal Miscellaneous Application No. 518 of 2008. Allegations of mala fide made against the State may also be gone into. The High Court can pass any such interim order as it may think fit and proper. (Paras 32, 34 and 41). Manoj Narain Agrawal v. Shashi Agrawal, (2009) 6 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Arun Shankar Shukla v. State of U.P., (1999) 6 SCC 146: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1076; Hamida v. Rashid, (2008) 1 SCC 474: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Ruchi Agarwal v. Amit Kumar Agrawal, (2005) 3 SCC 299: 2005 SCC (Cri) 719, relied on

[7213] — Ss. 482/397 — Scope of High Court's jurisdiction under — Accused applying to magistrate to call for report of an ex parte confidential enquiry before recording statements under S. 251 — Magistrate seeking to record the Statements without the report being produced — Accused filing application under S. 482/397 — Report produced before High Court but privileges claimed — High Court perusing the report and relying upon it quashing the entire proceeding before the magistrate on the ground that the act of the accused fell under Ninth Exception to S. 499, Penal Code, 1860 — High Court's interference even before recording of statement under S. 251 by the magistrate, held, perverse and liable to be set aside

Per A.P. Sen. J. (Chinnappa, J. concurring)

The order recorded by the High Court quashing the prosecution under S. 482 of the Code is wholly perverse and has resulted in manifest miscarriage of justice. The High Court has prejudged the whole issue without a trial of the accused persons. The matter was at the stage of recording plea of the accused persons under S. 251. The requirements of S. 251 are still to be complied with. The magistrate had to ascertain whether the respondent pleaded guilty to the charge or demanded to be tried. The circumstances clearly show that the respondent was prima facie guilty of defamation unless he pleads one of the Exceptions to S. 499, IPC.

Per Baharul Islam, J. (dissenting)

Sending back the case to the magistrate to record the respondents' plea after the perusal of the inquiry report will be an exercise in futility and abuse of the process of the criminal court. An order to prevent abuse of the process of the court or vexatious proceedings would be warranted under S. 482, CrPC if the merits of the case before the High Court justified it. Therefore, such an order made by the High Court for quashing the proceeding before the magistrate was justified. The appellant may seek his remedy, if any, in the civil court. Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjia, (1981) 3 SCC 208: 1981 SCC (Cri) 698: AIR 1981 SC 1514.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: O. Chinnappa Reddy[2], A.P. Sen[1] and Baharul Islam[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-1981]

(iv) Admission of quashment petition — Effect

[7214] — Ss. 482, 407 and 386(d) — Admission of petition for quashment of charges — Consequent stay of proceedings before trial court — Need for — Though High Court admitting petition for quashment of charges against some of appellant-accused, it directing that proceedings before trial court could go on — Propriety — Held, if said proceedings go on and come to final conclusion, petition for quashment of charges would be rendered infructuous — Hence matter remitted to High Court for decision afresh. Arun Kumar Sharma v. UT, Chandigarh, (2005) 11 SCC 480.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-4-2005]

(v) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed

See also '(11)(vii) Non-quashment — Issue of other directions', below

[7215] — S. 482 — Prayer to quash the entire proceedings and start the trial afresh — If could be allowed — Held, could not be allowed as there is no provision in law which permits this — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Para 25). Hindustan Construction Co. Ltd. v. Gopal Krishna Sengupta, (2003) 11 SCC 210: 2004 SCC (Cri) 81: AIR 2003 SC 3536.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-4-2003]

[7216] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings under — Prosecution proceedings against respondent quashed by High Court, by delinking him from the array of a number of other accused, mainly by applying the decision of Supreme Court in Raj Deo Sharma case, (1998) 7 SCC 507 — Held, instead High Court could have directed the trial court to close the evidence thus far adduced against the respondent and to take further steps in the matter — By virtue of the modified order of Supreme Court in Raj Deo Sharma (II) case, (1999) 7 SCC 604 prosecution can claim one more year for completing the prosecution evidence in respect of cases referred to therein — It is open to the trial court to close the evidence of the prosecution, whether the prosecution exhausts the list of witnesses or not, on the expiry of one year from the date of the receipt of the copy of this order — Time taken at the instance of the accused will be excluded from the said period of one year (Paras 2, 3 and 5). State of T.N. v. A.M. Vedachalam, (2001) 9 SCC 744: 2001 Cri LJ 3297.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-1-2001]

[7217] — S. 482 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot hold a parallel trial in exercise of power under — If offence prima facie falls under the Penal Code, launching of prosecution cannot be thwarted by High Court under S. 482 merely because penal action open under any other statute — Cognizance of offence taken by Magistrate under S. 409 IPC against managing director and directors (appellants) of a public limited company on the basis of charge-sheet submitted by CBI and other material prima facie disclosing dishonest misappropriation of share and debenture moneys collected from public — Application filed by appellants under S. 482 seeking their discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act —

(11)(v) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed (contd.)

Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 409, 420 and 405 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 69, 63 and 73

Though the Companies Act contains provisions regarding the issuance of prospectus, applications for shares and allotment thereof and provides different checks over the misuse of the fund collected from the public for issuance of shares or debentures, but where persons issue prospectus and collect moneys from public assuring them that they intend to do business with the public money for their benefit and the benefit of such public, but the real intention is to do no business other than collecting the moneys from the public for their personal gain, such persons cannot be said to be immune from the provisions of the Penal Code. The persons managing the affairs of such company cannot use the juristic entity and corporate personality of the company as a shield to evade themselves from prosecution for offences under the Penal Code, if it is established that primary object of the incorporation and existence of the Company is to defraud the public.

But, at the same time, while taking cognizance of alleged offences in connection with the registration, issuance of prospectus, collection of moneys from the investors and the misappropriation of the fund collected from the shareholders which constitute one offence or other under the Penal Code, court must be satisfied that prima facie an offence under the Penal Code has been disclosed on the materials produced before the court. For prosecution for offences under the Penal Code the complainant has to make out a prima facie case against the individuals concerned, regarding their acts and omissions which constitute the different ingredients of the offences under the Penal Code. There is a basic difference between the offences under the Penal Code and acts and omissions which have been made punishable under different Acts and statutes which are in nature of social welfare legislations. For framing charges in respect of those acts and omissions, in many cases, mens rea is not an essential ingredient; the concerned statute imposes a duty on those who are in charge of the management, to follow the statutory provisions and once there is a breach or contravention, such persons become liable to be punished.

In the facts of the present case itself, the prosecution has to prove that the appellant as promotors or directors, had dishonest intention since the very beginning while collecting the moneys from the applicants for the shares and debentures or that having collected such moneys they dishonestly misappropriated the same. The ingredients of the different offences under the Penal Code need not be proved only by direct evidence: they can be shown from the circumstances of a particular case that the intention of the promotors or the directors was dishonest since the very inception or that they developed such intention at some stage, for their wrongful gain and causing wrongful loss to the investors. All the circumstances and the materials to prove such a charge have to be collected during the investigation and inquiry and ultimately have to be produced before the court at the stage of trial for a verdict as to whether the ingredients of offence in question have been established on behalf of the prosecution.

In the present case the quashing of the prosecution pending against the appellants only on the ground that it was open to the applicants for shares to take recourse to the provisions of the Companies Act, cannot be accepted. It is a futile attempt on the part of the appellants, to close the chapter before it has unfolded itself. It will be for the trial court to examine the matter on the materials produced on behalf of the prosecution. That exercise cannot be performed either by the High Court or by the Supreme Court. The trial court should proceed with the case in accordance with law.

The High Court should not, while exercising power under S. 482 of the Code, usurp the jurisdiction of the trial court. The power under S. 482 of the Code has been vested in the High Court to quash a prosecution which amounts to abuse of the process of the court. But that power cannot be exercised by the High Court to hold a parallel trial, only on basis of the statements and documents collected during investigation or inquiry, for purpose of expressing an opinion whether the accused concerned is likely to be punished if the trial is allowed to proceed. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

[7218] — S. 482 — Splitting up of trial by High Court under, where prosecution case against all the accused persons arising out of the same incident and evidence to be led by the prosecution against them common, held on facts, not justified

The respondent (accused 1) and accused 2, who were the main accused persons were tried for offences under Ss. 302 & 201, IPC. From the evidence it appeared that two policemen had also committed offence under S. 201 read with S. 34, IPC in connection with the same incident. The Public Prosecutor, therefore, filed an application under S. 319(4), CrPC for impleading the two policemen as accused 3 and 4. The Sessions Judge ordered that the accused policemen be impleaded accordingly and de novo trial be held against all the four accused after reframing charges. Before the trial could proceed further the accused policemen made application objecting to their impleading in the case without obtaining sanction under S. 197, CrPC. The Sessions Judge dismissed the application. But the High Court on revision granted stay of the proceedings in the sessions case. Meanwhile the respondent made an application under S. 439(1), CrPC before the Sessions Judge praying for grant of bail in view of unduly protracted trial, apart from absence of prima facie case against him. The Sessions Judge dismissed the application. But a Single Judge of the High Court exercising power under S. 482, CrPC rejected the bail application, vacated the stay insofar as the trial against the respondent and accused 2 were concerned and directed the Sessions Judge to proceed with the trial against them as early as possible.

Held :

The order and directions made by the Single Judge of the High Court were wholly unwarranted. The proper course for him was to have heard and disposed of the revision application on which the High Court had earlier granted stay of the proceedings, rather than to make a direction of this kind which would, in fact, result in splitting up of the trial which is apt to cause miscarriage of justice, besides serious prejudice to the prosecution. The evidence to be led by the prosecution would be more or less common as it relates to the same occurrence. It could not be said that merely because the proceedings before the learned Sessions Judge were held up due to stay granted by the High Court in that revision, the Single Judge could have taken recourse to the inherent powers of the High Court under S. 482, or that it was necessary to do so either to prevent abuse of the process of court or otherwise to secure ends of justice. Any further delay in the trial could be prevented by taking up the revision for hearing. State of Karnataka v. Narsa Reddy, (1987) 4 SCC 170: 1987 SCC (Cri) 744: AIR 1987 SC 2104: 1987 Cri LJ 1929.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and B.C. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-1987]

[7219] — S. 482 — Whether in an application under S. 482 High Court can interfere with concurrent findings of courts below — Questions not decided. Dukhtar Jahan v. Mohd. Farooq, (1987) 1 SCC 624: 1987 SCC (Cri) 237: AIR 1987 SC 1049: 1987 Cri LJ 849: (1987) 1 HLR 362.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-1987]

[7220] — S. 482 — Without hearing appeal on merits and coming to a clear finding that an offence is made out against the accused, held, High Court has no jurisdiction to issue notice directing the accused to show cause why he should not be sent for trial — The order passed by the High Court at the initial stage amounts to a serious abuse of the process of the court inasmuch as it compels the accused appellant to rebut a charge never made or an allegation never proved against him. Such a cause of action at this stage results in gross and substantial injustice to the appellant and amounts to a gross misuse of power of the High Court under S. 482 CrPC. R.V. Murthy v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 4 SCC 157: 1981 SCC (Cri) 810: AIR 1982 SC 677.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1981]

[7221] — Ss. 482 & 125 — Interference with concurrent findings of fact without adverting to evidence and without recording reasons not justified — Trial court under S. 125 refusing to grant maintenance to respondent wife on the finding that there was no justifiable reason for her separation from her appellant husband and that her father was demanding Rs 30,000 for sending her to her matrimonial house — Findings of fact recorded by trial Magistrate confirmed by revisional court — Petition filed under S. 482 — Treating it as second revision, High Court awarding maintenance @ Rs 500 p.m. with effect from a specified date and @ Rs 1000 p.m. thereafter without considering evidence and without recording any reasons — Held, judgment of High Court perverse and liable to be set aside — High Court, even in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction, not empowered to set aside concurrent findings of fact of courts below without adverting to evidence or recording reasons therefor (Paras 5 and 6). Ramkaran v. Gyarsi, (2005) 12 SCC 341.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

(11)(v) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed (contd.)

[7222] — Ss. 482 and 239, 240 & 245 — Petition for quashing charge framed against accused — If High Court decides to quash the charges it should record reasons therefor — High Court erred in setting aside the charge without recording reasons and directing the Magistrate to consider the material once again and then frame a charge for the same offence — Constitution of India — Art. 226

In the present case as the Metropolitan Magistrate has chosen to frame the charge, the High Court, when moved by the accused for quashment of the charge, could have re-examined the records to consider whether the charge framed was sustainable or not. If the High Court decides to quash the charge it is open to the High Court to record the reasons thereof. The present order of the High Court is one of setting aside the charge without stating any reason. But the direction to the Magistrate to consider the materials once again and then to frame a charge for the same offence (if the Magistrate reaches the opinion that there is ground for presuming the commission of offence) is simply to repeat what the Metropolitan Magistrate had done once at the first instance. To ask him to do the same thing over again is adding an unnecessary extra work on the trial court. Be that as it may, the State has not challenged the order of the High Court. Hence the impugned order of the High Court need not be set aside. It is for the Metropolitan Magistrate to exercise his functions under Section 239 or Section 240 of the Code as he deems fit in the light of the observations made above. (Para 13). Kanti Bhadra Shah v. State of W.B., (2000) 1 SCC 722: 2000 SCC (Cri) 303: AIR 2000 SC 522: 2000 Cri LJ 746.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-2000]

(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered

[7223] — S. 482 — High Court's power to quash FIR and criminal proceedings — Scope of — Evaluation of allegation based on evidence — Permissibility — Held, said power should be exercised sparingly keeping in view the guidelines laid down by the Supreme Court in various decisions — High Court not justified in evaluating the genuineness and reliability of allegations made in the FIR or complaint on the basis of evidence collected during the investigation — Constitution of India — Art. 226. State of T.N. v. Thirukkural Perumal, (1995) 2 SCC 449: 1995 SCC (Cri) 387: (1995) 1 Crimes 566.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1995]

[7224] — S. 482 — Inherent power of High Court to quash charge-sheet — Scope of the power restated — Held, High Court was not supposed to "embark upon the enquiry whether the allegations in FIR and the charge-sheet were reliable or not and thereupon to render definite finding about truthfulness or veracity of the allegations" — High Court should have limited its consideration to "... whether allegations made in the FIR and the charge-sheet taken on their face value and accepted in their entirety would prima facie constitute an offence for making out a case against the accused" — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B and 193

AM, the respondent's son, at material time, was Commissioner (Land Disposal), in the Delhi Development Authority. CBI conducted a raid at AM's residence and seized Rs 36 lakhs. AM claimed that the cash belonged to the respondent who confirmed in writing his son's version. The respondent's explanation was that he received this amount as part-payment of two immovable properties which he had agreed to sell. CBI however found that there were several inconsistencies and irregularities in the stand taken by the respondent and his son with regard to recovery of 36 lakhs. CBI therefore charged the respondent under Sections 120-B (criminal conspiracy) and 193 (falsification of evidence) IPC.

The High Court quashed the charge-sheet under Section 482 CrPC. The approach of the High Court was to examine the evidence in detail and to assess whether a case was made out against the respondent.

Rejecting this approach,

Held :

On the basis of the material available on record and allegations levelled against the respondent in FIR and charge-sheet, it cannot be concluded that no ingredients of offence under Section 120-B read with Section 193 IPC are present in the instant case. At this stage, the High Court in its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC was not called upon to embark upon an inquiry whether the allegations in the FIR and the charge-sheet were reliable or not and thereupon to render definite finding about truthfulness or veracity of the allegations. These are matters which can be examined only by the court concerned after the entire material is produced before it on a thorough investigation and evidence is led. The High Court ought to have critically examine whether the allegations made in the FIR and the charge-sheet taken on their face value and accepted in their entirety would prima facie constitute an offence for making out a case against the respondent. (Paras 30 to 32)

On careful scrutiny and analysis of the allegations incorporated in FIR and charge-sheet (extracts reproduced in para 8 of the judgment), it is abundantly clear that ingredients of Sections 193 and 120-B IPC are clearly made out in the instant case setting out a cognizable offence justifying registration of a case and investigation thereon. This case does not fall under any of the categories of cases formulated in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 calling for exercise of extraordinary jurisdiction or inherent powers of the court to quash the FIR. It would not be appropriate to comment or express any opinion on the truthfulness or veracity of the allegations incorporated in the FIR or the charge-sheet because the Supreme Court would not like the trial court to be influenced by any of the findings of the Supreme Court or the High Court in the trial of this case. All that can be said without any hesitation is that on the basis of averments and allegations incorporated in FIR and charge-sheet, the High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR/charge-sheet while exercising its extraordinary jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC to stifle a legitimate prosecution. (Paras 35 to 38). CBI v. K.M. Sharan, (2008) 4 SCC 471: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 430: (2008) 64 AIC 65 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 2027.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233, relied on

[7225] — S. 482 — Quashment — Principles for — Held, though it is open to the High Court to quash charges framed by the trial court, but the same cannot be done by weighing the correctness or sufficiency of the evidence — The principle to be adopted by the High Court in such cases should be that if the entire evidence produced by the prosecution is to be believed, would it constitute an offence or not — It is only at the stage of trial that the truthfulness, sufficiency and acceptability of the evidence can be adjudged

Even though it is open to a High Court entertaining a petition under Section 482 of the Code to quash charges framed by the trial court, same cannot be done by weighing the correctness or sufficiency of evidence. In a case praying for quashing of the charge, the principle to be adopted by the High Court should be that if the entire evidence produced by the prosecution is to be believed, would it constitute an offence or not. The truthfulness, the sufficiency and acceptability of the material produced at the time of framing of charge can be done only at the stage of trial. The High Court was therefore not justified in this case in giving a finding as to the non-existence of material to frame a charge for an offence punishable under Section 304 Part II IPC, which is too premature. At the same time the Sessions Court should also have precluded from expressing a conclusive opinion as to the existence of sufficient material to establish a charge punishable under Section 304 Part II IPC. (Para 12)

Hence findings of the Sessions Court as well as the High Court are set aside and it is left to the court trying the offence to alter or modify any such charge at an appropriate stage based on material produced by way of evidence. (Para 13). State of Maharashtra v. Salman Salim Khan, (2004) 1 SCC 525: 2004 SCC (Cri) 337: AIR 2004 SC 1189: 2004 Cri LJ 920.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-2003]

[7226] — Ss. 482, 211, 215 and 216 — Quashment of charges — When permissible — Considerations involved, reiterated — Effect of inclusion of inapplicable charge

A "fundamental defect" should be found in the charges if the court has to quash them. Whether the accused was misled and whether there was reasonable possibility of prejudice being caused to the accused on account of defective charges are relevant considerations in judging the effect of wrong or deficient charges. It will always be material to consider whether the objection to the nature of charge was taken at an early stage. (Para 25)

It is not uncommon that the offence alleged might seemingly fall under more than one provision and sometimes it may not be easy to form a definite opinion as to the section in which the offence appropriately falls. Hence, charges are often framed by way of abundant caution. Assuming that an inapplicable provision has been mentioned, it is no ground to set aside the charges and invalidate the trial. (Para 25)

It has not been demonstrated in the instant case as to how the accused or any of them were misled or any prejudice was caused to them on account of the alleged defects in the framing of charges. No such objection was even taken before the trial court. On the other hand, it is more than clear that the accused did understand the case they were called upon to meet. The question whether Section 120-B applies to the POTA offences or Section 3(3) alone applies is not a matter on which a definite conclusion should be reached ahead of the trial. (Para 25). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Navjot Sandhu, (2005) 11 SCC 600: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1715: 2005 Cri LJ 3950: (2005) 122 DLT 194.

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2005]

Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., (1955) 2 SCR 1140: AIR 1956 SC 116: 1956 Cri LJ 291; State of A.P. v. Cheemalapati Ganeswara Rao, (1964) 3 SCR 297: (1963) 2 Cri LJ 671, relied on

[7227] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings under — Exercise of inherent power under S. 482, when justified — Duty and approach of High Court while exercising said power — Held, inherent jurisdiction though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with great caution — May be exercised (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice — To be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist — While exercising the said power court must ensure that criminal prosecution is not used as an instrument of harassment or for seeking private vendetta or with an ulterior motive to pressurise the accused — But, said power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution — Court should refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where entire facts are incomplete and hazy — More so, when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the court and the issues involved are of such magnitude that they cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material — Yet no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down for exercise of extraordinary jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC

The powers possessed by the High Court under Section 482 CrPC are very wide and the very plenitude of the power requires great caution in its exercise. The Court must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of this power is based on sound principles. (Para 27)

Inherent power under Section 482 CrPC can be exercised: (i) to give effect to an order under the Code; (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. Every High Court has inherent power to act ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice, for the administration of which alone it exists, or to prevent abuse of the process of the court. Inherent jurisdiction of the High Courts under Section 482 CrPC though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with great caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. Authority of the court exists for the advancement of justice. If any abuse of the process leading to injustice is brought to the notice of the court, then the court would be justified in preventing injustice by invoking inherent powers in absence of specific provisions in the statute. The court must ensure that criminal prosecution is not used as an instrument of harassment or for seeking private vendetta or with an ulterior motive to pressurise the accused. (Paras 23, 24 and 46)

However, the inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The High Court should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where all the facts are incomplete and hazy, more so, when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of such magnitude that they cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in regard to cases in which the High Court will exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction of quashing the proceedings at any stage. (Para 27). Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259: AIR 2008 SC 251: (2007) 144 DLT 257: (2007) 59 AIC 30 (SC): (2008) 1 All LJ 40.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2007]

Connelly v. DPP, 1964 AC 1254: (1964) 2 WLR 1145 (HL); DPP v. Humphrys, 1977 AC 1: (1976) 2 WLR 857 [HL (E)]; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on [7228] — Ss. 482 and 2(c) & (d), 154 — Quashment of FIR — Contents of complaint/FIR — Relevance of — Held, for the purpose of finding out commission of a cognizable offence, High Court, while exercising power under S. 482, is only required to look into allegations made in complaint/FIR for concluding whether a prima facie offence has been made out by complainant in complaint/FIR or not (Para 22). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

[7229] — S. 482 — Quashment of proceedings — Evaluation of plausibility/credibility of averments in complaint — Permissibility — Doubt as to the same, held, must be based on some material — High Court cannot quash complaint if allegations prima facie disclose commission of cognizable offence — Complaint alleging sale of cooperative society land illegally for higher price but showing lesser price in records and conspiracy to cheat society and its members — High Court quashing entire criminal proceedings holding that averments in complaint were "imaginary" — Sustainability — In present case, allegations in complaint disclose conspiracy to put cooperative society and its members to loss in view of report of Registrar and hence prima facie disclose commission of cognizable offence — High Court's conclusion that averments in complaint are imaginary is not based on any material — Hence, judgment of High Court is unsustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 120-B and 34

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now a well-settled principle of law that the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code may quash a criminal proceeding inter alia in the event the allegations made in the complaint petition even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not disclose commission of a cognizable offence. (Para 14)

The opinion of the High Court that the averments made in the complaint petition are imaginary is not based on any material. Even assuming that the complainant had a score to settle against the accused, the same by itself may not be a ground to quash the entire criminal proceedings particularly in view of the fact that at least a prima facie case has been established in view of the report of the Registrar. (Para 22)

The allegations made in the complaint petition disclose commission of a cognizable offence. A conspiracy is said to have been entered into for putting the Society and consequentially the members to a great loss. A conspiracy is also said to have been hatched for the aforementioned purpose as a result whereof not only an allotment was made in favour of a person who was not entitled thereto but also the allotted plot was assigned in favour of a third party for a huge sum. Whether the allegations made in the complaint petition are correct or not have to be considered during trial. It may be true that the question as to whether the report of the Registrar can be relied upon for the purpose of showing as to how the act of cheating has been committed by the respondents is a matter which must be considered at the time of trial but there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that so long as the report is not set aside, the same could form the basis for forming of an opinion at least for the purpose of proceeding against the respondents that they manipulated the records of the cooperative Society to make unlawful gain for themselves and causing unlawful loss to the Society. (Paras 16, 17 and 19). K. Ashoka v. N.L. Chandrashekar, (2009) 5 SCC 199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, followed

[7230] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings under, by appreciating the evidence — Held, not permissible — Even if the charge is framed at that stage, High Court cannot appreciate the evidence, but can evaluate material and documents on records to the extent of its prima facie satisfaction about the existence of sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused — Offence under Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — Investigation not complete — Quashing of investigation and proceedings by High Court acting upon documents annexed to the petition under S. 482 — Held, not proper — It was impermissible for High Court to look into materials, the acceptability of which was essentially a matter for trial — Impugned judgment of High Court, held, liable to be set aside — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 13(1)(e)

The respondents (accused public servant and his relatives) filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court for quashing the investigation and proceedings initiated under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. The said prayer was made on the ground that while investigating into the alleged acquisition of disproportionate assets by Respondent 1 (accused), the income of the other respondents was not taken note of. The High Court held that the documents annexed to the petition, more particularly, the income tax returns indicated (i) that all the properties shown in the returns were fully explained to have been acquired from the known sources of income of the accused and his relatives, and nothing had been found to have been acquired disproportionately to the income of the accused, (ii) that the properties acquired by his relatives could not have been taken for constituting the offence so far as the accused was concerned, and (iii) that since no opportunity of explanation, as stipulated in Section 13(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, was given to the accused, he could not be said to have failed to satisfactorily account for the pecuniary resources and properties disproportionate to his known sources of income. Accordingly, it was held that though considerable time had elapsed to collect evidence, nothing substantial had been collected to suggest that if prosecuted, the public servant would be liable to be convicted. With these observations, the investigation and further proceedings in the case registered were quashed.

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the impugned judgment of the High Court,

Held :

Exercise of power under Section 482 of the Code in a case of this nature is an exception and not the rule. (Para 8)

It was not proper for the High Court to analyse the case of the complainant in the light of all probabilities in order to determine whether a conviction would be sustainable and on such premises, arrive at a conclusion that the proceedings are to be quashed. It was erroneous to assess the material before it and conclude that the complaint cannot be proceeded with. (Para 11)

In the present case, the investigation was not complete and at that stage it was impermissible for the High Court to look into materials, the acceptability of which is essentially a matter for trial. While exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code, it is not permissible for the Court to act as if it was a trial Judge. Even when charge is framed at that stage, the Court has to only prima facie be satisfied about existence of sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. For that limited purpose, the Court can evaluate material and documents on records but it cannot appreciate evidence. The Court is not required to appreciate evidence to conclude whether the materials produced are sufficient or not for convicting the accused. (Para 13). State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353: AIR 2004 SC 517: 2004 Cri LJ 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2003]

Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636, relied on

[7231] — S. 482 — Petition under for quashing complaint — Court's prima facie satisfaction must be based only on the allegations made in the complaint taking them to be correct — If clear allegations constituting the offence alleged are made, the court should be reluctant to interfere

Per majority

In case no offence is committed on the allegation and the ingredients of Ss. 405 and 406, IPC are not made out, the High Court in exercise of power under S. 482, CrPC would be justified in quashing the proceedings. But the High Court should very sparingly exercise its discretion under S. 482, CrPC. For the purpose of exercising its power under S. 482, CrPC to quash an FIR or a complaint the High Court should proceed entirely on the basis of the allegations made in the complaint or the documents accompanying the same per se. It has no jurisdiction to examine the correctness or otherwise of the allegations. In the present case the allegations made in the complaint were clear, specific and unambiguous and prima facie constitute an offence under S. 406, IPC. Therefore, the appellant cannot be denied the right to prove her case at the trial by pre-empting it at the very behest by the order passed by the High Court. It is, of course, open to the accused at the trial to take whatever defences that were open to him but that stage had not yet come and therefore, the High Court erred in speculating on the merits of the case at that stage and quashing the proceedings.

Per Varadarajan, J. (dissenting)

In a petition under S. 482, CrPC for quashing a criminal complaint, the allegations made in the complaint have to be taken to be correct in order to find out whether they constitute the various ingredients of the offence alleged. For the purposes of the petition under S. 482, CrPC the articles mentioned in the list attached to the complaint in this case must be prima facie considered to be dowry or stridhan of the appellant-wife. Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1985 SC 628: 1985 Cri LJ 817.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali[1], A. Varadarajan[2] and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1985]

[7232] — S. 482 — Quashing of charge — At the stage of framing of charge High Court not justified in going into meticulous consideration of evidence and appreciate documents and statements filed by police — On facts, High Court's conclusion about inadequacy of evidence, besides being a premature assessment of evidence, is also attributable to wrong premises on which its reason-

ing is based — Order quashing charge set aside — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 r/w S. 120-B. Radhey Shyam v. Kunj Behari, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 572: 1990 SCC (Cri) 194: AIR 1990 SC 121.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah, C.J. and K.N. Singh and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-1989]

[7233] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashing of FIR — Relevant considerations — Results of/material collected during preliminary investigations — Offences in relation to civil dispute — Though FIR disclosing only a pure civil case, preliminary investigations revealing offences under Ss. 406 and 120-B IPC and under RBI Act, 1934 — Effect — But High Court going by contents of FIR alone holding that S. 420 IPC not attracted and that it was a simple breach of contract and pure civil dispute and therefore quashing FIR — Sustainability — Held, materials collected during preliminary investigations are relevant — Hence quashment of FIR not sustainable — Fair and impartial investigation directed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B

Respondent 1, accused was the Director of a Company, which floated a car buying and rental scheme, whereby, it promised to give its investors (investing a sum of Rs 97,907), a monthly rent of Rs 4000 and also give an option to the investor to take back his car at the end of sixty months. Respondent 2 complainant invested in the scheme, got his monthly rent of Rs 4000 as agreed upon but when after the expiry of sixty months, he demanded back his car, it was not given. Instead the Company gave Respondent 2 post-dated cheques amounting to Rs 25,000, Rs 20,000 and Rs 10,000. Respondent 2, therefore, filed an FIR, which however, was quashed under Section 482 CrPC by the impugned judgment of the High Court.

Grounds taken in the memorandum of SLP revealed that during investigations statements of various witnesses had been recorded. Public at large, especially middle class and lower class people had invested their hard-earned money in the scheme. It was also complained of by an investor that no vehicle had been purchased in his name. Statements of witnesses during preliminary investigations also revealed that the Company had resorted to false registrations of vehicles in the name of investors which were actually owned and registered by non-investors who had no link with the Company. For instance, as per the statement of a non-investor his Maruti Esteem car was shown in the Company data as being registered in the name of an investor.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There cannot be any doubt or dispute whatsoever that a simple breach of contract or a case involving a pure civil dispute would not attract any offence either under Section 406 or Section 420 IPC. Had the dispute between the parties rested on the aforementioned premise, interference with the judgment of the High Court probably would not have been warranted. The petition of the complainant did not disclose any criminal offence at all much less any offence either under Section 420 or Section 120-B IPC. It was purely civil in nature. But then, certain evidences surfaced during investigation which are disclosed in the grounds stated in the memo of this appeal. (Paras 13 and 19)

The allegation made in the FIR and the materials collected during investigation, should be allowed to be taken to its logical end. A large number of illegalities were committed by the said Company including the violation of the provisions of the Reserve Bank of India Act. The High Court in its judgment only considered the case from the point of view of Section 420 IPC and not Sections 406 and 120-B thereof. The legal position in regard to exercise of jurisdiction by the High Court for quashing of an FIR is now well settled. The State contended that having regard to the well-settled principle of law, the High Court should not quash an FIR save and except sparingly and in the rarest of rare cases. In the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case and particularly in view of the materials which have surfaced during investigation, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained. It is set aside accordingly. (Paras 6, 10, 14 and 20)

The investigating officer shall conduct the investigation fairly and impartially and shall allow the Company to carry on its business without any hindrance whatsoever. If any books of account or other documents are required, the investigating officer subject to just exceptions may take the xerox copies thereof duly certified by the accused as also an undertaking that, as and when called upon, they would produce the said books of account in a court of law. Subject to the aforementioned directions, the investigating officer shall carry out the investigation in accordance with law. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Sayed Mohammed Masood, (2009) 8 SCC 787: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 945.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, relied on

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; Radha Ballav Pal v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Cal 327; Velji Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; New India Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Sadanand Mukhi, (2009) 2 SCC 417: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 815; Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49, distinguished

[7234] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint at initial stage — Matters to be considered — Findings to be arrived at — High Court rejecting the petition for quashing the complaint without examining the question whether the complaint ex facie make out any offence and whether the ingredients of the offence alleged against the accused are satisfied — Question of limitation and sanction for prosecution raised by the complainant also not considered — Held, order of the High Court not sustainable — Case remitted to the High Court for fresh disposal. M.M. Rajendran v. K. Ramakrishnan, (1997) 6 SCC 85: 1997 SCC (Cri) 849.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S. Saghir Ahmad, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-4-1997]

[7235] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint at initial stage — Considerations involved — Credentials of complainant — Relevance of — Held, at such stage complaint must be read as it is — (Constructive trust imposed under) mutual wills — Evidence that may be adduced — Who may give evidence — In present case, one PDB was the survivor under mutual wills executed by PDB and her husband MPB — Under said mutual wills MPB and PDB settled all their assets and properties (worth about Rs 2400 crores) in favour of five trusts — PDB some time after death of her husband, nominated three public charitable institutions as beneficiaries of the five trusts — However, some time thereafter, she revoked all five trusts and executed a fresh will by which she bequeathed all the said properties to A-1, and after him, his son — R-2, complainant alleging that appellant-accused, who were all trustees in either the three public charitable institutions or the five revoked trusts, had made PDB erroneously believe, thereby committing criminal breach of trust, that she, PDB was the beneficial owner free from any trust under the said mutual wills/secret trust, and that therefore she had been free to revoke the said five trusts and bequeath the assets settled thereunder to A-1 and his son — R-2 claiming that he was present and consulted when PDB and MPB opted for the mutual wills and when the trusts were executed — R-2 basing the complaint on oral agreement to which he was witness, between husband and wife regarding disposal of properties on their demise, to leave their estate to charity — Hence, complainant alleging that the accused, by causing PDB to revoke the trusts and bequeathing the trust property to their own names, were liable for criminal breach of trust — Whether said allegation raised triable issues, requiring the leading of evidence — Held, in a matter of this type oral evidence is admissible to prove the fraud or breach of trust — Issues raised in this case are matters of evidence, and hence it must go to trial — Questions as to whether there existed valid trusts or that PDB was entitled to dissolve the trusts even during her lifetime, are defences which can be taken by the accused at the appropriate time — Furthermore, the charge of mala fides against R-2 made by the accused has to be decided on leading of evidence — Credentials of complainant at this initial stage is not relevant — Hence at this initial stage, reading the complaint as it is, the complaint cannot be dismissed — Succession Act, 1925, Ss. 80 to 82, 75, 68 — Trusts Act, 1882, Ss. 88 and 89 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 92 provisos

Madhav Prasad Birla (MPB) and Smt Priyamvada Devi Birla (PDB) were one of the richest and the wealthiest couples who had no issue during their lifetime. MPB was one of the famous industrialists from the Birla family. The couple executed mutual wills in 1981. In 1982, the couple executed mutual wills revoking the earlier mutual wills. In 1988, during their lifetime, Smt Birla formed four trusts and MPB formed the fifth trust. These trusts, 5 in number, covered corporate assets. On 30-7-1990 MPB died. On 10-9-1990, Smt Birla made nominations of beneficiaries in respect of the five trusts in favour of the three named public charitable institutions. In terms of the said nominations made after the demise of MPB, the assets of the five trusts estimated at Rs 2400 crores stood settled for the benefit of the three public charitable institutions. However, on 15-4-1999 PDB purported to revoke all the five trusts (stood dissolved). On 18-4-1999 Smt Birla executed a will by which she bequeathed all her properties (including the estate of MPB) to Accused 1 R.S. Lodha and after him his son, the value of which is around Rs 2400 crores. Smt Birla died on 3-7-2004. R.S. Lodha was a trustee of the three public charitable institutions prior to the dissolution of the five trusts w.e.f. 15-4-1999. The appellant herein, Shiva Nath Prasad, Accused 2 was also a trustee in the five trusts. Accused 3, Dr. V. Gauri Shanker was a trustee in the three public charitable institutions. He was also a trustee in three out of five mutual trusts referred to above.

Respondent 2 herein (the complainant), a former employee working in M.P. Birla Group, claiming to be a close associate of the late MPB and his wife, petitioned a complaint in the Court of Chief Judicial Magistrate alleging offences under Section 120-B read with Sections 406, 420, 467, 417 and 204 IPC, inter alia, on the ground that he was a witness to the intention and the wishes of the couple during their lifetime to leave their estate to charity, which decision was made known to everyone close to the couple including the other members of the Birla family.

Vide order dated 5-10-2004, the CJM held that a prima facie case for offences under Sections 120-B/406/417/420 IPC was made out against the accused. Accordingly, cognizance was taken. Accordingly, the accused were summoned on 29-11-2004. Aggrieved by the said order dated 5-10-2004 of the CJM, Accused 2 Shiva Nath Prasad moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the proceedings. By the impugned judgment, the High Court refused to intervene and set aside/quash the criminal proceedings. Hence, the accused were in appeal before the Supreme Court.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

A will on its own terms is inherently revocable during the lifetime of the testator. However, "mutual wills" and "secret trusts" are doctrines evolved in equity to overcome the problems of revocability of wills and to prevent frauds. Mutual wills and secret trusts belong to the same category of cases. The doctrine of mutual wills is to the effect that where two individuals agree as to the disposal of their assets and execute mutual wills in pursuance of the agreement, on the death of the first testator (T-1), the property of the survivor testator (T-2), the subject-matter of the agreement, is held on an implied trust for the beneficiary named in the wills. T-2 may alter his/her will because a will is inherently revocable, but if he/she does so, his/her representative will take the assets subject to the trust. The rationale for imposing a "constructive trust" in such circumstances is that equity will not allow T-2 to commit a fraud by going back on her agreement with T-1. Since the assets received by T-2, on the death of T-1, were bequeathed to T-2 on the basis of the agreement not to revoke the will of T-1, it would be a fraud for T-2 to take the benefit, while failing to observe the agreement, and equity intervenes to prevent this fraud. In such cases, the instrument itself is the evidence of the agreement and he, that dies first, does by his act carry the agreement on his part into execution. If T-2 then refuses, he/she is guilty of fraud, and can never unbind himself/herself and becomes a trustee, of course. For no man shall deceive another to his prejudice. (Para 47)

The mutuality and reciprocity of mutual wills depend on several factors. Mutual wills and trusts are evidenced by the deeds themselves (the recitals, terms and conditions mentioned therein) as also by the surrounding circumstances, namely, the simultaneity and the similarity of the terms of the wills/trusts, the pattern of successive wills, the reciprocity of one to the other, the age of the settlors, the value of the estates, dying of the settlors without any issues, making of the last will without reference to the revocation of previous wills. (Para 47)

Lastly, in law there exists the concept of accessory liability for having assisted in a breach of trust. In such a case the accused is not charged for having received trust income or assets for his own benefit but for having acted as an accessory to a breach of trust. (Para 47)

At the stage when it is being considered whether to quash a complaint, the complaint must be read as it is. (Para 48)

The couple had executed mutual wills in 1981 and 1982; followed by reciprocal trusts in 1988 which are in almost identical words. Clauses 7(b) and 8 of the trust deed reflect charitable intention coupled with nominations of 1990. The scheme of the mutual deeds read together is almost identical. It is not disputed that a mere declaration can create a trust obligation, particularly when the settlor is the sole trustee under the trust. (Paras 48 and 49)

What is complained of in the complaint filed by Respondent 2 herein is regarding the acts of management including dissolution of the trusts and making of the will by which trust properties have been allegedly converted dishonestly into personal properties of R.S. Lodha, constituting an offence of criminal misappropriation under Sections 405 and 406 and cheating under Section 420 IPC. The question as to whether Smt Birla had the authority to revoke the mutual trusts in question is different from the allegation that the acts of setting up personal title to the trust property constituted criminal breach of trust and that, the act was performed with the intent of converting trust property into private property pursuant to a conspiracy by the accused. "Secret trust" is a doctrine evolved to prevent fraud; that, fraud is not an ingredient for the application of the said doctrine. The substance of the complaint here is that the secret trust has become the reason for fraud because the legatee under the secret trust was made to believe by the accused that she was the beneficial owner, free from any trust. In a matter of this type, oral evidence is admissible to prove what is called "fraud". (Paras 48 and 49)

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

In the complaint, Respondent 2 herein has averred that he was present and consulted when the couple opted for mutual wills in 1981, 1982 and even in 1988 when mutual and reciprocal trusts were executed. The complaint is based on the alleged oral agreement and understanding between the husband and wife regarding disposal of properties on their demise [to charity]. Suffice it to say that these facts in issue are matters of evidence. The question as to whether there existed a valid trust or that Smt Birla was entitled to dissolve the trust even during her lifetime are defences which can be taken at the appropriate time. (Para 48)

It has been averred by the appellants that Respondent 2 (the complainant) is a disgruntled employee of the M.P. Birla Group of Companies and that he has been put up by the other Birlas, hence, the complaint is based on mala fides and should, therefore, be dismissed. The question of mala fides has to be decided on the facts of each case. The credentials of the complainant at this stage is not relevant. What is alleged by the complainant, inter alia, is that he was a privy to the discussions and consultations and the thinking which went into making of the mutual wills and the mutual trusts; that, he was a formal witness to some of these deeds and that he was aware that the couple had mutually agreed to the disposal of the property to charity after their demise. In the facts and circumstances of this case, at this stage the argument that the complaint should be dismissed at the initial stage on the ground of alleged mala fides of the complainant cannot be accepted. (Para 52). Shiva Nath Prasad v. State of W.B., (2006) 2 SCC 757: AIR 2006 SC 1181: (2006) 127 DLT 198.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-2-2006]

Dale Re, (1993) 4 All ER 129: 1994 Ch 31: (1993) 3 WLR 652; Cleaver, Re, (1981) 2 All ER 1018: (1981) 1 WLR 939; Ottaway v. Norman, (1971) 3 All ER 1325: 1972 Ch 698: (1972) 2 WLR 50, approved

[7236] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint or charge-sheet — Scope of High Court's jurisdiction — Complaint has to be examined as a whole without going into merits of the allegations made therein — If a prima facie case is made out disclosing the ingredients of the offence alleged against the accused, Court should not quash the complaint — But if the allegations do not constitute any offence as alleged and appear to be patently absurd and improbable, Court should not hesitate to quash the complaint — Court's approach should, however, be very circumspect, cautious and careful

Exercise of jurisdiction under the inherent power as envisaged in Section 482 of the Code to have the complaint or the charge-sheet quashed is an exception rather than a rule and the case for quashing at the initial stage must have to be treated as rarest of rare so as not to scuttle the prosecution. With the lodgement of first information report the ball is set to roll and thenceforth the law takes its own course and the investigation ensues in accordance with the provisions of law. The jurisdiction as such is rather limited and restricted and its undue expansion is neither practicable nor warranted. In the event, however, the court on a perusal of the complaint comes to a conclusion that the allegations levelled in the complaint or charge-sheet on the face of it do not constitute or disclose any offence as alleged, there ought not to be any hesitation to rise up to the expectation of the people and deal with the situation as is required under the law. To exercise powers under Section 482 of the Code, the complaint in its entirety will have to be examined on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint and the High Court at that stage has no authority or jurisdiction to go into the matter or examine its correctness. Whatever appears on the face of the complaint shall be taken into consideration without any critical examination of the same. But the offence ought to appear ex facie on the complaint. The truth or falsity of the allegations would not be gone into by the Court at this earliest stage. Whether or not the allegations in the complaint were true is to be decided on the basis of the evidence led at the trial. So the question is: Can it be said that the allegations in the complaint do not make out any case against the accused nor do they disclose the ingredients of an offence alleged against the accused or the allegations are patently absurd and inherently improbable so that no prudent person can ever reach to such a conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused? (Paras 2, 14 and 15). Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615: AIR 2000 SC 1869: 2000 Cri LJ 1487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2000]

Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; L.V. Jadhav v. Shankarrao Abasaheb Pawar, (1983) 4 SCC 231: 1983 SCC (Cri) 813; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri)

47; Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; Nagpur Steel & Alloys (P) Ltd. v. P. Radhakrishna, 1997 SCC (Cri) 1073; Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516, relied on

Dr. Sharma's Nursing Home v. Delhi Admn., (1998) 8 SCC 745: 1999 SCC (Cri) 91, distinguished [7237] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Proper manner and mode of dispossal — High Court in its order not setting out full facts of the case and the circumstances in which the complaint was filed, nor discussing the parameters as indicated by Supreme Court in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 to quash the proceedings before it — Hence, case remitted to High Court for fresh consideration in accordance with law. A.P. Foam (P) Ltd. v. Subhash Chandra, (2002) 10 SCC 504.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2000]

[7238] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Exercise of power — Reiterated, inherent power under S. 482 CrPC should not be used to stifle a legitimate prosecution (Para 36). Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 649: AIR 2008 SC 2781: (2008) 67 AIC 106 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

[7239] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — High Court's approach in exercise of its power under, should be cautious, careful and circumspect — Factors which should be kept in mind — High Court should not go into merits of the allegations or possible harassment which may be caused to petitioner due to investigation or complaint — In the peculiar facts of the case, held, proceedings required to be quashed

The High Court should be extremely cautious and slow to interfere with the investigation and/or trial of criminal cases and should not stall the investigation and/or prosecution except when it is convinced beyond any manner of doubt that FIR does not disclose commission of any offence or that the allegations contained in FIR do not constitute any cognizable offence or that the prosecution is barred by law or the High Court is convinced that it is necessary to interfere to prevent abuse of the process of the Court. In dealing with such cases, the High Court has to bear in mind that judicial intervention at the threshold of the legal process initiated against a person accused of committing offence is highly detrimental to the larger public and societal interest. The people and the society have a legitimate expectation that those committing offences either against an individual or the society are expeditiously brought to trial and, if found guilty, adequately punished. Therefore, while deciding a petition filed for quashing FIR or complaint or restraining the competent authority from investigating the allegations contained in FIR or complaint or for stalling the trial of the case, the High Court should be extremely careful and circumspect. (Para 31)

If the allegations contained in FIR or complaint disclose commission of some crime, then the High Court must keep its hands off and allow the investigating agency to complete the investigation without any fetter and also refrain from passing order which may impede the trial. The High Court should not go into the merits and demerits of the allegations simply because the petitioner alleges malus animus against the author of FIR or the complainant. The High Court must also refrain from making imaginary journey in the realm of possible harassment which may be caused to the petitioner on account of investigation of FIR or complaint. Such a course will result in miscarriage of justice and would encourage those accused of committing crimes to repeat the same. (Para 31)

However, if the High Court is satisfied that the complaint does not disclose commission of any offence or prosecution is barred by limitation or that the proceedings of criminal case would result in failure of justice, then it may exercise inherent power under Section 482 CrPC. (Para 31). Sanapareddy Maheedhar Seshagiri v. State of A.P., (2007) 13 SCC 165: AIR 2008 SC 787: (2008) 61 AIC 102 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1375.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-12-2007]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Ramesh Chandra Sinha v. State of Bihar, (2003) 7 SCC 254: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1613, relied on

[7240] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Caution — Requirement, type and manner of, explained — Though no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down, where facts are hazy and evidence has not been collected, held, High Court in a S. 482 petition should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision

The inherent power under Section 482 CrPC should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The powers possessed by the High Court under Section 482 CrPC are very wide and the very plenitude of the power requires great caution in its exercise. Inherent jurisdiction under Section 482

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

CrPC has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in regard to cases in which the High Court will exercise its jurisdiction of quashing the proceeding at any stage. When the complaint is sought to be quashed it is permissible to look into the materials to assess what the complainant has alleged and whether any offence is made out even if the allegations are accepted in toto. Indisputably, there is no quarrel with the well-settled principles of law that while exercising powers under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which courts exist. (Paras 36 and 33). Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 649: AIR 2008 SC 2781: (2008) 67 AIC 106 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 753: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 73: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 895; State of H.P. v. Pirthi Chand, (1996) 2 SCC 37: 1996 SCC (Cri) 210; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 2 SCR 336; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388, relied on [7241] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Assessment of evidence — Permissibility — When allegations are assumed to be true, High Court under S. 482 CrPC, held, has power to assess the nature of allegations and the prosecution case (Paras 36 and 33). Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 649: AIR 2008 SC 2781: (2008) 67 AIC 106 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

[7242] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Circumstances in which the extraordinary power can be exercised, reiterated — Case law discussed. K.L.E. Society v. Siddalingesh, (2008) 4 SCC 541: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 1071: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 455: AIR 2008 SC 1702: (2008) 64 AIC 124 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866, relied on

[7243] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Nature and scope of — Circumstances in which power can be exercised — Power should be exercised ex debito justitiae to prevent abuse of process of court — But it should not be exercised to stifle legitimate prosecution — High Court should not assume the role of a trial court and embark upon an enquiry as to reliability of the evidence and sustainability of the accusation on a reasonable appreciation of such evidence — Power should be exercised sparingly, with caution and circumspection — On facts held, High Court erred in quashing the criminal proceedings — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 465, 468, 471 and 420 r/w S. 120-B

On receipt of a complaint, a charge-sheet was submitted by the police against the respondents alleging commission of offences punishable under Sections 465, 468, 471 and 420 r/w Section 120-B IPC. It was alleged that a sub-lease to act as Excise Contractor of Koratagere was obtained by Respondent 1 by submitting fake bank guarantees, confirmation and extension letters and by impersonation with fraudulent intention. The accused-Respondents 1 and 2 filed application before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC. They inter alia contended that the allegations made have not been borne out by the materials/evidence collected during investigation and continuance of proceedings against them would be against the ends of justice. A Single Judge of the High Court, on analysis of the background facts held that involvement of the excise officials could not be ruled out and when they had been indicated to be witnesses, likelihood of prejudice could not be ruled out. It was also noted that there was no "definite evidence" to show that Accused 1 and 2 were directly involved. Finally, it was observed that there was no material to hold that the accused persons had committed theft of "letter heads" from the bank and/or they had committed forgery for the purpose of cheating or have used genuine forged documents or had cheated the Government. Finally, it was observed that there was no evidence to infer common intention to commit such offences. Hence he quashed the criminal proceedings. Allowing the appeal by the State,

Held :

The order of the Single Judge of the High Court cannot be maintained and therefore, the same is set aside. (Para 10)

Exercise of power under Section 482 of the Code in a case of this nature is the exception and not the rule. The section does not confer any new powers on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of the Code. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely: (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. Courts, therefore, have inherent powers apart from express provisions of law which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon them by law. That is the doctrine which finds expression in the section which merely recognizes and preserves inherent powers of the High Courts. All courts, whether civil or criminal possess, in the absence of any express provision, as inherent in their constitution, all such powers as are necessary to do the right and to undo a wrong in course of administration of justice on the principle quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, concedere videtur et id sine quo res ipsae esse non potest (when the law gives a person anything it gives him that without which it cannot exist). (Para 6)

While exercising powers under the Section 482 CrPC the court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone courts exist. Authority of the court exists for advancement of justice and if any attempt is made to abuse that authority so as to produce injustice the court has power to prevent abuse. (Para 6)

It would be an abuse of process of the court to allow any action which would result in injustice and prevent promotion of justice. In exercise of the powers court would be justified to quash any proceeding if it finds that initiation/continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. When no offence is disclosed by the complaint, the court may examine the question of fact. When a complaint is sought to be quashed, it is permissible to look into the materials to assess what the complainant has alleged and whether any offence is made out even if the allegations are accepted in toto. (Para 6)

It is important to bear in mind the distinction between a case where there is no legal evidence or where there is evidence which is clearly inconsistent with the accusations made, and a case where there is legal evidence which, on appreciation, may or may not support the accusations. When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge. Judicial process should not be an instrument of oppression, or, needless harassment. Court should be circumspect and judicious in exercising discretion and should take all relevant facts and circumstances into consideration before issuing process, lest it be an instrument in the hands of a private complainant to unleash vendetta to harass any person needlessly. At the same time the section is not an instrument handed over to an accused to short-circuit a prosecution and bring about its sudden death. The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. (Para 8)

The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in regard to cases in which the High Court should exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction of quashing the proceeding at any stage. Court must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of this power is based on sound principles. It would not be proper for the High Court to analyse the case of the complainant in the light of all probabilities in order to determine whether a conviction would be sustainable and on such a premises arrive at a conclusion that the proceedings are to be quashed. It would be erroneous to assess the material before it and conclude that the complaint cannot be proceeded with. (Para 9)

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

In a proceeding instituted on complaint, exercise of the inherent powers to quash the proceedings is called for only in a case where the complaint does not disclose any offence or is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive. If the allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute the offence of which cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate, it is open to the High Court to quash the same in exercise of the inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC. It is not, however, necessary that there should be meticulous analysis of the case before the trial to find out whether the case would end in conviction or acquittal. The complaint has to be read as a whole. If it appears that on consideration of the allegations in the light of the statement made on oath of the complainant that the ingredients of the offence or offences are disclosed and there is no material to show that the complaint is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, in that event there would be no justification for interference by the High Court. (Para 9)

When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in court which decides the fate of the accused person. The allegation of mala fides against the informant is of no consequence and cannot by itself be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Paras 8 and 9). State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539: AIR 2002 SC 671: 2002 Cri LJ 998: (2002) 2 CHN (Supp) 21.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, B.N. Agrawal and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2002]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, relied on

[7244] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Nature of — Exercise of said power, when justified — Held, inherent jurisdiction though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in S. 482 — Power to be exercised ex debito justitiae to prevent abuse of process of court — But, should not be exercised to stifle legitimate prosecution

Exercise of power under Section 482 of the Code in a case of this nature is the exception and not the rule. The section does not confer any new powers on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of the Code. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. (Para 8)

While exercising powers under the section, the court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone courts exist. Authority of the court exists for advancement of justice and if any attempt is made to abuse that authority so as to produce injustice, the court has power to prevent abuse. (Para 8)

It would be an abuse of process of the court to allow any action which would result in injustice and prevent promotion of justice. In exercise of the powers, court would be justified to quash any proceeding if it finds that initiation/continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. (Para 8)

When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge. Judicial process should not be an instrument of oppression, or, needless harassment. Court should be circumspect and judicious in exercising discretion and should take all relevant facts and circumstances into consideration before issuing process, lest it would be an instrument in the hands of a private complainant to unleash vendetta to harass any person needlessly. At the same time the section is not an instrument handed over to an accused to short-circuit a prosecution and bring about its sudden death. The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. (Paras 10 and 11)

The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in regard to cases in which the High Court will exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction of quashing the proceeding at any stage. Court must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of this power is based on sound principles. It would not be proper for the High Court to analyse the case of the complainant in the light of all probabilities in order to determine whether a conviction would be sustainable and on such premises arrive at a conclusion that the proceedings are to be quashed. It would be erroneous to assess the material before it and conclude that the complaint cannot be proceeded with. (Para 11)

In a proceeding instituted on complaint, exercise of the inherent powers to quash the proceedings is called for only in a case where the complaint does not disclose any offence or is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive. If the allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute the offence of which cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate, it is open to the High Court to quash the same in exercise of the inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC. It is not, however, necessary that there should be meticulous analysis of the case before the trial to find out whether the case would end in conviction or acquittal. The complaint has to be read as a whole. If it appears that on consideration of the allegations in the light of the statement made on oath of the complainant that the ingredients of the offence or offences are disclosed and there is no material to show that the complaint is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, in that event there would be no justification for interference by the High Court. (Para 11). Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 2005 SC 9: 2005 Cri LJ 92.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-2004]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 2 SCR 336: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, relied on

[7245] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Nature of — Exercise of said power, when justified — Held, inherent jurisdiction though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in S. 482 — Power to be exercised ex debito justitiae to prevent abuse of process of court — But, should not be exercised to stifle legitimate prosecution — High Court should not assume the role of a trial court and embark upon an enquiry as to reliability of evidence and sustainability of accusation on a reasonable appreciation of such evidence — If on consideration of the allegations in the light of the statement made on oath of the complainant or made in FIR it appears that the ingredients of the offence or offences are disclosed and there is no material to show that the complaint/FIR is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, held, the proceedings cannot be quashed — But where it appears to the contrary, interference by High Court would be justified — Yet no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down for exercise of this extraordinary jurisdiction — Andhra Pradesh Excise Act, 1968 (17 of 1968) — Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1995 (17 of 1995)

By the impugned judgments the High Court quashed the FIR filed by Prohibition and Excise Officers alleging commission of offences under the Andhra Pradesh Excise Act, 1968 and the Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1995. In all the cases the allegation was that the accused concerned was either transporting or storing black jaggery/molasses for the purpose of manufacturing illicit distilled liquor or was an abettor so far as the offence of manufacturing illicit liquor was concerned. The High Court passed its decision on the basis that there was no material to show that the seized articles were intended to be used for manufacturing of illicit distilled liquor.

Held :

Exercise of power under Section 482 of the Code in a case of this nature is the exception and not the rule. The section does not confer any new powers on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of the Code. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely: (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. (Para 5)

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

While exercising powers under the section, the Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone courts exist. Authority of the court exists for advancement of justice and if any attempt is made to abuse that authority so as to produce injustice, the court has power to prevent such abuse. (Para 5)

It would be an abuse of the process of the court to allow any action which would result in injustice and prevent promotion of justice. In exercise of the powers court would be justified to quash any proceeding if it finds that initiation or continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. (Para 5)

When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge. Judicial process, no doubt should not be an instrument of oppression, or, needless harassment. Court should be circumspect and judicious in exercising discretion and should take all relevant facts and circumstances into consideration before issuing process, lest it would be an instrument in the hands of a private complainant to unleash vendetta to harass any person needlessly. At the same time the section is not an instrument handed over to an accused to short-circuit a prosecution and bring about its sudden death. The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. (Paras 7 and 8)

The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in regard to cases in which the High Court will exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction of quashing the proceeding at any stage. Court must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of this power is based on sound principles. It would not be proper for the High Court to analyse the case of the complainant in the light of all probabilities in order to determine whether a conviction would be sustainable and on such premises, arrive at a conclusion that the proceedings are to be quashed. It would be erroneous to assess the material before it and conclude that the complaint cannot be proceeded with. (Para 8)

In a proceeding instituted on complaint, exercise of the inherent powers to quash the proceedings is called for only in a case where the complaint does not disclose any offence or is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive. If the allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute the offence of which cognisance has been taken by the Magistrate, it is open to the High Court to quash the same in exercise of the inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC. It is not, however, necessary that there should be meticulous analysis of the case before the trial to find out whether the case would end in conviction or acquittal. The complaint/FIR has to be read as a whole. If it appears that on consideration of the allegations in the light of the statement made on oath of the complainant or disclosed in the FIR that the ingredients of the offence or offences are disclosed and there is no material to show that the complaint/FIR is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, in that event there would be no justification for interference by the High Court. (Para 8)

So far as Criminal Appeals Nos. 1180-81, 1184-89, 1191-92 of 2003 and criminal appeals arising out of SLPs (Crl.) Nos. 4702-04, 513 and 2636 of 2003 are concerned, these are not the cases where it can be said that the FIR did not disclose commission of an offence. Therefore, the High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR in these cases. On the other hand, in Criminal Appeals Nos. 1183, 1193-96 of 2003 and criminal appeals arising out of SLPs (Crl.) Nos. 2191, 2632-33 and 3463 of 2003, the FIR did not disclose commission of an offence without anything being added or subtracted from the recitals therein. Therefore, in these cases the High Court's interference does not suffer from any legal infirmity, though the reasonings indicated by the High Court are not approved. So far as criminal appeal arising out of SLP (Crl.) No. 2190 is concerned, it is allowed in respect of A-1, but dismissed so far as it relates to A-2 in the absence of any allegation against him. (Paras 9 and 11 to 13). State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1805: AIR 2004 SC 3967.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2004]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, relied on

Applied in State of A.P. v. Bajjoori Kanthaiah, (2009) 1 SCC 114*

[7246] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Nature of — Reiterated, while exercising powers under S. 482 CrPC, High Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision (Para 33). Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 649: AIR 2008 SC 2781: (2008) 67 AIC 106 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

[7247] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Exercise of, when justified — Held, inherent jurisdiction though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in S. 482 — Power to be exercised ex debito justitiae to prevent abuse of process of court — But, should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution — High Court should refrain from giving a prima facie decision where entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when evidence not collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material — Yet no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down for exercise of this extraordinary jurisdiction

Section 482 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not confer any new power on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of the Code. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. (Para 19)

While exercising powers under the section, the Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone courts exist. Authority of the court exists for advancement of justice and if any attempt is made to abuse that authority so as to produce injustice, the court has power to prevent abuse. (Para 19)

It would be an abuse of process of the court to allow any action which would result in injustice and prevent promotion of justice. In exercise of the powers court would be justified to quash any proceeding if it finds that initiation/continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. (Para 19)

The powers possessed by the High Court under Section 482 of the Code are very wide and the very plenitude of the power requires great caution in its exercise. Court must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of this power is based on sound principles. The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in regard to cases in which the High Court will exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction of quashing the proceeding at any stage. (Para 20). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, (1964) 2 SCR 336: AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1, relied on

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

[7248] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Material collected by investigating agency not gone through by High Court — Offences under Ss. 420, 201 r/w S. 120-B IPC as well as under Ss. 13(1) and 13(2), Prevention of Corruption Act — Proceedings quashed by High Court on the ground that accused persons have been exonerated of the charges in departmental proceedings conducted for the same cause of action — Held, before quashing the proceedings, High Court ought to have considered the aforesaid material so as to find out if the charges could be framed against the accused on the basis of it — Order passed by High Court set aside — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 201 r/w S. 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1) and 13(2). State of Bihar v. Purushottam Singh, (2002) 10 SCC 333.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2000]

[7249] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at initial stage — High Court should be loath to interfere at the threshold to thwart the prosecution exercising its inherent power under S. 482 or under Arts. 226 and 227 of the Constitution — FIR containing all the ingredients of the offence — High Court committed grave error of law in quashing the FIR. State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497: AIR 1996 SC 2983.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, B.L. Hansaria and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-2-1996]

State of H.P. v. Pirthi Chand, (1996) 2 SCC 37; State of Bihar v. Rajendra Agrawalla, Cr. A. No. 66 of 1996, decided on 18-1-1996; Mushtaq Ahmed v. Mohd. Habibur Rehman Faizi, JT (1996) 1 SC 656, followed

[7250] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at initial stage — Power should be very sparingly and cautiously exercised — At that High Court should not sift or appreciate the evidence and come to the conclusion that no prima facie case is made out — On facts, High Court not justified in quashing the proceedings — Penal Code, 1860, S. 414

The inherent power of the court under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should be very sparingly and cautiously used only when the court comes to the conclusion that there would be manifest injustice or there would be abuse of the process of the court, if such power is not exercised. So far as the order of cognizance by a Magistrate is concerned, the inherent power can be exercised when the allegations in the first information report or the complaint together with the other materials collected during investigation taken at their face value, do not constitute the offence alleged. At that stage it is not open for the court either to sift the evidence or appreciate the evidence and come to the conclusion that no prima facie case is made out.

In the present case the High Court exceeded its jurisdiction by trying to appreciate the evidence and coming to a conclusion that no offence is made out. The High Court was wholly unjustified in invoking its inherent power under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to quash the cognizance taken inasmuch as the allegation in the FIR and material referred to in the charge-sheet do make out an offence under Section 414 of the Indian Penal Code, so far as the respondent is concerned. State of Bihar v. Rajendra Agrawalla, (1996) 8 SCC 164.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1996]

Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, followed

[7251] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at initial stage — Principles for — High Court not justified in rejecting the dying declaration before its veracity could be tested at the trial — At the stage of investigation High Court cannot take into consideration statement of persons whose evidence is yet to be recorded at the trial — On facts, there exists a prima facie case against the respondent — Hence order of the High Court quashing the prosecution not sustainable

The veracity, reliability and truthfulness of the alleged dying declaration would be tested only after the evidence is recorded in the court and if on proper evaluation of such evidence, the court comes to the conclusion that the dying declaration is truthful version of the deceased relating to the circumstances of his death, then there is no question of any further corroboration as the conviction can be founded only on such dying declaration. But in case the court finds that the dying declaration suffers from any inherent infirmities it is bound to be rejected. In the present case the High Court rejected the dying declaration before its veracity could be tested at the trial.

In the instant case the High Court took into account the statement of certain persons to the effect that the deceased was a person of unsound mind at the investigation stage itself whose evidence was yet to be recorded at the trial and made observations that the deceased was a person of unsound mind and, therefore, the dying declaration could not be relied on. Such an approach to the case cannot be appreciated. However, after taking into consideration all the facts and circumstances of the case and on perusal of the alleged dying declaration as well as the statement of the witness it must be held that it was not a case where the taking of cognizance of the offence against the respondent deserved quashing by the High Court. On the contrary it is a fit case where the cognizance should be taken against the respondent for the alleged offence and the Magistrate was justified in doing so.

The power of quashing an FIR or criminal proceedings has to be sparingly exercised by the courts with due regard to the guidelines laid down in this behalf. In Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, certain categories of cases have been laid down by way of illustration wherein the extraordinary power can be exercised by the High Court either to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The present case does not fall in any of the categories mentioned in the said decision and on the contrary it goes to show that there exists a prima facie case against the respondent and hence the impugned order of the High Court could not be sustained. State of Orissa v. Bansidhar Singh, (1996) 2 SCC 194: 1996 SCC (Cri) 259: AIR 1996 SC 938.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.P. Singh and Faizan Uddin, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-1995]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[7252] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Matters to be considered — In the instant case, High Court went beyond allegations made in the FIR and thus acted in excess of its jurisdiction by relying on extraneous considerations

From a plain reading of the findings arrived at by the High Court while quashing the FIR, it is apparent that the High Court while exercising its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC has gone beyond the allegations made in the FIR and has acted in excess of its jurisdiction and, therefore, the High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR by going beyond the allegations made in the FIR or by relying on extraneous considerations. (Paras 14 and 16). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27, relied on

[7253] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR/charge-sheet/complaint — Principles for — High Court should exercise its inherent power to quash FIR/charge-sheet/complaint only in rarest of rare cases — Economic offences — It should not weigh the pros and cons of the prosecution case or consider effect of non-compliance of mandatory provision of law — In cases of economic offences or offences involving moral turpitude or crimes of grave nature greater circumspection and care and caution must be borne in mind by the High Court

The exercise of inherent power of the High Court is an exceptional one. Great care should be taken by the High Court before embarking to scrutinise the FIR/charge-sheet/complaint. In deciding whether the case is rarest of rare cases to scuttle the prosecution in its inception, it first has to get into the grip of the matter whether the allegations constitute the offence. It must be remembered that FIR is only an initiation to move the machinery and to investigate into a cognizable offence. After the investigation is concluded and the charge-sheet is laid, the prosecution produces the statements of the witnesses recorded under Section 161 of the Code in support of the charge-sheet. At that stage it is not the function of the court to weigh the pros and cons of the prosecution case or to consider necessity of strict compliance of the provisions which are considered mandatory and its effect of non-compliance. It would be done after the trial is concluded. The court has to prima facie consider from the averments in the charge-sheet and the statements of witnesses on the record in support thereof whether court could take cognizance of the offence on that evidence and proceed further with the trial. If it reaches a conclusion that no cognizable offence is made out, no further act could be done except to quash the charge-sheet. But only in exceptional cases, i.e., in rarest of rare cases of mala fide initiation of the proceedings to wreak private vengeance the criminal process is availed of in laying a complaint or FIR which itself does not disclose at all any cognizable offence — the court may embark upon the consideration thereof and exercise the power.

When the High Court exercises its inherent power under Section 482, the prime consideration should only be whether the exercise of the power would advance the cause of justice or it would be an abuse of the process of the court. When investigating officer spends considerable time to collect the evidence and places the charge-sheet before the court, further action should not be short-circuited by resorting to exercise inherent power to quash the charge-sheet. The social stability and order requires to be regulated by proceeding against the offender as it is an offence against the society as a whole. This cardinal principle should always be kept in mind before embarking upon exercising inherent power. The accused involved in an economic offence destabilises the economy and causes grave incursion on the economic planning of the State. When the legislature entrusts the power to the police officer to prevent organised commission of the offence or offences involving moral turpitude or crimes of grave nature and are entrusted with power to investigate into the crime in intractable terrains and secretive manner in concert, greater circumspection and care and caution should be borne in mind by the High Court when it exercises its inherent power. Otherwise, the social order and security would be put in jeopardy and to grave risk. The accused will have field day in destabilising the economy of the State regulated under the relevant provisions. State of H.P. v. Pirthi Chand, (1996) 2 SCC 37: 1996 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1996 SC 977.

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1995]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, followed

[Ed.: In this case order of discharge passed by the Sessions Judge was confirmed by the High Court in its revisional jurisdiction. Scope of High Court's inherent jurisdiction to quash criminal proceeding was not in issue.]

[7254] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings by High Court (i) where investigation was not completed; and (ii) where charge-sheet had been filed; by appreciating the evidence —- Permissibility — Held, impermissible — Where investigation was incomplete, it was impermissible for the High Court to look into materials, the acceptability of which is essentially a matter for trial — Further held, even at the stage where charge is framed, the Court has to only prima facie be satisfied about the existence of sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused and for that limited purpose it can evaluate material and documents on record but it cannot appreciate the evidence — On facts further held, High Court in exercise of its powers under S. 482 erred in directing renewal of licence — Moreover, conclusions of High Court, after referring to submissions made by a person who was not even a party to the proceedings are utterly fallacious, were based on surmises and conjectures, unsupported by evidence — Hence, impugned orders set aside

FIR No. 61 of 2000 was registered for alleged commission of offences under Sections 120-B, 420, 468 and 471 of Penal Code, 1860 read with Sections 13(2) and 13(1)(a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, against respondent S. Criminal Appeal No. 920 of 2003 and the appeal relatable to SLP (Crl.) No. 3199 of 2004 relates to this FIR where investigation was in progress.

Vigilance PS Case No. 25 of 2000 was registered against respondent B (father of respondent N) on the allegation that he had acquired assets disproportionate to his known source of income. During investigation business premises of N were searched and incriminating materials/documents were seized for which FIR No. 43 of 2000 was lodged against N and S. Appeal relatable to SLP (Crl.) No. 3190 of 2004 relates to FIR No. 43 of 2000 where charge-sheet had been filed.

The High Court in each case while exercising power under Section 482 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, quashed the proceedings. While doing so, it even directed grant of renewal of licence to a company where N was a Director and in one of the cases referred to submissions purportedly made on behalf of B who was not even a party to the proceedings. Hence the present appeal by the appellant State.

Setting aside High Court's orders and directing completion of investigation within six months in proceedings related to FIR No. 61 of 2000,

Held :

The exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC is the exception and not the rule. The section does not confer any new powers on the High Court. It only saves the inherent power which the Court possessed before the enactment of CrPC. The inherent powers have been conferred, apart from express provisions of law, which are necessary for proper discharge of functions and duties imposed upon it by law. It envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under CrPC, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all cases that may possibly arise. (Para 8)

While exercising the powers under the Section 482 CrPC, the High Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section, though wide, has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. In exercise of the powers the court would be justified in quashing any proceeding if it finds that initiation/continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. (Para 8)

However, the inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. But no hard-and-fast rule as regards cases in which such power can be exercised can be laid down. (Para 11)

Some categories of cases in which inherent power can and should be exercised to quash the proceedings are:

(i) Where it manifestly appears that there is a legal bar against the institution or continuance e.g. want of sanction;

(ii) where the allegations in the first information report or complaint taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not constitute the offence alleged;

(iii) where the allegations constitute an offence, but there is no legal evidence adduced or the evidence adduced clearly or manifestly fails to prove the charge.

However, in dealing with the last category, it is important to bear in mind the distinction between a case where there is no legal evidence or where there is evidence which is clearly inconsistent with the accusations made, and a case where there is legal evidence which, on appreciation, may or may not support the accusations. When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge. Judicial process should not be an instrument of oppression, or, needless harassment. At the same time the section is not an instrument handed over to an accused to short-circuit a prosecution and bring about its sudden death. The inherent power should be exercised sparingly and that too in the rarest of rare cases. (Paras 9 and 10)

When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in the court which decides the fate of the accused person. The allegations of mala fides against the informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Para 11)

In the instant case the investigation was not complete and at that stage it was impermissible for the High Court to look into materials, the acceptability of which is essentially a matter for trial. While exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, it is not permissible for the Court to act as if it was a trial court. Even when charge is framed at that stage, the Court has to only prima facie be satisfied about the existence of sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. For that limited purpose, the Court can evaluate material and documents on records but it cannot appreciate the evidence. (Para 14)

The learned Single Judges did not keep in view the correct position in law while allowing the petitions filed by the respondents. It is baffling as to how a learned Single Judge while exercising powers under Section 482 CrPC could even direct grant of renewal of licence. It is also baffling how the learned Single Judge referred to submissions purportedly made by the learned counsel for B who was not even a party. The conclusions are based on surmises and conjectures without any material to support them and are utterly fallacious. Besides, grant of relief to B who was not a party is equally indefensible. (Para 15)

When the factual position of the case at hand is considered in the light of principles of law highlighted, the inevitable conclusion is that the High Court was not justified in quashing the investigation and proceedings in the connected case and the charge-sheet filed. Therefore the High Court's impugned orders are indefensible and are accordingly quashed. (Paras 16 and 17). State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272: (2006) 1 KLT 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2005]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, (1964) 2 SCR 336: AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, (1960) 3 SCR 388: AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353;

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

Jehan Singh v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 4 SCC 522: 1974 SCC (Cri) 558; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, relied on

Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636, considered

[7255] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — Scope of/Permissible enquiry — Enquiry into reliability of evidence — Held, High Court should not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry as to reliability of evidence to sustain the allegations, which is the function of the trial Judge

Some categories of cases in which inherent power can and should be exercised to quash the proceedings are inter alia where the allegations constitute an offence, but there is no legal evidence adduced or the evidence adduced clearly or manifestly fails to prove the charge. However, in dealing with this category, it is important to bear in mind the distinction between a case where there is no legal evidence or where there is evidence which is clearly inconsistent with the accusations made, and a case where there is legal evidence which, on appreciation, may or may not support the accusations. When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge. Judicial process should not be an instrument of oppression, or, needless harassment. At the same time the section is not an instrument handed over to an accused to short-circuit a prosecution and bring about its sudden death. The inherent power should be exercised sparingly and that too in the rarest of rare cases. (Paras 9 and 10). State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272: (2006) 1 KLT 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2005]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, (1960) 3 SCR 388: AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353; Jehan Singh v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 4 SCC 522: 1974 SCC (Cri) 558, relied on [7256] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR/Charge-sheet/Complaint — Consideration of merits of the case and complicated questions of fact and law — Held, improper — Complaint/proceedings restored (Paras 33 and 35). Rajiv Modi v. Sanjay Jain, (2009) 13 SCC 241: (2009) 80 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2009]

State of H.P. v. Pirthi Chand, (1996) 2 SCC 37: 1996 SCC (Cri) 210, relied on [7257] — S. 482 — Quashment — Matters to be considered — Enquiry to be made — Need for reasoned order — Quashing of complaint as also the summons issued against accused-Respondents 2 and 3 by a cryptic order opining that it was abuse of process of court — Propriety — Held, while arriving at said conclusion High Court had not even taken pains to look into the complaint and other materials produced by the complainant — It was alleged that accused persons in criminal conspiracy with each other had cheated the complainant and his sons by getting their (complainant's sons) invention of petrol from polythene published in their (i.e. accused's) names and affixing their own photographs for taking direct or indirect benefits by committing forgery — It was further alleged that accused abused complainant and his sons by using words like "chamar" and also threatened to kill them — Held, the question is not whether there was any truth in allegations made, but whether on basis of allegations a cognizable offence had been alleged — Judicial Magistrate had taken cognizance under SCST Act, 1989 and IPC — Hence, held, High Court erred in exercising its extraordinary power and inherent jurisdiction in quashing the proceedings — Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 — S. 3(2)(v) — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 467, 471, 323, 506-B and 120-B (Paras 3 to 7 and 13 to 16). Ram Babu v. State of M.P., (2009) 7 SCC 194: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 343: (2009) 80 AIC 39 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Maharashtra v. Ishwar Piraji Kalpatri, (1996) 1 SCC 542: 1996 SCC (Cri) 150, considered and followed

Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, relied on

[7258] — S. 482 — Scope of High Court's jurisdiction under — Petition under, for setting aside cognizance of offence taken by Magistrate on the basis of complaint — High Court has only to see whether complaint prima facie disclosed the alleged offence — It cannot go into the question whether the offence could be established by evidence or not — Wild Life Protection Act, 1972, Ss. 55, 51 and 9(1)

Jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC has to be exercised sparingly and with circumspection. In exercising that jurisdiction the High Court should not embark upon an enquiry whether the allegations in the complaint are likely to be established by evidence or not. That is the function of the trial Magistrate when the evidence comes before him. Though no inflexible rules could be laid down to regulate the High Court's jurisdiction, when the High Court is called upon to exercise this jurisdiction to quash a proceeding at the stage of the Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence the High Court is guided by the allegations, whether those allegations, set out in the complaint or the charge-sheet, do not in law constitute or spell out any offence and whether resort to criminal proceedings would, in the circumstances, amount to an abuse of the process of the court or not.

In the present case the allegations in the complaint, taken at their face value, constituted the offence under S. 9(1) r/w S. 51 of the Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972. The High Court was, therefore, not justified in quashing the proceedings of the Magistrate under S. 482 CrPC. State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27: AIR 1989 SC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ranganath Misra and M.N. Venkatachaliah, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-1988]

[7259] — S. 482 — Scope of High Court's power under — Quashment — Insufficiency of evidence — High Court can, under its inherent power, quash proceedings pending before the Sessions Judge on ground of insufficiency of evidence — CrPC, 1898, S. 561-A

The saving of the High Court's inherent powers, both in civil and criminal matters, is designed to achieve a salutary public purpose which is that a court proceeding ought not to be permitted to degenerate into a weapon of harassment or persecution. In a criminal case, the veiled object behind a lame prosecution, the very nature of the material on which the structure of the prosecution rests and the like would justify the High Court in quashing the proceeding in the interest of justice. The ends of justice are higher than the ends of mere law though justice has got to be administered according to laws made by the legislature.

In the exercise of this wholesome power, the High Court is entitled to quash a proceeding if it comes to the conclusion that allowing the proceeding to continue would be an abuse of the process of the Court or that the ends of justice require that the proceeding ought to be quashed.

Considerations justifying the exercise of inherent powers for securing the ends of justice naturally vary from case to case and a jurisdiction as wholesome as the one conferred by S. 482 ought not to be encased within the strait-jacket of a rigid formula.

Also it is wrong to say that at the stage of framing charges the court cannot apply its judicial mind to the consideration whether or not there is any ground for presuming the commission of the offence by the accused. The order framing a charge affects a person's liberty substantially and therefore it is the duty of the court to consider judicially whether the material warrants the framing of the charge. It cannot blindly accept the decision of the prosecution that the accused be asked to face a trial.

So that for the purpose of determining whether there is sufficient ground for proceeding against an accused the court possesses a comparatively wider discretion in the exercise of which it can determine the question whether the material on the record, if unrebutted, is such on the basis of which a conviction can be said reasonably to be possible.

In the present case there is no material on the record on the basis of which any tribunal could reasonably come to the conclusion that the respondents are in any manner connected with the incident leading to the prosecution. State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404: AIR 1977 SC 1489: (1977) 3 SCR 113: 1977 Cri LJ 1125.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.K. Goswami and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1977]

Distinguished in Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542

[7260] — S. 482 — Scope of power of High Court under — Quashment — Extent of enquiry permissible — Distinction between a case where there is no legal evidence or where there is evidence which is clearly inconsistent with the accusations made, and a case where there is legal evidence which, on appreciation, may or may not support the accusations — High Court should not assume the role of a trial court and embark upon an enquiry as to reliability of evidence and sustainability of accusation on a reasonable appreciation of such evidence — If on consideration of the allegations in the light of the statement made on oath of the complainant it appears that the ingredients of the offence or offences are disclosed and there is no material to show that the complaint is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, held, the proceedings cannot be quashed — But where it appears to the contrary, interference by High Court would be justified — Yet no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down for exercise of this extraordinary jurisdiction — On facts, High Court erred in not quashing the proceedings

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

Respondent 1 filed a complaint on 9-8-2002. The date of occurrence was indicated to be between 12-7-1995 to 8-5-2002. The basic allegations in the complaint were that an advertisement was issued by Appellant 1 seeking applications for appointment to the post of Area Manager. The complainant, who was then working in another concern, applied for the said post. After an interview on 14-7-1995, he was asked to report at the Bombay office of Appellant 1 Company on 1-8-1995 for training. On receipt of the appointment letter the complainant asked the officials concerned i.e. the other accused persons as to how he was being appointed as Field Officer when he had appeared at the interview for the post of Area Manager. He was assured that the letter for the post of Area Manager will be issued in the first week of April 1996. But no such letter came to be issued and he was not appointed as Area Manager. Grievance was, therefore, made that the accused persons had initially deceived him by appointing him as Field Officer and not as Area Manager, though he was assured that the appointment letter in that regard will be issued.

By order dated 8-10-2002 the learned Judicial Magistrate held that sufficient material existed to proceed under Section 418 IPC against the appellants and, therefore, he issued summons against them. The appellants challenged the said order by filing an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court. It was submitted (a) that the complaint was misconceived; (b) that the complainant had not come to court with clean hands and had suppressed material facts; (c) that the complainant had filed a civil suit challenging the validity of his transfer order and had also filed a case in the Labour Court claiming certain payments and compensation, but no grievance regarding cheating was made in those cases; (d) that there was no material to show commission of any offence even if complaint petition was considered in its entirety; and (e) that the complaint was stale, and in any event, beyond the prescribed period of limitation as provided in Section 468 CrPC. On the other hand, the complainant took the stand that his claim was finally rejected on 5-12-2001 and subsequently his services were terminated on 29-4-2002. That being so, the plea of the complainant having been filed beyond the period of limitation, could not be maintained. The High Court rejected the petition filed under Section 482 CrPC. Hence the present appeal.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellants reiterated the submissions made before the High Court. It was further contended that in the complaint petition there was no reference to the letter dated 5-12-2001 which forms foundation for the High Court's conclusion to hold that the application was not belated. That apart, in view of the endorsement of the complainant on his appointment letter, the statement made in the complaint that the complainant had never accepted appointment as Field Officer, was not correct.

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the judgment of the High Court declining to exercise power under Section 482 CrPC,

Held :

In the present case, the facts indicate that the complainant had not come to court with clean hands. There was no explanation whatsoever for the inaction between 1995 and 2001. The High Court seems to have been swayed by the fact that the appellants have rejected claim of the complainant on 5-12-2001. It failed to notice that the communication dated 5-12-2001 was in response to the letter of the complainant dated 24-11-2001. The complaint was nothing but a sheer abuse of the process of law and this is a case where the power under Section 482 should have been exercised. (Paras 13 and 15). Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 2005 SC 9: 2005 Cri LJ 92.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-2004]

[7261] — Ss. 482, 309, 228 and 240 — High Court's power to quash the charge — Manner of exercise of — Held, should not be exercised except for strong reasons to hold that in the interest of justice and in order to avoid the abuse of the process of the court the charge needed to be quashed — Moreover, the exercise of the said power should be confined to exceptional cases and rare occasions — Where the Sessions Court framed charge under Ss. 304/34 IPC and the prosecution had by then not closed its evidence, held, High Court could not, in exercise of its jurisdiction under S. 482, sift the available medical evidence and quash the charge on the ground that in view of the said evidence the charge in question could not have been framed — Supreme Court directing the trial court to proceed with the hearing of the case — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 304/34

On receipt of a report regarding the murder of a lady S, who was the daughter-in-law of Respondent 1 and wife of Respondent 2, the police made an investigation and laid a challan against the three respondents. Pursuant thereto, the Sessions Judge besides framing certain charges against all the respondents, framed charge under Sections 304/34 IPC against Respondents 1 and 2. The accused persons filed a revision petition before the High Court against the said order. However, the High Court, on a suggestion made by the revisionists and the State's counsel, directed the Sessions Judge to first record the medical evidence and till then to exempt Respondents 1 and 2 from personal appearance in the court. Accordingly, the Sessions Judge recorded the evidence of the doctors concerned. Thereafter, the prosecution closed medical evidence from its side. Thereupon, the accused persons filed an application before the Sessions Judge, seeking their discharge, which was later rejected. Thereafter, the accused persons filed an application under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashment of the charge. The said application was allowed by the High Court after sifting the evidence of the doctors in the light of the autopsy report and coming to the conclusion that the charge under Sections 304/34 could not have been framed. Allowing the State's appeal,

Held :

It is well settled that at the stage of framing of charge the trial court is not to examine and assess in detail the materials placed on record by the prosecution nor is it for the court to consider the sufficiency of the materials to establish the offence alleged against the accused persons. At this stage of charge the court is to examine the materials only with a view to be satisfied that a prima facie case of commission of offence alleged has been made out against the accused persons. It is also well settled that when the petition is filed by the accused under Section 482 CrPC seeking for the quashing of charge framed against them the court should not interfere with the order unless there are strong reasons to hold that in the interest of justice and to avoid abuse of the process of the court the charge framed against the accused needs to be quashed. Such an order can be passed only in exceptional cases and on rare occasions. Moreover, once the trial court has framed a charge against an accused the trial must proceed without unnecessary interference by a superior court and the entire evidence from the prosecution side should be placed on record. Any attempt by an accused for quashing of a charge before the entire prosecution evidence has come on record should not be entertained sans exceptional cases. (Para 7)

The High Court has erred in its approach to the case as if it was evaluating the medical evidence for the purpose of determining the question whether the charge under Sections 304/34 IPC framed against the accused-Respondents 1 and 2 was likely to succeed or not. This question was to be considered by the trial Judge after recording the entire evidence in the case. It was not for the High Court to pre-judge the case at the stage when only a few witnesses (doctors) had been examined by the prosecution and that too under the direction of the High Court in the revision petition filed by the accused. The High Court has not observed that the prosecution had closed the evidence from its side. There is also no discussion or observation in the impugned order that the facts and circumstances of the case had made it an exceptional case in which immediate interference of the High Court by invoking its inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC was warranted in the interest of justice. Therefore, the impugned order of the High Court is set aside and the trial court is directed to proceed with the hearing of the case. (Paras 10 and 11). State of Delhi v. Gyan Devi, (2000) 8 SCC 239: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1486: AIR 2001 SC 40.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Ruma Pal, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2000]

Radhey Shyam v. Kunj Behari, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 572: 1990 SCC (Cri) 194; Minakshi Bala v. Sudhir Kumar, (1994) 4 SCC 142: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1181; State of M.P. v. S.B. Johari, (2000) 2 SCC 57: 2000 SCC (Cri) 311, relied on

[7262] — Ss. 482, 245, 397 and 399 — Petition under S. 482 against trial court's refusal to discharge — Mode of disposal of such petition — Speaking order, if necessary — Where the trial court's order was upheld by Sessions Court and the High Court did not think it proper to interfere therewith in exercise its inherent powers in the light of the controversy raised, the question involved and the stage at which the petitioner had approached High Court, held, High Court could rightly reject the petition without passing a detailed speaking order or recording reasons

The petition under Section 482 CrPC was not a substantive appeal. An application for discharge of the accused was rejected by the trial court. Revision petition was also dismissed by the Sessions Court and the said order was challenged before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC (inherent power of High Court). If the High Court did not think it fit to exercise inherent powers in the light of the controversy raised, question involved and the stage at which the applicants had approached the Court, it cannot be said that the Court should have passed detailed speaking order or recorded reasons in support of such order. (Para 22). Madhumilan Syntex Ltd. v. Union of India, (2007) 11 SCC 297: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 143: AIR 2007 SC 1481: (2007) 210 ELT 484: (2007) 290 ITR 199.

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2007]

[7263] — Ss. 482, 154 and 155 — Abuse of process of law — Particular instances — Exercise of power — Relief — Doing substantial justice — Impugned judgment although not sustainable, in view of facts of case and with a view to do substantial justice, interference refused — Parallel sale agreements with respondents and appellants in respect of same property — Consequent to decree in specific performance suit, passed seven long years later, sale deed executed in favour of respondents — Appellants' suit for annulment of said decree dismissed with a finding that sale agreement in favour of respondents was not forged or fabricated — Still six long years after decree in former suit, appellants lodging FIR under Ss. 420/323/467/468/471/120-B IPC against respondents reiterating allegation of forgery as made by them in their civil suit for annulment — High Court quashing FIR on the ground of the finding recorded by court in civil suit — Said judgment of High Court, held, legally not sustainable — However, FIR, in view of unexplained inordinate delay in its filing and that too after losing civil suit, held, not bona fide and amounted to abuse of process of law — Hence, for doing substantial justice, said judgment left undisturbed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 423, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B — Constitution of India — Arts. 142 and 136

One K executed an agreement dated 4-1-1988 to sell the land specified, in favour of the respondents. The land was already mortgaged with the respondents. The sale deed was to be executed and registered by 10-6-1989. According to the appellants herein, on 22-10-1988, K entered into an agreement with their father to sell the same land, and received a certain amount as earnest money. The sale was to be executed and registered by 15-6-1989.

The respondents filed a suit for specific performance of the sale deed against K in 1989 which was decreed in 1996 and in pursuance thereof, the sale was executed by K in favour of the respondents. The father of the appellants filed a suit seeking cancellation/setting aside of the said decree but the same stood dismissed. An appeal filed thereagainst continued to be pending.

In 2002, the father of the appellants filed an FIR under Sections 420/423/467/468/120-B IPC alleging that K's signatures on the agreement to sell dated 4-1-1988 were forged. At the instance of the respondents, the High Court quashed the FIR on the ground that the civil court had recorded a finding that the document in question was not forged or fabricated. The first informants then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Finding the order of the High Court to be not sustainable legally but in the facts and circumstances of the case refusing interference,

Held :

The findings of fact recorded by the civil court do not have any bearing so far as the criminal case is concerned and vice versa. Standard of proof is different in civil and criminal cases. In civil cases it is preponderance of probabilities while in criminal cases it is proof beyond reasonable doubt. There is neither any statutory nor any legal principle that findings recorded by the court either in civil or criminal proceedings shall be binding between the same parties while dealing with the same subject-matter and both the cases have to be decided on the basis of the evidence adduced therein. However, there may be cases where the provisions of Sections 41 to 43 of the Evidence Act, 1872, dealing with the relevance of previous judgments in subsequent cases may be taken into consideration. (Para 18)

No explanation has been furnished as to why after expiry of the date of execution of the sale deed in favour of the appellants' father i.e. 15-6-1989, the appellants' father did not file the suit for specific performance which was subsequently filed on 6-2-1996. Even if it is presumed that he was not aware of the suit filed by the respondents, no explanation could be furnished that in case the appellants' father filed another suit for setting aside the decree passed in the respondents' suit, why did he wait till the decision of that suit for lodging FIR, as the civil and criminal proceedings could have proceeded simultaneously. The FIR was filed only after filing of appeal thereagainst before High Court on 15-7-2002. (Para 20)

Prompt and early reporting of the occurrence by the informant with all its vivid details gives an assurance regarding truth of its version. In case there is some delay in filing the FIR, the complainant must give explanation for the same. Undoubtedly, delay in lodging the FIR does not make the complainant's case improbable when such delay is properly explained. However, deliberate delay in lodging the complaint is always fatal. (Paras 21 and 24)

In cases where there is a delay in lodging an FIR, the court has to look for a plausible explanation for such delay. In the absence of such an explanation, the delay may be fatal. The reason for quashing such proceedings may not be merely that the allegations were an afterthought or had given a coloured version of events. In such cases the court should carefully examine the facts before it for the reason that a frustrated litigant who failed to succeed before the civil court may initiate criminal proceedings just to harass the other side with mala fide intentions or the ulterior motive of wreaking vengeance on the other party. Chagrined and frustrated litigants should not be permitted to give vent to their frustrations by cheaply invoking the jurisdiction of the criminal court. The court proceedings ought not to be permitted to degenerate into a weapon of harassment and persecution. In such a case, where an FIR is lodged clearly with a view to spite the other party because of a private and personal grudge and to enmesh the other party in long and arduous criminal proceedings, the court may take a view that it amounts to an abuse of the process of law in the facts and circumstances of the case. (Para 22)

The appellants' father lodged FIR under Sections 420/423/467/468/471/120-B IPC, against the respondents. The allegations made in the FIR were substantially similar to the allegations made by the appellants in the civil suit which had been decided against them. It is evident that the aforesaid FIR was filed with inordinate delay and there has been no plausible explanation for the same. The appellants lodged the aforesaid FIR only after meeting their Waterloo in the civil court. Thus, it is evident that the FIR was lodged with the sole intention of harassing the respondents and enmeshing them in long and arduous criminal proceedings. Such an action on the part of the appellants' father would not be bona fide, and the criminal proceedings initiated by him against the respondents amount to an abuse of the process of law. (Para 25)

In view of the said facts, and to do substantial justice, it would not be appropriate to interfere with the order passed by the High Court quashing the criminal proceedings against the respondents in spite of the fact that the impugned judgment is not sustainable in the eye of the law. (Para 26). Kishan Singh v. Gurpal Singh, (2010) 8 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2010]

M.S. Sheriff v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 397: 1954 Cri LJ 1019; K.G. Premshanker v. Inspector of Police, (2002) 8 SCC 87: 2003 SCC (Cri) 223; P. Swaroopa Rani v. M. Hari Narayana, (2008) 5 SCC 765: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 79; Syed Askari Hadi Ali Augustine Imam v. State (Delhi Admn.), (2009) 5 SCC 528; Vishnu Dutt Sharma v. Daya Sapra, (2009) 13 SCC 729: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 1229; Sahib Singh v. State of Haryana, (1997) 7 SCC 231: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1049; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Gorige Pentaiah v. State of A.P., (2008) 12 SCC 531: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 446, relied on

King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1943-44) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1101, considered

Karam Chand Ganga Prasad v. Union of India, (1970) 3 SCC 694; V.M. Shah v. State of Maharashtra, (1995) 5 SCC 767: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1077, held, overruled

[7264] — Ss. 482 and 154 & 157 — High Court's power to quash criminal proceedings — Scope — Should be exercised sparingly in rarest of rare cases — Reliability of allegations made in FIR or complaint not to be examined

The power of quashing a criminal proceeding should be exercised very sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of rare cases. The extraordinary or inherent powers do not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on the court to act according to its whim or caprice. The court will not be justified in embarking upon an enquiry as to the reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

Applied in Anjani Kumar v. State of Bihar, (2008) 5 SCC 248

Followed in Reshma Bano v. State of U.P., (2008) 5 SCC 791

[7265] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Reasoned order/Speaking order necessity — High Court allowing respondents' application for quashing FIR registered against them for alleged commission of theft by a practically unreasoned order — Impugned order set aside — Penal Code, 1860, S. 379 (Paras 1 and 5 to 7). Lakhwant Singh v. Jasbir Singh, (2008) 14 SCC 661.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and G.S. Singhvi, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-9-2008]

Jehan Singh v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 4 SCC 522: 1974 SCC (Cri) 558, considered and relied on

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on [7266] — S. 482 — Application under, rejected by High Court without application of mind and without passing reasoned/speaking order — Sustainability — Held, impugned order set aside and matter remitted back to High Court for disposal afresh, after hearing the parties, by passing reasoned and speaking order in accordance with law (Paras 2 and 3). Ashok Kumar Thakur v. State of Bihar, (2008) 17 SCC 486: (2009) 74 AIC 123 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-2008]

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

[7267] — S. 482 — Improper manner of disposal of application under — Complaint case was filed against respondent after one week of occurrence — Previously, a police case was registered by him in relation to occurrence — High Court had came to conclusion that since complaint case was filed after filing of police case by Respondent 2, it was filed with ulterior and oblique motive and allowed application under S. 482 by practically a non-reasoned order — Held, that certainly is not the way to deal with an application under S. 482 — Impugned order of High Court set aside and matter remitted for fresh consideration in accordance with law keeping in view parameters of S. 482 (Paras 5 and 7). Sanjeet Kumar v. State of Bihar, (2009) 12 SCC 136: (2009) 81 AIC 263 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Reshma Bano v. State of U.P., (2008) 5 SCC 791: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 86, followed

[7268] — Ss. 482 and 227 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at preliminary stage — High Court must look into the relevant law and allegations made in the charge-sheet and then consider whether any offence has been made out

The charge-sheet constitutes prima facie evidence constituting the offence for proceeding further in the matter. Necessarily, therefore, the Court has to look into the relevant law and the allegations made in the charge-sheet and then consider whether any offence has been committed to frame charges for trial before discharging the accused. In the instant case since the High Court had not done that the matter is remitted to the High Court for reconsidering the matter and disposing of it in accordance with law. State of J&K v. Romesh Chander, (1997) 1 SCC 90: 1997 SCC (Cri) 44: AIR 1997 SC 2401: 1997 Cri LJ 2976.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-11-1996]

[7269] — Ss. 482 and 228 — Quashing of charges — Power of High Court — Held, High Court could not delve into merits and quash the charges by a cryptic order — As per the prosecution, the conspirator of the plan to murder and rob the deceased was the respondent — High Court dropping all charges (including murder, robbery etc.) against the respondent and directing trial court to prosecute him under S. 411 IPC on the ground that since accused P had been charged for offence under S. 411 and the case against the respondent being similar, the respondent should be charged only for offence under S. 411 — Held, High Court's order not sustainable — Contention that there was no evidence on record to prove the charges framed against the respondent was of no relevance at this stage — In case there was no evidence, on appreciation thereof, the trial court would decide the case accordingly (Paras 3 to 5). State of M.P. v. Rakesh, (2004) 13 SCC 523.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-9-2004]

[7270] — Ss. 482 and 239, 240, 245 — Petition for quashing charge framed against accused — If High Court decides to quash the charges it should record reasons therefor — High Court erred in setting aside the charge without recording reasons and directing the Magistrate to consider the material once again and then frame a charge for the same offence — Constitution of India — Art. 226

In the present case as the Metropolitan Magistrate has chosen to frame the charge, the High Court, when moved by the accused for quashment of the charge, could have re-examined the records to consider whether the charge framed was sustainable or not. If the High Court decides to quash the charge it is open to the High Court to record the reasons thereof. The present order of the High Court is one of setting aside the charge without stating any reason. But the direction to the Magistrate to consider the materials once again and then to frame a charge for the same offence (if the Magistrate reaches the opinion that there is ground for presuming the commission of offence) is simply to repeat what the Metropolitan Magistrate had done once at the first instance. To ask him to do the same thing over again is adding an unnecessary extra work on the trial court. Be that as it may, the State has not challenged the order of the High Court. Hence the impugned order of the High Court need not be set aside. It is for the Metropolitan Magistrate to exercise his functions under Section 239 or Section 240 of the Code as he deems fit in the light of the observations made above. (Para 13). Kanti Bhadra Shah v. State of W.B., (2000) 1 SCC 722: 2000 SCC (Cri) 303: AIR 2000 SC 522: 2000 Cri LJ 746.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-1-2000]

[7271] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Exercise of inherent power — Approach — Cautious approach, but no fixed rule — Questions of fact when may be gone into — Questions of fact can be gone into when no offence is disclosed, but meticulous analysis at the stage is not necessary — It should be exercised to do real and substantial justice and if any attempt is made to abuse that authority so as to produce injustice, the Court has power to prevent abuse

When no offence is disclosed by the complaint, the High Court may examine the question of fact. When complaint is sought to be quashed, it is permissible to look into the materials to assess what the complainant had alleged and whether any offence is made out even if the allegations are accepted in toto. When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court could not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it the accusation would not be sustained. To put it clear, it is the function of the trial Judge to do so. The Court must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of its power is based on sound principles. The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. If the allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute offence of which cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate, it is open to the High Court to quash the same in exercise of the inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC. However, it is not necessary that there should be meticulous analysis of the case before the trial to find out whether the case would end in conviction or acquittal. (Paras 40 and 41)

It is true that it is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. While exercising inherent powers either on civil or criminal jurisdiction, the Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. The inherent jurisdiction though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution. It should be exercised to do real and substantial justice and if any attempt is made to abuse that authority so as to produce injustice, the Court has power to prevent abuse. (Para 40). U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Dr. Bhupendra Kumar Modi, (2009) 2 SCC 147.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam, J. [Date of decision: 12-12-2008]

State of Karnataka v. Pratap Chand, (1981) 2 SCC 335: 1981 SCC (Cri) 453; State of Haryana v. Brij Lal Mittal, (1998) 5 SCC 343: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1315; Nalin Thakor v. State of Gujarat, (2003) 12 SCC 461: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 471, distinguished

[7272] — Ss. 482, 200, 202, 203 and 204 — Inherent powers of High Court — Object and manner of exercise of, restated — Where in the complaint under Ss. 406, 420 and 120-B IPC, no offence was made out against the accused, held, the Magistrate committed a manifest error in issuing process and the High Court erred in not invoking its inherent powers to correct that error — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 420 and 120-B

In the present case, except against Appellant 7, no offence was made out against the remaining appellants. The High Court failed to exercise jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC to correct the manifest error committed by the Magistrate in issuing process against Appellants 1-6 and 8 when the alleged acts against them did not constitute offences for want of satisfying the ingredients of the offences. The approach and considerations while exercising power and jurisdiction by a Magistrate at the time of issuing process are to be in terms of Sections 200 to 203 CrPC, having due regard to the position of law explained in various decisions of Supreme Court, and whereas while exercising power under Section 482 CrPC the High Court has to look at the object and purpose for which such power is conferred on it under the said provision. Exercise of inherent power is available to the High Court to give effect to any order under CrPC, or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Therefore, the exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC should be consistent with the scope and ambit of the same in the light of the decisions of the Supreme Court. In appropriate cases, to prevent judicial process from being an instrument of oppression or harassment in the hands of frustrated or vindictive litigants, exercise of inherent power is not only desirable but necessary also, so that the judicial forum of court may not be allowed to be utilized for any oblique motive. When a person approaches the High Court under Section 482 CrPC to quash the very issue of process, the High Court on the facts and circumstances of a case has to exercise the powers with circumspection as stated above to really serve the purpose and object for which they are conferred. (Paras 23, 24 and 27). S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129: AIR 2001 SC 2960: 2002 Cri LJ 548.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-10-2001]

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507, relied on

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615, explained

[7273] — S. 482 — Quashing of prosecution at preliminary stage by High Court improper — Where accused had an alias, then fact of his description by different names in the police papers ought to have been permitted to be certified by affording opportunity to the prosecution to present its case — Prejudging of the case by High Court

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

without affording reasonable opportunity to the prosecution to substantiate the allegations not justified — Criminal case restored for trial by trial court. State of Bihar v. Raj Narain Singh, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 393: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1045: AIR 1991 SC 1308: (1991) 2 PLJR 51: 1991 Cri LJ 1416.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Ranganath Misra, C.J. and M.H. Kania and Kuldip Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-1991]

Eastern Spinning Mills v. Rajiv Poddar, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 385, followed

[7274] — Ss. 482, 397, 401, 239, 240 and 173 — Jurisdiction of High Court to quash criminal proceedings — Held, once charges are framed High Court, in its revisional jurisdiction, not justified in quashing the same relying upon documents other than those referred to in Ss. 239 and 240 — Nor would the High Court be justified in invoking its inherent jurisdiction to quash the proceedings except where forensic exigencies and formidable compulsions justify such a course — Even in such exceptional cases High Court can look into only those documents which are relevant and unimpeachable — Quashing of criminal proceedings on the basis of affidavits filed by the parties not proper

If charges are framed in accordance with S. 240 CrPC on a finding that a prima facie case has been made out the person arraigned may, if he feels aggrieved invoke the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court or the Sessions Judge to contend that the charge-sheet submitted under S. 173 CrPC and documents sent with it did not disclose any ground to presume that he had committed any offence for which he is charged and the revisional court if so satisfied can quash the charges framed against him. To put it differently, once charges are framed under S. 240 CrPC the High Court in its revisional jurisdiction would not be justified in relying upon documents other than those referred to in Ss. 239 and 240 CrPC; nor would it be justified in invoking its inherent jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC to quash the same except in those rare cases where forensic exigencies and formidable compulsions justify such a course. Even in such exceptional cases the High Court can look into only those documents which are unimpeachable and can be legally translated into relevant evidence.

In the present case instead of adverting to and confining its attention to the documents referred to in Ss. 239 and 240 CrPC the High Court has dealt with the rival contentions of the parties raised through their respective affidavits at length and on a threadbare discussion thereof passed the impugned order. The course so adopted cannot be supported; firstly, because finding regarding commission of an offence cannot be recorded on the basis of affidavit evidence and secondly, because at the stage of framing of charge the Court cannot usurp the functions of a trial court to delve into and decide upon the respective merits of the case. Minakshi Bala v. Sudhir Kumar, (1994) 4 SCC 142: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1181.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Agrawal and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-5-1994]

[7275] — S. 482 — Quashment of complaint on assumption of certain facts even before the evidence was led by the parties — Impermissibility — Trial court's order summoning the accused — Interference with, by High Court on assumption of certain facts — Impermissibility — Dishonour of cheque issued by firm — Complaint against partners including S — Summonses issued but evidence was yet to be led — Order passed under S. 482 by High Court just at this stage annulling the summons issued to S on the assumption that S was not in charge of, or responsible for, the conduct of the business of the firm, held, improper — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 141

At the stage of summoning when evidence was yet to be led by the parties, the High Court could not on an assumption of facts come to a finding of fact that the respondent was not responsible for the conduct of the business. (Para 4). Raj Lakshmi Mills v. Shakti Bhakoo, (2002) 8 SCC 236.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Kirpal, C.J. and K.G. Balakrishnan and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2002]

[7276] — Ss. 482, 228 and 240 — Quashing of proceeding — Application for — Rejection of, by High Court — Propriety — High Court not interfering with the matter as the same was pending at the stage of charge — Accused challenging High Court's order by contending that taking into consideration the allegations as made in the complaint, no offence under S. 499 IPC was made out — Matter requiring detailed consideration — It was desirable that High Court should hear the parties and pronounce a reasoned order — Hence, matter remitted to High Court for disposal afresh — Penal Code, 1860, S. 499 (Para 4). Terumo Penpol Ltd. v. NCT of Delhi, (2005) 10 SCC 273: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1513.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2005]

[7277] — Ss. 482 and 320 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot advert to case diary, or rely upon letter addressed by parties to officer-in-charge of police station and quash the prosecution on ground that parties had settled their dispute — Offences under Ss. 467, 468 and 471 IPC are not compoundable — Respondent ready to transfer the amount in question to bank — Hence, it would not be expedient to allow the prosecution to continue — Direction made to the bank not to disburse the said amount except under orders of court of competent jurisdiction — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 467, 468 and 471. Karpoori Thakur v. Baikunth Nath Dey, 1990 Supp SCC 136: 1990 SCC (Cri) 642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1988]

[7278] — Ss. 482, 397, 227 & 228 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Court has a limited jurisdiction to make only a prima facie appraisal of the charge-sheet and supporting material to decide whether the allegations constituted the offence — Bhopal Gas Tragedy — Leakage of highly toxic Methyl Isocyanate gas from the storage tank of Bhopal Plant of Union Carbide India Ltd. resulting in enormous loss of human lives, permanent/temporary injuries or total/partial disablement as also loss of cattle lives — Charges framed against personnel of the company who were actually handling the Plant viz. Asstt. Works Manager, Production Manager, Plant Supdt. and Production Asstt. (accused 5 to 9) substantively under Ss. 304 Part II, 326, 324 and 429 IPC and against Chairman, MD, Vice-President in charge of the Plant (accused 2 to 4) under Ss. 304 Part II, 326, 324 and 429 r/w S. 35 IPC — Escape of the gas due to equipment failure, operating problems or maintenance problem — According to expert report needless storage of large quantities of the material in very large-size containers for inordinately long periods as well as insufficient caution in design, in choice of materials of construction and in provision of measuring and alarm instruments, together with the inadequate controls in systems of storage and on quality of stored materials as well as lack of necessary facilities for quick effective disposal of material exhibiting instability, led to the accident — Held on facts, material available on record prima facie does not connect the accused with the offences with which they were charged — Hence those charges quashed and set aside — However, prima facie charge under S. 304-A IPC made out — Since originally case was registered under S. 304-A, charges could be framed thereunder — Trial court may also consider on the material led by the prosecution whether charges could also be framed under Ss. 336, 337 and 338 IPC — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 304 Part II, 326, 324 & 429 and 304-A, 336, 337 & 338

It is clear from Sections 227 and 228 of CrPC that while exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC when the High Court is called upon to quash the charge pursuant to which proceedings at the stage of trial are pending, and even when the High Court is called upon to quash proceedings pursuant to complaint, only a prima facie appraisal of the allegations made in the complaint and the material in support thereof has to be done and the court has no jurisdiction to go into the merits of the allegations, as that stage would come when the trial proceeds. It is, therefore, necessary to keep in view the limited jurisdiction available to the court regarding the permissible scrutiny of the prosecution case as revealed from the charge-sheet and the material supporting the same for framing charges against the present accused.

On the material pressed in service by the prosecution for framing charges against the accused no charge could have been framed against the accused concerned either under Section 304 Part II or under Section 324, 326 or 429 IPC with or without the aid of Section 35 IPC. On these findings all these charges will have to be quashed.

On the material led by the prosecution appropriate charges which are required to be framed against the accused concerned are under Section 304-A IPC so far as Accused 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 are concerned while so far as Accused 2, 3, 4 and 12 are concerned charges under Section 304-A read with Section 35 IPC will have to be framed. As these offences are triable by the Court of Judicial Magistrate, 1st Class, Bhopal the sessions case shall be transferred to the Court of the Chief Judicial Magistrate, 1st Class, Bhopal who will proceed with the trial in accordance with law and frame appropriate charges under Section 304-A with or without the aid of Section 35, as the case may be, against the accused concerned. Keshub Mahindra v. State of M.P., (1996) 6 SCC 129: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1124.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi, C.J. and S.B. Majmudar, J. [Date of decision: 13-9-1996]

Niranjan Singh Karam Singh Punjabi v. Jitendra Bhimraj Bijjaya, (1990) 4 SCC 76: 1991 SCC (Cri) 47; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497, relied on

State of Gujarat v. Haidarali Kalubhai, (1976) 1 SCC 889: 1976 SCC (Cri) 211; Ambalal D. Bhatt v. State of Gujarat, (1972) 3 SCC 525: 1972 SCC (Cri) 618; Suleman Rehiman Mulani v. State of Maharashtra, (1968) 2 SCR 515: AIR 1968 SC 829; Kurban Hussein Mohammedali Rangwalla v. State of Maharashtra, (1965) 2 SCR 622: AIR 1965 SC 1616, distinguished

(11)(vi) Proper mode of disposal/exercise of power under/Matters to be considered (contd.)

[7279] — Ss. 482 and 2(d), 154, 155 and 190, 200 — Quashing of complaint — If averments in complaint prima facie make out a case for investigation the High Court cannot quash the complaint merely because one or two ingredients of the offence have not been stated in detail — Quashing of complaint on ground that the complaint disclosed a commercial or money transaction not justified — Many a cheating is committed in the course of commercial or money transaction — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420 & 417, 415

It is not necessary that a complainant should verbatim reproduce in the body of his complaint all the ingredients of the offence he is alleging. Nor is it necessary that the complainant should state in so many words that the intention of the accused was dishonest or fraudulent. Splitting up of the definition into different components of the offence to make a meticulous scrutiny, whether all the ingredients have been precisely spelled out in the complaint, is not the need at this stage. If factual foundation for the offence has been laid in the complaint the court should not hasten to quash criminal proceedings during investigation stage merely on the premise that one or two ingredients have not been stated with details. For quashing an FIR (a step which is permitted only in extremely rare cases) the information in the complaint must be so bereft of even the basic facts which are absolutely necessary for making out the offence.

It may be that the facts narrated in the present complaint would as well reveal a commercial transaction or money transaction. But that is hardly a reason for holding that the offence of cheating would elude from such a transaction. In fact, many a cheatings were committed in the course of commercial and also money transactions.

The crux of the postulate is the intention of the person who induces the victim of his representation and not the nature of the transaction which would become decisive in discerning whether there was commission of offence or not. The complainant has stated in the body of the complaint that he was induced to believe that the respondent would honour payment on receipt of invoices, and that the complainant realised later that the intentions of the respondent were not clear. He also mentioned that the respondent after receiving the goods had sold them to others and still he did not pay the money. Such averments would prima facie make out a case for investigation by the authorities.

In the present case the High Court seems to have adopted a strictly hypertechnical approach and sieved the complaint through a cullendar of finest gauzes for testing the ingredients under Section 415 IPC. Such an endeavour may be justified during trial, but certainly not during the stage of investigation. At any rate, it is too premature a stage for the High Court to step in and stall the investigation by declaring that it is a commercial transaction simpliciter wherein no semblance of criminal offence is involved. Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401: AIR 1999 SC 1216: 1999 Cri LJ 1833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

(1998) 3 Chand Cri Cases 238 (P&H), reversed

Distinguished in Anil Ritolla v. State of Bihar, (2007) 10 SCC 110

(vii) Non-quashment — Issue of other directions

See also '(11)(v) Matters at large/Orders/Directions that may be passed', above

[7280] — S. 482 — Non-quashment — Issue of other directions — Permissibility — While refusing to quash prosecution under Ss. 498-A, 323, 504 and 506 IPC, High Court directing that accused would not be arrested during pendency of trial provided they paid compensation of Rs 4000 p.m. to the victim — Held, procedure adopted was novel but improper — Exercising suo motu powers, held, notices be issued to accused and State to show cause as to why the direction not to arrest be not set aside — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Paras 3 and 4). Gir Prasad v. State of U.P., (2005) 13 SCC 372: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 250.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2005]

[7281] — S. 482 —Non quashment — Issuance of other direction — Permissibility — While dismissing the petition, High Court directing the State Govt. to place one of the accused (the present petitioner), a govt. servant (Assistant Engineer in PWD), under suspension on the mere ground that a case had been filed against him by his erstwhile wife for offence under Ss. 406 and 498-A IPC — Held, High Court ought not to have made such a direction as it amounts to practically taking over function of the employer in deciding as to desirability of keeping public servant under suspension or not. Gautam Sinha v. State of Bihar, (2002) 10 SCC 148.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-1999]

[7282] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Stay when the better option — FIR lodged by respondent against appellants, husband and sister-in-law, alleging adultery — Appellants thereupon filing complaint cases — High Court quashing the proceedings initiated in the complaint cases and directing that the complainants would be at liberty to approach the court in case finding in the case arising out of FIR goes in their favour — Held, proper course to follow would be to stay the proceedings in the complaint cases, to be taken up after decision in the case arising out of FIR (Paras 2 and 3). Kamal Chandra Das v. Anjana Das, (2005) 11 SCC 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2005]

[7283] — S. 482 — Orders other than for quashment — Impermissibility — While refusing to quash FIR, High Court directing that till the objections of the accused were decided, coercive process issued against him would remain stayed — Held, such direction in favour of the accused could not have been made under any provision of CrPC — Hence, set aside — Accused to surrender and apply for bail (Para 3). Sheela Rani v. State of U.P., (2005) 13 SCC 409: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 256.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.M. Dharmadhikari and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-7-2005]

[7284] — Ss. 482, 386 and 378 — Remand for retrial — Appeal before High Court against acquittal by trial court — Held, even if High Court disagreed with the conclusion of the trial court, it was not justified in remanding the case for retrial after a lapse of six years, particularly in view of the offences alleged being of trivial nature (under S.341, Indian Penal Code and S. 36-AD of Banking Regulation Act, 1949) committed pursuant to a call of strike — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 341/149/34

The High Court should have directed the dropping of the proceedings in exercise of its inherent powers under S. 482, CrPC even if it disagreed with the view taken by the trial court with regard to the gist of the offence punishable under S. 341, IPC, having regard to the inordinate delay of nearly six years that had ensued after the judgment of acquittal, the nature and magnitude of the offences alleged to have been committed by the appellants and the difficulties that may have to be encountered in securing the presence of witnesses in a case of this nature nearly 7 years after the incident. A fresh trial nearly seven years after the alleged incident is bound to result in harassment and abuse of judicial process. The termination of the criminal proceedings in that way would secure the ends of justice as it would bring about reconciliation between the management and the employees and also put an end to a stale criminal proceeding in which the public had no longer sufficient interest. S. Guin v. Grindlays Bank Ltd., (1986) 1 SCC 654: 1986 SCC (Cri) 64: AIR 1986 SC 289: 1986 Cri LJ 255: (1986) 1 LLN 471.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and R.B. Misra, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-1985]

S. Veerabadran Chettiar v. E.V. Ramaswami Naicker, 1959 SCR 1211: AIR 1958 SC 1032: 1958 Cri LJ 1565, followed

[7285] — Ss. 482, 407 and 220 — Transfer of complaint case S for joint trial with another complaint case F which was filed earlier — Direction by High Court in respect of — Propriety — Absence of prayer for joint trial — Further, delay in filing of complaint S despite the knowledge of alleged offence — Proceedings in case F at final stage — On such facts, held, there was no ground for directing the said transfer and joint trial — High Court's said direction set aside — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138

A cheque was issued by Company KT in favour of the respondent, who, in turn, endorsed it in favour of the first appellant. On 26-12-2001, KT made a complaint that the first appellant and the respondent and their companies had forged the cheque in question by altering the date from 21-5-2001 to 21-8-2001 and the amount from Rs 2 lakhs to Rs 42 lakhs. The said complaint was registered on 25-3-2002. (This complaint was stayed and is not relevant for the present controversy.)

The cheque in issue was deposited by the first appellant with the bank and on its dishonour, a complaint CC No. 67 of 2002 was filed under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act by the first appellant against the respondent on 23-1-2002. That apart, on 12-3-2003, a complaint CC No. 181 of 2003 was filed under Section 200 CrPC by the respondent against the first appellant, his wife and another, inter alia, alleging intimidation by the accused and forgery of the cheque in question by the first appellant. The appellants moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of this complaint. While dismissing the petition for quashing, the High Court transferred CC No. 181 of 2003 to the Court where CC No. 67 of 2002 was pending (in fact had reached its final stage and evidence of complainant had been recorded) and directed joint trial.

(11)(vii) Non-quashment — Issue of other directions (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Apart from the fact that there was no prayer in the petition filed under Section 482 CrPC seeking joint trial nor was any independent petition filed by the respondent seeking joint trial, even otherwise, having regard to the facts and circumstances, there was no ground to direct transfer of the complaint and joint trial of the two complaint cases. The allegations about forgery were made as far back as in December 2001 and the complaint under Section 138 was filed as far back as on 23-1-2002 but the respondent filed his complaint nearly two years later on 12-3-2003. Further, the fact that the proceedings in complaint 67 of 2002 filed under Section 138 were at final stage, was another important aspect which ought to have been borne in mind. These aspects were not taken into consideration by the High Court while passing the impugned order. In the aforesaid circumstances, the direction in the impugned order for transfer of CC No. 181 of 2003 to be tried with CC No. 67 of 2002 is set aside. (Paras 5 and 6). T.V. Mylsamy v. R. Meenakshi Sundaram, (2004) 13 SCC 514.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-2004]

[7286] — Ss. 482, 439, 438 and 407 — Grant of bail while considering application under S. 482 — Direction that may be given — Transfer of case to another trial court — Permissibility — High Court feeling unhappy with certain acts of lower court, and therefore while considering application of Respondents 1 to 9 under S. 482, transferring the case to another trial court, and also granting bail to the respondents — Held, such course of action not permissible as it foreclosed consideration of any bail application in proper perspective — High Court ought to have taken note that it was not even a case of anticipatory bail under S. 438 — Direction regarding grant of bail therefore set aside, reserving liberty to the respondents to move proper bail application if so advised

Appellant lodged an FIR alleging death of her husband and his uncle by ten persons, including Respondents 1 to 9. After completion of investigation, a charge-sheet was filed wherein eleven persons including Respondents 1 to 9 were shown as absconders. Non-bailable warrants were issued against respondents and when they could not be arrested, they were declared as proclaimed offenders. At one stage of the criminal proceedings, the respondents moved an application under Section 482 CrPC. The High Court while considering this application, was displeased with certain acts of SDJM and took exception to those acts. The High Court transferred the case to the Chief Judicial Magistrate of another jurisdiction and also granted bail to respondents.

The question before the Supreme Court was whether it was permissible to the High Court to grant bail while considering an application under Section 482 CrPC.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court has completely overlooked the fact that Respondents 1 to 9 filed petition under Section 482 of the Code. Even if the High Court found that there was some lapse on the part of SDJM in dealing with the matter, that could not have been the ground for directing release of respondents on bail, that too in a petition under Section 482 of the Code. It was not even a case under Section 438. Even if it was so, the impugned directions could not have been given for releasing Respondents 1 to 9 in the manner it has been done. The jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code cannot be extended to grant of bail in the manner it has been done. There was not even consideration of merits of the case. The High Court was clearly in error by holding that there was no material to show that Respondents 1 to 9 were absconders. By so observing, the High Court completely lost sight of the fact that in the charge-sheet, Respondents 1 to 9 were shown as absconders. Similarly, in the orders dated 1-6-2004 and 4-6-2004, the Chief Judicial Magistrate and SDJM had clearly mentioned that 11 accused persons were absconders. This was obviously with reference to the charge-sheet filed. (Para 9)

It has been submitted on behalf of Respondents 1 to 9 that trial is in progress and there is no allegation of any misuse of liberty. That question need not be considered in the present proceedings because impugned directions of High Court are unsustainable. The impugned order, insofar it directs release of Respondents 1 to 9 on bail, is therefore set aside. The High Court had completely foreclosed consideration of the application for bail. The High Court also did not examine the question as to the desirability of Respondents 1 to 9 being released on bail. Merely because according to the High Court the SDJM had not followed the directions in its proper perspective, that could not have been a ground for directing release of Respondents 1 to 9 on bail. The direction contained in the impugned order regarding grant of bail to Respondents 1 to 9, is set aside.

Let the respondents appear before the court concerned where the trial is in progress. If any application for bail is made, the same may be considered in its proper perspective by the court concerned. No opinion is expressed on the merits of the case. (Para 10). Panful Nessa v. Mohd. Miraj Ali, (2008) 7 SCC 759: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 233: (2008) 68 AIC 102 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-2008]

[7287] — Ss. 482 and 190 — Quashing of cognizance of offence — Remand for fresh consideration — Justifiable grounds — Complainant not noticed or heard — Appellant lodging complaint that his son dying of gunshot injury — Charge-sheet filed and on the basis thereof Magistrate taking cognizance for offences under Ss. 302/34/120-B IPC r/w Ss. 25/27 of the Arms Act — Complainant after 27 months filing application for further investigation — Magistrate allowing application — Police further investigating and submitting charge-sheet against Respondent 1 and Sessions Court taking cognizance without noticing complainant — High Court, therefore, directing fresh consideration of cognizance in compliance with procedure and application of mind to issues involved — Justifiability — High Court whether prejudicial to complainant — In the absence of any other explanation by appellant complainant, impugned order for fresh consideration, held, is not prejudicial — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302/34/120-B — Arms Act, 1959, Ss. 25 and 27

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is not explained as to how the order of the High Court is prejudicial to the appellant. The High Court has directed all procedural safeguards to be followed. The High Court observed that the order of taking cognizance deserved to be set aside. The Magistrate was directed to consider the relevant materials as well as the earlier charge-sheet. It was directed that while taking note of the matter for fresh consideration a notice was required to be sent to the de facto complainant and giving the de facto complainant an opportunity of hearing which was to be done before the order was passed. The High Court also referred to applicability of Section 319 CrPC in appropriate cases. There is no infirmity in the High Court's order. (Paras 12 and 7 to 9). Chittaranjan Mirdha v. Dulal Ghosh, (2009) 6 SCC 661.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2009]

Gangadhar Janardan Mhatre v. State of Maharashtra, (2004) 7 SCC 768: 2005 SCC (Cri) 404, relied on [7288] — Ss. 482 and 227 — Directions other than quashment — Quashment not considered advisable due to stage proceedings had reached — However, directions issued to protect interests of appellant-accused — Allegations pertaining to criminal breach of trust in relation to diamond encrusted heavy gold pendant, chain and earring set against appellant who was foster sister of complainant's husband, and a married lady coming from wealthy background — Held, undoubtedly allegations made are extremely wild and disgusting but how far they can be used to meet requirements of S. 406 IPC is a moot question — However, since FIR relating thereto has been lodged and cognizance also taken, only interests of appellant can be protected — Directed that appellant would not be required to attend the proceedings unless specifically directed by court to do so and that too in case of extreme necessity; that no coercive step shall be taken against her and that she shall be granted bail by court trying the case if it decides to try the offence by framing charge and court to be careful while considering framing of charge — FIR pertaining to S. 406 IPC not quashed — Penal Code, 1860, S. 406 — Constitution of India, Arts. 136 and 226 (Paras 14 to 16). Vijeta Gajra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 11 SCC 618: AIR 2010 SC 2712: 2010 Cri LJ 3841: (2010) 92 AIC 76 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2010]

(viii) Effect of rejection of quashment application

[7289] — Ss. 482, 190, 203, 211, 227, 239 and 245 — Quashing of proceedings — Rejection of application for — Effect — Held, such rejection did not take away the right of accused to place materials at the time when the question of framing charge is taken up to show that the materials do not justify framing of charge. Laxminarayana v. North East Securities Ltd., (2004) 13 SCC 447.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2004]

(ix) General grounds for quashment

[7290] — Ss. 482 and 154 & 157 — Criminal proceeding — When can be quashed by High Court in exercise of powers under S. 482 or Art. 226 — Bhajan Lal case — Circumstances stated by way of illustration — On facts held, High Court not justified in quashing the FIR

Respondent 1 (Shri Bhajan Lal) on the one hand and DL (Shri Devi Lal) respondent 2 on the other belong to two rival political parties. In the general election for MLA while DL was elected and became the Chief Minister of the State, respondent 2 lost the election against the wife of respondent 1. At that time respondent 1 was a Minister in the Central Cabinet. On account of political rivalry and institution of a number of criminal cases and counter cases, there was bad blood between respondent 1 and DL. On November 12, 1987, respondent 2 presented a complaint before DL against respondent 1 alleging possession of pecuniary resources or property disproportionate to his known sources of income. The Officer on Special Duty in the Chief Minister's Secretariat made an endorsement 'Chief Minister has seen. For appropriate action' on the complaint and marked the same to the Director General of Police on the same day. The Director General of Police in turn made an endorsement on the complaint 'Please look into this; take necessary action and report' and marked it to SP also on the same day. The complaint along with the endorsements was then put up before the SP on November 21, 1987 on which date itself the SP made his endorsement reading 'Please register a case and investigate'. The SHO (appellant 3) registered a case on the basis of the allegations in the complaint under Ss. 161 and 165 of the Indian Penal Code and S. 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act on November 21, 1987 itself at 6.15 p.m. and took up the investigation. The SHO after forwarding a copy of the first information report to the Magistrate and other officers concerned, himself took up the investigation, and proceeded to the spot accompanied by three constables of whom two constables were handed over one rifle each and 50 cartridges. Respondent 1 thereupon filed a writ petition under Arts. 226 and 227 seeking issuance of a writ of certiorari quashing the first information report and also of a writ of prohibition restraining the authorities from further proceeding with the investigation. The High Court concluded that the allegations do not constitute a cognisable offence for commencing the lawful investigation and granted the relief as prayed for and mulcted respondent 2 with the costs of the writ petition. In the penultimate paragraph of its judgment. The High Court observed thus: "... every politician in Haryana may be the Chief Minister or otherwise, should not while holding office act on the maxim, 'Everything is fair in love and war' but should be sanguine and careful to mete out to his predecessor, a treatment in the words of Porus, uttered while in chains, on being brought before Alexander the Great, 'a treatment which a king should mete out to another king' because it is often said 'as you sow, so shall you reap'." The appellants preferred appeal before Supreme Court by special leave against the High Court's judgment quashing the entire criminal proceedings inclusive of the registration of the first information report and the direction to respondent 2 for payment of the costs to respondent 1. Setting aside the judgment of the High Court by which it quashed the FIR but also quashing the commencement as well as the entire investigation, if any, so far done and also setting aside the High Court's order awarding costs and disposing of the appeal

(11)(ix) General grounds for quashment (contd.)

Held :

The order of the High Court quashing the first information report, viewed from any angle, cannot be sustained both on the question of law and facts. Consequently, that part of the judgment of the High Court quashing the first information report is set aside.

The following categories of cases can be stated by way of illustration wherein the extraordinary power under Art. 226 or the inherent powers under S. 482 CrPC can be exercised by the High Court either to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice, though it may not be possible to lay down any precise, clearly defined and sufficiently channelised and inflexible guidelines or rigid formulae and to give an exhaustive list of myriad kinds of cases wherein such power should be exercised: (1) Where the allegations made in the first information report or the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused.

(2) Where the allegations in the first information report and other materials, if any, accompanying the FIR do not disclose a cognizable offence, justifying an investigation by police officers under S. 156(1) of the Code except under an order of a Magistrate within the purview of S. 155(2) of the Code.

(3) Where the uncontroverted allegations made in the FIR or complaint and the evidence collected in support of the same do not disclose the commission of any offence and make out a case against the accused.

(4) Where, the allegations in the FIR do not constitute a cognizable offence but constitute only a non-cognizable offence, no investigation is permitted by a police officer without an order of a Magistrate as contemplated under S. 155(2) of the Code.

(5) Where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint are so absurd and inherently improbable on the basis of which no prudent person can ever reach a just conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused.

(6) Where there is an express legal bar engrafted in any of the provisions of the Code or the concerned Act (under which a criminal proceeding is instituted) to the institution and continuance of the proceedings and/or where there is a specific provision in the Code or the concerned Act, providing efficacious redress for the grievance of the aggrieved party.

(7) Where a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge.

In the present case the allegations made in the complaint do clearly constitute a cognizable offence justifying the registration of a case and an investigation thereon and this case does not fall under any one of the categories of cases formulated above calling for the exercise of extraordinary or inherent powers of the High Court to quash the FIR itself. State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426: AIR 1992 SC 604: 1992 Cri LJ 527.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

Followed in Sunita Jain v. Pawan Kumar Jain, (2008) 2 SCC 705; Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369; Goondla Venkateswarlu v. State of A.P., (2008) 9 SCC 613; State of Kerala v. Orison J. Francis, (2009) 2 SCC 160*

Applied in Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259; Baijnath Jha v. Sita Ram, (2008) 8 SCC 77*

[7291] — S. 482 — High Court's power to quash complaint and consequent criminal proceedings — Scope — Should not be exercised where allegations prima facie constituting the offence alleged in the complaint — Should be exercised only to save abuse of process of court or to secure ends of justice

The High Court can exercise its inherent jurisdiction of quashing a criminal proceeding only when the allegations made in the complaint do not constitute an offence or that the exercise of the power is necessary either to prevent the abuse of the process of the court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. No inflexible guidelines or rigid formula can be set out and it depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case wherein such power should be exercised. When the allegations in the complaint prima facie constitute the offence against any or all of the respondents in the absence of materials on record to show that the continuance of the proceedings would be an abuse of the process of the court or would defeat the ends of justice, the High Court would not be justified in quashing the complaint. Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636: AIR 1992 SC 1379: 1992 Cri LJ 1956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1992]

[7292] — S. 482 — Quashment principles reiterated — Proceeding instituted on a complaint can be quashed in exercise of inherent power only where complaint does not disclose any offence or is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive — Power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution — Power should be exercised with circumspection, ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice and to prevent abuse of process of court

In exercise of the powers the Court would be justified to quash any proceeding if it finds that initiation/continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. When no offence is disclosed by the complaint, the Court may examine the question of fact. When a complaint is sought to be quashed, it is permissible to look into the materials to assess what the complainant has alleged and whether any offence is made out even if the allegations are accepted in toto. It is important to bear in mind the distinction between a case where there is no legal evidence or where there is evidence which is clearly inconsistent with the accusations made, and a case where there is legal evidence which, on appreciation, may or may not support the accusations. When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge. (Paras 7 and 9)

The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in regard to cases in which the High Court will exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction of quashing the proceeding at any stage. (Para 10)

(11)(ix) General grounds for quashment (contd.)

It would not be proper for the High Court to analyse the case of the complainant in the light of all probabilities in order to determine whether a conviction would be sustainable and on such premises arrive at a conclusion that the proceedings are to be quashed. It would be erroneous to assess the material before it and conclude that the complaint cannot be proceeded with. In a proceeding instituted on complaint, exercise of the inherent powers to quash the proceedings is called for only in a case where the complaint does not disclose any offence or is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive. If the allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute the offence of which cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate, it is open to the High Court to quash the same in exercise of the inherent powers under Section 482 of the Code. It is not, however, necessary that there should be meticulous analysis of the case before the trial to find out whether the case would end in conviction or acquittal. The complaint has to be read as a whole. If it appears that on consideration of the allegations in the light of the statement made on oath of the complainant that the ingredients of the offence or offences are disclosed and there is no material to show that the complaint is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, in that event there would be no justification for interference by the High Court. When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in the court which decides the fate of the accused person. The allegations of mala fides against the informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Para 10). CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233: AIR 2006 SC 2872.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2006]

CBI v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 9 SCC 735: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1090; Major E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, (1962) 2 SCR 195: AIR 1961 SC 1762: (1961) 2 Cri LJ 828; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, (1960) 3 SCR 388: AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H. S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, (1964) 2 SCR 336: AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, relied on

Distinguished in Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542

[7293] — Ss. 482, 398 and 274 — Existence of prima facie case upon inquiry — Magistrate initially not entertaining private complaint but later entertaining it because: (1) Sessions Court in revision finding prima facie case and directing further inquiry and High Court in revision clarifying that the inquiry should be under S. 398, and (2) Magistrate on holding such further inquiry by recording depositions of three witnesses finding that allegations were supported by evidence — High Court not interfering under S. 482 by holding that there was concurrent finding that complaint revealed a prima face case — Held, High Court committed no error in declining to interfere under S. 482 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 341, 323 and 506 — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, Ss. 3(1)(x) and (2)(vii)

The High Court by the impugned order held that since the two courts below had concurrently held that a prima facie case under Sections 341, 323 and 506 IPC and Sections 3(1)(x) and 2(vii) of the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 had been made out against the petitioner (the appellant herein) it was not a fit case in which the proceedings before the Magistrate could be quashed.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court committed no error in declining to interfere under Section 482 CrPC. So long as the Magistrate was satisfied that a prima facie case had been made out, he was competent to issue summons to the accused. A plain reading of the complaint filed by the complainant in the instant case makes out a case against the accused. Not only that, the depositions of the three witnesses examined by the complainant in support of his complaint also support the allegations made in the complaint. The Magistrate was, therefore, justified in taking cognizance against the appellant and the co-accused. (Paras 7 and 1)

Inasmuch as the Magistrate in the instant case summoned the witnesses and examined them afresh, he may have gone beyond what was legally necessary to do but that is no reason to hold that the recording of evidence by the Magistrate as a part of the further enquiry directed by the High Court would vitiate the proceedings before him or the conclusion drawn on the basis of any such enquiry. The High Court clarified that the direction issued by

Sessions Judge was a direction for a further enquiry to be conducted by the CJM under Section 398 CrPC. (Paras 9 and 4)

The complaint which was first dismissed by CJM was returned by Sessions Court for further inquiry on ground that it revealed a prima facie case. That direction did not necessarily oblige the Magistrate to record any further evidence in the case. The nature of the inquiry was in the discretion of the Magistrate which may or may not have included recording of further evidence on behalf of the complainant. The Magistrate could without recording any further evidence in the matter reappraise the averments made in the complaint and the material already on record to determine whether a prima facie case was made out against the accused persons. (Para 9). Subrata Das v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 10 SCC 798.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2010]

Gurdial Singh v. Kartar Singh, 1980 Cri LJ 955 (P&H), referred to

[7294] — Ss. 482 and 190 — Cognizance of offence — Quashing of — At least some material indicating guilt of accused necessary, reiterated — Accused wife having illicit relations alleged to have poisoned husband — Medical report not showing poisoning as the cause — Only that in-laws did not participate in cremation of deceased — Cognizance based on suspicion, not sustainable — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 201, 328 and 120-B

It is well settled by a series of decisions of the Supreme Court that cognizance cannot be taken unless there is at least some material indicating the guilt of the accused. In the present case, there is not even an iota of material indicating the guilt of the accused persons. It is true that at the stage of taking cognizance, adequacy of evidence will not be seen by the court, but there has to be at least some material implicating the accused, and cognizance cannot be taken merely on the basis of suspicion, as it appears to have been done in the present case. To take a contrary view would only lead to harassment of people. (Paras 12 and 13)

Since there is no material on the basis of which cognizance was taken, the order taking cognizance of the offence is quashed. Resultantly, the impugned judgment of the High Court is set aside. (Para 15). Harishchandra Prasad Mani v. State of Jharkhand, (2007) 15 SCC 494.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-2007]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 2 SCR 336: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283, relied on

[7295] — S. 482 — Quashment suo motu — When warranted — Principles stated — Held, inherent power under it should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution — It should be exercised cautiously ex debito justitiae — On facts, the suo motu quashing of the FIR and the investigation was improper and uncalled for

The power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a premature decision in a case wherein the entire facts are extremely incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved whether factual or legal are of great magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard and fast rule can be laid down in regard to the cases in which the High Court will exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction of quashing the proceedings at any stage.

The initiation of suo motu proceedings by the Single Judge of the High Court was to quash the FIR and the proceedings connected therewith. It shocks judicial conscience that the Single Judge, before whom the FIR had been challenged, had taken suo motu action and recorded a categorical assertion that 'no offence' thereby meaning much less a cognizable offence is made out in the FIR, when none of the named accused came before him raising this question of lack of allegations and particulars in the FIR so as to constitute any offence, much less a cognizable offence. Once an investigation by the police is ordered by a Magistrate under S. 156(3) of the Code, the Magistrate cannot place any limitations or direct the officer conducting it as to how to conduct the investigation. This being the legal position, the Single Judge has overstepped his jurisdiction and made the statement which is unwarranted and uncalled for. Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36: AIR 1993 SC 892.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-8-1992]

Followed in Priya Vrat Singh v. Shyam Ji Sahai, (2008) 8 SCC 232*

(11)(ix) General grounds for quashment (contd.)

[7296] — S. 482 — Scope of interference with an order framing charges — Nature of jurisdiction exercised thereagainst — Three circumstances given when said power to be exercised — Considerations involved — Categories of cases in which said inherent power should be exercised as given in R.P. Kapur case, AIR 1960 SC 866, p. 869, para 6 and Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, pp. 378-79, para 102, re-enumerated (Para 10). State of Punjab v. Kasturi Lal, (2004) 12 SCC 195: AIR 2004 SC 4087: 2004 Cri LJ 3866.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-7-2004]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Raj Lakshmi Mills v. Shakti Bhakoo, (2002) 8 SCC 236, relied on

[7297] — S. 482 — Quashment — When warranted — Held, though no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down as regards cases where such power can be exercised, but the High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy — More so, when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material

In exercise of the powers the court would be justified in quashing any proceeding if it finds that initiation/continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. (Para 8)

However, the inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. But no hard-and-fast rule as regards cases in which such power can be exercised can be laid down. (Para 11)

Some categories of cases in which inherent power can and should be exercised to quash the proceedings are:

(i) Where it manifestly appears that there is a legal bar against the institution or continuance e.g. want of sanction;

(ii) where the allegations in the first information report or complaint taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not constitute the offence alleged;

(iii) where the allegations constitute an offence, but there is no legal evidence adduced or the evidence adduced clearly or manifestly fails to prove the charge.

However, in dealing with the last category, it is important to bear in mind the distinction between a case where there is no legal evidence or where there is evidence which is clearly inconsistent with the accusations made, and a case where there is legal evidence which, on appreciation, may or may not support the accusations. When exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge. Judicial process should not be an instrument of oppression, or, needless harassment. At the same time the section is not an instrument handed over to an accused to short-circuit a prosecution and bring about its sudden death. The inherent power should be exercised sparingly and that too in the rarest of rare cases. (Paras 9 and 10)

When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in the court which decides the fate of the accused person. The allegations of mala fides against the informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Para 11). State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272: (2006) 1 KLT 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2005]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, (1964) 2 SCR 336: AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, (1960) 3 SCR 388: AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353; Jehan Singh v. Delhi Admn., (1974) 4 SCC 522: 1974 SCC (Cri) 558; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, relied on

Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636, considered

[7298] — Ss. 482 and 204 — Quashment of criminal proceedings at threshold — When warranted — Duty of court before issuing process — Principles reiterated

While exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable appreciation of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge/Court. It is true that the Court should be circumspect and judicious in exercising discretion and should take all relevant facts and circumstances into consideration before issuing process, otherwise, it would be an instrument in the hands of a private complainant to unleash vendetta to harass any person needlessly. At the same time, Section 482 is not an instrument handed over to an accused to short-circuit a prosecution and bring about its closure without full-fledged enquiry. (Para 18)

Though the High Court may exercise its power relating to cognizable offences to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice, the power should be exercised sparingly. For example, where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused or allegations in the FIR do not disclose a cognizable offence or do not disclose commission of any offence and make out a case against the accused or where there is express legal bar provided in any of the provisions of CrPC or in any other enactment under which a criminal proceeding is initiated or sufficient material to show that the criminal proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused due to private and personal grudge, the High Court may step in. (Para 19)

Though the powers possessed by the High Court under Section 482 are wide, however, such power requires care/caution in its exercise. The interference must be on sound principles and the inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. However, if the allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute the offence of which cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate, it is open to the High Court to quash the same in exercise of inherent powers under Section 482. (Para 20). State of A.P. v. Gourishetty Mahesh, (2010) 11 SCC 226: 2010 Cri LJ 3844: (2010) 92 AIC 98.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-2010]

State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1805; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of A.P. v. Bajjoori Kanthaiah, (2009) 1 SCC 114: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 481; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

[7299] — S. 482 — Nature of power conferred on High Court — Grounds on which quashment of proceedings permitted — Trial at advanced stage — Effect on trial of co-accused — Relevance — Reiterated, High Court is supposed to exercise power to do real and substantial justice (ex debito justitiae) and to prevent abuse of process of court — It is an extraordinary power which has to be exercised sparingly and with great caution — Exceptional circumstances warranting exercise of power under S. 482 are, where allegations made in FIR or complaint, even if taken on their face value and accepted in their entirety, do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against accused — Each case has to be considered on its own merits — On facts held, criminal proceedings based on allegations like forgery, cheating, corruption, etc. against customers of a nationalised bank could not be quashed when prima facie case was made out in the charge-sheet — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B and 420 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(d) and 13(2)

The respondents were customers of a nationalised bank. They and some officials of the Bank were charged under Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC and Section 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. The allegations against respondents were that they had committed forgery, fabrication of documents and used those documents as genuine, and that they had entered into a criminal conspiracy with the Chairman and Managing Director and other officials of the Bank with the object of cheating the Bank in the matter of recommending, sanctioning, disbursing huge credit facilities running over hundreds of crores.

The respondents filed a petition in the High Court under Section 482, seeking quashing of the charge-sheets against them. The High Court allowed the petition.

The Supreme Court while allowing the appeals, inter alia took note of the fact that trial in the four cases was at advanced stage inasmuch as 92 witnesses had already been examined.

Held :

Inherent powers of High Court under Section 482 CrPC are meant to act ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice, for the administration of which alone it exists, or to prevent abuse of the process of court. These inherent powers can be exercised in the following category of cases: (i) to give effect to an order under the Code; (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court; and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. Extraordinary power under Section 482 CrPC should be exercised sparingly and with great care and caution. The High Court would be justified in exercising the power to prevent injustice and secure ends of justice. India has largely inherited provisions of inherent powers from English jurisprudence, and therefore principles decided by the English courts are of relevance. Crown Court has inherent power to protect its process from abuse. The English courts have also used inherent power to achieve the same objective. (Paras 17 to 20)

(11)(ix) General grounds for quashment (contd.)

Exercise of inherent powers would entirely depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. The object of incorporating inherent powers in CrPC is to prevent abuse of process of court or to secure ends of justice. Both English and the Indian courts have consistently taken the view that inherent powers can be exercised in those exceptional cases where the allegations made in FIR or the complaint, even if are taken on their face value and accepted in their entirety, do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused. (Paras 39 and 40)

When the settled legal position is applied to the facts of this case, it is not possible to conclude that complaint and charge-sheet prima facie do not constitute any offence against the respondents. The charge-sheet on the other hand reveals substantial material on record making a clear case under Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC against respondents and their connivance with the bank officials. It is also not possible to conclude that material on record taken on face value make out no case under Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC against respondents. Prima facie, this is one case where adequate material is available on record to proceed against the respondents. (Paras 16, 37 and 40 to 41)

Moreover, respondents and the other bank officials share the charges under Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC. Quashing the charges against respondents would also have very serious repercussions on the pending cases against the bank officials. (Para 43). CBI v. A. Ravishankar Prasad, (2009) 6 SCC 351.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2009]

Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1, clarified and applied

Connelly v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 1964 AC 1254: (1964) 2 WLR 1145: (1964) 2 All ER 401 (HL); Director of Public Prosecutions v. Humphrys, 1977 AC 1: (1976) 2 WLR 857: (1976) 2 All ER 497 (HL); R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Union of India v. B.R. Bajaj, (1994) 2 SCC 277: 1994 SCC (Cri) 477; B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848; Rumi Dhar v. State of W.B., (2009) 6 SCC 364, relied on

Nikhil Merchant v. CBI, (2008) 9 SCC 677: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 858; Jagdish Chanana v. State of Haryana, (2008) 15 SCC 704; Madan Mohan Abbot v. State of Punjab, (2008) 4 SCC 582: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 464, considered

CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045, explained

[7300] — S. 482 — Quashing of charge-sheet — Inherent jurisdiction of High Court — Scope and limitations — Allegations of fraud and forgery — Held, power under is to be exercised to prevent abuse of process of court or to secure ends of justice — Court can quash charge-sheet if allegations in FIR or complaint petition do not disclose commission of offence even if on face value they are taken to be correct in their entirety — While doing so, High Court is not to embark upon appreciation of evidence but to consider only material on record as a whole though the High Court is required to consider as to whether the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint petition fulfil the ingredients of the offences alleged against the accused — Further held, dispute being primarily of civil nature is not by itself a ground to quash criminal proceedings because in cases of forgery and fraud there would always be some element of civil nature — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 467 and 468

The appellant, a partner of a firm entered into a contract with complainant's firm to get knowledge and know-how for carpet production and in turn to pay 10% commission on the invoice value of each and every invoice. Alleging that the appellant has committed the offences of criminal breach of trust and/or of cheating and forgery, on the premise that he had made sale of about Rs 9 crores through a sister concern wherefor no commission was paid although the technical know-how was made available by the complainant's firm, a complaint petition was filed and an FIR was lodged. On completion of the investigation, a detailed charge-sheet was submitted. In the said charge-sheet, it was stated that the amount of commission in the invoices was falsely and wrongly shown by showing less sale turnover for paying less commission than the actual due commission amounting to commission of offences under Sections 420, 467, 468 IPC. The Magistrate took cognizance of the offences against the appellant. The appellant filed an application for quashing of the order before the High Court which was dismissed by reason of the impugned judgment.

Dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court, held as above.

Held :

The principles providing for exercise of the power by a High Court under Section 482 to quash a criminal proceeding are well known. The Court shall ordinarily exercise the said jurisdiction, inter alia, in the event the allegations contained in the FIR or the complaint petition even if on face value are taken to be correct in their entirety do not disclose commission of an offence. (Para 11)

The High Court's power under Section 482 is primarily either to prevent abuse of the process of any court or to secure the ends of justice. The Court at that stage would not embark upon appreciation of evidence. The Court shall moreover consider the materials on record as a whole. (Para 14)

Except in very exceptional circumstances, the Court would not look to any document relied upon by the accused in support of his defence. Although allegations contained in the complaint petition may disclose a civil dispute, the same by itself may not be a ground to hold that the criminal proceedings should not be allowed to continue. The High Court should be slow in interfering with the proceedings at the initial stage. Merely because the nature of the dispute is primarily of a civil nature, the criminal prosecution cannot be quashed because in cases of forgery and fraud there would always be some element of civil nature. For the purpose of exercising its jurisdiction, the superior courts are also required to consider as to whether the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint petition fulfil the ingredients of the offences alleged against the accused. (Paras 12 and 14)

In the instant case, the charge-sheet prima facie discloses commission of offences. A fair investigation was carried out by the investigating officer. The charge-sheet is a detailed one. If an order of cognizance has been passed relying on or on the basis thereof by the learned Magistrate, no exception thereto can be taken. Therefore, there is no legal infirmity in the impugned orders. (Paras 17 and 18). Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2009]

Kamaladevi Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2002) 1 SCC 555: 2002 SCC (Cri) 200; B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 282; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567, applied

[7301] — S. 482 — General grounds for quashment, restated

The power vested in the High Court under Section 482 CrPC can only be invoked for quashing an ongoing investigation, complaint or other proceedings only in cases where either there is legal power to the continuance of the proceedings such as the absence of a sanction wherever required or where averments made in the complaint or first information report even if accepted on their face value do not constitute an offence or where there is no legal evidence to support the charge made against the accused. (Para 6). Subrata Das v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 10 SCC 798.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2010]

Arun Shankar Shukla v. State of U.P., (1999) 6 SCC 146: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1076; State of Punjab v. Kasturi Lal, (2004) 12 SCC 195: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 168; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; CBI v. K.M. Sharan, (2008) 4 SCC 471: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 430 State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239: (1960) 3 SCR 388, relied on [7302] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — Grounds — Vague allegations — Matters to be alleged — Held, for lodging a proper complaint mere mentioning of relevant sections and language of those sections not sufficient — Particulars of offence committed by each accused and role played by them in committing that offence need to be stated — In instant case, allegations related to dowry demand and misbehaviour against husband and parents-in-law (appellants) of complainant — However, said complaint was vague as it did not show which accused had committed what offence and exact role played by appellants in commission of offence(s) — Allegations against husband were somewhat precise, but he had already expired — Held, in such circumstance allowing prosecution to continue against aged appellants would be abuse of process of law — Besides, despite service of notice complainant neither appearing nor engaging counsel to represent her — Hence, said complaint liable to be quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 498-A & 114 (Paras 9 to 12). Neelu Chopra v. Bharti, (2009) 10 SCC 184.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-2009]

[7303] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — Grounds — Absence of ingredients of offence — Cheating — Conspiracy — Ingredients of — Intention — Liability of principal for criminal acts of agent — P executed sale deed in Respondent 2's favour on appellant's behalf — Land in dispute was earlier sold to different persons by S —

(11)(ix) General grounds for quashment (contd.)

S brother of P — P was attesting witness also in sale deeds executed by S — Respondent 2 filed complaint case against appellant alleging deep-rooted conspiracy — Magistrate took cognizance and issued process against appellant — High Court dismissed appellant's petition under S. 482 CrPC holding that P, appellant's vendor, and his brother S, had in conspiracy with each other, sold away entire lands and appellant was also a party to such conspiracy — Held, no link established between sale deeds executed by S in respect of mutated property and appellant — Appellant was not an attesting witness to any of the sale deeds — If Respondent 2 prejudiced by fact that appellant had executed sale deed in his favour in respect of disputed land, he could question such transfer and claim damages in respect thereof from P by way of appropriate damages — No action in criminal court would lie in absence of any intention to cheat — Further held, filing of such a criminal complaint was only to pressurise appellant into making a settlement — Contract Act, 1872, S. 188 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 420, 465, 468 and 120-B (Paras 14 to 18). Rama Devi v. State of Bihar, (2010) 12 SCC 273.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2010]

[7304] — Ss. 482, 228 and 240 — Quashment of criminal proceedings — Cautious exercise of power — Reiterated, exercise of such power would depend on facts and circumstances of each case — High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC, and Supreme Court in terms of Art. 142, would not direct quashing of a case involving crime against society, particularly when both trial court as also High Court have found that a prima facie case has been made out against the accused (appellant herein) for framing charge (Para 24). Rumi Dhar v. State of W.B., (2009) 6 SCC 364.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

[7305] — S. 482 — Allegations set out in complaint or charge-sheet not constituting any offence — Held, High Court in exercise of its inherent power may quash the Magistrate's order taking cognizance of the offence. Sharda Prasad Sinha (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, (1977) 1 SCC 505: 1977 SCC (Cri) 132: AIR 1977 SC 1754: 1977 Cri LJ 1146: (1977) 2 SCR 357.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati, A.C. Gupta and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1976]

[7306] — S. 482 — Plea for, on ground that arbitral award which was allegedly result of offences in question herein, had been set aside — Tenability of — Held, offences under Ss. 192 and 199 IPC, if made out, exist independent of final arbitral award (Para 33). Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co. Ltd. v. Datar Switchgear Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 479: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 545.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

Suo Motu Proceedings against R. Karuppan, Advocate, In re, (2001) 5 SCC 289: 2001 SCC (Cri) 876; Sushil Kumar v. Rakesh Kumar, (2003) 8 SCC 673; Murray & Co. v. Ashok Kr. Newatia, (2000) 2 SCC 367: 2000 SCC (Cri) 473, referred to

[7307] — S. 482 — Criminal proceedings when should not be quashed — Test — Whether allegations prima facie established the offence and whether prosecution could be allowed to continue in the interest of justice — On facts held, test satisfied, hence High Court erred in allowing the petition for quashing the proceedings — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 499 & 500

According to the appellant the respondents made false and malicious allegations with intention or knowingly or having reasons to believe that such imputations would harm his reputation; due to these imputations made by them, the reputation of the appellant has been lowered in the eyes of his partners, the staff and the workers of the factory. Hence he prayed for punishing the respondents for the offence under Section 500 IPC. The Magistrate, on the complaint, after taking cognizance of the offence, recorded the sworn statement of the complainant (appellant herein) and held that "there were sufficient grounds to proceed the case against the accused persons for the offence punishable under Section 500 IPC". Hence he issued summons to Respondents 1 to 3. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

For deciding whether the criminal proceedings should be allowed to continue or the same should be quashed, two aspects are to be satisfied: (1) whether the uncontroverted allegations, as made in the complaint, prima facie establish the offence, and (2) whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. On a plain reading of the order of the Magistrate issuing summons to the respondents, keeping in view the allegations made in the complaint and sworn statement of the appellant, it appears that a prima facie case is made out at that stage. There are no special features in the case to say that it is not expedient and not in the interest of justice to permit the prosecution to continue. The Single Judge of the High Court failed to apply this test. The High Court could not say at that stage that there was no reasonable prospect of conviction resulting in the case after a trial. Assuming that the imputations made could be covered by Exception 9 of Section 499 IPC, several questions still remain to be examined — whether such imputations were made in good faith, in what circumstances, with what intention, etc. All these can be examined on the basis of evidence in the trial. Having regard to the facts of the case it must therefore, be held that the High Court committed a manifest error in quashing the criminal proceedings exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. (Paras 8 and 11) . M.N. Damani v. S.K. Sinha, (2001) 5 SCC 156: 2001 SCC (Cri) 823: AIR 2001 SC 2037: 2001 Cri LJ 2571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjia, Chief Editor, Weekly Blitz, (1981) 3 SCC 208: 1981 SCC (Cri) 698; Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310, relied on

Manjaya v. Sesha Shetti, ILR (1888) 11 Mad 477; Sayed Ally v. King Emperor, AIR 1925 Rang 360; Anthoni Udayar v. Velusami Thevar, AIR 1948 Mad 469: 49 Cri LJ 724: (1948) 1 MLJ 420; Baboo Gunnesh Dutt Singh v. Mugneeram Chowdry, (1872) 11 WR 283 SC; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234: AIR 1988 SC 709, distinguished

[7308] — S. 482 — High Court's power under, to quash FIR or complaint — Scope — Guidelines laid down by Supreme Court in Bhajan Lal case applied — Bhajan Lal (1) — Prima facie offence under Ss. 354 and 509 IPC made out — Held, High Court not justified in quashing the FIR and complaint

At the stage of quashing an FIR or complaint the High Court is not justified in embarking upon an enquiry as to the probability, reliability or genuineness of the allegations made therein. Of course, as has been pointed out in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, an FIR or a complaint may be quashed if the allegations made therein are so absurd and inherently improbable that no prudent person can ever reach a just conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused but the High Court has not recorded such a finding, obviously because on the allegations in the FIR it was not possible to do so. Therefore, it must be held that the High Court has committed a gross error of law in quashing the FIR and the complaint. Accordingly, the impugned judgment is set aside and the petition filed by the respondent in the High Court under Section 482 CrPC is dismissed. (Para 23). Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059: AIR 1996 SC 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-1995]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, applied

[7309] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashment of FIR — Impugned conduct of accused not amounting to any of the offences named in FIR — Held, criminal proceedings were liable to be quashed (Para 29). V.V.S. Rama Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 234: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 356: (2009) 77 AIC 24 (SC): (2009) 4 All LJ 309.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567, followed

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

[7310] — S. 482 — Power of High Court to quash criminal proceedings at initial stage — Should be exercised sparingly and cautiously to prevent miscarriage of justice or when it would tantamount to abuse of process of court — Constitution of India, Art. 226

The High Court should sparingly and cautiously exercise the power under Section 482 of the Code to prevent miscarriage of justice. The High Court would be loath and circumspect to exercise its extraordinary power under Section 482 of the Code or under Article 226 of the Constitution. The Court would consider whether the exercise of the power would advance the cause of justice or it would tantamount to abuse of the process of the court. Social stability and order require to be regulated by proceeding against the offender as it is an offence against the society as a whole. This cardinal principle should always be kept in mind before embarking upon the exercise of the inherent power vested in the court. Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, S.B. Majmudar and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-12-1996]

State of H.P. v. Pirthi Chand, (1996) 2 SCC 37: 1996 SCC (Cri) 210; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; G.L. Didwania v. ITO, 1995 Supp (2) SCC 724, followed [7311] — S. 482 — Power of High Court to quash proceedings — Should not be arbitrarily exercised to cut short normal process of a criminal trial except in exceptional cases — It is not permissible to quash proceedings or appreciate evidence at the stage when the trial had not even commenced. State of Bihar v. K.J.D. Singh, 1994 SCC (Cri) 63.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-1993]

(11)(ix) General grounds for quashment (contd.)

[7312] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — Exercise of inherent powers under S. 482, when justified — Held, inherent jurisdiction though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution — May be exercised (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice — To be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone courts exist — Thus, without going into the question of conviction or acquittal, where on consideration of allegations in the light of the statement made on oath of the complainant it appears that the ingredients of the offence or offences are disclosed and there is no material to show that the complaint is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, held, the proceedings cannot be quashed — But, where it appears to the contrary, held, interference by High Court would be justified — High Court to refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy — More so, when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material — Yet no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down for exercise of this extraordinary jurisdiction

The powers possessed by the High Court under Section 482 of the Code are very wide and the very plenitude of the power requires great caution in its exercise. Court must be careful to see that its decision in exercise of this power is based on sound principles. (Para 11)

Section 482 CrPC envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised, namely, (i) to give effect to an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down any inflexible rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction. While exercising powers under the section, the Court does not function as a court of appeal or revision. Inherent jurisdiction under the section though wide has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself. It is to be exercised ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone courts exist. Authority of the court exists for advancement of justice and if any attempt is made to abuse that authority so as to produce injustice, the court has power to prevent such abuse. It would be an abuse of process of the court to allow any action which would result in injustice and prevent promotion of justice. In exercise of the powers, court would be justified to quash any proceeding if it finds that initiation/continuance of it amounts to abuse of the process of court or quashing of these proceedings would otherwise serve the ends of justice. Thus, the inherent powers to quash the proceedings is called for only in a case where the complaint does not disclose any offence or is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive. It is not, however, necessary that there should be meticulous analysis of the case before the trial to find out whether the case would end in conviction or acquittal. The complaint has to be read as a whole. If it appears that on consideration of the allegations in the light of the statement made on the oath of the complainant that the ingredients of the offence or offences are disclosed and there is no material to show that the complaint is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, in that event there would be no justification for interference by the High Court. The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle a legitimate prosecution. The High Court being the highest court of a State should normally refrain from giving a prima facie decision in a case where the entire facts are incomplete and hazy, more so, when the evidence has not been collected and produced before the Court and the issues involved, whether factual or legal, are of magnitude and cannot be seen in their true perspective without sufficient material. Of course, no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down in regard to cases in which the High Court will exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction of quashing the proceedings at any stage. (Paras 8 and 11). State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353: AIR 2004 SC 517: 2004 Cri LJ 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2003]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, relied on [7313] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint or criminal proceedings under, when proper — Held, quashing of complaint or criminal proceedings under S. 482 depends on the facts and circumstances of each case — Scope and ambit of power under S. 482 has been explained by the Supreme Court in a series of decisions (Para 8). Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 2008 SC 1528: 2008 Cri LJ 1927: (2008) 63 AIC 42 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-2-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866; State of U.P. v. R.K. Srivastava, (1989) 4 SCC 59: 1989 SCC (Cri) 713; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Sonapareddy Maheedhar Seshagiri v. State of A.P., (2007) 13 SCC 165, relied on

[7314] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint or FIR — Where complaint or FIR prima facie does not disclose commission of any cognizable offence against the accused, the same would be liable to be quashed

The High Court was not justified in taking the view that the petitions filed by the appellants for quashing the complaint and the FIRs registered against them are premature. The allegations made in the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety, do not constitute any offence as against the appellants. Therefore, the complaint filed by the respondent and the FIRs registered in pursuance thereof are liable to be quashed. (Paras 19 and 20). Ajay Mitra v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 11: 2003 SCC (Cri) 703: AIR 2003 SC 1069: (2003) 3 MPLJ 49: 2003 Cri LJ 1249.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu, Brijesh Kumar and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-2003]

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47, distinguished [7315] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceeding/FIR — When justified — Held, High Court is entitled to exercise its inherent jurisdiction for quashing a criminal proceeding/FIR when allegations made in the same do not disclose commission of an offence — Also, it depends upon facts and circumstances of each particular case (Para 12). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

[7316] — S. 482 — Quashment — Principles restated

The principles relating to exercise of jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to quash complaints and criminal proceedings which are relevant for the present purpose are:

(i) A complaint can be quashed where the allegations made in the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety, do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out the case alleged against the accused.

For this purpose, the complaint has to be examined as a whole, but without examining the merits of the allegations. Neither a detailed inquiry nor a meticulous analysis of the material nor an assessment of the reliability or genuineness of the allegations in the complaint is warranted while examining prayer for quashing of a complaint.

(ii) A complaint may also be quashed where it is a clear abuse of the process of the court, as when the criminal proceeding is found to have been initiated with mala fides/malice for wreaking vengeance or to cause harm, or where the allegations are absurd and inherently improbable.

(iii) The power to quash shall not, however, be used to stifle or scuttle a legitimate prosecution. The power should be used sparingly and with abundant caution.

(iv) The complaint is not required to verbatim reproduce the legal ingredients of the offence alleged. If the necessary factual foundation is laid in the complaint, merely on the ground that a few ingredients have not been stated in detail, the proceedings should not be quashed. Quashing of the complaint is warranted only where the complaint is so bereft of even the basic facts which are absolutely necessary for making out the offence. Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753: (2006) 44 AIC 37 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

[7317] — S. 482 — Quashment — When justified — Held, would be justified only if High Court comes to the conclusion that statements made in the complaint, even taken at face value, do not make out any offence — On facts held, High Court erred in

(11)(ix) General grounds for quashment (contd.)

quashing proceedings against respondent-accused — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Para 5). S.A. Nanjundeswara v. M.S. Varlak Agrotech (P) Ltd., (2002) 10 SCC 249: 2004 SCC (Cri) 527: AIR 2002 SC 477.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-2001]

[7318] — S. 482 r/w Arts. 226/227 of the Constitution — Categories of cases in which such power can be exercised — As stated in Bhajan Lal case, the categories cannot be stated exhaustively — Categories stated therein were only by way of illustration (Paras 5 and 6). B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848: AIR 2003 SC 1386: (2003) 2 KLT 1062: 2003 Cri LJ 2028.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2003]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, explained

(x) Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment

[7319] — Ss. 482 and 197, 173, 309, 437(6) and 468 — Quashment of criminal proceedings for delay — When warranted — Abuse of process — Scope of right to speedy trial — Provisions for, in general law — Quashment of criminal proceedings due to delay even in serious cases — When warranted — Speedy investigation and trial, both are enshrined in CrPC — Deprivation of life and liberty "except according to procedure established by law" occurring in Art. 21, reiterated, means that procedure should be "reasonable, fair and just" — Hence, where the court comes to the conclusion that the right to speedy trial of an accused has been infringed, the charges or the conviction may be quashed unless the court feels that having regard to the nature of offence and other relevant circumstances, quashing of proceedings may not be in the interest of justice — In such a situation, it is open to the court to make an appropriate order as it may deem just and equitable, including fixation of time-frame for conclusion of trial — Bribe case — Currency notes recovered from the appellant in the year 1981 who was caught red-handed — Charge-sheet filed in 2007 during the pendency of petition filed in 1998 under S. 482 CrPC by appellant alleging undue harassment for eighteen years — Quashment refused by High Court — Sustainability — Held, it is a clear case of violation of fundamental rights of an accused — Despite serious nature of offence, held, criminal case liable to be quashed — High Court's order, set aside — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 161, 109 and 120-B — Constitution of India — Art. 21

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Time and again the Supreme Court has emphasised the need for speedy investigations and trial as both are mandated by the letter and spirit of the provisions of CrPC [in particular, Sections 197, 173, 309, 437(6) and 468, etc.] and the constitutional protection enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution. Inspired by the broad sweep and content of Article 21 the Supreme Court has observed that Article 21 confers a fundamental right on every person not to be deprived of his life or liberty except according to procedure established by law; that such procedure is not some semblance of a procedure but the procedure should be "reasonable, fair and just"; and therefrom flows, without doubt, the right to speedy trial. Inordinately long delay may be taken as presumptive proof of prejudice. In this context, the fact of incarceration of the accused will also be a relevant fact. The prosecution should not be allowed to become a persecution. But when does the prosecution become persecution, again depends upon the facts of a given case. (Paras 18 to 20 and 30)

It is well settled that the right to speedy trial in all criminal prosecutions is an inalienable right under Article 21 of the Constitution. This right is applicable not only to the actual proceedings in court but also includes within its sweep the preceding police investigations as well. The right to speedy trial extends equally to all criminal prosecutions and is not confined to any particular category of cases. In every case, where the right to speedy trial is alleged to have been infringed, the court has to perform the balancing act upon taking into consideration all the attendant circumstances and determine in each case whether the right to speedy trial has been denied in a given case. (Para 24)

Where the court comes to the conclusion that the right to speedy trial of an accused has been infringed, the charges or the conviction, as the case may be, may be quashed unless the court feels that having regard to the nature of offence and other relevant circumstances, quashing of proceedings may not be in the interest of justice. In such a situation, it is open to the court to make an appropriate order as it may deem just and equitable including fixation of time-frame for conclusion of trial. (Para 25)

The power possessed by the High Court under Section 482 is undoubtedly very wide but it has to be exercised in appropriate cases, ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone the courts exist. The inherent powers do not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on the High Court to act according to whim or caprice. It is trite to state that the said powers have to be exercised sparingly and with circumspection only where the court is convinced, on the basis of material on record, that allowing the proceedings to continue would be an abuse of the process of the court or that the ends of justice require that the proceedings ought to be quashed. (Para 15)

Tested on the touchstone of the broad principles enumerated by the Supreme Court, in the present case the appellant's constitutional right recognised under Article 21 of the Constitution stands violated. There is no hesitation in holding that at least for the period from 7-12-1990 till 28-2-2007 there is no explanation whatsoever for the delay in investigation. Even the direction issued by the High Court seems to have had no effect on the prosecution and they slept over the matter for almost seventeen years. Nothing could be pointed out by the State, far from being established to show that the delay in investigation or trial was in any way attributable to the appellant. The prosecution has failed to show any exceptional circumstance which could possibly be taken into consideration for condoning a callous and inordinate delay of more than two decades in investigations and the trial. It is also pertinent to note that even till date, the State is not sure whether a sanction for prosecuting the appellant is required and if so, whether it has been granted or not. (Paras 28 to 30). Vakil Prasad Singh v. State of Bihar, (2009) 3 SCC 355.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-2009]

Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93; P. Ramachandra Rao v. State of Karnataka, (2002) 4 SCC 578: 2002 SCC (Cri) 830, followed

Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, (1978) 1 SCC 248; Hussainara Khatoon (1) v. State of Bihar, (1980) 1 SCC 81: 1980 SCC (Cri) 23; Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574, relied on [7320] — S. 482 — Quashment of complaint — If warranted — Good faith/public good defence — Question whether "Word of Caution" published by appellants (alleged by complainant-educational society to have defamed it) was done in "good faith" and for "public good", is a question of fact which required evidence — Stage for recording evidence had not been reached, and thus, in absence of evidence, findings on issues raised cannot be given — Considering complaint as a whole, High Court rightly held that there was no case for quashing complaint under S. 482 CrPC — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 499 and 500 (Paras 39 to 41)

The ICFAI, Respondent 2 entered into an agreement with Appellant 1, President and CEO of the CFA Institute, which was incorporated under the laws of the State of Virginia, US, to conduct its CFA programme in India. However, realising that Respondent 2 was not adhering to required standards and quality of the programme, a notice for terminating the licence was issued to Respondent 2.

A civil suit for permanent injunction restraining Respondent 2 from using trade marks, services, service marks or trade name or any other name or mark which may be identical or deceptively similar to marks of CFA was filed by the appellant in the High Court. An interim relief vide order dt. 4-8-2006 was granted which was to be operative after the end of the current academic session of CFA programme run by the defendants.

On 30-1-2007, Respondent 2, through its sponsored University in Tripura-the Institute of Chartered Financial Analysts of India University, Tripura, issued an advertisement inviting applications for fresh enrolments for award of "CFA" certification. The advertisement being for subsequent programme and in breach of interim injunction the CFA Institute issued a public notice under the caption "A Word of Caution to the Indian Investment Community".

Alleging that the said public notice was defamatory within the meaning of Section 499 IPC, Respondent 2 filed a private complaint against the appellants. The trial court took cognizance of the complaint and issued summons to the appellants. Feeling aggrieved by the summoning order, the appellants preferred a petition before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC which was dismissed by the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal by the accused.

The appellants contended that the said "Word of Caution" published by them was a public duty and thus, a legitimate expression which was also absolutely necessary and in public interest and was singularly covered by the Tenth Exception to Section 499 IPC. It was further contended that the contents of the "Word of Caution" did not in any way lower or cast a reflection on the moral or intellectual character of Respondent 2 and, therefore, Explanation 4 to Section 499 IPC, which imposes restrictions in the law of defamation, is clearly attracted in favour of the appellants. It was thus, pleaded that in the light of Explanation 4 as well as the Tenth Exception to Section 499 IPC, the allegations in the complaint did not constitute an offence of defamation punishable under Section 500 IPC and, therefore, the High Court ought to have quashed the complaint.

(11)(x) Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment (contd.)

Dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Jeffrey J. Diermeier v. State of W.B., (2010) 6 SCC 243.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-5-2010]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866 : 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Dinesh Dutt Joshi v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 570 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 24; Som Mittal (2) v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574 : (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910 : (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1, relied on

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310; Rajendra Kumar Sitaram Pande v. Uttam, (1999) 3 SCC 134 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 393; Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjia, (1981) 3 SCC 208 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 698; M.N. Damani v. S.K. Sinha, (2001) 5 SCC 156 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 823; Shriram Refrigeration Industries v. Addl. Industrial Tribunal-cum-Addl. Labour Court, (2002) 9 SCC 708 : 2002 SCC (L&S) 1132; Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 636; Som Mittal (1) v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 753 : (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 895 : (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 73; Jagir Kaur v. Jaswant Singh, AIR 1963 SC 1521 : (1963) 2 Cri LJ 413 : (1964) 2 SCR 73; State of Bihar v. Shyam Yadav, (1997) 2 SCC 507 : 1997 SCC (L&S) 530; D.S. Parvathamma v. A. Srinivasan, (2003) 4 SCC 705, referred to

[7321] — S. 482 — Right to speedy trial — If on facts infringed by delay in conclusion of trial — Consideration of, in exercise of High Court's jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC — At this stage the question of applicability of a particular provision prescribing the maximum sentence, held, should normally be left to be decided by the trial court and should not be decided by High Court unless the factual aspects and the law applicable are clear — Complex nature of the offence should be a deterrent to consideration of the applicability of a provision — Official Secrets Act, 1923, S. 5(3) — Constitution of India — Art. 21

The respondent was charged with offences under Sections 3 and 5 of the Official Secrets Act and Section 120-B of the Penal Code. The High Court quashed the proceedings on the ground that there was unnecessary delay in the conclusion of the trial. The High Court further observed that the maximum punishment for the alleged offence was three years while the respondent had suffered custody for about 2 years and faced the agony of trial for 12 years.

Remitting the matter to the High Court for a fresh decision,

Held :

While considering the question of delay the court has a duty to see whether the prolongation was on account of any delaying tactics adopted by the accused and other relevant aspects which contributed to the delay. Number of witnesses examined, volume of documents likely to be exhibited, nature and complexity of the offence which is under investigation or adjudication are some of the relevant factors. There can be no empirical formula of universal application in such matters. Each case has to be judged in its own background and special features, if any. (Para 9)

These aspects have not been considered by the High Court while quashing the proceedings. On that score the judgment under challenge is vitiated. Additionally while dealing with the question as to the proper provision applicable to the case, the Court has come to a definite finding about maximum sentence. Normally, these aspects are to be left to be decided by the trial court. For coming to a conclusion about the applicability of a provision [Section 5(3), Official Secrets Act in this case], the factual position must be clear and no doubt should exist about the applicability of a particular provision to the factual scenario. The complex nature of the offence should be a deterrent to the courts while going into the question of applicability of a provision. (Para 10). State v. Narayan Waman Nerukar (Dr.), (2002) 7 SCC 6: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1542: AIR 2002 SC 2977: (2002) 99 DLT 464.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2002]

[7322] — S. 482 — High Court quashing the criminal proceedings solely on ground of lapse of time — Propriety — Held, proceedings ought not to be quashed unless the same are illegal, perverse or mala fide — Further held, writ jurisdiction is not available for quashing criminal investigation unless there is error apparent on the face of record or the proceedings can be termed to be mala fide in nature — Mere lapse of time ought not to be permitted to be meant for intervention of writ court to quash a criminal proceeding — Hence, High Court's judgment set aside and criminal proceedings restored (Paras 2, 3, 6 and 7). State of Maharashtra v. Narain Singh Yadav, (2009) 16 SCC 392.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and Dr. Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-2009

P. Ramachandra Rao v. State of Karnataka, (2002) 4 SCC 578: 2002 SCC (Cri) 830; State v. Dr. Narayan Waman Nerukar, (2002) 7 SCC 6: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1542, relied on

'Common Cause' A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1996) 4 SCC 33: 1996 SCC (Cri) 589; 'Common Cause' A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 775: 1997 SCC (Cri) 42; Raj Deo Sharma v. State of Bihar, (1998) 7 SCC 507: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1692; Raj Deo Sharma (II) v. State of Bihar, (1999) 7 SCC 604: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1324, held overruled [7323] — S. 482 — Speedy trial — Trial of serious criminal cases pending for a long time — Delay not explained by the prosecution — Accused not responsible for the delay — Held, in the circumstances, right of accused to speedy trial violated — Proceedings rightly quashed by the High Court — Constitution of India — Art. 21. Santosh De v. Archna Guha, 1994 Supp (3) SCC 735: AIR 1994 SC 1229: 1994 Cri LJ 1975: (1994) 2 BLJR 1271.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Jeevan Reddy and S.P. Bharucha, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-1993]

Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93, followed

[7324] — S. 482 — Stale prosecution (almost 14 years) quashed — Constitution of India — Arts. 136 & 228

In this case the prosecution against the accused-appellant was pending for almost fourteen years. Apart from mental agony it must have adversely affected him in his service career. In the facts of this case it is difficult rather impossible to arrange a fair trial to the appellant after such a long time lapse. It is doubtful whether an offence under S. 409, IPC even prima facie, is made out. In any case it is not necessary to go into the facts of complaint or the question of applicability of S. 197, CrPC. In facts and circumstances of this case, it would not be in the interest of justice to permit to prosecution against the appellant to continue. It would be sheer waste of public time and money apart from causing harassment to the appellant. It is no doubt correct that this appeal has been pending in the Supreme Court for almost eleven years but that is not ground to permit this stale-prosecution to go on. It is not the state-action but its effect on the citizen which is relevant. Therefore, the complaint and the prosecution against the appellant are quashed. S.G. Nain v. Union of India, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 552: 1995 SCC (Cri) 889: AIR 1992 SC 603.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-1991]

[7325] — S. 482 — Quashing of belated and stale proceedings — FIR registered against appellant public servant under Prevention of Corruption Act and Penal Code in 1984 — Sanction sought to prosecute appellant declined by Governor in 1990 and review sought thereagainst rejected in 1992 on ground that no prima facie case made out against appellant — Appellant retired from service in 1997 — Charge-sheet submitted dehors sanction in 2001, whereafter Special Judge took cognizance of the matter — Challenge to order of Special Judge rejected by High Court — In view of peculiar facts that cognizance had been taken about 17½ years after filing of FIR and about 4 years after retirement of appellant and State Government had declined sanction for prosecution twice, held, initiation of proceedings not justified and liable to be quashed — But this does not mean that sanction would be required in a case where an employee has in the meanwhile superannuated (Para 8). Louis Peter Surin v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 12 SCC 497.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.S. Bedi and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2010]

Mahendra Lal Das v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 149: 2002 SCC (Cri) 110; Ramanand Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 153: 2002 SCC (Cri) 114, relied on [7326] — S. 482 — Delay as a ground for quashing the prosecution — Case registered for cheating on December 30, 1958 and charge-sheet filed in court on November 20, 1959 — But for separate offences single charge framed by Magistrate — High Court accepting revision on July 27, 1977 and remanding for separate charges — Appeal by State to Supreme Court — Held, in view of the inordinate delay in commencing the trial it would be a travesty of justice to permit the prosecution to continue — Hence prosecution quashed — Penal Code, 1860, S. 420 — CrPC, 1898, S. 561-A. State of U.P. v. Parshottam, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 124: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1016: AIR 1991 SC 1015: 1991 Cri LJ 741.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-1990]

[7327] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings FIR — Dispute of civil nature — FIR lodged after two years — Held on facts, criminal proceedings initiated by complainant amounted to abuse of process of law — Hence, FIR rightly quashed by High Court

The appellant entered into a registered partnership firm K with one S. The Firm was stockist and distributor of a company J. In 2001, differences arose between the appellant and S, the two partners of the firm K. S joined another firm M with certain other persons as partners. According to the appellant, S with a view to cheat and defraud the appellant, misrepresented before J that the name of firm K was changed to M. On the basis of such representation S informed J that payment which was required to be made by J to K should now be made to M. Accordingly, J made payments to M in 2001. The appellant in 2003 issued legal notice to the respondents, stating that J was required to make payments to K but instead of making such payments the same had been misappropriated and that the officials of J colluded with the partners of M and all of them played fraud on the appellant. The appellant also filed a complaint in 2003 before the Director General of Police seeking inquiry into the matter. Pursuant thereto inquiry was made and the respondents submitted their replies but nothing further was done in the matter. The appellant thereupon lodged an FIR against the respondents alleging offences punishable under Sections 468, 406 read with Section 120-B IPC. The police arrested all the accused.

(11)(x) Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment (contd.)

The respondents filed application before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of FIR registered against them. The High Court found that the dispute related to settlement of accounts between the principal J and its agent K (earlier) and M (later). It further found that it was K which informed J that K had closed its business which was thereafter continued by M and all drafts be issued in favour of M and that accordingly, J substituted in the company record the name of M in place of K, as a result of which whatever sums were due to K were considered due to M. The High Court also took note of the fact that even the complainant had informed J that there was dispute between the partners of K and hence no payment could be made to M till the dispute was finally resolved between the parties. The High Court, in the circumstances, observed that the case was of one partner trying to drag the principal company into a criminal litigation to recover dues which the principal had paid to the other partner. The appellant had a dispute with S but instead of tackling him, he lodged an FIR to pressurise the respondents to settle the matter. It was not a direct case in which any contractual relationship between the complainant (appellant) with J had been breached. The appellant had no direct relationship with the company J as it was K, of which he was a partner, had developed contractual relationship and later M got substituted in place of K. The appellant ignored this development and issued the legal notice after a long lapse of time which was to drag the company into the inter se dispute between the two partners. The complaint and the steps taken by police had thus converted a tripartite civil dispute into a criminal one. The High Court, therefore, concluded that the steps taken by the complainant were in clear abuse of process of law and accordingly allowed the petition under Section 482 and quashed the first information report.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

The High Court rightly considered the facts in their proper perspective. The High Court was right in coming to the conclusion that a civil dispute — pure and simple — between the parties was sought to be converted into a criminal offence only by resorting to pressure tactics and by taking police help which was indeed abuse of process of law and has been rightly prevented by the High Court. It is clear from the case put forward by the appellant himself that the proceedings were virtually "civil" in nature. Thus the order for quashing the criminal proceedings passed by the High Court is in consonance with law and requires no interference. (Paras 18, 25, 15 and 26). Suneet Gupta v. Anil Triloknath Sharma, (2008) 11 SCC 670: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 920: (2008) 67 AIC 203 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2008]

State of Punjab v. Dharam Vir Singh Jethi, 1994 SCC (Cri) 500, distinguished [7328] — S. 482 — Quashment of prosecution — Long lapse of time — Offences on failure to supply power to consumer mill resulting in its monetary loss — Complaint regarding, filed by son of a partner of the mill against State Electricity Board and some of its officers more than 10 years back — No positive acts of omission or commission alleged, nor nature of duty cast upon any particular person stated — Held on facts, prima facie offences not made out — In view of long lapse of time also prosecution liable to be quashed — Electricity Act, 1910, Ss. 42(b) and 50. Bihar State Electricity Board v. Nand Kishore Tamakhuwala, (1986) 2 SCC 414: 1986 SCC (Cri) 179: AIR 1986 SC 1653: 1986 Cri LJ 1246.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Balakrishna Eradi and G.L. Oza, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-1986]

[7329] — S. 482 — Case pending for over 10 years — Offence also not distinctly made out — Liable to be quashed — Electricity Act, 1910, Ss. 42(b) & 50. Bihar State Electricity Board v. Nand Kishore Tamakhuwala, (1986) 2 SCC 414: 1986 SCC (Cri) 179: AIR 1986 SC 1653: 1986 Cri LJ 1246.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V. Balakrishna Eradi and G.L. Oza, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-1986]

[7330] — S. 482 — Delay as ground for quashing FIR/proceedings — FIR lodged under Ss. 13(1)(e) & (2) PC Act — Followed by search 3/4 days later when incriminating evidence found — S. 482 CrPC petition filed merely a month after lodging of FIR — Interference by High Court on ground of delayed investigations, held on facts, was improper — It is not a case where charge-sheet had not been filed or that there was no explanation for the delay — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(e) & (2)

On the authorisation of Superintendent of Police, an FIR was registered against the respondent on 12-6-2000 in respect of offences punishable under Section 13(1)(e) read with Section 13(2) of the PC Act. Search was conducted in the house of the respondent on 15-6-2000/16-6-2000 and certain records and documents relating to the respondent, his son-in-law, his daughter and son were seized. By the impugned order the High Court accepted the Section 482 CrPC petition dated 11-7-2000 filed by the respondent and quashed the proceedings.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Interference by the High Court on the ground of delayed investigations cannot be maintained because petition under Section 482 CrPC was filed only after about a month of lodging of FIR and the order of the Superintendent of Police relating to investigation. It is not a case where charge-sheet had not been filed or that there was no explanation for the delay. FIR was lodged on 12-6-2000, house of the respondent was searched on 15-6-2000/ 16-6-2000 and few days thereafter Section 482 CrPC petition was filed on 11-7-2000. Application seeking permission to substitute additional grounds was filed in the year 2005. It is interesting to note that while the High Court quashed the proceedings because of alleged delayed investigation, it permitted the authorities to take decision to continue the proceedings. (Paras 12 and 9). Supdt. of Police, Karnataka Lokayukta v. B. Srinivas, (2008) 8 SCC 580: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 587: (2008) 69 AIC 49 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2008]

[7331] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — Bribery case — Long delay — No action taken by the prosecution for six years after the raid — Public Prosecutor consistently opining that no case was made out against the appellant — Commissioner on independent consideration refusing to grant sanction but later on according sanction at the asking of the DIG (Vigilance) — Prosecution pending for over a period of thirteen years — In the facts and circumstances of the case prosecution quashed — No law point laid down. Ramanand Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 153: AIR 1994 SC 948: 1994 Cri LJ 1221.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.M. Kasliwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1992]

[7332] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Delay (19 years in this case) as a ground for — Factors to be considered — Held, reason for delay and seriousness of crime should be taken into account — Accused-appellant approaching the High Court thrice to challenge the order passed by the Magistrate taking cognizance of offence against him — Thus, it was due to appellant that the criminal proceedings before the Magistrate did not cross the stage of taking cognizance — Further, the offence in question (relating to untouchability) was a serious one — Held, no case made out to quash the proceedings on the ground of delay — Protection of Civil Rights Act, 1955, S. 7

In considering the question whether criminal proceedings deserve to be quashed on the ground of delay, the first question to be looked into is the reason for delay as also the seriousness of the offence. (Para 13)

It is to be borne in mind that the appellant has been successively approaching the High Court every time when an order taking cognizance was passed by the Magistrate. It is because of the appellant that the criminal proceedings before the Magistrate did not cross the stage of taking cognizance. In fact, from 1986 till date the criminal case has not proceeded further because of the appellant. It would be an abuse of the process of the court if the appellant is now allowed to urge delay as a ground for quashing the criminal proceedings. (Para 13)

Regarding the seriousness of the offence, it may be noticed that the ill of untouchability was abolished under the Constitution and the Act under which the complaint in question has been filed was enacted nearly half a century ago. (Para 13)

Thus, no case has been made out to quash the criminal proceedings on the ground of delay. (Para 13). Jagdish Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (2004) 4 SCC 432: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1294: AIR 2004 SC 1734.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-2004]

S.G. Nain v. Union of India, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 552: 1995 SCC (Cri) 889; Bihar SEB v. Nand Kishore Tamakhuwala, (1986) 2 SCC 414: 1986 SCC (Cri) 179; Ramanand Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 153: 2002 SCC (Cri) 114 (cited order), distinguished on facts

[7333] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Delay in filing charge-sheet — Offence of abetting public servant to commit offence under S. 13(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act alleged against two old ladies aged 80 and 81 years — On facts, criminal prosecution against them quashed — Constitution of India — Art. 136

(11)(x) Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment (contd.)

The only offence alleged against the two appellant senescent ladies is that they abetted the public servant to commit the offence under Section 13(2) of the PC Act. Firstly, the materials are too insufficient to prove that those two old ladies intentionally abetted the public servant in acquiring assets which are disproportionate to his known sources of income. As such they should not be compelled to embark upon a trial which, in all probabilities, cannot end in conviction against them, even assuming that the octogenarian ladies would be able to survive till the end of the trial. Secondly, the trial is not likely to end within one or two years. Even if the Special Court would strictly adhere to the directions issued by the Supreme Court in Raj Deo Sharma case, it is reasonably foreseen that the prosecution would be able to complete the evidence only within the farthest time permitted in Raj Deo Sharma in view of the volume of documents and of the evidence to be adduced by the prosecution. It would be unfair and unreasonable to compel the two ladies, who by the advancement of old age would possibly have already crossed into the geriatric stage, to stand the long trial having no reasonable prospect of ultimate conviction against them. Therefore, they are delinked from the array of accused and the criminal prosecution against them is quashed. (Para 22). Seeta Hemchandra Shashittal v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 4 SCC 525: 2001 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2001 SC 1246: 2001 Cri LJ 1242.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2001]

Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R. S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93; Hussainara Khatoon (I) v. Home Secy., State of Bihar, (1980) 1 SCC 81: 1980 SCC (Cri) 23; State of A.P. v. P.V. Pavithran, (1990) 2 SCC 340: 1991 SCC (Cri) 7, relied on

[7334] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Sought on the grounds of (i) bar of limitation, and (ii) lack of authority of Drugs Inspector, Vijayawada, A.P. to lodge the complaint as he could not have assumed jurisdiction under the notification issued by Govt. of A.P. which was confined to Telangana area of A.P. only — Complaint filed within the period of limitation (i.e. one year), but cognizance taken by court beyond the limitation period — Held, complaint not barred by limitation — Further held, the notification was applicable to the entire State of A.P. and not restricted to Telangana area only — Thus, High Court was justified in dismissing the petition under S. 482 CrPC (Paras 10, 11, 8 and 13). Bharat Damodar Kale v. State of A.P., (2003) 8 SCC 559: 2004 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2003 SC 4560.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2003]

[7335] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Delay in trial — Sanction for prosecution in corruption case not granted by the Govt. despite expiry of over 12 years after the registration of FIR — Emphasising the need of speedy trial, particularly in corruption cases, and stating the manner of considering the alleged delay, held, in view of the peculiar circumstances of the instant case, where the State opined that no case for sanction was made out against the accused-appellant and failed to grant sanction for his prosecution, further prosecution of him would be a mere formality and unnecessary burden on the courts — On facts, proceedings pending against the accused quashed — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 6 and 5(2) r/w 5(1)(e) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 19 and 13(2) r/w S. 13(1)(e)

It is in the interest of all concerned that guilt or innocence of the accused is determined as quickly as possible in the circumstances. However, every delay may not be taken as causing prejudice to the accused. The alleged delay has to be considered in the totality of the circumstances and the general conspectus of the case. Inordinate long delay can be taken as a presentive proof of prejudice. (Para 5)

The prosecution has miserably failed to explain the delay of more than 13 years by now, in granting the sanction for prosecution of the appellant-accused. The authorities of the respondent State also appear to be not satisfied about the merits of the case and were convinced that despite granting of sanction the trial would be a mere formality and an exercise in futility. (Para 6)

Irrespective of the amount involved in the corruption cases, such cases are required to be dealt with swiftly, promptly and without delay. The delay can be attributed either to the connivance of the authorities with the accused or used as a lever to pressurise and harass the accused as is alleged to have been done to the appellant in this case. The appropriate authorities concerned are under an obligation to find out and deal with the persons responsible for such delay. (Para 7)

Thus, in view of the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, further prosecution of the accused would be a travesty of justice and a mere formality causing unnecessary burden on the courts. (Para 9). Mahendra Lal Das v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 149: 2002 SCC (Cri) 110: AIR 2001 SC 2989.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2001]

Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93, relied on

Ramanand Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 948: 1994 Cri LJ 1221, followed

[7336] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — Delay in trial — Sanction for prosecution granted about 11 years after the offence giving reconsideration to the case of accused — Held, where the Commissioner on independent consideration refused to grant sanction in absence of any case being made out against the accused-appellant, the grant of sanction after the reconsideration of appellant's case on direction of DIG (Vigilance), held in view of the facts and circumstances of the case, not proper — Proceedings against the accused quashed — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 6 and 5(2) r/w S. 5(1)(e). Ramanand Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 153: AIR 1994 SC 948: 1994 Cri LJ 1221.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.M. Kasliwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-8-1992]

[7337] — Ss. 482, 190, 468(2) and 473 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Cognizance taken long after a period of three years — Occurrence on 24-9-1994 — Cognizance taken by CJM on 4-2-2000 — Proceedings, held on facts, clearly barred by S. 468(2) — High Court erred in not quashing the same under S. 482 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 341, 323, 504/34 and 120-B — Constitution of India — Art. 136

There is no dispute that cognizance was taken of the offences by the learned Magistrate long after a period of three years. The Magistrate condoned the delay on the ground that the proceedings were stayed by the High Court till 5-10-1999. On 11-11-1994, further proceedings had been specifically stayed but by the order dated 6-2-1995, the order dated 11-11-1994 was modified in effect to vacating the earlier order staying further proceedings. This position is abundantly clear by a bare perusal of the orders dated 11-11-1994 and 6-2-1995. When the order of 11-11-1994 was specifically modified, there was no reason to understand the orders otherwise. It was not correct for the learned Magistrate to say that there was stay of further proceedings till 5-10-1999 in the face of order dated 6-2-1995 read with the order dated 11-11-1994. (Para 12)

No other reason or ground is given in the order of the Magistrate to condone the delay under Section 473 of the Code. If the discretion is exercised on relevant considerations, possibly no fault could be found with such discretion. The High Court although noticed in the impugned order as to the effect of the order dated 6-2-1995 and found that there was an error committed by the Magistrate but took the view that it was not a serious one. Added to this, the proceedings are of the year 1994. Having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case, the CJM as well as the High Court committed serious error in upholding taking cognizance when it is clearly barred by Section 468(2) of the Code. (Para 12)

Thus, the impugned order is set aside and the criminal proceedings are quashed. (Para 13). Ramesh Chandra Sinha v. State of Bihar, (2003) 7 SCC 254: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1613: AIR 2003 SC 3635.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Shivaraj V. Patil and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2003]

[7338] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashment of delayed FIR — When warranted — Matters to be considered — Mala fide proceedings launched to wreak vengeance

The appellants' father lodged FIR under Sections 420/423/467/468/471/120-B IPC, against the respondents. The allegations made in the FIR were substantially similar to the allegations made by the appellants in the civil suit which had been decided against them. It is evident that the aforesaid FIR was filed with inordinate delay and there has been no plausible explanation for the same. The appellants lodged the aforesaid FIR only after meeting their Waterloo in the civil court. Thus, it is evident that the FIR was lodged with the sole intention of harassing the respondents and enmeshing them in long and arduous criminal proceedings. Such an action on the part of the appellants' father would not be bona fide, and the criminal proceedings initiated by him against the respondents amount to an abuse of the process of law. (Para 25)

In view of the said facts, and to do substantial justice, it would not be appropriate to interfere with the order passed by the High Court quashing the criminal proceedings against the respondents in spite of the fact that the impugned judgment is not sustainable in the eye of the law. (Para 26). Kishan Singh v. Gurpal Singh, (2010) 8 SCC 775.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2010]

[7339] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — On the ground of bar of limitation — Validity — Complaint under S. 138, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — Contention by accused that notice for payment was issued beyond 15 days of communication by bank regarding dishonour of cheque and, therefore, the complaint was clearly barred by limitation — As per the complainant, communication of dishonour of cheque was received after three days and, therefore, notice sent to accused was within 15 days thereafter — This being a matter of evidence, held, High Court was not justified in quashing the proceedings by holding that the complaint was barred by time — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Paras 3 and 4). T.N. Newsprint & Papers Ltd. v. Lakshmi, (2004) 13 SCC 366.

(11)(x) Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2004]

[7340] — Ss. 482, 309, 311 and 258 — Right to speedy trial — Trial in a particular case whether vitiated on account of delay — Determination of — All relevant aspects contributing to the delay such as delaying tactics, if any, of the accused, number of witnesses examined, volume of documents likely to be exhibited and nature and complexity of the offence, held, must be considered by the court — Further held, there can be no empirical formula of universal application for this purpose — Hence, quashment of criminal proceedings under Ss. 3 and 5, Official Secrets Act and S. 120-B, Penal Code by High Court relying upon Common Cause cases, (1996) 4 SCC 33 and (1996) 6 SCC 775, without considering the said aspects, held, improper — Extent to which use of the periods of time prescribed in the said cases can be made by courts, specified — Supreme Court noticing that exercise of powers by criminal courts such as those under Ss. 309, 311 and 258 CrPC also affect the right to speedy trial — Official Secrets Act, 1923, Ss. 3 and 5 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 120-B — Constitution of India — Art. 21 (Para 10). State v. Narayan Waman Nerukar (Dr.), (2002) 7 SCC 6: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1542: AIR 2002 SC 2977: (2002) 99 DLT 464.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-8-2002]

P. Ramachandra Rao v. State of Karnataka, (2002) 4 SCC 578: 2002 SCC (Cri) 830, followed

"Common Cause" A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1996) 4 SCC 33: 1996 SCC (Cri) 589; "Common Cause" A Registered Society v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 775: 1997 SCC (Cri) 42; Raj Deo Sharma v. State of Bihar, (1998) 7 SCC 507: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1692; Raj Deo Sharma (II) v. State of Bihar, (1999) 7 SCC 604: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1324, held partly overruled

[7341] — Ss. 482, 397 and 399 — Delay in trial — Interference by superior courts at initial or interlocutory stages of criminal cases causing delay in trial unwarranted — Complaint cannot be quashed on ground of delay of about 12 years in trial when complainant not responsible for the delay — More so when no such plea raised before the High Court

It is common knowledge that currently the criminal courts excel in slow motion. The slow motion becomes much slower motion when politically powerful or rich and influential persons figure as accused. FIRs are quashed. Charges are quashed. Interlocutory orders are interfered with. At every step, there will be revisions and applications for quashing and writ petitions. In short, no progress is ever allowed to be made. And if ever the case reaches the stage of trial after all these interruptions, the time would have taken its own toll: the witnesses are won over; evidence disappears; the prosecution loses interest — the result is an all too familiar one. Repeated admonition of the Supreme Court have not deterred superior courts from interfering at initial or interlocutory stages of criminal cases. Such interference should be only in exceptional cases where the interests of justice demand it; it cannot be a matter of course. The contention that after a period of twelve years, the matter should not be allowed to be proceeded with is not acceptable as in this case the complainant was not responsible for the delay. (Para 18). Ganesh Narayan Hegde v. S. Bangarappa, (1995) 4 SCC 41: 1995 SCC (Cri) 634: 1995 Cri LJ 2935.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Jeevan Reddy and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1995]

S. Bangarappa v. Ganesh N. Hegde, 1992 Cri LJ 3788 (Kant), reversed

[7342] — Ss. 482, 397 and 401 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Grounds — Delay in prosecution — Quashing of complaint by High Court held by the Supreme Court to be improper — Contention that complaint was filed as early as in 1983 and serious prejudice would be caused to accused at this stage in case further proceedings are taken — Rejection of — Accused directed to raise all objections, including the delay in prosecution, while defending the case — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Para 8). Rajmata Vijaya Raje Scindia v. State of M.P., (2003) 12 SCC 429.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-2003]

[7343] — Ss. 482 and 244 & 245 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Ground of delay or procrastination in trial — Seriousness of the offence involved should not be ignored — Complaint relating to offence under S. 3 of Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966 which is a serious offence — Accused persons themselves were responsible for procrastinating the proceedings by challenging various orders of court or by not being present in court — No charge framed for 7 years — Held, High Court erred in quashing the proceedings merely on ground of delay in proceeding of the case — High Court erred in not considering the case from the angle of S. 245

An FIR was registered in 1991 for the offence under Section 3 of the Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966. An inquiry was conducted under Section 8 of the Act and on completion of inquiry, a complaint was filed in the Court of Judicial Magistrate, First Class on 13-1-1992. The Magistrate took cognizance of the offence and issued process against four persons including the respondents arrayed in the complaint. The first respondent thereafter moved the Sessions Court in revision by challenging the order by which cognizance of the offence was taken. The Sessions Court quashed the proceedings even though the burden lay on the accused who were found to be in possession of the railway property. The State challenged the order of the Sessions Court before the High Court. The High Court set aside the order of the Sessions Court on 1-4-1994. But the case could not commence in the trial court soon after receipt of the records from the High Court on account of absence of one or the other accused. It was only on 14-10-1996 that all the accused made their appearance before the Magistrate. Thereupon adopting the procedure prescribed in Chapter XIX CrPC for trial of warrant cases instituted otherwise than on police report, the trial Magistrate collected the preliminary evidence envisaged in Section 244 and then the case was posted for framing charge. On 5-1-1998 the accused filed a petition for discharging them. That petition was dismissed by the Magistrate by order dated 10-2-1998. That order was challenged before the High Court. A Single Judge of the High Court taking note of the fact that no charge had been framed although about 7 years elapsed, observed:

> "There is nothing on the record to show that the delay in proceeding with the case has been caused due to laches on the part of the petitioners. In such circumstances, in my opinion, for the ends of justice, the instant proceeding against the petitioners should not continue any further."

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The ideal situation is to have criminal proceedings completed swiftly. But the ideal is far from practical attainment due to a variety of reasons. In considering the question whether delay alone is sufficient to quash pending criminal proceedings the seriousness of the offence involved is not to be overlooked. The offence now pitted against the respondents is serious in nature. The Magistrate had no reason to discharge the accused at that stage; as he felt that there was evidence to frame the charge he could not but dismiss the plea for a discharge. The High Court did not consider the case from the angle provided in Section 245 of the Code. The High Court was persuaded to discharge the accused only on the ground that "the case was pending for the last seven years". Cause of the delay is mostly due to the accused either because they challenged the various orders passed or because they were not present in the court and hence proceedings could not be continued on many occasions. Causes attributable to the prosecution or even to the court are comparably much less as to permit the accused to take advantage of the delay in registering progress of the proceedings. (Paras 8, 9, 7 and 11)

Therefore, the impugned order is set aside and the trial court is directed to proceed with the case and complete the prosecution evidence within six months from the date on which the accused would appear before the trial court if the accused is instrumental in causing the delay, then so much of the period would be debited from the time-frame. (Para 12). State of Bihar v. Baidnath Prasad, (2002) 1 SCC 465: 2002 SCC (Cri) 148: AIR 2002 SC 64: 2002 Cri LJ 208.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-10-2001]

Seeta Hemchandra Shashittal v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 4 SCC 525: 2001 SCC (Cri) 787; Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93; Rajiv Gupta v. State of H.P., (2000) 10 SCC 68: 2000 SCC (Cri) 696; Common Cause v. Union of India, (1996) 6 SCC 775: 1997 SCC (Cri) 42, relied on [7344] — Ss. 482 and 311 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Grounds — Inordinate delay in conclusion of trial — Initiation of prosecution in 1975 — Revision filed before High Court for quashing the proceedings disposed of in 1990 with a direction to conclude the trial within six months — Since trial could not be concluded within the said period, accused again moving High Court for quashing the proceedings — This time High Court directing to conclude the trial within three months — When the case was pending judgment, accused filing application for examination of certain persons as defence witnesses which prayer was granted by the trial court — Accused instead of examining the defence witnesses, adopting dilatory tactics by moving the High Court for quashing the proceedings on the ground of inordinate delay in trial — High Court quashing the prosecution — Held, High Court was not justified in doing so — High Court granted premium to the accused who was the wrongdoer as trial could not be concluded on account of his repeated approach to the High Court for quashing the proceedings and getting the same stayed every time — High Court's order set aside — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5(2) and 5(1)(c) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(2) and 13(1)(c) (Para 2). State of W.B. v. Amiya Kumar Biswas, (2004) 13 SCC 671.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-2003]

(11)(x) Delay/Limitation as a ground for quashment (contd.)

[7345] — Ss. 482 and 386 — Protracted trial — Trial pending for over 25 years against appellant accused of offences under Ss. 408 and 409, IPC — Petition for quashing of proceedings — Having regard to the nature of allegations and availability of prosecution evidence, held, termination of the proceedings by invoking inherent power at this stage on account of lapse of time alone not expedient — Trial court directed to dispose of the cases expeditiously within one year. Mangilal Vyas v. State of Rajasthan, 1990 Supp SCC 21: 1991 SCC (Cri) 231: (1990) 1 Crimes 377.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.M. Ahmadi and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-1-1990]

[7346] — Ss. 482 and 468 — Offences under Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474 IPC — Quashing of complaint by High Court on the ground that it was filed belatedly — Legality — Bar of limitation under S. 468 — Applicability of — Most of the offences in question punishable with imprisonment for a term exceeding three years — Hence held, bar of limitation not attracted — Further, if the effect of delay, if any, in instituting the complaint was necessary to be determined for considering the merits of the charge, that could only be done at the stage of trial on the basis of the evidence on record — Accordingly, High Court's order set aside (Para 6). Harnam Singh v. Everest Construction Co., (2004) 6 SCC 754: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1828.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

[7347] — Ss. 482 and 468 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — On ground of bar of limitation — Offence under Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — Plea before High Court that maximum punishment for the alleged offence under S. 7(1)(a)(ii), EC Act was one year and, therefore, the charge-sheet filed about two years after the date of offence was clearly barred by limitation — Quashing of proceedings by accepting the said plea — Validity — Held, maximum punishment for an offence relatable to S. 7(1)(a)(ii) is not one year but seven years — Hence, High Court's order liable to be set aside — Essential Commodities Act, 1955, S. 7(1)(a)(ii) (Paras 7 and 9). State of A.P. v. Farmers Service Coop. Society, (2004) 6 SCC 683: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1826.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2004]

(xi) Lack of jurisdiction of court/ forum below

See also '(11)(xiv) Errors of procedure by courts/authorities below', below

[7348] — S. 482 — Proceedings under Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — Quashing of — Sought on the ground that Special Judge trying the case was appointed by State Govt. notification to try the offences under the old Act of 1947 and thus a fresh notification under S. 3 of the 1988 Act was required to enable the appointment of Special Judges for proceeding with the new cases under the 1988 Act — Having regard to the deeming fiction contained in S. 26 of the 1988 Act, held, Special Judge appointed for the purposes of 1947 Act has jurisdiction and is competent to try the offences under the 1988 Act — No fresh notification under the 1988 Act appointing the Special Judges required — Thus, proceedings in question, held, could not be quashed on the said ground (Paras 6, 10 and 11). Vasant Arjunrao Bhandak v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 1 SCC 448: AIR 2003 SC 161: 2003 Cri LJ 394.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-2002]

Nar Bahadur Bhandari v. State of Sikkim, (1998) 5 SCC 39: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1252; Bishambhar Nath Kohli v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 573: (1966) 2 SCR 158, relied on

[7349] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings on the ground of lack of jurisdiction of the Special Court — Proceedings under Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471, 120-B IPC and S. 5, Imports and Exports (Control) Act — Quashed mainly on the ground that the Special Court (Economic Offences) had no jurisdiction to try the offences under IPC as the said court was created by a notification for trial of offences relating to only certain specific Acts including the Imports and Exports (Control) Act — Considering the relevant provisions of CrPC and the language of the notification, held, the said Special Court had jurisdiction to try the offences under IPC — None of the grounds stated by the High Court for quashing the proceedings held to be proper — However, since the Imports and Exports (Control) Act had been repealed and in the departmental proceedings taken under the aforesaid Act, the Central Government had passed orders in favour of the accused-respondents, held, no useful purpose would be served by the trial of the respondents at this stage — Hence, the proceedings against the respondents quashed

Sub-section (1) of Section 4 CrPC lays down that all offences under IPC shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions contained in the said Code.

Sub-section (2) of the same section lays down that all offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying or otherwise dealing with such offences. The Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 does not make any provision for regulating the manner of trying of offences under the said Act and, therefore, they have to be inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions of CrPC. (Para 5)

Further, in view of specific provision contained in clause (a) of sub-section (4) of Section 3 CrPC, it is only a Judicial Magistrate who can try an offence under the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 and under Section 26 CrPC such a Magistrate has also the jurisdiction to try those offences under IPC, which the respondents are alleged to have committed. (Para 5)

That apart, the source of power for the State Government to issue a notification for creation of a Special Court is proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 11 CrPC and this provision nowhere says that upon issuance of such a notification the Judicial Magistrate concerned would be divested of the power and jurisdiction which he otherwise had under CrPC. The Judicial Magistrate, First Class, who by virtue of the notification became a Special Court (Economic Offences) was not divested of the jurisdiction which he otherwise possessed under Section 26 CrPC. Further, the language of the notification also does not show that powers or jurisdiction of a Judicial Magistrate, who is to perform the functions of a Special Court (Economic Offences) to try the offences under the Acts mentioned in the schedule are being affected or curtailed in any manner. (Para 6)

The High Court has referred to Section 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, Section 12-AA of the Essential Commodities Act and Section 9 of the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, and on the basis of these provisions, it has held that in the absence of any specific provision conferring power upon the Special Court (Economic Offences) to try the offences under IPC the said Special Court would not have the jurisdiction to try the offences under IPC. The aforesaid reasoning of the High Court is wholly fallacious. The enactments referred to above by the High Court are special statutes which themselves created the offences, made specific provision for appointment of a Special Judge or a Designated Court for trial of offences, laid down their powers and also made specific provisions regarding procedure which was to be followed by such courts. Such is not the position here. The State Government has merely exercised power under proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 11 CrPC for creation of a Special Court. The Acts mentioned in the schedule to the notification issued by the State Government do not themselves provide for creation of any Special Court nor do they lay down the procedure for trial of the offences therein. The only effect of the notification was that instead of the trials being held in the courts of various Judicial Magistrates posted in Bangalore Metropolitan Area and in the district of Bangalore, they were all to be tried by one court. (Para 7)

Thus, the view taken by the High Court is wholly unsustainable in law and must be set aside. (Para 12)

But as the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 has since been repealed and in the departmental proceedings taken under the aforesaid Act the Central Government has passed orders in favour of the respondents, no useful purpose would be served by the trial of the accused-respondents in the criminal court at this stage. The criminal proceedings instituted against the accused-respondents on the basis of the complaints filed by the Deputy Chief Controller of Imports and Exports are, therefore, quashed. (Para 13). Dy. Chief Controller of Imports & Exports v. Roshanlal Agarwal, (2003) 4 SCC 139: 2003 SCC (Cri) 788: AIR 2003 SC 1900: 2003 Cri LJ 1698: (2003) 155 ELT 216.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2003]

[7350] — Ss. 482, 177 and 178 — Quashing of proceedings — Ground — Lack of jurisdiction of the Magistrate concerned to deal with the matter — Complaint filed under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 against husband and his relations by the wife at place C where she came to stay after leaving her husband's house at place N — All the offences alleged to have taken place at N — Said offences not continuing ones — No part of cause of action arose at place C — Hence, considering Ss. 177 and 178 CrPC, held, the Magistrate at C had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter — Proceedings quashed — Complainant given liberty to file complaint in appropriate court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — Constitution of India — Art. 136

Respondent 2 (wife of one of the appellants) filed a complaint in the Court of the Magistrate alleging commission of offences punishable under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC and Section 4 of the

(11)(xi) Lack of jurisdiction of court/forum below (contd.)

Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. The Magistrate directed the police to investigate the case. After investigation, the police filed the charge-sheet. When the matter stood thus, the appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court alleging that the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction even to entertain the complaint even if the allegations contained therein were accepted in toto as no part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the court concerned. The complaint itself disclosed that after 15-4-1997, the respondent left the place N (where she was residing with her appellant husband) and came to the city C. Since all the alleged acts as per the complainant took place at N, the courts at C did not have the jurisdiction to deal with the matter. On the other hand, Respondent 2 submitted that the offences were continuing in terms of Section 178(c) CrPC and, therefore, the court at C had jurisdiction to deal with the matter.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case, the inevitable conclusion is that no part of cause of action arose in the city C and, therefore, the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter. (Para 19). Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134: AIR 2004 SC 4286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

(xii) Mala fides or animus of complainant

[7351] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at the initial stage by High Court — Grounds — Mala fides or animus of complainant or prosecution not relevant — If on the basis of allegations in the complaint a prima facie case is made out the High Court has no jurisdiction to quash the proceedings — High Court not justified in judging the probability, reliability or genuineness of the allegations made — Power to quash proceedings should be exercised only in extraordinary circumstances

If the complaint which is made is correct and an offence had been committed which will have to be established in a court of law, it is of no consequence that the complainant was a person who was inimical or that he was guilty of mala fides. If the ingredients which establish the commission of the offence or misconduct exist then, the prosecution cannot fail merely because there was an animus of the complainant or the prosecution against the accused. Allegations of mala fides may be relevant while judging the correctness of the allegations or while examining the evidence. But the mere fact that the complainant is guilty of mala fides, would be no ground for quashing the prosecution. In the instant case, specific averments of facts have been made whereby it was alleged that the respondent had disproportionately large assets. Mala fide intention of the appellant in launching prosecution against the respondent with a view to punish him cannot be a reason for preventing the court of competent jurisdiction from examining the evidence which may be led before it, for coming to the conclusion whether an offence had been committed or not.

The court should not, except in extraordinary circumstances, exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC so as to quash the prosecution proceedings after they have been launched.

At the stage of quashing a first information report or complaint, the High Court is not justified in embarking upon an enquiry as to the probability, reliability or genuineness of the allegations made therein. This is precisely what has been done by the learned Judge in the present case. The first information report having been lodged, the Government of Maharashtra having accorded sanction and thereafter, the charge having been filed, there was absolutely no justification for the High Court to have stopped the normal procedure of the trial being allowed to continue. It cannot be presumed that there was no application of mind when the first information report was prepared and the sanction of the Government obtained. The allegations as made in the first information report and the order granting sanction, if true, would clearly establish that the respondent was rightly prosecuted and was guilty of criminal misconduct. The truthfulness of the allegations and the establishment of the guilt can only take place when the trial proceeds without any interruption. There was no justification for the High Court to have exercised its jurisdiction under Article 227 of the Constitution and Section 482 of the CrPC in quashing the prosecution. State of Maharashtra v. Ishwar Piraji Kalpatri, (1996) 1 SCC 542: 1996 SCC (Cri) 150: AIR 1996 SC 722.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and B.N. Kirpal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1995]

Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, followed

[7352] — S. 482 — Exercise of power under — When justified — Bhajan Lal (7) — Complaint filed against government official as a counterblast to action taken by him in his official capacity — Facts also showed that complaint was an afterthought to rope in appellant on account of action taken by him against Respondent 2 — Held, this case was of the nature mentioned at Category (7) in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 — Continuance of proceeding against appellant would amount to abuse of process of law — Criminal proceedings therefore quashed (Paras 12 and 14). Anjani Kumar v. State of Bihar, (2008) 5 SCC 248: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 582: AIR 2008 SC 1992: (2008) 66 AIC 72 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 2558.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104; Rakesh Kumar Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2006) 1 SCC 557: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 432, relied on [7353] — S. 482 — Applicability — Scope of exercise of power under S. 482, restated — Held, factual scenario clearly showed that impugned proceedings were initiated as a counterblast to the proceedings initiated by appellants under Ss. 138/142/141 of NI Act, 1881 — Hence, continuance of such proceedings would be an abuse of the process of law — Case falls under Category (7) of Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 — Therefore, proceedings accordingly quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 468 and 471 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138, 141 and 142 (Paras 2, 6, 9, 10, 13 and 14). Eicher Tractor Ltd. v. Harihar Singh, (2008) 16 SCC 763: (2009) 1 ECrN 422 (SC): (2009) 73 AIC 198 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, relied on

[7354] — S. 482 — Circumstances warranting quashing of prosecution — Malicious prosecution — Alleged facts disclosing no offence — Appellant, an old lady, prosecuted for tampering with certified copy of revenue records wherein dates "6-5-2002" and "7-5-2002" were alleged to have been changed to "16-5-2002", "17-5-2002" and "27-5-2002" and tampered copy was made use of in civil suits — On appreciation of facts found that appellant was not to gain anything in the civil suits by tampering — Facts also did not disclose commission of offences under Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC — It was also doubtful whether appellant had filed civil suits or they were filed by someone else in her name — Prosecution, held, was abuse of process of law and therefore quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471

The appellant was an old lady against whom Respondent 2 filed an FIR that she had tampered certified copy of revenue records and made of use this tampered document in civil suits filed by her so as to save the cases from bar of limitation. It was alleged that dates relating to application for certified copy and receipt of certified copy had been changed from "6-5-2002" and "7-5-2002" to "16-5-2002" and "17-5-2002" and "27-5-2002". It was alleged that appellant applied for certified copy of revenue records on 6-5-2002 and she got it on 7-5-2002 but she made interpolations in the document. The appellant denied that civil suits were filed by her though civil suits appeared to have been filed through her counsel on 27-5-2002.

The appellant approached the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of prosecution but High Court took view that FIR as well as material collected by prosecution were good enough at least to proceed, and it could not be said that no offence was disclosed from the same.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is clear from the manner in which litigation is being fought that it is nothing but to wreak vengeance against appellant. There is absence of bona fides on the part of Respondent 2 to file FIR. The appellant has committed no offence. This is a classic example where investigating officer has subverted investigation system and started prosecution of an old lady. The Court is also surprised that appellant who is an old lady was arrested and had to stay behind the bars for more than a week. It is also not understood as to how trial court mechanically took cognizance of a non-existent offence. Even if it is presumed that somebody interpolated records by adding figure "1" and even if it is presumed that the appellant did so, still it does not become a forged document. The Court is also surprised at the manner in which investigation was done and the manner in which cognizance was taken by the courts below. In its written submissions also the State has merely justified that figure of "1" was added in order to show that there were no laches or negligence for filing civil suits. It is not understood as to how ten days could have amounted to laches or negligence because ultimately suits seem to have been filed after ten days. Attitude of State is surprising that it is insisting on trial despite the fact that prosecution is mala fide, malicious and vengeful only to settle scores by Respondent 2 against the appellant. (Paras 25, 28, 35 and 36)

(11)(xii) Mala fides or animus of complainant (contd.)

Respondent 2 has not been able to show as to how the appellant could be benefitted in any manner by changing the dates. Since there was no question of the appellant gaining anything, she would not have made changes in the document. It is not for the Court to explain how the document was changed. Whosoever may have changed those documents, the said change did not result in any illegal gains to the appellant or illegal loss to anybody. Such changes were innocuous and did not give rise to any offence. This is a case of malicious and vengeful prosecution which has no base. Exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC is justified in this case. The Court is convinced of whole lack of bona fides on the part of investigating officer. Affidavit filed by him in the Supreme Court does not give any explanation or justification for arrest and subsequent investigation of non-existing crimes. The prosecution in this case is nothing but an abuse of process of law and is therefore quashed. (Paras 40 to 43). Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2010) 1 SCC 322.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-10-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

Parminder Kaur v. State of U.P., (2007) 6 All LJ (NOC) 954, reversed

[7355] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — Considerations — Mala fides — Absurdity — Allegation of theft of bangles by appellant (brother of daughter-in-law of Respondent 1) during raid by police at Respondent 1's house — Respondent 1 arrested on complaint of his daughter-in-law — Held, it is absurd to think that appellant, who was present with police party, would venture to pocket the bangles in their presence — Accompanying police officers have not been made accused in complaint — Complaint wholly lacks bona fides — Complaint has to be quashed if allegations are found absurd and without any basis — When complaint is seen in backdrop of prosecution of Respondent 1 for offences under Ss. 498-A, 406 IPC, absurdity becomes more prominent — Criminal complaint was in retaliation to criminal prosecution which was being faced by Respondent 1 — Complaint quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406 (Paras 2 to 6 and 9 to 13). Manoj Mahavir Prasad Khaitan v. Ram Gopal Poddar, (2010) 10 SCC 673.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[7356] — S. 482 — Quashment — Matters to be considered — Motivated proceedings — Complaint filed against appellants (bank officials) as counterblast to action taken by them in their official capacity for realising loan amount due — Intention behind initiating criminal proceedings to prevent public servants from discharging their duties — Effect — Held, complaint clearly abuse of judicial process to harass appellants — Averments and allegations in complaint not disclosing commission of any offence by appellants — Instant case a classic illustration of non-application of mind by trial court where Magistrate not scrutinising even contents of complaint, leave aside material documents available on record — Magistrate remaining a silent spectator at the time of recording of preliminary evidence before summoning appellants — High Court committing manifest error in disposing of S. 482 petition without even adverting to basic facts which were placed before it for its consideration — Hence, criminal proceedings quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 409, 422, 426 and 120-B — Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, Ss. 17 and 19

In the instant case, Bank P sanctioned a loan amount to a proprietary concern owned by one J (borrower). J furnished security of five guarantors, including respondent complainant, who in turn deposited FDRs, each duly signed, authorising the Bank to appropriate proceeds of FDRs along with interest if timely payments were not made by the borrower.

After passing of about one year, the Bank realised that the loan account had become totally irregular since the borrower was not paying any amount whatsoever as undertaken in terms of the agreement. First appellant (Senior Manager of the Bank), on realising that recovery of bank loan had become impossible, adjusted some amounts from FDRs furnished by guarantors as security towards dues of borrower.

The Bank vide its notice informed borrower and guarantors that the loan account should be regularised to which there was no response. This was followed by the Bank lodging an FIR against borrower and guarantors including the respondent for cheating and for misappropriation of hypothecated goods. The respondent complainant being aggrieved by the action of the Bank in appropriating FDRs, filed complaint case under Ss. 409, 422, 426 and 120-B IPC against appellants (Bank officials). The trial court took cognizance of the case and directed non-bailable warrant of arrest against appellants. The appellants being aggrieved by trial court's order, filed a petition under S. 482 CrPC before High Court for quashing the criminal proceedings, which was dismissed. Hence the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The averments and allegations made in the complaint do not disclose the commission of any offence by the appellants or any one of them. They were merely discharging their duties to realise and recover the amounts due to the Bank from the borrower as well as the guarantors. The complaint obviously was filed as a counterblast to the proceedings already initiated by the Bank including the FIR lodged by the first appellant (Senior Manager of the Bank) against the complainant and the borrower for the offences of cheating and misappropriation. (Para 33)

Sequence of events undoubtedly suggests that the criminal proceedings have been maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive of wreaking vengeance on the appellants and with a view to spite them due to personal grudge. It was clearly intended to prevent the public servants from discharging their duties. (Para 34)

The case on hand is a classic illustration of non-application of mind by the Magistrate. The Magistrate did not scrutinise even the contents of the complaint, leave aside the material documents available on record. The Magistrate truly was a silent spectator at the time of recording of preliminary evidence before summoning the appellants. The criminal law was set in motion by the Magistrate by mere asking to do so by the complainant. (Paras 27 and 34)

The High Court committed a manifest error in disposing of the petition filed by the appellants under Section 482 CrPC without even adverting to the basic facts which were placed before it for its consideration. It almost abdicated its duty in refusing to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, though the case on hand required its interference in order to prevent abuse of the process by a court subordinate to it. (Paras 28 and 35)

A clear case is made out requiring interference to secure the ends of justice. Hence, impugned order of the High Court is set aside and the criminal proceedings arising out of complaint case are quashed. (Paras 35 and 36). M.N. Ojha v. Alok Kumar Srivastav, (2009) 9 SCC 682: (2009) 82 AIC 134 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-8-2009]

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613, relied on

[7357] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Mala fides of complainant — Effect of — Held, mere fact that complainant is guilty of mala fides is no ground for quashing the proceedings — There may be exceptions to this rule

In fact, the question of mala fides in a case like the present is not at all relevant. If the complaint which is made is correct and offence has been committed which will have to be established in a court of law, it is of no significance that the complainant is a person who is inimical or that he is guilty of mala fides. If the ingredients which establish the commission of the offence or misconduct exist, then the prosecution cannot fail merely because there was an animus of the complainant or the prosecution against the accused. Allegations of mala fides may be relevant while judging the correctness of the allegations or while examining the evidence. But the mere fact that the complainant is guilty of mala fides, would be no ground for quashing the proceedings. There may be some exceptions to this rule. (Paras 37 and 38). Monica Kumar (Dr.) v. State of U.P., (2008) 8 SCC 781: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 649: AIR 2008 SC 2781: (2008) 67 AIC 106 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-5-2008]

Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 753: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 73: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 895, followed

Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; State of Maharashtra v. Ishwar Piraji Kalpatri, (1996) 1 SCC 542: 1996 SCC (Cri) 150; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on

[7358] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Inherent power of High Court — Mala fides of complainant — Effect of

The allegation of mala fides against the informant is of no consequence and cannot by itself be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Paras 8 and 9). State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539: AIR 2002 SC 671: 2002 Cri LJ 998: (2002) 2 CHN (Supp) 21.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.B. Shah, B.N. Agrawal and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-2002]

[7359] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Grounds — Complaint made on account of personal vendetta — Held, that by itself will not be a ground to discard the complaint which has to be tested and weighed after the evidence is collected (Para 9). M. Narayandas v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 11 SCC 251: 2004 SCC (Cri) 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

(11)(xii) Mala fides or animus of complainant (contd.)

[7360] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — Allegations of mala fides against informant, held, cannot by themselves be a ground for

When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in court which decides the fate of the accused person. The allegations of mala fides against the informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceeding. (Para 8). State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1805: AIR 2004 SC 3967.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2004]

State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192, relied on

[7361] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — Allegations of mala fides against informant, held, cannot by themselves be a ground for

When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in court which decides the fate of the accused person. The allegations of mala fides against the informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Para 10). Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283: AIR 2005 SC 9: 2005 Cri LJ 92.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-11-2004]

State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192, relied on

[7362] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — Allegations of mala fides against informant — Effect — Held, allegations of mala fides against the informant are inconsequential and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings

When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in the court which decides the fate of the accused person. The allegations of mala fides against the informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Para 11). State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272: (2006) 1 KLT 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-12-2005]

Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415; Satvinder Kaur v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (1999) 8 SCC 728: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1503; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401, relied on

[7363] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — Allegations of mala fides against informant, held, cannot by itself be a ground for

When an information is lodged at the police station and an offence is registered, then the mala fides of the informant would be of secondary importance. It is the material collected during the investigation and evidence led in the court which decide the fate of the accused person. The allegations of mala fides against the informant are of no consequence and cannot by itself be the basis for quashing the proceedings. (Para 11). State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353: AIR 2004 SC 517: 2004 Cri LJ 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2003]

State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192, relied on

[7364] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings by High Court — Allegation of mala fides against informant — Effect of — Allegations of cruelty, dowry demand by appellant wife — On facts, held, allegation of mala fides against informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A (Paras 10, 9 and 6)

The appellant wife, married Respondent 3, R on 1-7-1998, alleging mental and physical torture for dowry demands made a complaint alleging commission of offences punishable under Section 498-A IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (the Act). The police registered an FIR. In the suit for divorce filed by the husband, Family Court directed maintenance at the rate of Rs 2000 p.m. and the cost of litigation to be paid to the appellant. The appellant's father-in-law filed Miscellaneous Case No. 12 of 2001 questioning correctness of the maintenance order on the ground that the appellant's husband has no share in the ancestral property and maintenance cannot be paid out of it. Charge-sheet was filed on 12-8-2000. An application for discharge in terms of Section 239 CrPC was filed on 28-8-2001. The prayer was rejected on 7-9-2001 by SDJM. The Sessions Judge dismissed the revision application of the respondents. However, by the impugned order, the High Court quashed the proceedings initiated against Respondents 1 to 7, in purported exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Renu Kumari v. Sanjay Kumar, (2008) 12 SCC 346.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, distinguished

[7365] — Ss. 482, 154 and 157 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Grounds for — Mala fide criminal proceedings on vague assertions due to private and personal grudge of Respondent 1 (complainant) against appellant-accused — Respondent 1 arrested on account of the FIR lodged by appellants for theft of electricity — Respondent 1 instituting complaint case for bribery to wreak vengeance on the raiding party members (appellants) of the Bihar State Electricity Board — Complaint case lodged in February after Respondent 1 (complainant) was released on bail — Respondent 1 (complainant) not specifying date when the bribery was demanded by the appellants — Respondent 1 (complainant) not showing reason as to why he did not choose to proceed against one of the four co-accused (appellants) initially named — Institution of complaint case on account of private and personal grudge, held, is a fit case under Category (7) of Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 for quashing a complaint case in exercise of powers under S. 482 CrPC to prevent the abuse of process of court and secure the ends of justice — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 347, 161, 167, 385 and 511 — Constitution of India — Art. 226

On the basis of an FIR lodged by the raiding party of Bihar State Electricity Board, Respondent 1 was arrested for committing theft of electricity. After being released on bail on 7-1-1994, Respondent 1 filed a complaint case before the Magistrate on 11-2-1994 against the appellants and R (all members of the raiding party) alleging that they had demanded illegal gratification. Interestingly, no date of such demand was indicated in the complaint. When the Judicial Magistrate took the cognizance of the offences punishable under Sections 347, 161, 167, 385 and 511 IPC, the appellants and R filed petitions before the High Court questioning correctness of the order. The High Court dismissed the application filed by R while the application filed by appellants was pending. R moved the Supreme Court in SLP (Crl.) No. 3045 of 1996.

Supreme Court granted stay on 23-9-1996 and, therefore, proceedings before the trial court remained stayed. The special leave petition was disposed of on 17-7-1997. Since a statement was made before the Supreme Court by the complainant that he did not want to proceed against the petitioner in the special leave petition but he would like to continue the proceedings so far as the others are concerned, the proceedings were accordingly quashed qua the petitioner in the SLP. So far as the present appellants are concerned the High Court by the impugned order held that the Supreme Court had interfered because of the concession made and, therefore, no case for interference was made out.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Where a criminal proceeding (relating to cognizable offences) is manifestly attended with mala fides and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge it would come within Category (7) of rarest of rare cases as laid down in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 where the High Court may exercise its power under Section 482 CrPC to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The backgrounds clearly show that the proceedings instituted were mala fide, based on vague assertions and were initiated with mala fide intents and constitute sheer abuse of process of law. No reason was shown before the High Court as to why the complainant chose not to proceed against one of the four persons initially named. The High Court did not attach importance to the fact that the complaint was lodged in February 1994 and there was no date indicated as to when the alleged demand was made. The cases at hand fit in with Category (7) of Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335. (Paras 7, 8 and 5). Baijnath Jha v. Sita Ram, (2008) 8 SCC 77: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 428: AIR 2008 SC 2778.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-6-2008]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89, relied on

(11)(xii) Mala fides or animus of complainant (contd.)

[7366] — S. 482 and Ch. XV — Quashing of private complaint — Maliciously instituted proceedings to wreak vengeance on the accused [as per Category 7 in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335] — Applicability — Complaint case instituted by the father of the appellant-accused's earlier wife (frustrated with marriage, living separately and divorced) against appellant, his family members, subsequent wife and subsequent in-laws under Ss. 494, 120-B and 109 IPC r/w Ss. 3/4 of Dowry Act — Case instituted in 1994, allegations of dowry torture in 1992 and dowry demand by husband in 1993 — Appellant-accused's subsequent marriage on 2-3-1993 was after the time-limit for filing appeal against ex parte decree of divorce had expired — No specific allegation against other accused (except appellant-accused) though they were impleaded in the private complaint — In spite of service of notice none appeared on behalf of Respondent 1 (complainant) — Category 7 of Bhajan Lal case for quashing of complaint, on facts, held, applicable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 494, 120-B and 109 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 15

M, left her husband P and started living in her parental house. On 1-1-1993, an ex parte decreed for dissolution of marriage was passed against M on the ground of cruelty and harassment. After the time for filing appeal against the ex parte decree dated 1-1-1993 under Section 28(4) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 (the Marriage Act) expired on 31-1-1993, and no appeal was preferred, P married S on 2-3-1993. The respondent (M's father), thereafter, on 6-12-1994 filed a private complaint wherein all the appellants (P, his family members and in-laws) were arrayed as accused persons for offences punishable under Sections 494, 120-B and 109 IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (the Dowry Act). By the impugned order, the High Court rejected the Section 482 CrPC petition of the appellants on the ground that the trial court can be directed to conclude the trial expeditiously and at the time of framing charges, the appellants can raise such points as have been raised in the present dispute.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The present case appears to be one where Category 7 of the illustrations given in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 is clearly applicable. The parameters for exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC have been laid down by the Supreme Court in several cases. In the complaint filed, the allegation is that the dowry torture was made sometime in 1992. It has not been explained as to why for more than two years no action was taken. Apart from P (husband of M), his mother, mother's sister, S (subsequently married wife), brother-in-law and S's father were impleaded as parties. No role has been specifically ascribed to anybody except the husband and that too of a dowry demand in February 1993 when the complaint was filed on 6-12-1994 i.e. nearly after 22 months. It is to be noted that in spite of service of notice, none appeared on behalf of Respondent 1. The proceedings pending before the CJM, are, therefore, quashed. (Paras 8 to 13). Priya Vrat Singh v. Shyam Ji Sahai, (2008) 8 SCC 232: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 463: (2008) 5 All LJ 673: 2008 Cri LJ 4367.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-2008]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36, followed

Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

[7367] — S. 482 — Quashing of retaliatory FIR after filing of charge-sheet during trial — Permissibility — Accused on factual basis alleging FIR to be retaliatory — Such factual examination, held, is a matter of trial

It is also difficult to arrive at a positive decision that the FIR lodged by MA was only retaliatory in nature as he had not suffered any bullet injury. It is a matter of trial. Counsel for ME and S pleaded on the basis of statements made by MA in his examination under Section 313 CrPC wherein he raised a plea that he was not present at the place of occurrence. (Paras 37 and 22)

Contention of ME's and S's counsel that while filing a charge-sheet, the IO did not follow the Supreme Court's directions whereby and whereunder the investigating agency was directed to consider some report submitted by some person, is again not a matter to take which requires serious consideration at this stage. It does not appear that any such contention was raised before the High Court, the effect thereof must be considered by the courts at an appropriate stage. (Para 37). Manoj Narain Agrawal v. Shashi Agrawal, (2009) 6 SCC 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

[7368] — S. 482 — Quashment of proceedings — Inference that complainant only out to settle score with accused — Prima facie case established otherwise — Effect

Allowing the appeal,

Held:

It is now a well-settled principle of law that the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code may quash a criminal proceeding inter alia in the event the allegations made in the complaint petition even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not disclose commission of a cognizable offence. (Para 14)

The opinion of the High Court that the averments made in the complaint petition are imaginary is not based on any material. Even assuming that the complainant had a score to settle against the accused, the same by itself may not be a ground to quash the entire criminal proceedings particularly in view of the fact that at least a prima facie case has been established in view of the report of the Registrar. (Para 22)

The allegations made in the complaint petition disclose commission of a cognizable offence. A conspiracy is said to have been entered into for putting the Society and consequentially the members to a great loss. A conspiracy is also said to have been hatched for the aforementioned purpose as a result whereof not only an allotment was made in favour of a person who was not entitled thereto but also the allotted plot was assigned in favour of a third party for a huge sum. Whether the allegations made in the complaint petition are correct or not have to be considered during trial. It may be true that the question as to whether the report of the Registrar can be relied upon for the purpose of showing as to how the act of cheating has been committed by the respondents is a matter which must be considered at the time of trial but there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that so long as the report is not set aside, the same could form the basis for forming of an opinion at least for the purpose of proceeding against the respondents that they manipulated the records of the cooperative Society to make unlawful gain for themselves and causing unlawful loss to the Society. (Paras 16, 17 and 19). K. Ashoka v. N.L. Chandrashekar, (2009) 5 SCC 199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, followed

[7369] — Ss. 482, 190 and 200 — Criminal proceedings initiated with ulterior motive — Continuance of such proceedings — Impermissibility of — Ingredients for exercising power under Art. 226 and S. 482, to prevent abuse of process of any court or to secure ends of justice, restated — On facts, trial court taking cognizance of offence punishable under Ss. 406 and 420 IPC against appellants in a complaint filed by respondent — High Court declining to interfere under S. 482 CrPC with the order passed — Sustainability — Complaint nothing but abuse of process of law, being a counterblast to the proceedings initiated by appellants under S. 138, NI Act, 1881 against respondent — Held, perusal of complaint showed ulterior motive — Proceedings initiated by respondent clearly amounted to abuse of process of law — Hence, relying on Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, reiterating that where a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge, held, proceedings initiated before trial court, by the respondent, stand quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 2, 4, 18 to 20). Mahindra & Mahindra Financial Services Ltd. v. Rajiv Dubey, (2009) 1 SCC 706.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

(xiii) Quashment re private complaints

[7370] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Proceedings initiated pursuant to complaints made by private parties — Police authorities performing their statutory duties, and proceedings pending before courts of competent jurisdiction — High Court on examination of the matter, held, rightly came to the conclusion that those proceedings do not deserve to be quashed under S. 482 CrPC or under Art. 226 of the Constitution. Ahmed Noormohmed Bhatti v. State of Gujarat, (2005) 3 SCC 647: 2005 SCC (Cri) 794: AIR 2005 SC 2115: (2005) 2 KLT 769: 2005 Cri LJ 2157: (2005) 2 Guj LR 1402.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde, B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-2005]

[7371] — S. 482 — Existence of prima facie case upon inquiry — Magistrate initially not entertaining private complaint but later entertaining it because: (1) Sessions Court in revision finding prima facie case and directing further inquiry and High Court in revision clarifying that the inquiry should be under S. 398, and (2) Magistrate on holding such further inquiry by recording depositions of three witnesses finding that allegations were supported by evidence — High Court not interfering under S. 482 by holding that there was concurrent finding that complaint revealed a prima face case — Held, High Court committed no error in declining to interfere under S. 482 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 341, 323 and 506 — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, Ss. 3(1)(x) and (2)(vii) — Inherent powers of High Court — Quashment of proceedings — General grounds for quashment, Ss. 482, 398 and 274. Subrata Das v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 10 SCC 798.

(11)(xiii) Quashment re private complaints (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Markandey Katju and T.S. Thakur, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-2010]

Gurdial Singh v. Kartar Singh, 1980 Cri LJ 955 (P&H), referred to [7372] — S. 482 — Quashing of private complaint — Parameters and considerations — Case law cited. Priya Vrat Singh v. Shyam Ji Sahai, (2008) 8 SCC 232: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 463: (2008) 5 All LJ 673: 2008 Cri LJ 4367.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-2008]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36, followed

Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

[7373] — Ss. 482, 227 and 190 — Magistrate issuing process against more persons on the basis of private complaint — Power of High Court to interfere with such exercise of power — Propriety of High Court going into merits at such stage — Right of such accused to pray for discharge upon committal under S. 227. Hareram Satpathy v. Tikaram Agarwala, (1978) 4 SCC 58: 1978 SCC (Cri) 496: AIR 1978 SC 1568: 1978 Cri LJ 1687.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and P.S. Kailasam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-1978]

[7374] — Ss. 482 and 200 first proviso, 190(1)(a) & 204 — Private complaint in writing before Magistrate — Quashing of — Complaint must disclose all necessary facts constituting the offence alleged before taking cognizance of the offence — Complaint alleging that appellant in an interview published in a magazine made statements outraging religious feeling of Marwari community and alleging that the members of that community were not a class belonging to India, having no faith and love towards India and being traitors and enemies of India — Magistrate taking cognizance and issuing notice to appellant for appearance — Writ petition preferred by appellant before High Court — High Court quashing the complaint as not constituting offence under S. 295-A IPC and no appeal filed against the same — However, High Court also observing that prima facie the allegations constituted an offence under S. 500 IPC — Held, allegations do not disclose offence under S. 500 and hence Magistrate not justified in issuing process against the appellant — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 295-A and 500. Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, Faizan Uddin and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1996]

[7375] — S. 482 — Prayer for quashing complaint/FIR by complainant himself who alleged that he was pressurised to file said complaint — Complainant in police custody/police protection from 7-11-2005 to 9-11-2005 where alleged that he was forced to write the complaint against Arun Gulab Gawali gang on 8-11-2005 — His wife making an application before Magistrate for his release from police custody or his production before court on 9-11-2005 whereafter he was released — Again on 11-11-2005 she approaching State Human Rights Commission stating that her husband had been confined in police custody, tortured and was forcibly made to sign some papers — In such a fact situation, possibility that allegations made by complainant and his wife against police in their complaints/applications/writ petitions may be true, cannot be ruled out — Thus, it was a fit case, where in order to meet the ends of justice and to prevent miscarriage of criminal justice, the inherent powers of Court to quash FIR/complaint could have been exercised — Hence complaint quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 384, 386, 506 Pt. II, 120 and 34 (Paras 30 to 35). State of Maharashtra v. Arun Gulab Gawali, (2010) 9 SCC 701.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2010]

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Ajay Mitra v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 11: 2003 SCC (Cri) 703; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; Ganesh Narayan Hegde v. S. Bangarappa, (1995) 4 SCC 41: 1995 SCC (Cri) 634; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272; B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Bihar v. P.P. Sharma, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 222: 1992 SCC (Cri) 192; Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; M.N. Damani v. S.K. Sinha, (2001) 5 SCC 156: 2001 SCC (Cri) 823, relied on

[7376] — Ss. 482, 227 and 320 — Quashing of complaint at behest of complainant himself on ground that since complainant himself was not supporting prosecution case, there was no chance of securing conviction of accused, and thus, trial would be a futile exercise — Propriety — Nature of offence — Relevance — Proper forum to be approached in such a case — Held, quashing of FIR/complaint on such a ground cannot be held to be justified in law since offence committed is a crime against society and not against victim alone — Reliance on affidavits by High Court would be a weak, hazy and unreliable source for adjudication on the fate of a trial — Presumption that an accused would never be convicted on material available is too risky a proposition to be accepted readily, particularly in heinous offences like extortion — More so, it was not a case of civil nature where there could be a possibility of compromise or involving an offence which may be compoundable under S. 320 CrPC — Impugned judgment set aside on this ground — Complaint however quashed on other grounds

The High Court proceeded on the perception that as the complainant himself was not supporting the complaint, he would not support the case of the prosecution and there would be no chance of conviction, thus the trial itself would be a futile exercise. Quashing of FIR/complaint on such a ground cannot be held to be justified in law. Ordinarily, the Court of Session is empowered to discharge an accused under Section 227 CrPC even before initiating the trial. The accused can, therefore, move the trial court itself for such a relief and the trial court would be in a better position to analyse and pass an order as it is possessed of all the powers and the material to do so. It is, therefore, not necessary to invoke the jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC for the quashing of a prosecution in such a case. The reliance on affidavits by the High Court would be a weak, hazy and unreliable source for adjudication on the fate of a trial. The presumption that an accused would never be convicted on the material available is too risky a proposition to be accepted readily, particularly in heinous offences like extortion. (Para 27)

A claim founded on a denial by the complainant even before the trial commences coupled with an allegation that the police had compelled the lodging of a false FIR, is a matter which requires further investigation as the charge is levelled against the police. If the prosecution is quashed, then neither the trial court nor the investigating agency has any opportunity to go into this question, which may require consideration. An offence committed is a crime against society and not against the victim alone. The victim under undue pressure or influence of the accused or under any threat or compulsion may resile back but that would not absolve the State from bringing the accused to book. (Para 28)

Thus, while exercising powers under Section 482 the Court has to act cautiously before proceeding to quash a prosecution in respect of an offence which hits and affects the society at large. Quashment is warranted where no other view is possible nor any investigation or inquiry is further required. There cannot be a general proposition of law, so as to fit in as a straitjacket formula for the exercise of such power. Each case will have to be judged on its own merit and the facts warranting exercise of such power. More so, it was not a case of civil nature where there could be a possibility of compromise or involving an offence which may be compoundable under Section 320 CrPC. (Para 29). State of Maharashtra v. Arun Gulab Gawali, (2010) 9 SCC 701.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-8-2010]

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234, referred to

(xiv) Errors of procedure by courts/ authorities below

See also '(11)(xi) Lack of jurisdiction of court/forum below', above

[7377] — S. 482 — Where criminal proceedings are initiated on the basis of illicit material collected on search and arrest which are per se illegal and vitiate the trial itself, power under S. 482 can be exercised to quash the proceedings as continuance of such proceedings would amount to abuse of process of the court

The power under Section 482 CrPC has to be exercised by the High Court, inter alia, to prevent the abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Where criminal proceedings are initiated based on illicit material collected on search and arrest which are per se illegal and vitiate not only a conviction and sentence based on such material but also the trial itself, the proceedings cannot be allowed to go on as it cannot but amount to abuse of the process of the court; in such a case not quashing the proceedings would perpetuate abuse of the process of the court resulting in great hardship and injustice to the accused. So, exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC to quash proceedings in a case like the one on hand, would indeed secure the ends of justice. (Para 18). Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42: AIR 2001 SC 137.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2000]

(11)(xiv) Errors of procedure by courts/authorities below (contd.)

[7378] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings by High Court when not justified — Complaint case against three persons in respect of same offence for which police challan filed only against one person — Allegation in complaint that first informant gave names of three persons but police issued charge-sheet only against one person — Held, High Court erred in quashing complaint case without appreciating grievance of the complainant. Manikandan v. Pandian, 1989 Supp (2) SCC 648: 1990 SCC (Cri) 203.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jagannatha Shetty and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-8-1989]

[7379] — Ss. 482, 190 & 204 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Ground — Magistrate issuing process without following the procedure and applying his mind — Held, in such a case the High Court should not have quashed the complaint itself — It should have quashed the order issuing process and directed the Magistrate to reconsider the matter and proceed in accordance with law (Paras 3 and 4). Narmada Prasad Sonkar v. Sardar Avtar Singh Chabara, (2006) 9 SCC 601: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 350.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-3-2006]

[7380] — Ss. 482, 190(1)(b), 204, 173, 169 and 362 — Refusal to exercise power under S. 482 — Propriety — Magistrate by mistake taking cognizance and issuing summons against appellants where police did not find their involvement in the case — Thereafter, on petition of appellants, Magistrate directing to strike off their names from the array of the accused persons — Sessions Judge setting aside the said order holding that the Magistrate did not have any power to recall its earlier order — Challenge to, before High Court — High Court declining to exercise power under S. 482 and confirming the order of Sessions Judge — Considering the facts, held, High Court was not justified in doing so

In the present case, the police submitted charge-sheet against accused H and S. In that charge-sheet three of the accused ladies were found to be not involved in the case. When the charge-sheet was placed before the Magistrate, he took cognizance of the offence and directed issuance of processes against H and S and ladies M and R on the ground that there was a prima facie case against them for the offences punishable under Sections 341, 323 and 435 read with Section 34 IPC. The appellants M and R filed a petition before the Magistrate concerned praying therein that due to clerical error the names of the appellants had also been mentioned in the said order and cognizance was taken and summons were issued against them. The Magistrate heard the matter and ordered to strike off their names. This order was challenged before the Sessions Judge who set aside the order holding that the Magistrate did not have any power, muchless inherent power to recall or review his earlier order. The petition filed under Section 482 CrPC against the order of the Sessions Judge came to be dismissed on the ground that the subordinate court could not have recalled its own order under Section 362 CrPC on the pretext that there was correction of clerical and arithmetical errors.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court was not justified in rejecting the application in terms of Section 482 of the Code. This is a case when the cognizance was taken, summons were issued by mistake and the names of the appellants were also mentioned in the order. Since the police have not found any material against the appellants, the CJM without following the procedure as indicated herein could not have directed issuance of summons so far as they are concerned. There was no indication that the CJM disagreed with the opinion of the investigating agency and therefore ordered issuance of summons. On the contrary, as noted by the CJM later that it was a mistake and, therefore, he had ordered to strike off the names of the appellants. The High Court's order is set aside. The names of the appellants shall be struck off from the array of accused persons. (Para 21). Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310: AIR 2006 SC 1937: 2006 Cri LJ 2468: (2006) 2 KLT 588: (2006) 3 Guj LR 2013.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-4-2006]

[7381] — Ss. 482 and 156(3) — Quashing of proceedings by High Court — Exercise of discretionary power — Principles — Allegations in the complaint petition to be examined with regard to correct statutory provision vis-à-vis conduct of parties — Magistrate ordering police investigation under S. 156(3) CrPC without applying mind on these principles — Magistrate not considering the bona fide mistake of respondent Directors in publishing the prospectus of the company — Therefore, quashing of the proceedings by High Court upheld — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B, 177, 181, 191, 192, 425 and 500

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The jurisdiction of the High Court to quash an FIR in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC is well known. The Court may not enter into determination of a disputed question of fact at that stage. It may, however, take note of the allegations made in the complaint petition vis-à-vis the conduct of the parties. Allegations contained in the complaint petition, as noticed by the Magistrate, may give rise to tortious liability on the part of the Bank. Principal allegations were made against the Bank. Who had acted on behalf of the Bank was not disclosed. The acts of omission and commission on the part of the Bank, if any, by withholding export bills of the Bank may give rise to a statutory violation on its part but the respondents were not personally liable therefor. (Paras 6 and 11)

IPC does not contain any provision for attaching vicarious liability on the part of the Managing Director or the Directors of the Company when the accused is the Company. The learned Magistrate failed to pose unto himself the correct question viz. as to whether the complaint petition, even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety, would lead to the conclusion that the respondents were personally liable for any offence. The Bank is a body corporate. Vicarious liability of the Managing Director and Director would arise provided any provision exists in that behalf in the statute. Statutes indisputably must contain provision fixing such vicarious liabilities. Even for the said purpose, it is obligatory on the part of the complainant to make requisite allegations which would attract the provisions constituting vicarious liability. (Para 13)

In the prospectus, a bona fide mistake had been committed. The fact that such a mistake had been committed stood accepted. The statement that the matter was pending before DRT instead and place of the City Civil Court, Ahmedabad, per se, could not be said to be defamatory as the fact that a suit was pending for recovery of the huge amount was neither denied nor disputed. (Para 14)

The Chief Judicial Magistrate noticed that the Bank deceived the Company by filing false suit before DRT by making false submissions and producing false affidavit. Hence the complaint necessitated investigation by the police. Whether such a suit is maintainable and/or is ultimately to be decreed or disposed of is a question which has to be gone into in the suit itself. A criminal court cannot even take that factor into consideration. (Paras 10 and 14)

Where a jurisdiction is exercised on a complaint petition filed in terms of Section 156(3) or Section 200 CrPC, the Magistrate is required to apply his mind. Summoning of an accused in a criminal case is a serious matter. Criminal law cannot be set into motion as a matter of course. The Magistrate has to carefully scrutinise the evidence brought on record and may even himself put questions to the complainant and his witnesses to elicit answers to find out the truthfulness of the allegations or otherwise and then examine if any offence is prima facie committed by all or any of the accused. (Paras 13 and 15). Maksud Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 692: (2007) 140 Comp Cas 590: (2007) 59 AIC 139 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-9-2007]

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400, relied on [7382] — Ss. 482 & 204 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Offence by company — Non-application of mind in issuing summons — On the basis of a complaint, cognizance of offence under Ss. 24 and 25, punishable under Ss. 43 and 44 r/w S. 47 of Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 taken and issue of process ordered by Judicial Magistrate against appellant-directors of a company — No allegation made in the complaint or in the statement recorded by the Magistrate before issue of summons that the offence was committed by the company with the consent or connivance, of or was attributable to any negligence on the part of the appellants as required under S. 47(2) of the Act — Further, sample of water was taken immediately after the Factory Manager of the company had informed the Board that FRP lining provided in the oil and grease trap of the effluent treatment plant having got damaged at some places, the tank had to be shut down temporarily and would be restarted soon after repair/replacement — Held, summons was issued without application of mind and Judicial Magistrate committed error in issuing the same hence liable to be set aside — In view of the special facts and circumstances of the case, question regarding conflict, if any, between decisions of Supreme Court in Municipal Corpn. of Delhi v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi and State of Haryana v. Brij Lal Mittal on the one hand and in U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Modi Distillery on the other hand need not be considered — Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974, Ss. 43, 44 r/w 47 and 24 & 25. Nalin Thakor v. State of Gujarat, (2003) 12 SCC 461.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and S.B. Sinha and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

Distinguished in U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Dr. Bhupendra Kumar Modi, (2009) 2 SCC 147

(11)(xv) Quashment of proceedings

(xv) Other specific grounds for quashment

[7383] — S. 482 — Technical offence — Sample of Pan Masala and Mouth Freshner found to contain saccharin to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. which was in violation of R. 47, PFA Rules as then existing — Rule valid and operative at the relevant time — Hence initiation of criminal cases against accused cannot be held to be without jurisdiction — Prima facie case made out — Petition for quashing the complaint rightly dismissed by the High Court — However, in view of the revised standard the addition of saccharin in Pan Masala and Mouth Freshner to the extent of 2000 and 2450 cannot be said to be injurious to health — Hence appellants have committed only technical offence — In special facts of the case criminal cases against the appellants are quashed on payment of costs at Rs 7500 in each of the appeals — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, Ss. 7/16 — Technical breach — Constitution of India, Art. 142 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, 1955, R. 47 (as it stood prior to 1993 amendment)

In this case it was contended that even if addition of saccharin to the extent as stated to have been found by the analyst is accepted to have been correctly determined, such addition, as a matter of fact, was neither injurious to health nor it degenerated the articles sold so that they could be branded as adulterated food. The ban on the use of saccharin in pan masala and mouth freshner was imposed on a misconception and erroneous view of its injurious effect on human system. But later on, it has been accepted by the rule-making authority that use of saccharin to the extent of 8000 p.p.m. in pan masala will not be harmful for human consumption and Rule 47 of the Rules has been amended. As use of saccharin to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. was not injurious to health at any point of time, it must be held that even before amendment of Rule 47 such use of saccharin to the above extent did not constitute an offence for adulterating food with substances injurious to health.

Held :

At the relevant time, saccharin content in pan masala and mouth freshner to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. as found by the analyst was not permissible under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules. Rule 47 was valid and operative at the relevant time. Hence, there had been violation of the Food Adulteration Act and the Rules framed thereunder in selling pan masala and mouth freshner with saccharin content to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. Hence, the complaints made by the Health Department of Delhi Administration and initiation of criminal cases against the accused cannot be held to be without justification. It cannot also be contended that on the face of the complaint, no offence was prima facie committed. Hence, the impugned decision of the High Court in dismissing the applications under Section 482 CrPC cannot be held to be unjustified.

Even if the complaint is accepted to be correct, the only offence committed by the appellants amounts to technical violation of the mandate of Rule 47 for adding saccharin to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. in the Chutki Pan Masala and Mouth Freshner. Such addition of saccharin cannot be held to be injurious to health because, considering later findings on research and analysis on the effect of saccharin on human system, addition of saccharin to the extent of 8000 p.p.m. in pan masala has been allowed by amending Rule 47. The articles sold are not alleged to be injurious to health and such allegations, even if made, cannot be accepted. There is no allegation that any other injurious substance was added to the articles sold making them potentially health hazards. It is also not the case that pan masala and mouth freshner were of inferior quality and substandard. In a case like this, the offence committed is on account of technical violation of Rule 47. It should be emphasised that strict adherence to Prevention of Food Adulteration Act and Rules framed thereunder should be insisted and enforced for safeguarding the interest of consumers of articles of food.

The trial of the accused persons directed to be quashed on payment of costs at Rs 7500 in each of the appeals as on conviction of the appellants in the criminal cases initiated against them, such fine would have met the ends of justice. Krishan Gopal Sharma v. Govt. of N.C.T. of Delhi, (1996) 4 SCC 513.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1996]

Pyarali K. Tejani v. Mahadeo Ramchandra Dange, (1974) 1 SCC 167: 1974 SCC (Cri) 87: (1974) 2 SCR 154, followed

[7384] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint/FIR — Grounds — Exoneration in departmental proceeding on identical charge — Charge of acquisition of assets disproportionate to income — Appellant exonerated in departmental proceeding in the light of report of the Central Vigilance Commission and concurred by the Union Public Service Commission — Basis of criminal charge being valuation of the appellant's house which the CBI fixed at Rs 7,69,300 as against the earlier valuation by the Income Tax Department at Rs 4.67 lakhs —

Both the reports given by the same engineers — Allegation of overwritings and alteration in subsequent report submitted by the CBI for which the appellant filing complaint under S. 340 CrPC for taking cognizance against officer concerned — Held, appellant's case falls in more than one head of guidelines laid down in Bhajan Lal case for quashing of a complaint/FIR — Hence prosecution of the appellant under S. 5(2) read with S. 5(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 is liable to be quashed — Conduct of the CBI deprecated — Constitution of India — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) read with S. 5(1)(e)

The appellant was appointed as Inspector in the Income Tax Service in the year 1961. His wife was also a teacher. She was allotted a plot in the year 1980 for a sum of Rs 20,000 by Steel Authority of India Ltd. (SAIL). As per terms and conditions imposed by SAIL, shops in the ground floor and residence at first floor were constructed by the appellant with his earnings as well as the earnings of his wife. The construction was strictly under the supervision and on the drawings supplied freely by SAIL township authority. Subsequently the building was valued by SAIL township engineer at Rs 4.75 lakhs. The appellant in the meanwhile got promotion and was functioning as Income Tax Officer. The CBI filed a charge-sheet against the appellant on 31-7-1989 and the main basis for this charge-sheet was the valuation of the appellant's house which the CBI fixed at Rs 7,69,300 as against the earlier valuation by the Income Tax Department at Rs 4.67 lakhs. The engineers who prepared the valuation report for income tax purposes also prepared the report for the CBI and there was no indication as to why there was a difference in the value of the property. In the departmental enquiry conducted by the Central Vigilance Commission the Commission submitted a report exonerating the appellant of all the charges. The Department forwarded the report of the Central Vigilance Commission for the opinion of the Union Public Service Commission. By a long report, the Union Public Service Commission concurred with the conclusion of exonerating the appellant of all the charges. Accepting the report of the Union Public Service Commission, the President passed the final orders in favour of the appellant. The appellant moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the cognizance of charge as mentioned above. This time the High Court dismissed the petition holding that the issues raised before it have to be gone into in the final proceedings and those cannot be raised at the preliminary stage. On appeal Held :

The standard of proof required to establish the guilt in a criminal case is far higher than the standard of proof required to establish the guilt in the departmental proceedings. In the instant case the charge in the departmental proceedings and in the criminal proceedings is one and the same. If the charge which is identical could not be established in a departmental proceedings and in view of the admitted discrepancies in the reports submitted by the valuers one wonders what is there further to proceed against the appellant in criminal proceedings.

The appellant's case can be brought under more than one head of guidelines laid down in Bhajan Lal case for quashing of a complaint/FIR.

The High Court was not right in taking the view that the issues raised had to be gone into in the final proceedings and the Report of the Central Vigilance Commission, exonerating the appellant of the same charge in departmental proceedings would not conclude the criminal case against the appellant. P.S. Rajya v. State of Bihar, (1996) 9 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-1996]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

Distinguished in State v. M. Krishna Mohan, (2007) 14 SCC 667*

[7385] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Material collected by investigating agency not gone through by High Court — Offences under Ss. 420, 201 r/w S. 120-B IPC as well as under Ss. 13(1) and 13(2), Prevention of Corruption Act — Proceedings quashed by High Court on the ground that accused persons have been exonerated of the charges in departmental proceedings conducted for the same cause of action — Held, before quashing the proceedings, High Court ought to have considered the aforesaid material so as to find out if the charges could be framed against the accused on the basis of it — Order passed by High Court set aside — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 201 r/w S. 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1) and 13(2). State of Bihar v. Purushottam Singh, (2002) 10 SCC 333.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2000]

[7386] — S. 482 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot hold a parallel trial in exercise of power under — If offence prima facie falls under the Penal Code, launching of prosecution cannot be thwarted by High Court under S. 482 merely because penal action open under any other statute — Cognizance of offence taken by

(11)(xv) Other specific grounds for quashment (contd.)

Magistrate under S. 409 IPC against managing director and directors (appellants) of a public limited company on the basis of charge-sheet submitted by CBI and other material prima facie disclosing dishonest misappropriation of share and debenture moneys collected from public — Application filed by appellants under S. 482 seeking their discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act — Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 409, 420 and 405 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 69, 63 and 73

Though the Companies Act contains provisions regarding the issuance of prospectus, applications for shares and allotment thereof and provides different checks over the misuse of the fund collected from the public for issuance of shares or debentures, but where persons issue prospectus and collect moneys from public assuring them that they intend to do business with the public money for their benefit and the benefit of such public, but the real intention is to do no business other than collecting the moneys from the public for their personal gain, such persons cannot be said to be immune from the provisions of the Penal Code. The persons managing the affairs of such company cannot use the juristic entity and corporate personality of the company as a shield to evade themselves from prosecution for offences under the Penal Code, if it is established that primary object of the incorporation and existence of the Company is to defraud the public.

But, at the same time, while taking cognizance of alleged offences in connection with the registration, issuance of prospectus, collection of moneys from the investors and the misappropriation of the fund collected from the shareholders which constitute one offence or other under the Penal Code, court must be satisfied that prima facie an offence under the Penal Code has been disclosed on the materials produced before the court. For prosecution for offences under the Penal Code the complainant has to make out a prima facie case against the individuals concerned, regarding their acts and omissions which constitute the different ingredients of the offences under the Penal Code. There is a basic difference between the offences under the Penal Code and acts and omissions which have been made punishable under different Acts and statutes which are in nature of social welfare legislations. For framing charges in respect of those acts and omissions, in many cases, mens rea is not an essential ingredient; the concerned statute imposes a duty on those who are in charge of the management, to follow the statutory provisions and once there is a breach or contravention, such persons become liable to be punished.

In the facts of the present case itself, the prosecution has to prove that the appellant as promotors or directors, had dishonest intention since the very beginning while collecting the moneys from the applicants for the shares and debentures or that having collected such moneys they dishonestly misappropriated the same. The ingredients of the different offences under the Penal Code need not be proved only by direct evidence: they can be shown from the circumstances of a particular case that the intention of the promotors or the directors was dishonest since the very inception or that they developed such intention at some stage, for their wrongful gain and causing wrongful loss to the investors. All the circumstances and the materials to prove such a charge have to be collected during the investigation and inquiry and ultimately have to be produced before the court at the stage of trial for a verdict as to whether the ingredients of offence in question have been established on behalf of the prosecution.

In the present case the quashing of the prosecution pending against the appellants only on the ground that it was open to the applicants for shares to take recourse to the provisions of the Companies Act, cannot be accepted. It is a futile attempt on the part of the appellants, to close the chapter before it has unfolded itself. It will be for the trial court to examine the matter on the materials produced on behalf of the prosecution. That exercise cannot be performed either by the High Court or by the Supreme Court. The trial court should proceed with the case in accordance with law.

The High Court should not, while exercising power under S. 482 of the Code, usurp the jurisdiction of the trial court. The power under S. 482 of the Code has been vested in the High Court to quash a prosecution which amounts to abuse of the process of the court. But that power cannot be exercised by the High Court to hold a parallel trial, only on basis of the statements and documents collected during investigation or inquiry, for purpose of expressing an opinion whether the accused concerned is likely to be punished if the trial is allowed to proceed. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

[7387] — Ss. 482 & 321 — Petition under, for quashing of criminal proceedings — Govt.'s decision to withdraw the prosecution, held, not a relevant ground for quashing the proceedings by High Court — Application under S. 321, if filed, would be dealt with by the trial court — Further direction given by High Court to police and Magistrate not to prosecute the petitioner, held, was without jurisdiction — When High Court's judgment and order quashing the criminal proceedings found to be unsustainable, question of remanding the matter to it for consideration of the petition under S. 482 on merits does not arise

The appellant, working as Agricultural Development Officer (Enforcement) in the Deptt. of Agriculture, filed an FIR against the respondents alleging commission of criminal acts punishable under Sections 382, 353, 506, 186 IPC when he along with the staff had gone to check the stock register and quality of goods sold by them. On the same day the two accused concerned sent complaints to the State Government alleging among other things, demand of bribe and consequent harassment meted out by the appellant to them for non-payment of bribe. On that basis, the Government initiated certain inquiries and based on the report received on such inquiries the opinion of the District Attorney was sought who recommended filing of an application under Section 321 CrPC for withdrawal of the prosecution. The State also consulted the Additional Public Prosecutor who was appearing in the trial, who also recommended the withdrawal of the prosecution. During pendency of the investigation the respondents filed petitions under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court. In view of the order of stay granted by the High Court in the quashing proceedings the proposed framing of the charge by the trial court could not be proceeded with. When the High Court was seized of the petitions, a statement was made on behalf of the State that a decision had been taken by the Govt. to withdraw the complaint. When Section 321 application was still pending, the High Court by the impugned orders quashed the criminal proceedings against the respondents and directed the police authorities and the Magistrate not to prosecute the respondent-petitioners.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

What is pending before the High Court was a quashing petition filed under Section 482 CrPC wherein the scope of interference by the High Court is quite restricted. In such a petition accepting a statement made by the counsel for the State, the High Court could not have quashed the petition solely on that ground. It could only have quashed the petition if it came to the conclusion that the complaint of the appellant did not make out a triable case against the petitioners before it. The decision of the Government to withdraw the prosecution is an irrelevant ground so far as the High Court is concerned to allow a petition for quashing. It is rather surprising why further directions were issued by the High Court to the police and the Magistrate not to prosecute the petitioners once it quashed the complaint. The direction issued in the impugned order by the High Court is wholly without jurisdiction even under Section 482 CrPC. The High Court ought to have noticed the fact that but for the grant of stay order, there was a possibility of the trial court even framing charge against the respondents-accused when the case was listed for the said purpose in which event there could have been room for argument that even a Section 321 petition would not be maintainable. (Para 9)

Since the impugned judgment of the High Court is held to be unsustainable, it is not possible to accept the submission that in the interest of justice the Supreme Court should remand the matter back to the High Court to consider the quashing petition on merits. (Para 10)

It is also not possible to accept the further submission that a direction may be given to the Magistrate to dispose of the application filed by the Additional Assistant Public Prosecutor under Section 321 CrPC for withdrawing the prosecution. On the material on record it is not clear whether such an application has already been filed or not. Assuming that such an application is filed, then such an application will have to be dealt with by the trial court in accordance with law. Any direction from the Court at this stage would only hinder an independent application of mind by the court concerned if and when such application is taken up for consideration. Therefore, without expressing any opinion on the merits of the complaint filed by the appellant or the application for withdrawal filed or to be filed by the Additional Assistant Public Prosecutor under Section 321 CrPC, it is prudent to merely quash the impugned order of the High Court and leave the parties to pursue their remedies available in law. (Para 10). Balkar Singh v. Jagdish Kumar, (2005) 3 SCC 186: 2005 SCC (Cri) 689: AIR 2005 SC 1567: 2005 Cri LJ 1712.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-2005]

Taherakhatoon v. Salambin Mohd., (1999) 2 SCC 635, distinguished

(11)(xv) Other specific grounds for quashment (contd.)

[7388] — Ss. 482 and 320 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot advert to case diary, or rely upon letter addressed by parties to officer-in-charge of police station and quash the prosecution on ground that parties had settled their dispute — Offences under Ss. 467, 468 and 471 IPC are not compoundable — Respondent ready to transfer the amount in question to bank — Hence, it would not be expedient to allow the prosecution to continue — Direction made to the bank not to disburse the said amount except under orders of court of competent jurisdiction — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 467, 468 and 471. Karpoori Thakur v. Baikunth Nath Dey, 1990 Supp SCC 136: 1990 SCC (Cri) 642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1988]

[7389] — S. 482 — Inherent power of High Court to quash criminal proceedings — Repayment of loan under settlement — Effect — Held, the same did not exempt the accused persons (respondents herein) from criminal proceedings on account of forgery, cheating, corruption, etc. (Para 46). CBI v. A. Ravishankar Prasad, (2009) 6 SCC 351.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2009]

[7390] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Against person not alleged to have committed any offence but incidentally involved — Respondent's husband, an advocate fraudulently inducing complainant and her deceased husband to sign a power of attorney in his favour — Power of attorney used for executing sale deed in favour of his wife, the respondent — Appellants filing FIR against husband and wife (respondents) under Ss. 409, 420, 423 IPC — Quashing of criminal charges by High Court against both respondents — Sustainability — Held, regarding appeal in which V, wife of R, is the respondent, there is no material whatsoever either mentioned in the FIR or produced by the prosecution to show that she was in any way involved in the alleged criminal offence committed by her husband R — The only allegation against her is that the sale deed was in her favour — This does not prima facie make out any offence — She has been roped in only with the aid of S. 120-B which is also not substantiated — Criminal proceeding against V was rightly quashed by High Court and the criminal appeal in which she is respondent dismissed

Disposing of the appeal in terms below,

Held :

Per Katju, J.

Judgment of the High Court cannot be sustained so far as it has quashed the complaint and proceedings against accused husband R, but it has to be sustained so far as it relates to his wife V. (Para 10)

While there were certain rulings of two-Judge Benches of this Court, which had held that the findings in a civil suit are binding in a criminal case on the same facts but not vice versa, this view appears to have been somewhat watered down in the subsequent decisions of the larger Benches of this Court. The law as to when criminal proceedings can be quashed by the High Court in exercise of powers under Section 482 CrPC or Article 226 of the Constitution has been laid down by the Supreme Court. (Paras 12 and 13)

The allegations in the FIR if treated to be correct prima facie make out an offence against the respondent's husband R. (Para 14)

An appeal is pending against the judgment in the civil suit. The evidence of D is a very detailed one and some contradictory statements appear to have been given by him e.g. that the amount was paid by R as a loan, and this contradicts the version that the money was paid as a sale consideration. In the judgment of the civil court it has been held that undue influence cannot be ruled out. In these circumstances it cannot be said that at this stage the proceedings in the criminal case were totally mala fide and with ulterior motive. (Para 17)

The pleas which the respondent R took before the High Court could be taken by him at the time of the trial, and it would not be proper to pre-empt the criminal proceeding at this stage. Serious allegations have been made against him in the FIR. The relation of a lawyer and his client is like a fiduciary relationship, and the lawyer has to act in the interest of his client. However, it is alleged in the FIR that R deceived the complainant and her husband. These are matters which the trial court in the criminal case should look into, and no opinion is being expressed either way on this question. However, this was not a fit case for quashing of the criminal proceedings against R in exercise of the powers under Section 482 CrPC or Article 226 of the Constitution. (Para 18)

In Debendra Nath Padhi case, (2005) 1 SCC 568 it has been observed that the width of the powers of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC and Article 226 of the Constitution is unlimited whereunder in the interests of justice the High Court can make such orders as may be necessary to prevent abuse of the process of the Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice within the parameters laid down in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335. (Para 20)

It is well settled that a judgment of the Court has not to be treated as Euclid's formula. While it is true that ordinarily defence material cannot be looked into by the court while framing of the charge in view of Debendra Nath Padhi case, (2005) 1 SCC 568 there may be some very rare and exceptional cases where some defence material when shown to the trial court would convincingly demonstrate that the prosecution version is totally absurd or preposterous, and in such very rare cases the defence material can be looked into by the court at the time of framing of the charges or taking cognizance. It cannot be said as an absolute proposition that under no circumstances can the court look into the material produced by the defence at the time of framing of the charges, though this should be done in very rare cases i.e. where the defence produces some material which convincingly demonstrates that the whole prosecution case is totally absurd or totally concocted. (Paras 21 and 22)

In this case it cannot be said that the evidence in the civil suit which was produced by the defence before the trial court established convincingly that the prosecution case is totally absurd or preposterous. This is a matter which has to be looked into by the trial court. However, the trial court will not be influenced by any observations made in this judgment. (Paras 23 and 25)

As regards the other criminal appeal in which V, wife of R, is the respondent, there is no material whatsoever either mentioned in the FIR or produced by the prosecution to show that V was in any way involved in the alleged criminal offence committed by her husband R. The only allegation against her is that the sale deed was in her favour. This does not prima facie make out any offence. Criminal proceeding against V was rightly quashed by the High Court. (Para 26)

Per Kabir, J. (concurring)

Section 227 CrPC, which is in Chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which deals with trials before a Court of Session, relates to the opening stages of a trial at the time of framing of charge against the accused which is done under Section 228. The aforesaid provision has fallen for consideration of this Court in several cases on the question as to whether at the stage of framing of charge, the court in seisin of the matter is required to consider any material, other than that indicated in the section. (Paras 29 and 30)

Till 1996, the consistent view which had been taken by the Supreme Court was that at the time of framing of charge the trial court can consider only such materials as are placed by the investigating agency having regard to the very language of Section 227. At that stage, the defence could only be heard but could not be given an opportunity to produce evidence for the consideration of the court. However, a different view was expressed by a two-Judge Bench of this Court in Satish Mehra case, (1996) 9 SCC 766. It was because of this discordant note that in Debendra Nath Padhi case, (2005) 1 SCC 568 an order was passed referring the said question to a larger Bench and the same was taken up for consideration in the said case itself by a three-Judge Bench. (Para 31)

It may be noted that no provision in the Code gives the accused the right to file any material or document at the stage of framing of charge. The right is only granted at the stage of the trial. (Para 33)

The larger Bench (in Debendra Nath Padhi case) made a conscious distinction between a proceeding under Section 227 CrPC before the trial court and a proceeding under Section 482 CrPC and made a reference to the Court's power to consider material other than those produced by the prosecution in a proceeding under Section 482 CrPC. While holding that the decision rendered in Satish Mehra case, (1996) 9 SCC 766 was erroneous, the larger Bench held that if the submission that the accused would be entitled to produce materials and documents in proof of his innocence at the stage of framing of charge, was to be accepted, it would be unsettling a law well settled over a hundred years. Section 227 only means hearing the submissions of the accused on the records of the case filed by the prosecution and documents submitted therewith and nothing more. The larger Bench arrived at a definite conclusion that the expression "hearing the submissions of the accused" cannot mean an opportunity to file material to be granted to the accused and thereby changing the settled law. At the stage of framing of charge, hearing the submissions of the accused has to be confined to the material produced by the police. (Para 36)

The larger Bench (in Debendra Nath Padhi case) did not leave any scope for a different interpretation of the provisions of Section 227 as is now being made. However, the larger Bench did indicate that the width of the powers of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC and Article 226 of the Constitution is unlimited whereunder in the interest of justice the High Court could make such order as may be required to secure the ends of justice and to prevent abuse of the process of any court. (Para 37)

(11)(xvi) Defence case when to be considered/Accused heard at stage of quashment

There is no scope for the accused to produce any evidence in support of the submissions made on his behalf at the stage of framing of charge and only such materials as are indicated in Section 227 CrPC can be taken into consideration by the Magistrate at that stage. However, in a proceeding taken therefrom under Section 482 CrPC the court is free to consider material that may be produced on behalf of the accused to arrive at a decision whether the charge as framed could be maintained. This appears to be the intention of the legislature in wording Sections 227 and 228 the way in which they have been worded and as explained in Debendra Nath Padhi case by the larger Bench therein to which the very same question had been referred. (Para 38)

The complaint made in this case does make out a prima facie case against the accused R and the cognizance taken by the Magistrate cannot be faulted and the appeal as far as he is concerned, must be allowed. However, even prima facie, none of the offences referred to in the charge-sheet can be made out against the accused V and she has been roped in only with the aid of Section 120-B which is also not substantiated. The appeal as far as she is concerned, must be dismissed. (Para 39). Rukmini Narvekar v. Vijaya Satardekar, (2008) 14 SCC 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir[2] and Markandey Katju[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-2008]

State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568: 2005 SCC (Cri) 415, followed

Satish Mehra v. Delhi Admn., (1996) 9 SCC 766: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1104, held, overruled

(xvi) Defence case when to be considered/ Accused heard at stage of quashment

[7391] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Quashing of charge — Whether material produced on behalf of or at the instance of the accused can be considered — Held, for such purpose it has to be kept in mind that after the stage of framing charge evidence has to be led on behalf of the prosecution to prove the charge if an accused pleads not guilty to the charge and/or charges and claims to be tried — It is only in exceptional circumstances enumerated in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 that a criminal proceeding may be quashed to secure the ends of justice, but such a stage will come only after evidence is led (Para 18). Bharat Parikh v. CBI, (2008) 10 SCC 109: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 609: (2008) 69 AIC 156 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3540.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-7-2008]

[7392] — Ss. 482, 190 and 200 — Defence raised by appellant-accused, whether can be entertained in a petition under S. 482 — Determination of — Complaint by respondent firm, a yarn manufacturer, against Appellant 1, a general merchant and commission agent for various food items also dealing in cotton as commission agent, and Appellant 2, his wife and partner, for cheating/fraud in a dispute relating to payment and supply of cotton bales for manufacturing yarn — Held, while entertaining petition under S. 482, materials furnished by defence cannot be looked into and can be entertained only at the time of trial — When there are prima facie materials available (against accused), a petition for quashing criminal proceedings cannot be entertained — Investigating agency should have freedom to go into whole gamut of allegations and to reach a conclusion of its own — Pre-emption of such investigation would be justified only in very extreme cases — Instant case is not one of those extreme cases where criminal prosecution could be quashed by the Court at the very threshold — Appellant-defendants would have ample opportunity to raise all issues urged herein at an appropriate later stage, where such pleas would be and could be properly analysed and scrutinised — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B, 406, 420 and 384 (Paras 18 to 20). Ravindra Kumar Madhanlal Goenka v. Rugmini Ram Raghav Spinners (P) Ltd., (2009) 11 SCC 529: AIR 2009 SC 2383: 2009 Cri LJ 2852.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-4-2009]

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49, distinguished

[7393] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint — When not warranted — Reliance on defence material if proper — Quashing of criminal charge/complaint/proceedings — High Court's powers to quash criminal proceedings by relying on defence material — Whether warranted — Respondent's husband, an advocate fraudulently inducing appellant complainant and her deceased husband to sign a power of attorney in his favour — Power of attorney used for executing sale deed in favour of his wife, the respondent — Appellants filing FIR against husband and wife (respondents) under Ss. 409, 420 & 423 IPC — Cognizance of the offence taken and process issued by Judicial Magistrate — Criminal revision filed by respondents dismissed — In writ petition High Court quashing the criminal case by placing reliance upon evidence in civil suit — Legality — Held, in very rare cases the defence material can be looked into by the court at the time of framing of the charges or taking cognizance — It cannot be said that the evidence in the civil suit which was produced by the defence before trial court established convincingly that the prosecution case is totally absurd or preposterous — Allegations in the FIR prima facie make out an offence against the respondent's husband — The pleas which the respondent's husband took before High Court could be taken by him at the time of the trial, and it would not be proper to pre-empt the criminal proceeding at this stage — Serious allegations have been made against him in the FIR — It is alleged in the FIR that he deceived the complainant and her husband — These are matters which trial court in the criminal case should look into — This was not a fit case for quashing of the criminal proceedings against respondent's husband in exercise of powers under S. 482 CrPC or Art. 226 — Constitution of India — Art. 226

Disposing of the appeal in terms below,

Held :

Per Katju, J.

Judgment of the High Court cannot be sustained so far as it has quashed the complaint and proceedings against accused husband R, but it has to be sustained so far as it relates to his wife V. (Para 10)

While there were certain rulings of two-Judge Benches of this Court, which had held that the findings in a civil suit are binding in a criminal case on the same facts but not vice versa, this view appears to have been somewhat watered down in the subsequent decisions of the larger Benches of this Court. The law as to when criminal proceedings can be quashed by the High Court in exercise of powers under Section 482 CrPC or Article 226 of the Constitution has been laid down by the Supreme Court. (Paras 12 and 13)

The allegations in the FIR if treated to be correct prima facie make out an offence against the respondent's husband R. (Para 14)

An appeal is pending against the judgment in the civil suit. The evidence of D is a very detailed one and some contradictory statements appear to have been given by him e.g. that the amount was paid by R as a loan, and this contradicts the version that the money was paid as a sale consideration. In the judgment of the civil court it has been held that undue influence cannot be ruled out. In these circumstances it cannot be said that at this stage the proceedings in the criminal case were totally mala fide and with ulterior motive. (Para 17)

The pleas which the respondent R took before the High Court could be taken by him at the time of the trial, and it would not be proper to pre-empt the criminal proceeding at this stage. Serious allegations have been made against him in the FIR. The relation of a lawyer and his client is like a fiduciary relationship, and the lawyer has to act in the interest of his client. However, it is alleged in the FIR that R deceived the complainant and her husband. These are matters which the trial court in the criminal case should look into, and no opinion is being expressed either way on this question. However, this was not a fit case for quashing of the criminal proceedings against R in exercise of the powers under Section 482 CrPC or Article 226 of the Constitution. (Para 18)

In Debendra Nath Padhi case, (2005) 1 SCC 568 it has been observed that the width of the powers of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC and Article 226 of the Constitution is unlimited whereunder in the interests of justice the High Court can make such orders as may be necessary to prevent abuse of the process of the Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice within the parameters laid down in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335. (Para 20)

It is well settled that a judgment of the Court has not to be treated as Euclid's formula. While it is true that ordinarily defence material cannot be looked into by the court while framing of the charge in view of Debendra Nath Padhi case, (2005) 1 SCC 568 there may be some very rare and exceptional cases where some defence material when shown to the trial court would convincingly demonstrate that the prosecution version is totally absurd or preposterous, and in such very rare cases the defence material can be looked into by the court at the time of framing of the charges or taking cognizance. It cannot be said as an absolute proposition that under no circumstances can the court look into the material produced by the defence at the time of framing of the charges, though this should be done in very rare cases i.e. where the defence produces some material which convincingly demonstrates that the whole prosecution case is totally absurd or totally concocted. (Paras 21 and 22)

In this case it cannot be said that the evidence in the civil suit which was produced by the defence before the trial court established convincingly that the prosecution case is totally absurd or preposterous. This is a matter which has to be looked into by the trial court. However, the trial court will not be influenced by any observations made in this judgment. (Paras 23 and 25)

(11)(xvi) Defence case when to be considered/Accused heard at stage of quashment (contd.)

As regards the other criminal appeal in which V, wife of R, is the respondent, there is no material whatsoever either mentioned in the FIR or produced by the prosecution to show that V was in any way involved in the alleged criminal offence committed by her husband R. The only allegation against her is that the sale deed was in her favour. This does not prima facie make out any offence. Criminal proceeding against V was rightly quashed by the High Court. (Para 26)

Per Kabir, J. (concurring)

Section 227 CrPC, which is in Chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which deals with trials before a Court of Session, relates to the opening stages of a trial at the time of framing of charge against the accused which is done under Section 228. The aforesaid provision has fallen for consideration of this Court in several cases on the question as to whether at the stage of framing of charge, the court in seisin of the matter is required to consider any material, other than that indicated in the section. (Paras 29 and 30)

Till 1996, the consistent view which had been taken by the Supreme Court was that at the time of framing of charge the trial court can consider only such materials as are placed by the investigating agency having regard to the very language of Section 227. At that stage, the defence could only be heard but could not be given an opportunity to produce evidence for the consideration of the court. However, a different view was expressed by a two-Judge Bench of this Court in Satish Mehra case, (1996) 9 SCC 766. It was because of this discordant note that in Debendra Nath Padhi case, (2005) 1 SCC 568 an order was passed referring the said question to a larger Bench and the same was taken up for consideration in the said case itself by a three-Judge Bench. (Para 31)

It may be noted that no provision in the Code gives the accused the right to file any material or document at the stage of framing of charge. The right is only granted at the stage of the trial. (Para 33)

The larger Bench (in Debendra Nath Padhi case) made a conscious distinction between a proceeding under Section 227 CrPC before the trial court and a proceeding under Section 482 CrPC and made a reference to the Court's power to consider material other than those produced by the prosecution in a proceeding under Section 482 CrPC. While holding that the decision rendered in Satish Mehra case, (1996) 9 SCC 766 was erroneous, the larger Bench held that if the submission that the accused would be entitled to produce materials and documents in proof of his innocence at the stage of framing of charge, was to be accepted, it would be unsettling a law well settled over a hundred years. Section 227 only means hearing the submissions of the accused on the records of the case filed by the prosecution and documents submitted therewith and nothing more. The larger Bench arrived at a definite conclusion that the expression "hearing the submissions of the accused" cannot mean an opportunity to file material to be granted to the accused and thereby changing the settled law. At the stage of framing of charge, hearing the submissions of the accused has to be confined to the material produced by the police. (Para 36)

The larger Bench (in Debendra Nath Padhi case) did not leave any scope for a different interpretation of the provisions of Section 227 as is now being made. However, the larger Bench did indicate that the width of the powers of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC and Article 226 of the Constitution is unlimited whereunder in the interest of justice the High Court could make such order as may be required to secure the ends of justice and to prevent abuse of the process of any court. (Para 37)

There is no scope for the accused to produce any evidence in support of the submissions made on his behalf at the stage of framing of charge and only such materials as are indicated in Section 227 CrPC can be taken into consideration by the Magistrate at that stage. However, in a proceeding taken therefrom under Section 482 CrPC the court is free to consider material that may be produced on behalf of the accused to arrive at a decision whether the charge as framed could be maintained. This appears to be the intention of the legislature in wording Sections 227 and 228 the way in which they have been worded and as explained in Debendra Nath Padhi case by the larger Bench therein to which the very same question had been referred. (Para 38)

The complaint made in this case does make out a prima facie case against the accused R and the cognizance taken by the Magistrate cannot be faulted and the appeal as far as he is concerned, must be allowed. However, even prima facie, none of the offences referred to in the charge-sheet can be made out against the accused V and she has been roped in only with the aid of Section 120-B which is also not substantiated. The appeal as far as she is concerned, must be dismissed. (Para 39).Rukmini Narvekar v. Vijaya Satardekar, (2008) 14 SCC 1. Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir^{2} and Markandey Katju^{1}, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-10-2008]

State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568: 2005 SCC (Cri) 415, followed

Satish Mehra v. Delhi Admn., (1996) 9 SCC 766: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1104, held, overruled

[7394] — Ss. 482, 190(1), 204, 233 & 243 — Quashing of order taking cognizance of offence — Prayer as to — Use of material by accused at said stage which would be available to him only as his defence — Impermissibility of

At the stage of quashing of an order taking cognizance, an accused cannot be permitted to use the material which would be available to him only as his defence. In his defence, the court would be left to consider and weigh materials brought on record by the parties for the purpose of marshalling and appreciating the evidence. (Para 24). B. Jagdish v. State of A.P., (2009) 1 SCC 681.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2008]

State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568: 2005 SCC (Cri) 415, relied on

[Ed.: See also the recent judgment in Rukmini Narvekar v. Vijaya Satardekar, (2008) 14 SCC 1.]

[7395] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint at initial stage — Defence not to be examined in detail at this stage — Magistrate summoning the accused to stand trial — Held, the only question to be considered at that stage was whether the complainant and its accompaniments disclosed any or all of the offences alleged against the respondent — High Court could not examine the defence in detail and record a finding of not guilty — More so when S. 69 of the Forest Act raises against the person arraigned an adverse presumption which can be rebutted only when evidence is led — M.P. Van Upaj (Vyapar Viniyaman) Adhiniyam, 1969 (9 of 1969), Ss. 5-C, 12, 12-A, and 16 — Forest Act, 1927, Ss. 26, 42, 41 and 69. State of M.P. v. Harsh Gupta, (1998) 8 SCC 630: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1723.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-1997]

[7396] — Ss. 482 and 161 — Plea of alibi — Burden of proof in respect of — Entertainment of said plea by High Court prior to trial — Permissibility — Held, the burden to prove plea of alibi lay upon the accused — Accused could prove the said plea by leading evidence during trial — High Court was not justified in recording finding on plea of alibi prior to trial for the first time in a petition under S. 482 CrPC by relying upon some affidavits or statements recorded under S. 161 CrPC — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 11, 103 & 106

Per Mathur, J. (for himself and Balasubramanyan, J.)

The plea taken by Respondent 2 in his petition under Section 482 CrPC was that of alibi. No finding on a plea of alibi can be recorded by the High Court for the first time in a petition under Section 482 CrPC. The burden to prove the plea of alibi lay upon the accused. This could be done by leading evidence in the trial and not by filing some affidavits or statements purported to have been recorded under Section 161 CrPC before the High Court. In such a case the prosecution would have got an opportunity to cross-examine the said witnesses and demonstrate that their testimony was not correct. The whole procedure adopted by the High Court is clearly illegal and cannot be sustained. (Paras 8 and 11). Rajendra Singh v. State of U.P., (2007) 7 SCC 378: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 375: AIR 2007 SC 2786: (2007) 5 All LJ 485: (2007) 3 KLT 892: (2007) 57 AIC 69 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.P. Mathur[1] and P.K. Balasubramanyan[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2007]

Gurcharan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 460: 1956 Cri LJ 827; Chandrika Prasad Singh v. State of Bihar, (1972) 4 SCC 140; State of Haryana v. Sher Singh, (1981) 2 SCC 300: 1981 SCC (Cri) 421, relied on [7397] — S. 482 — Quashment of charge-sheet — Materials that may be relied on — Document relied on by accused in his defence, held, may not be relied on except in very exceptional circumstances (Para 12). Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2009]

(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending

See also '(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc.', and

'(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies', below

[7398] — S. 482 — Powers of High Court under, for quashing criminal proceedings — Pendency of civil suit in respect of same subject-matter — Effect — Held, jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC can be exercised in a case where a civil suit is also pending between the parties in respect of the same subject-matter and contrary stand is taken by the complainant in the civil suit — When contrary stands are taken by a party in civil and the criminal courts, it assumes significance — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 415 and 420

(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending (contd.)

The parties hereto entered into an agreement for sale in respect of a house, a sale deed was also executed on 30-9-2005 by the appellant herein. Indisputably on or about 29-9-2005, two rooms, allegedly, constructed on the said lands were demolished. A suit was filed in relation thereto. Respondent 1 who was also defendant in the said suit did not allege that she has been cheated by the appellant herein but later on filed a complaint in the court alleging commission of an offence by the appellant purported to be under Section 420 IPC. A petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint had been dismissed by the High Court.

The short question which arose for consideration was as to whether a case of cheating within the meaning of Section 415 of the Penal Code had been made out or not.

Answering in negative and allowing the appeal, Held :

While executing the sale deed, the appellant did not make any false or misleading representation. There had also not been any dishonest act of inducement on his part to do or omit to do anything which he could not have done or omitted to have done if he were not so deceived. Admittedly, the matter is pending before a competent civil court. A decision of a competent court of law is required to be taken in this behalf. Essentially, the dispute between the parties is a civil dispute. (Para 12)

For the purpose of establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. In a case of this nature, it is permissible in law to consider the stand taken by a party in a pending civil litigation. This does not mean that the liability of a person cannot be both civil and criminal at the same time. But when a stand has been taken in a complaint petition which is contrary to or inconsistent with the stand taken by him in a civil suit, it assumes significance. Had the fact as purported to have been represented before the Supreme Court that the appellant got the said two rooms demolished and concealed the said fact at the time of execution of the deed of sale, the matter might have been different. As the deed of sale was executed on 30-9-2005 and the purported demolition took place on 29-9-2005, it was expected that the complainant/first respondent would come out with her real grievance in the written statement filed by her in the aforementioned suit. She, for reasons best known to her, did not choose to do so. In this view of the matter, in the facts and circumstances obtaining herein, no case has been made out for proceeding with the criminal case. (Paras 13 and 14). B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107: AIR 2008 SC 210: 2008 Cri LJ 431.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 746; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121, relied on

[7399] — S. 482 — Petition under S. 482 CrPC for quashing criminal complaint alleging commission of various offences under Penal Code — Disputes arising from breach of contract — Civil remedy available and availed of — Remedy under criminal law — Availability of — Held, the same is not barred if the allegations disclose a criminal offence — Allegations contained in the complaint, taken on their face value, if, on facts, constituted offences under Penal Code — Maintainability of the petition under S. 482 — However, current practice of misuse of criminal process to put undue pressure in civil disputes deprecated — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 378, 403, 405, 415 and 425

The appellant Indian Oil Corporation (IOC) entered into a contract with the respondent NEPC India Ltd., agreeing to supply aircraft fuel. According to the appellant, in respect of the fuel supplied under the contract, the respondent committed default in making payments. The respondent hypothecated its two aircrafts to the appellant under a deed. It was stipulated in clause (2) of the deed that the hypothecation was by way of charge and as security for payment of the amounts due. Clause (3) read with the schedule set out the instalments' schedule for payment of the amount due. Under clause (6), NEPC India declared that it would not assign, sell, pledge, charge, underlet or otherwise encumber or part with the possession, custody or beneficial interest in respect of the two aircrafts without the previous written consent of IOC. It also undertook not to do any act which may diminish the value of the hypothecated property without clearing the entire outstanding amount. Clause (9) provided that if NEPC India failed to pay any of the instalments with interest within the stipulated time, or if any undertaking or assurance given by NEPC India was found to be false, IOC shall have the "right to take possession of the hypothecated property" and sell the same by public auction or by private contract and appropriate the sale proceeds towards the outstanding dues without recourse to court of law. Clause (12) confirmed that NEPC India had handed over the title deeds relating to the aircraft to IOC, and agreed to receive them back only after paying the amounts due. As the respondent failed to pay the first two instalments as per the schedule, appellant stopped supply of fuel. However, subsequently, under a fresh agreement, a revised payment schedule was agreed upon and the appellant agreed to recommence supply of aircraft fuel on "cash-and-carry" basis. But this agreement also came to an end as the instalments were not paid. Apprehending that the respondent may remove one of the hypothecated aircraft from Coimbatore Airport to a place outside its reach, the appellant filed a suit in the High Court seeking a mandatory injunction to the authorities concerned to detain the aircraft so as to enable it to take possession thereof. The High Court granted an interim injunction. In regard to the other hypothecated aircraft kept at Chennai Airport the appellant filed another suit in City Civil Court for a similar mandatory injunction. The appellant then filed two complaints against NEPC India and its two directors under Section 200 CrPC alleging that NEPC India unauthorisedly and clandestinely removed the engines and certain other parts from the two hypothecated aircrafts so as to defeat IOC's right to take possession of the two aircrafts in view of default in payments made by NEPC India and further that such act was against the terms of the hypothecation deed and would amount to offences punishable under Sections 378 (theft), 403 (dishonest misappropriation of property), 405 (criminal breach of trust), 415 (cheating), 425 (mischief) of the Penal Code, 1860. The respondents thereupon filed petitions under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the said two complaints on the following grounds:

(i) The complaints related to purely contractual disputes of a civil nature in respect of which IOC had already sought injunctive reliefs and money decrees.

(ii) Even if all the allegations in the complaints were taken as true, they did not constitute any criminal offence as defined under Sections 378, 403, 405, 415 or 425 IPC.

The High Court by a common judgment allowed both the petitions and quashed the two complaints. It accepted the second ground urged by the respondents herein, but rejected the first ground. The said order of the High Court is under challenge in these appeals. On the rival contentions urged, the following points arose for consideration:

(i) Whether existence or availment of civil remedy in respect of disputes arising from breach of contract, bars remedy under criminal law?

(ii) Whether the allegations in the complaint, if accepted on face value, constitute any offence under Sections 378, 403, 405, 415 or 425 IPC?

Held :

A given set of facts may make out: (a) purely a civil wrong; or (b) purely a criminal offence; or (c) a civil wrong as also a criminal offence. A commercial transaction or a contractual dispute, apart from furnishing a cause of action for seeking remedy in civil law, may also involve a criminal offence. As the nature and scope of a civil proceeding are different from a criminal proceeding, the mere fact that the complaint relates to a commercial transaction or breach of contract, for which a civil remedy is available or has been availed of, is not by itself a ground to quash the criminal proceedings. The test is whether the allegations in the complaint disclose a criminal offence or not. (Para 12)

In this case, it is no doubt true that IOC has initiated several civil proceedings to safeguard its interests and recover the amounts due. These acts show that civil remedies were and are available in law and IOC has taken recourse to such remedies. But it does not follow therefrom that criminal law remedy is barred or IOC is estopped from seeking such remedy. (Para 15)

The respondents, no doubt, have stated that they had no intention to cheat or dishonestly divert or misappropriate the hypothecated aircraft or any parts thereof. But these are defences that will have to be put forth and considered during the trial. Defences that may be available, or facts/aspects when established during the trial, may lead to acquittal, are not grounds for quashing the complaint at the threshold. At this stage, the only question relevant is whether the averments in the complaint spell out the ingredients of a criminal offence or not. (Para 16)

The High Court was, therefore, justified in rejecting the contention of the respondents that the criminal proceedings should be quashed in view of the pendency of several civil proceedings. (Para 17)

However, there is a growing tendency in business circles to convert purely civil disputes into criminal cases. This is obviously on account of a prevalent impression that civil law remedies are time consuming and do not adequately protect the interests of lenders/creditors. Such a tendency is seen in several family disputes also, leading to irretrievable breakdown of marriages/families. There is also an impression that if a person could somehow be entangled in a criminal prosecution, there is a likelihood of imminent settlement. Any effort to settle civil disputes and claims, which do not involve any criminal offence, by applying pressure through criminal prosecution should be deprecated and discouraged. (Para 13)

(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending (contd.)

While no one with a legitimate cause or grievance should be prevented from seeking remedies available in criminal law, a complainant who initiates or persists with a prosecution, being fully aware that the criminal proceedings are unwarranted and his remedy lies only in civil law, should himself be made accountable, at the end of such misconceived criminal proceedings, in accordance with law. One positive step that can be taken by the courts, to curb unnecessary prosecutions and harassment of innocent parties, is to exercise their power under Section 250 CrPC more frequently, where they discern malice or frivolousness or ulterior motives on the part of the complainant. (Para 14). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Central Bureau of Investigation v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045; State of Bihar v. Rajendra Agrawalla, (1996) 8 SCC 164: 1996 SCC (Cri) 628; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; M. Krishnan v. Vijay Singh, (2001) 8 SCC 645: 2002 SCC (Cri) 19; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283, relied on

[7400] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — When justified — Act constituting both civil and criminal wrong — Civil suits for recovery of dues compromised on receiving payments from the companies concerned — Even if offence of cheating is prima facie constituted, compromise decree passed in such suits would amount to compounding of offence of cheating — Delay in completing investigation — No action taken against the erring officials despite allegation made against them in the FIRs — Held, in the circumstances of the case, the High Court was justified in quashing the complaint — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 405, 420, 468 and 471

For the purpose of quashing the complaint, it is necessary to consider whether the allegations in the complaint prima facie make out an offence or not. It is not necessary to scrutinise the allegations for the purpose of deciding whether such allegations are likely to be upheld in the trial. Any action by way of quashing the complaint is an action to be taken at the threshold before evidences are led in support of the complaint. For quashing the complaint by way of action at the threshold, it is, therefore, necessary to consider whether on the face of the allegations, a criminal offence is constituted or not.

A particular act may constitute both civil wrong as well as criminal wrong and merely because a civil action is also pursued, it does not render the criminal action impermissible. In the facts of the case, long after the completion of civil suits, the further investigation in connection with the complaints may not be expedient. It may be noted that the opinion given by the Senior Manager (Legal) that the credit facility which was given to DAIL for its tobacco division should be transferred to the newly formed Company, namely, New Tobacco Company Limited, it cannot be held to be per se mala fide or illegal in view of the provisions of Section 394 of the Companies Act. That apart, the legal opinion of the said Senior Manager (Legal) was placed for consideration by the highest administrative body of the Bank i.e. the Board of Directors and the decision was taken by the Board that the credit liability which stood in favour of DAIL should be transferred in favour of the New Tobacco Company Limited. In the aforesaid circumstances, even if the Senior Manager (Legal) or any other officer of the Bank had not acted properly, in view of the fact that the ultimate decision was taken by the Board of Directors, it cannot be reasonably held that some of the officers of the Bank connived and misled the Board. It may be noted that no allegation has been made against the members of the Board.

In the instant case there is enough justification for the High Court to hold that the case was basically a matter of civil dispute. The Banks had already filed suits for recovery of the dues of the Banks on account of credit facility and the said suits have been compromised on receiving the payments from the companies concerned. Even if an offence of cheating is prima facie constituted, such offence is a compoundable offence and compromise decrees passed in the suits instituted by the Banks, for all intents and purposes, amount to compounding of the offence of cheating. It is also to be noted that a long time has elapsed since the complaint was filed in 1987. It may also be indicated that although such FIRs were filed in 1987 and 1989, the Banks have not chosen to institute any case against the alleged erring officials despite allegations made against them in the FIRs Considering that the investigations had not been completed till 1991 even though there was no impediment to complete the investigations and further investigations are still pending and also considering the fact that the claims of the Banks have been satisfied and the suits instituted by the Banks have been compromised on receiving payments, the said complaint should not be pursued any further. CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045: AIR 1996 SC 2452.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-7-1996]

[7401] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint merely because the complaint spelt out a civil wrong also, not justified if the alleged acts make out an offence — Cheating, forgery etc. — On the basis of the complaint that Respondents 2 to 10 had fraudulently got the father of the complainant to execute a gift deed, process issued by Magistrate against the said respondents to face trial under Ss. 419, 420, 467 and 120-B IPC — Petition filed under S. 482 by the said respondents for quashing the complaint — Complaint quashed on ground that it spelled out civil wrong and continuance of criminal prosecution would be an abuse of process of the court — Held, order of the High Court cannot be sustained

It is true that if the complaint does not make out an offence it can be quashed. However, it is also settled law that facts may give rise to a civil claim and also amount to an offence. Merely because a civil claim is maintainable does not mean that the criminal complaint cannot be maintained. In this case, on the facts, it cannot be stated, at this prima facie stage, that this is a frivolous complaint. The High Court does not state that on facts no offence is made out. If that be so, then merely on the ground that it was a civil wrong the criminal prosecution could not have been quashed. (Para 8). Lalmuni Devi v. State of Bihar, (2001) 2 SCC 17: 2001 SCC (Cri) 275.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2000]

[7402] — Ss. 482 and 483 — Exercise of jurisdiction under S. 482 — When warranted — Case essentially involving a civil dispute — Held, S. 482 serves a salutary purpose that a person should not undergo harassment of litigation even though no case has been made out against him — Besides, S. 483 casts a duty on High Court to supervise functioning of trial courts — Therefore, a matter which essentially involves dispute of civil nature should not be allowed to become subject-matter of criminal proceedings which may be resorted to as a short cut to execution of a non-existent decree — Complaint alleging cheating filed against appellants whereas the case in fact involved civil dispute relating to a contract — Held, High Court ought to have exercised its power under S. 482 — CPC, 1908, S. 9 — Contract Act, 1872, S. 73

There was a dispute between the appellants and Respondent 2 regarding supply of a machine which would serve a specific purpose of purifying and desalting the dyes to a particular level as indicated by Respondent 2. Price of the machine was settled at Rs 17 lakhs plus, out of which advance payment of Rs 3 lakhs was also made. The machine when ready was inspected by Respondent 2 but it was found that it did not achieve the specified level of purifying and desalting the dyes. Respondent 2 filed a criminal complaint against the appellants. The criminal court took cognizance of offences under Sections 417, 420 read with Section 114 of the Penal Code, 1860. The appellants on the other hand alleged that Respondent 2 were not taking delivery of the machine and the appellants had blocked material worth Rs 14 lakhs on account of contract entered into with Respondent 2. The appellants therefore moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC on the ground that no case for criminal offence was made out. The High Court dismissed the appellants' application under Section 482.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Only because civil law can be taken recourse to would not necessarily mean that criminal proceedings should be barred. However, there exists a distinction between pure contractual dispute of a civil nature and an offence of cheating. Although breach of contract per se would not come in the way of initiation of a criminal proceeding, yet in the absence of the averments made in the complaint petition wherefrom the ingredients of an offence can be found out, the court should not hesitate to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. Section 482 serves a salutary purpose that a person should not undergo harassment of litigation for a number of years although no case has been made out against him. A matter which essentially involves dispute of a civil nature should not be allowed to be the subject-matter of a criminal offence, the latter being a short cut of executing a decree which is non-existent. The superior courts, with a view to maintain purity in the administration of justice, should not allow abuse of the process of court. They have a duty in terms of Section 483 to supervise functioning of trial courts. (Paras 16, 21, 23 and 28). V.Y. Jose v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 3 SCC 78.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2008]

Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353, relied on

(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending (contd.)

[7403] — S. 482 — Criminal proceedings should not be quashed merely because of pendency of civil proceedings between the same parties, even if it be pending in a higher court — Forgery cases — Nature and scope of and standard of proof required in civil and criminal proceedings are distinct — Inherent power under S. 482 should be exercised sparingly — When trial court found that the complainant had made out a prima facie case against the accused persons, of forgery of a document (a deed of dissolution of partnership firm), held, High Court was not justified in quashing the criminal proceedings merely on the ground that the same document was under scrutiny by it in a civil proceeding initiated by the same complainant — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 465, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B

The appellant filed a complaint before the Magistrate alleging that the respondent-accused persons had brought into existence a deed of dissolution of a partnership firm by forging signatures of the partners, including the signature of the appellant for their personal gain and to the detriment of the partners of the firm. The Magistrate recorded the statement of the witnesses for the complainant, perused the record including opinion of a handwriting expert and his deposition and found that the appellant had made out a prima facie case under Sections 465, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B IPC against all the accused persons and therefore, issued summons for their presence. Instead of appearing before the trial Magistrate and contesting the case, the respondents approached the High Court by filing a petition under Section 482 CrPC praying for quashing of the proceedings initiated and process issued against them. The High Court quashed the proceedings observing:

> "Consideration is and should be whether any criminal proceeding instituted before a court subordinate to this Court should be allowed to continue when the very foundation of the criminal case, namely, forgery of document is under scrutiny by this Court in a civil proceeding instituted by same person i.e. the complainant in the criminal case. In my considered view it would not be proper to allow the criminal proceeding to continue when the validity of the document (deed of dissolution) is being tested in a civil proceeding before this Court."

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the impugned order passed by the High Court and restoring the order of the Magistrate with the direction to proceed with the trial of the case in accordance with the provisions of law and decide the same on merits,

Held :

The High Court was not justified in quashing the proceedings initiated by the appellant against the respondents. Criminal prosecution cannot be thwarted at the initial stage merely because civil proceedings are also pending. There is no substance in the argument that as the civil suit was pending in the High Court, the Magistrate was not justified to proceed with the criminal case either in law or on the basis of propriety. Criminal cases have to be proceeded with in accordance with the procedure as prescribed under the Code of Criminal Procedure and the pendency of a civil action in a different court even though higher in status and authority, cannot be made a basis for quashing of the proceedings. The nature and scope of civil and criminal proceedings and the standard of proof required in both matters is different and distinct. Whereas in civil proceedings the matter can be decided on the basis of probabilities, the criminal case has to be decided by adopting the standard of proof of "beyond reasonable doubt". The revisional or inherent powers of quashing the proceedings at the initial stage should be exercised sparingly and only where the allegations made in the complaint or the FIR, even if taken at their face value and accepted in entirety, do not prima facie disclose the commission of an offence. Disputed and controversial facts cannot be made the basis for the exercise of the jurisdiction. (Paras 17, 9, 15 and 7).Kamaladevi Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2002) 1 SCC 555: 2002 SCC (Cri) 200: AIR 2001 SC 3846.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ.
[Date of decision: 17-10-2001]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Hazari Lal Gupta v. Rameshwar Prasad, (1972) 1 SCC 452: 1972 SCC (Cri) 208; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615; Lalmuni Devi v. State of Bihar, (2001) 2 SCC 17: 2001 SCC (Cri) 275; M. Krishnan v. Vijay Singh, (2001) 8 SCC 645: 2002 SCC (Cri) 19; M.S. Sheriff v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 397: 1954 Cri LJ 1019, relied on

Manju Gupta v. Lt. Col. M.S. Paintal, (1982) 2 SCC 412: 1982 SCC (Cri) 459; Sardool Singh v. Nasib Kaur, 1987 Supp SCC 146: 1987 SCC (Cri) 672; Karamchand Ganga Pershad v. Union of India, (1970) 3 SCC 694, distinguished

Shiv Kishan Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2001) 1 Cal LJ 480 (Cal HC), reversed

See also K.G. Premshanker v. Inspector of Police, (2002) 8 SCC 87 in this regard

[7404] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Grounds — Abuse of process of court — Dispute purely of civil nature —

Absence of ingredients of offences alleged in FIR — A charitable society executing a power of attorney and sale agreement in respect of a land in favour of Respondent 3 — Respondent 3 failing to pay the balance amount in respect of sale in question despite several requests made by appellant office-bearers of the society — Respondents misusing the said deeds for further sale of the property in question — Hence, appellants, after giving due notice to respondents, forfeiting the earnest money and cancelling the said deeds and thereafter selling the part of land in question (which was subject-matter of above sale agreement) to one S to protect the interest of the society — Aggrieved against the said action, Respondent 3 lodging a criminal case against appellants under Ss. 420 and 467 IPC — Held, the present matter was purely a civil dispute — Even taking into account the entire averments made in FIR to be correct, no offence under Ss. 420 and 467 IPC made out against appellants — Hence, filing of criminal case against appellants was an abuse of process of court — In order to secure the ends of justice, it was imperative to quash FIR/criminal proceedings against appellants — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420 & 467

The impugned judgment was passed by the High Court declining to quash the criminal proceedings initiated against the appellants by the respondents.

In 1923, a Sanatan Dharma Pratinidhi Sabha (for short "the Sabha") was founded. The said Sabha was registered in the year 1949 under the Societies Registration Act. In order to develop a ghat on the banks of a river, the Sabha issued an advertisement in the newspapers. It invited bids from the eligible civil contractors to construct the ghat in consideration of 13.5 bighas (approximately) of its land. The ghat was so constructed by Respondent 3. On completion of the construction of the ghat, the Sabha through its President executed a general power of attorney in favour of Respondent 3 in regard to the abovementioned land. A receipt of Rs 17,92,000 lakhs (approximately) was issued by the Sabha to Respondent 3 as an adjustment towards the cost of construction. On the same day the parties executed an agreement to sell the remaining land which was approximately 11.19 bighas. In pursuance to this, an earnest money of Rs 4,00,000 was received by the Sabha from Respondent 3. As per the agreement, Respondent 3 had to pay another Rs 1,00,000 to the Sabha by 31-1-1997. Respondent 3 paid the said amount on 21-3-1997. The balance amount of Rs 10,10,650 was to be paid by 31-3-1997.

According to the appellants (office-bearers of the society in question), time was the essence of the contract and Respondent 3 had failed to pay the balance amount. The Sabha had sent a legal notice to Respondent 3 to fulfil his contractual obligations under the sale agreement and informed him that if he failed to do so, the agreement to sell would stand cancelled and the amount paid as earnest money would be forfeited. In reply to the said notice, Respondent 3 stated that he had not defaulted in payment of the remaining amount. He stated that as per the agreement the land had to be measured and that he was ready to pay the balance amount once that was done. Subsequently, both the parties met at the site of the disputed land in the presence of Patwari (Revenue Official). The land was measured by the Patwari. The Sabha reduced the balance amount and gave some concession to Respondent 3. Respondent 3 was asked to pay Rs 8 lakhs. In the meantime the President of the Sabha had expired. Therefore, the general power of attorney executed by him had ceased to be in effect. Need of a fresh power of attorney was felt. Respondent 3 desired that the fresh power of attorney be executed in the name of his son i.e. Respondent 4 for the very same 13.5 bighas of land in regard to which earlier power of attorney had been given. Accordingly, the General Secretary of the Sabha, Appellant 1 herein, executed a fresh general power of attorney.

As per the appellants, the Sabha made several requests to Respondents 3 and 4 asking them to pay the balance amount of Rs 8,00,000. However, despite repeated requests, the respondents failed to do so. The appellants submitted that the Sabha had learnt from reliable sources that Respondent 3, by misrepresentation and by misusing his general power of attorney for the 13.5 bighas of land, was attempting to sell the entire 26 bighas of the Sabha's land to other parties and was executing sale deeds without any right whatsoever in respect of the remaining 11.19 bighas. Thereafter, Appellant 1 sent a legal notice (second notice) to Respondents 3 and 4 informing them that if the balance amount of Rs 8,00,000 was not paid, he would have to cancel the general power of attorney. No reply to the said notice was received from the respondents nor was Rs 8,00,000 paid. In these circumstances, Appellant 1 cancelled the power of attorney issued in favour of Respondent 4 and informed Respondent 4 accordingly. A public notice of the same was also published by the Sabha in a local newspaper. According to the appellants, in order to protect the interest of the Sabha, the remaining land of 11.19 bighas was sold to one S.

(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending (contd.)

After the said action of the appellants, Respondent 3 lodged a first information report against the appellants. Respondent 3 also filed a civil suit in the said matter. On being aggrieved by the filing of the false and incorrect charge-sheet in the said criminal case, the appellants filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court for quashing the proceedings. The High Court dismissed the said petition on the ground that the record showed that the allegations in the FIR constituted an offence as alleged by the complainant. Hence, the present appeal.

Setting aside the judgment of the High Court,

Held :

The appellants who are office-bearers of a charitable organisation in order to protect the interests of the Sabha cancelled the power of attorney by executing a registered cancellation deed after giving notice to the power-of-attorney holders. The appellants sold only that part of the land to S on behalf of the society for which an agreement to sell with the complainants (the respondents) had already been terminated. The respondents' earnest money had been forfeited. All this was done only after the appellants had given the respondents due notice. (Para 21)

The veracity of the facts alleged by the appellants and the respondents can only be ascertained on the basis of evidence and documents by a civil court of competent jurisdiction. The dispute in question is purely of civil nature and Respondent 3 has already instituted a civil suit in the Court of the Civil Judge. In the facts and circumstances of this case, initiation of criminal proceedings by the respondents against the appellants is clearly an abuse of the process of the court. (Para 22)

Even if all the averments made in the FIR are taken to be correct, the case for prosecution under Sections 420 and 467 IPC is not made out against the appellants. To prevent abuse of the process of the court and to secure the ends of justice, it becomes imperative to quash the FIR and any further proceedings emanating therefrom. (Paras 45, 58 and 60). Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259: AIR 2008 SC 251: (2007) 144 DLT 257: (2007) 59 AIC 30 (SC): (2008) 1 All LJ 40.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, R.V. Raveendran and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-10-2007]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

[7405] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Merely because remedy by way of civil suit is available is not an impediment in maintaining a criminal complaint provided the complaint discloses the ingredients of the offence alleged — In transaction involving passing of valuable properties between the parties, the aggrieved party may sue for damages and also file a complaint against the wrongdoer for criminal breach of trust or cheating — But the complaint must disclose essential ingredients of the offence — Default made by respondents in payment of instalments by way of repayment of loan advanced by appellant under a lease agreement between the parties for purchase of some article -Complaint filed by appellant alleging commission of offence under S. 420 IPC by respondents — Held on facts complaint does not disclose element of deception or fraud or dishonest inducement or wilful misrepresentation in the entire transaction — Hence complaint, on facts, was liable to be quashed

The appellant is a registered non-banking financial company, carrying on business of leasing and hire-purchase. The first respondent is the Chairman and founder-trustee and the second respondent the wife of the first respondent, is also a trustee of a trust. The respondents entered into lease agreement with the appellant whereby the appellant agreed to finance the respondents for purchase of 100 hydraulically-operated dental chairs. As per the agreement, the respondents were liable to pay rentals quarterly and the appellant Company, the lessors would have sole and exclusive right, title and interest in the dental chairs supplied till the entire hire-purchase amount was paid. Accordingly, the appellant made the payment and the respondents got delivery of the dental chairs. However, the appellant alleged that the respondents were not regular in making the payments and committed default in payment of the instalments and that the bank had dishonoured certain cheques issued by the respondents. It also alleged that on physical verification, certain chairs were found missing from the premises of the respondents and thus they have committed cheating and caused misappropriation of the property belonging to the appellant. It filed a private complaint under Section 200 CrPC before the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate alleging that the respondents had committed offences under Sections 420, 406 and 423 read with Section 120-B IPC. In those proceedings, the appellant Company moved an application under Section 93 CrPC to issue a search warrant to seize the property in dispute and also to hand over these items to the complainant. The Magistrate took cognizance of the alleged complaint and issued summons to the respondents and passed an order on the application filed under Section 93 CrPC to have a search at the premises of the respondents and to take possession of the properties involved in the case. These proceedings were challenged by the respondents under Section 482 CrPC before a Single Judge of the High Court. The Single Judge quashed the entire proceedings and directed the appellant Company to return all the properties seized by the police pursuant to the warrant issued by the Magistrate. Thus, the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance and issuing process to the respondents as well as the order of search and the direction for restoration of the property to the appellant Company were set aside. In appeal before the Supreme Court it was contended on behalf of the appellant that the allegations in the complaint clearly made out offences punishable under Sections 420, 406, 423, 424 read with Section 120-B IPC and therefore, the Single Judge erred in quashing the proceedings. On behalf of the respondents, on the other hand, it was argued that the entire transaction was of civil nature and that the respondents have made a substantial payment as per the hire-purchase agreement and the default, if any, was not wilful and there was no element of misappropriation or cheating. The respondents also denied having removed any of the items of the disputed property clandestinely to defeat the interest of the appellant. The main question was whether a criminal complaint was maintainable when a remedy under civil law was available. On facts, the question was whether to maintain the complaint the ingredients of the alleged criminal offence were present. Single Judge was justified in invoking the powers under Section 482 CrPC in setting aside the proceedings pending before the Magistrate. Upholding the appellant's plea in law but dismissing his complaint on fact,

Held :

When somebody suffers injury to his person, property or reputation, he may have remedies both under civil and criminal law. The injury alleged may form the basis of civil claim and may also constitute the ingredients of some crime punishable under criminal law. When there is dispute between the parties arising out of a transaction involving passing of valuable properties between them, the aggrieved person may have a right to sue for damages or compensation and at the same time law permits the victim to proceed against the wrongdoer for having committed an offence of criminal breach of trust or cheating. Here the main offence alleged by the appellant is that the respondents committed the offence under Section 420 IPC and the case of the appellant is that the respondents have cheated him and thereby dishonestly induced him to deliver property. To deceive is to induce a man to believe that a thing is true which is false and which the person practising the deceit knows or believes to be false. It must also be shown that there existed a fraudulent and dishonest intention at the time of commission of the offence. There is no allegation that the respondents made any wilful misrepresentation. Even according to the appellant, the parties entered into a valid lease agreement and the grievance of the appellant is that the respondents failed to discharge their contractual obligations. In the complaint, there is no allegation that there was fraud or dishonest inducement on the part of the respondents and thereby the respondents parted with the property. It is trite law and common sense that an honest man entering into a contract is deemed to represent that he has the present intention of carrying it out but if, having accepted the pecuniary advantage involved in the transaction, he fails to pay his debt, he does not necessarily evade the debt by deception. Moreover, the appellant has no case that the respondents obtained the article by any fraudulent inducement or by wilful misrepresentation. It has been informed that the respondents, though committed default in paying some instalments, have paid substantial amount towards the consideration. Having regard to the facts and circumstances, it is difficult to discern an element of deception in the whole transaction, whereas it is palpably evident that the appellant had an oblique motive of causing harassment to the respondents by seizing the entire articles through magisterial proceedings. Therefore, the Single Judge of the High Court was perfectly justified in quashing the proceedings. (Paras 11 and 12). Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565: AIR 2001 SC 1226: 2001 Cri LJ 1247.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-2-2001]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180, relied on [7406] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Pendency of a civil suit in respect of the matter concerned would not be a bar to resort to criminal proceedings — Criminal proceedings initiated against the accused for offence under S. 420 IPC, held, were wrongly quashed by the High Court merely on the ground of pendency of a civil suit for specific performance in the matter concerned — Penal Code, 1860, S. 420. Vitoori Pradeep Kumar v. Kaisula Dharmaiah, (2002) 9 SCC 581: 2001 Cri LJ 4948.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2000]

(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending (contd.)

[7407] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Sought on the ground of pendency of civil proceedings in the matter concerned — Permissibility — Considerations in quashing criminal proceedings restated — Complaint case alleging forgery of documents and wrongful gain on their basis — Proceedings initiated against accused-respondents under Ss. 193, 209, 406, 468 and 471 read with S. 120-B IPC, quashed by the High Court due to the pendency of a civil suit filed by accused disputing genuineness of the documents — Setting aside High Court's impugned judgment, held, mere pendency of the civil suit between the parties cannot be a ground for quashing the criminal proceedings against the accused — If permitted, such practice would be an easy way out for accused to avoid criminal proceedings

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court appears to have been impressed by the fact that as the nature of the dispute was primarily of a civil nature, the appellant was not justified in resorting to the criminal proceedings. Accepting such a general proposition would be against the provisions of law inasmuch as in all cases of cheating and fraud, in the whole transaction, there is generally some element of civil nature. The proceedings could not be quashed only because the respondents had filed a civil suit. If mere pendency of a suit is made a ground for quashing the criminal proceedings, the unscrupulous litigants, apprehending criminal action against them, would be encouraged to frustrate the course of justice and law by filing suits with respect to the documents intended to be used against them after the initiation of criminal proceedings or in anticipation of such proceedings. Such a course cannot be the mandate of law. (Paras 4 and 5)

In a criminal court the allegations made in the complaint have to be established independently, notwithstanding the adjudication by a civil court. Had the complainant failed to prove the allegations made by him in the complaint, the respondents were entitled to discharge or acquittal but not otherwise. (Para 5)

Where factual foundations for the offence have been laid down in the complaint, the High Court should not hasten to quash criminal proceedings merely on the premise that one or two ingredients have not been stated with the details or that the facts narrated reveal the existence of commercial or money transaction between the parties. The revisional or inherent powers for quashing the proceedings at the initial stage can be exercised only where the allegations made in the complaint or the first information report do not prima facie disclose the commission of an offence or the allegations are so absurd and inherently improper that on the basis of which no prudent person could have reached a just conclusion that there were sufficient grounds in proceeding against the accused or where there is an express legal bar engrafted in any provisions of the Code or any other statute to the institution and continuance of the criminal proceedings or where a criminal proceeding is manifestly actuated with mala fide and has been initiated maliciously with the ulterior motive for wrecking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge. The impugned judgment being contrary to the settled position of law is thus not sustainable. (Paras 6, 9 and 11). M. Krishnan v. Vijay Singh, (2001) 8 SCC 645: 2002 SCC (Cri) 19: AIR 2001 SC 3014.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-2001]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239, applied

Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Shantilal v. Vimalchand, (2001) 8 SCC at p. 649, below, considered

[7408] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings FIR — Dispute of civil nature — FIR lodged after two years — Held on facts, criminal proceedings initiated by complainant amounted to abuse of process of law — Hence, FIR rightly quashed by High Court

The appellant entered into a registered partnership firm K with one S. The Firm was stockist and distributor of a company J. In 2001, differences arose between the appellant and S, the two partners of the firm K. S joined another firm M with certain other persons as partners. According to the appellant, S with a view to cheat and defraud the appellant, misrepresented before J that the name of firm K was changed to M. On the basis of such representation S informed J that payment which was required to be made by J to K should now be made to M. Accordingly, J made payments to M in 2001. The appellant in 2003 issued legal notice to the respondents, stating that J was required to make payments to K but instead of making such payments the same had been misappropriated and that the officials of J colluded with the partners of M and all of them played fraud on the appellant. The appellant also filed a complaint in 2003 before the Director General of Police seeking inquiry into the matter. Pursuant thereto inquiry was made and the respondents submitted their replies but nothing further was done in the matter. The appellant thereupon lodged an FIR against the respondents alleging offences punishable under Sections 468, 406 read with Section 120-B IPC. The police arrested all the accused.

The respondents filed application before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of FIR registered against them. The High Court found that the dispute related to settlement of accounts between the principal J and its agent K (earlier) and M (later). It further found that it was K which informed J that K had closed its business which was thereafter continued by M and all drafts be issued in favour of M and that accordingly, J substituted in the company record the name of M in place of K, as a result of which whatever sums were due to K were considered due to M. The High Court also took note of the fact that even the complainant had informed J that there was dispute between the partners of K and hence no payment could be made to M till the dispute was finally resolved between the parties. The High Court, in the circumstances, observed that the case was of one partner trying to drag the principal company into a criminal litigation to recover dues which the principal had paid to the other partner. The appellant had a dispute with S but instead of tackling him, he lodged an FIR to pressurise the respondents to settle the matter. It was not a direct case in which any contractual relationship between the complainant (appellant) with J had been breached. The appellant had no direct relationship with the company J as it was K, of which he was a partner, had developed contractual relationship and later M got substituted in place of K. The appellant ignored this development and issued the legal notice after a long lapse of time which was to drag the company into the inter se dispute between the two partners. The complaint and the steps taken by police had thus converted a tripartite civil dispute into a criminal one. The High Court, therefore, concluded that the steps taken by the complainant were in clear abuse of process of law and accordingly allowed the petition under Section 482 and quashed the first information report.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

The High Court rightly considered the facts in their proper perspective. The High Court was right in coming to the conclusion that a civil dispute — pure and simple — between the parties was sought to be converted into a criminal offence only by resorting to pressure tactics and by taking police help which was indeed abuse of process of law and has been rightly prevented by the High Court. It is clear from the case put forward by the appellant himself that the proceedings were virtually "civil" in nature. Thus the order for quashing the criminal proceedings passed by the High Court is in consonance with law and requires no interference. (Paras 18, 25, 15 and 26). Suneet Gupta v. Anil Triloknath Sharma, (2008) 11 SCC 670: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 920: (2008) 67 AIC 203 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2008]

State of Punjab v. Dharam Vir Singh Jethi, 1994 SCC (Cri) 500, distinguished

[7409] — S. 482 — Quashment of criminal proceedings on initiation of civil proceedings — Permissibility — Held, filing of divorce petition in civil court cannot be a ground to quash criminal proceedings under S. 482 as it is well settled that criminal and civil proceedings are separate and independent and pendency of a civil proceeding cannot bring to an end a criminal proceeding even if they arise out of same set of facts — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406

The present appeal was preferred against the judgment and order of the High Court whereby the High Court in the exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC quashed FIR dated 31-12-2001 lodged at the instance of the appellant. The said FIR was registered by the appellant complainant against the respondent-accused for the alleged offences under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC.

In the facts of the case, the appellant had married Respondent 2 on 25-1-2000. Respondents 1, 3, 4 and 5 were the mother-in-law, brother-in-law, maternal father-in-law and the father-in-law of the appellant respectively. The appellant left her matrimonial home on 25-5-2001 with her father and brother. On 31-7-2001, the husband, Respondent 2, filed a petition before the Family Court praying for a decree of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty. On 31-12-2001, the appellant lodged an FIR against the respondents for the alleged offences under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC. The FIR was challenged by the respondents before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC praying for quashing of the same. While the petition under Section 482 CrPC was pending, a final investigation report was submitted on 13-2-2004 in the High Court.

The High Court by the impugned order quashed the FIR on the basis of the report of the investigating officer submitted before it and concluded that no offence under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC was made out by the appellant against the respondents. The High Court also observed that the FIR must be quashed to avoid undue harassment and mental agony to the respondents, more so when the divorce petition was still pending before the Family Court. Hence the present appeal.

(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending (contd.)

Two questions arose in the present case:

(i) Whether the High Court while quashing the FIR in exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC was entitled to go beyond the complaint filed by the complainant; and

(ii) Whether the High Court was entitled to look into and consider the investigation report submitted by four officers of the rank of Dy. Superintendent of Police, for quashing the FIR, even before the same could be filed before the Magistrate concerned.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the facts and circumstances of the case, the High Court was not justified in drawing an adverse inference against the appellant wife for lodging the FIR on 31-12-2001 on the ground that she had left the matrimonial home at least six months before that. This is because the High Court had failed to appreciate that the appellant and her family members were during this period making all possible efforts to enter into a settlement so that Respondent 2, the husband, would take her back to the matrimonial home. If any complaint was made during this period there was every possibility of not entering into any settlement with Respondent 2, the husband. (Para 15)

The complaint was filed only when all efforts to return to the matrimonial home had failed and Respondent 2, the husband, had filed a divorce petition under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. (Para 16)

Filing of a divorce petition in a civil court cannot be a ground to quash criminal proceedings under Section 482 CrPC as it is well settled that criminal and civil proceedings are separate and independent and the pendency of a civil proceeding cannot bring to an end a criminal proceeding even if they arise out of the same set of facts. (Para 16)

From a plain reading of the findings arrived at by the High Court while quashing the FIR, it is apparent that the High Court while exercising its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC has gone beyond the allegations made in the FIR and has acted in excess of its jurisdiction and, therefore, the High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR by going beyond the allegations made in the FIR or by relying on extraneous considerations. (Paras 14 and 16). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27, relied on [7410] — S. 482 — To "prevent abuse of process of court" — Truck sold under hire-purchase agreement — Financier seizing truck on default in payment of instalment — Buyer launching criminal prosecution — Held, was an abuse of process of the court since the dispute was essentially of a civil nature — Proceedings quashed. Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987: AIR 1979 SC 850: 1979 ALJ 634: 1980 Cri LJ 822.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N.L. Untwalia and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-1-1979]

[7411] — Ss. 482 and 173 — Inherent power of the High Court — When to be exercised — Complaint under Ss. 405, 406 and 408 IPC during pendency of civil litigation between the parties for dissolution of partnership firm and rendition of accounts — Order of High Court staying the filing of the final report under S. 173 CrPC by the police till disposal of the suit not sustainable — Such an order also caused delay — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 405, 406 and 408 — Constitution of India — Art. 21

The width of power of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC, in principle, is very expansive but in practice the power is exercised in exceptional cases. The inherent power of the court is not an unrestricted power to make any order which the High Court desires to pass. The power is meant to be exercised to give effect to any order under CrPC or to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. It is of utmost importance that criminal cases be disposed of expeditiously as right of an accused to have speedy trial is a right which flows from Article 21 of the Constitution. Far from ensuring a speedy trial the High Court placed an embargo at the pre-trial stage by staying the filing of final report by the police under Section 173 CrPC. The impugned order serves no useful purpose, nay, it is wholly extraneous to the purposes for which the power is preserved. (Para 5). Usha Ahuja v. State of Haryana, (1999) 7 SCC 486: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1283: AIR 1999 SC 3242.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Venkataswami and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-1999]

[7412] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — Permissible grounds — Initiation of civil proceedings — High Court quashed the proceedings under S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 on the ground that appellant had already taken recourse to arbitration proceedings which is obviously of a civil nature — Held, there can be no bar to the simultaneous continuance of a criminal proceeding and a civil proceeding if the two arise from separate causes of action — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Para 7). Sri Krishna Agencies v. State of A.P., (2009) 1 SCC 69. Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-11-2008]

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47, followed

[7413] — S. 482 — Disputes essentially civil in nature, filed as criminal complaints — Criminal court's duty to check abuse of process — Held, criminal courts should ensure that criminal proceedings are not misused for settling scores or pressurising parties to settle civil disputes — However, civil disputes in some cases may also contain ingredients of criminal offences — Such disputes have to be entertained notwithstanding they are also civil disputes (Para 8). Mohd. Ibrahim v. State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC 751: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 929. Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-9-2009]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

[7414] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Triable issues — Allegations relating to creation of a false agreement purporting to terminate original agreements and pilferage of records relating to a private limited company — Held on facts, issues raised in the complaint were not adjudicable solely by civil court or Company Law Board — High Court should not have quashed proceedings under S. 482 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 379, 468, 471, 420 and 506 Pt. II

The appellant, who was the complainant, alleged in his complainant that there were two agreements between the respondents and a private limited company floated by the appellant, for development of land belonging to respondents. The respondents however forged another agreement by which the original agreements were terminated by the parties. The appellant further alleged that third accused had illegally taken away all records and accounts relating to private company floated by appellant, including two original agreements. However, the High Court concluded that there was no forgery of documents referred to in the complaint, and that there was no allegation that by using forged documents, the accused acquired gains. The High Court therefore quashed prosecution proceedings holding that appellant's grievance, if any, has to be got redressed through a civil court or Company Law Board.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court has wrongly come to conclusion that the matter in issue has to be decided by a civil court or Company Law Board. Some of the allegations referred to by High Court are not adjudicable by civil court or Company Law Board. The exercise of jurisdiction by the High Court in terms of Section 482 CrPC, cannot be maintained in this case. (Para 13). M. Viswanathan v. S.K. Tiles & Potteries (P) Ltd., (2008) 16 SCC 390: (2008) 72 AIC 68 (SC): (2009) 152 Comp Cas 335. Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-2008]

Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283, relied on

[7415] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashing of criminal proceeding — Exercise of jurisdiction under S. 482, when justified — Principles reiterated — Dispute purely of civil nature — No offence made out from allegations in FIR — Initiation of criminal proceedings (under Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 469 IPC) in such a case, held, was not justified — Proceedings quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 469

One S had five sons i.e. G, N, B, R and H. Appellants 1 and 2 were grandsons of G. Legal proceedings were initiated by son of H i.e. L claiming partition of his 1/3rd share in the suit property. The said suit was decreed by the Additional Sub-Divisional Officer. However, aggrieved thereby L challenged that decision in an appeal before the Commissioner. Aggrieved by the order of the Commissioner, son of R filed an appeal before the Board of Revenue, which set aside the order passed by the Commissioner and affirmed the order of the Additional Sub-Divisional Officer. Aggrieved thereby, L preferred a writ petition before the High Court wherein Appellants 1 and 2 were not impleaded. The High Court, while issuing notice, stayed the operation of the order passed by the Board of Revenue.

Thereafter, a sale deed was executed by Appellants 1 and 2 in favour of Appellants 3 and 4 stating therein that they had one-third share in the joint property although, according to the respondent co-sharer, they were not entitled therefor. Subsequent thereto, the respondent co-sharer filed a suit for cancellation of the said deed. He also lodged an FIR against the appellants.

(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending (contd.)

The appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of FIR. The High Court, while dismissing the said application, directed the investigating officer to conclude the investigation within three months. After conclusion of the investigation, a charge-sheet was submitted before the Chief Judicial Magistrate concerned. The said Magistrate took cognizance of the offence. Questioning the legality of the said order, the appellants filed another application under Section 482 CrPC, which by reason of the impugned judgment had been dismissed. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now well settled that the High Court ordinarily would exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC if the allegations made in the first information report, even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, do not make out any offence. When the allegations made in the first information report or the evidences collected during investigation do not satisfy the ingredients of an offence, the superior courts would not encourage harassment of a person in a criminal court for nothing. (Para 24)

A distinction must be made between a civil wrong and a criminal wrong. When dispute between the parties constitute only a civil wrong and not a criminal wrong, the courts would not permit a person to be harassed although no case for taking cognizance of the offence has been made out. (Para 27)

The fact that the appellants are co-sharers is not in dispute. The dispute between the parties is confined to the extent of their respective shares. It must be determined only in a civil suit. (Para 11)

If Appellants 1 and 2 had executed a deed of sale in favour of a third party stating that they have one-third share in the entire properties, the same would not be binding on the respondent complainant. If any cause of action arose by reason of a threat of dispossession at the hands of the co-sharer or at the hands of the third party, as was contended, recourse to legal action could always be taken. Even for that purpose, a proceeding under Sections 144 and 145 CrPC would be maintainable. The decision of a criminal court in a case of this nature would not be binding on the civil court. (Paras 11). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Kamaladevi Agarwal v. State of W.B., (2002) 1 SCC 555: 2002 SCC (Cri) 200; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, considered

[7416] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashing of FIR — Relevant considerations — Results of/material collected during preliminary investigations — Offences in relation to civil dispute — Though FIR disclosing only a pure civil case, preliminary investigations revealing offences under Ss. 406 and 120-B IPC and under RBI Act, 1934 — Effect — But High Court going by contents of FIR alone holding that S. 420 IPC not attracted and that it was a simple breach of contract and pure civil dispute and therefore quashing FIR — Sustainability — Held, materials collected during preliminary investigations are relevant — Hence quashment of FIR not sustainable — Fair and impartial investigation directed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B

Respondent 1, accused was the Director of a Company, which floated a car buying and rental scheme, whereby, it promised to give its investors (investing a sum of Rs 97,907), a monthly rent of Rs 4000 and also give an option to the investor to take back his car at the end of sixty months. Respondent 2 complainant invested in the scheme, got his monthly rent of Rs 4000 as agreed upon but when after the expiry of sixty months, he demanded back his car, it was not given. Instead the Company gave Respondent 2 post-dated cheques amounting to Rs 25,000, Rs 20,000 and Rs 10,000. Respondent 2, therefore, filed an FIR, which however, was quashed under Section 482 CrPC by the impugned judgment of the High Court.

Grounds taken in the memorandum of SLP revealed that during investigations statements of various witnesses had been recorded. Public at large, especially middle class and lower class people had invested their hard-earned money in the scheme. It was also complained of by an investor that no vehicle had been purchased in his name. Statements of witnesses during preliminary investigations also revealed that the Company had resorted to false registrations of vehicles in the name of investors which were actually owned and registered by non-investors who had no link with the Company. For instance, as per the statement of a non-investor his Maruti Esteem car was shown in the Company data as being registered in the name of an investor.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There cannot be any doubt or dispute whatsoever that a simple breach of contract or a case involving a pure civil dispute would not attract any offence either under Section 406 or Section 420 IPC. Had the dispute between the parties rested on the aforementioned premise, interference with the judgment of the High Court probably would not have been warranted. The petition of the complainant did not disclose any criminal offence at all much less any offence either under Section 420 or Section 120-B IPC. It was purely civil in nature. But then, certain evidences surfaced during investigation which are disclosed in the grounds stated in the memo of this appeal. (Paras 13 and 19)

The allegation made in the FIR and the materials collected during investigation, should be allowed to be taken to its logical end. A large number of illegalities were committed by the said Company including the violation of the provisions of the Reserve Bank of India Act. The High Court in its judgment only considered the case from the point of view of Section 420 IPC and not Sections 406 and 120-B thereof. The legal position in regard to exercise of jurisdiction by the High Court for quashing of an FIR is now well settled. The State contended that having regard to the well-settled principle of law, the High Court should not quash an FIR save and except sparingly and in the rarest of rare cases. In the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case and particularly in view of the materials which have surfaced during investigation, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained. It is set aside accordingly. (Paras 6, 10, 14 and 20)

The investigating officer shall conduct the investigation fairly and impartially and shall allow the Company to carry on its business without any hindrance whatsoever. If any books of account or other documents are required, the investigating officer subject to just exceptions may take the xerox copies thereof duly certified by the accused as also an undertaking that, as and when called upon, they would produce the said books of account in a court of law. Subject to the aforementioned directions, the investigating officer shall carry out the investigation in accordance with law. (Para 19). State of Maharashtra v. Sayed Mohammed Masood, (2009) 8 SCC 787: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 945.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2009]

R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Mahesh Chaudhary v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 4 SCC 439: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 332, relied on

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; Radha Ballav Pal v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Cal 327; Velji Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; New India Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Sadanand Mukhi, (2009) 2 SCC 417: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 815; Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49, distinguished [7417] — Ss. 482 and 320 — Whether FIR under Ss. 420/468/471/34/120-B IPC can be quashed either under S. 482 or under Art. 226, when accused and complainant had compromised and settled the matter between themselves — B.S. Joshi case, (2003) 4 SCC 675 holding that powers of High Court under S. 482 of the Code to quash criminal proceedings or FIR or complaint were not circumscribed by S. 320 — Submission by respondent State that having regard to S. 320 CrPC especially sub-section (9) thereof, B.S. Joshi case required a second look — Per Altamas Kabir, J., rejecting the submission, held, what was decided in B.S. Joshi case was the power and authority of High Court to exercise jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC or under Art. 226 of the Constitution to quash offences which were not compoundable — Law stated in the said case simply indicates the powers of High Court to quash any criminal proceeding or first information report or complaint whether it be compoundable or not — Ultimate exercise of discretion under S. 482 CrPC or under Art. 226 of the Constitution is with the court which has to exercise such jurisdiction in the facts of each case — Impugned order set aside and proceedings directed to be quashed — Per Markandey Katju, J. (concurring), held, except for S. 420 IPC, which can be compounded with the permission of the court other offences under Ss. 468, 471, 34 and 120-B IPC (which are mentioned in FIR) cannot even be compounded with the permission of the court — Hence, High Court or even Supreme Court would not ordinarily be justified in doing something indirectly which could not be done directly — However, S. 320 CrPC cannot be read in isolation but has to be read along with the other provisions in CrPC — Words "Nothing in this Code" used in S. 482 is a non obstante clause, and gives it overriding effect over other provisions in CrPC — Further, words "or otherwise to secure the ends of justice" in S. 482 implies that to secure the interests of justice sometimes (though only in very rare cases) High Court can pass an order in violation of a provision in CrPC — Matter however should be determined elaborately by a larger Bench — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 2, 4 to 6 and 16 to 23). Manoj Sharma v. State, (2008) 16 SCC 1: (2008) 4 KLT 417: (2009) 73 AIC 187 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-10-2008]

(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending (contd.)

B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848; Nikhil Merchant v. CBI, (2008) 9 SCC 677: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 858, followed

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; G.V. Rao v. L.H.V. Prasad, (2000) 3 SCC 693: 2000 SCC (Cri) 733; Aravali Golf Club v. Chander Hass, (2008) 1 SCC 683: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 289; Govt. of A.P. v. P. Laxmi Devi, (2008) 4 SCC 720; Rajbir Singh Dalal (Dr.) v. Chaudhari Devi Lal University, (2008) 9 SCC 284: (2008) 2 SCC (L&S) 887; Bharat Petroleum Corpn. Ltd. v. N.R. Vairamani, (2004) 8 SCC 579; Brown v. Board of Education, 98 L Ed 837: 347 US 483 (1954); Miranda v. Arizona, 16 L Ed 2d 694: 384 US 436 (1966); Roe v. Wade, 35 L Ed 2d 147: 410 US 113 (1973), relied on

Simrikhia v. Dolley Mukherjee, (1990) 2 SCC 437: 1990 SCC (Cri) 327; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866; Sooraj Devi v. Pyare Lal, (1981) 1 SCC 500: 1981 SCC (Cri) 188, limited

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10, held limited [7418] — Ss. 482 and 320 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Compromise in dispute of purely personal nature arising out commercial transactions not involving any public consequences — FIR registered alleging offences under Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472, 474 r/w S. 34 IPC — During pendency of proceedings in Supreme Court, compromise entered into between the parties — In terms of the compromise, dispute purely of personal nature arising out of commercial transactions, settled with the stipulation that proceedings pending in court may be withdrawn or compromised or quashed — Dispute being purely personal and no public policy being involved in the transactions, held, to continue with the proceedings would be a futile exercise — Hence FIR quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 419, 420, 465, 468, 469, 471, 472, 474 r/w S. 34. Jagdish Chanana v. State of Haryana, (2008) 15 SCC 704: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1157: AIR 2008 SC 1968: (2008) 65 AIC 111 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 2237.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2008]

[7419] — Ss. 482 and 190 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Complaint of forcibly taking away movable articles belonging to the husband of the appellant after his death — Police submitting final report — Magistrate taking cognizance of offence under S. 380 IPC after examining the complainant and her witnesses — Held, High Court not justified in quashing the proceedings on ground that the dispute was of a civil nature — Civil dispute regarding partition of immovable property of appellant's husband has nothing to do with complaint about forcible removal of movable articles — Proceedings could not be said to be abuse of process of law — Further held, in the circumstances of the case, complaint filed after submission of final report by police could not be quashed in limine by treating it stale. A.E. Rani v. V.S.R. Sarma, (1995) 1 SCC 627: 1995 SCC (Cri) 262: (1995) 32 ACC 179: 1995 Cr LR (SC) 78.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Agrawal and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1994]

[7420] — Ss. 482 and 202 — Quashment — When warranted — Compromise arrived at between parties — Complainant Respondent 1 filing complaint in his capacity of Chief Managing Trustee alleging that the accused had committed a breach of contractual obligation to construct a multi-purpose community hall at their own cost on a part of land owned and possessed by the Trust, in consideration of which they were to get all rights of development of the remaining land; that instead they sold the construction, earned crores of rupees and ultimately constructed in place and instead of the community hall, 10 rooms which did not fulfil the requirements of the agreement and specifications of the community hall; that from the very beginning their intention was to cheat the Trust and ultimately they succeeded in doing so — Magistrate ordering enquiry and also issuing process against accused — Said order challenged by accused before Addl. Sessions Judge, which was rejected — Specific stand before Sessions Judge and the High Court by the petitioners was that a compromise had been effected and, therefore, the proceedings were not to be continued — High Court by impugned judgment dismissing their petition — However, a connected civil suit Ravi Constructions Co., (2006) 10 SCC 669 was held to be not maintainable in view of the compromise arrived at by the Trust and the accused — In view of the same, held, continuance of instant proceedings would amount to sheer abuse of process of law, and hence quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 418, 409, 166 r/w S. 114 (Paras 2, 3, 6 and 7). Nalini Shankaran v. Neelkanth Mahadeo Kamble, (2007) 12 SCC 90: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 228.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2007]

Ravi Constructions Co. v. Somvanshi Arya Kshatriya Samaj, (2006) 10 SCC 669, considered

[7421] — Ss. 482 and 320 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot advert to case diary, or rely upon letter addressed by parties to officer-in-charge of police station and quash the prosecution on ground that parties had settled their dispute — Offences under Ss. 467, 468 and 471 IPC are not compoundable — Respondent ready to transfer the amount in question to bank — Hence, it would not be expedient to allow the prosecution to continue — Direction made to the bank not to disburse the said amount except under orders of court of competent jurisdiction — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 467, 468 and 471. Karpoori Thakur v. Baikunth Nath Dey, 1990 Supp SCC 136: 1990 SCC (Cri) 642.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1988]

[7422] — Ss. 482 and 401 — Simultaneous criminal and civil proceedings — Stay of criminal proceedings granted by High Court pending disposal of civil suit — Stay granted on statement of respondent that he would plead guilty in criminal case if in pending suit injunction was granted — Propriety of stay — Conceded by respondent to be improper — Matter remitted to High Court to dispose of criminal revision. Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. Assn. of Chartered Certified Accountants, (2005) 12 SCC 226.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-2-2005]

[Ed.: See also M.S. Sheriff v. State of Madras, 1954 SCR 1144: AIR 1954 SC 397: 1954 Cri LJ 1019; (2002) 8 SCC 87 and (2002) 1 SCC 555.]

[7423] — S. 482 — Inherent power of High Court to quash criminal proceedings — Repayment of loan under settlement — Effect — Held, the same did not exempt the accused persons (respondents herein) from criminal proceedings on account of forgery, cheating, corruption, etc. (Para 46). CBI v. A. Ravishankar Prasad, (2009) 6 SCC 351.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-5-2009]

(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc.

See also '(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending', above, and

'(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies', below

[7424] — S. 482 — S. 420 IPC — Ingredients of offence conspicuously lacking in complaint — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Ground — Abuse of process of court — Cognizance taken of offence under S. 420 IPC — Ingredients of offence in question conspicuously lacking in the complaint — On facts, held, allowing the criminal proceedings to go on against the appellant, would result in abuse of the process of the court — Hence, proceedings against the appellant quashed — Penal Code, 1860, S. 420 — Constitution of India — Art. 136

Except using the expressions "fraudulent misappropriation" and "mala fide intention", the allegations in the complaint do not at all disclose as to how the appellant can be found guilty of the offence under Section 420 IPC. The ingredients constituting Section 420 are conspicuously lacking in the complaint. All the courts have failed to address themselves to the crucial question whether as far as the appellant is concerned any offence under Section 420 or for that matter any offence under Section 409 has been committed. Even going by the allegations in the complaint, allowing the criminal proceedings to go on against the appellant, would result in abuse of the process of the court. Hence, the proceedings against the appellant are quashed. (Para 5). Vijaya Rao v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 7 SCC 69: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1600.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-7-2005]

[7425] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Scope of jurisdiction of High Court — When can High Court interfere with criminal proceedings — Tests — Offences of fraud, cheating, etc. alleged — Whether offences alleged in FIR prima facie made out — Whether criminal proceedings initiated only to cause harassment to accused and continuance thereof would amount to abuse of process of court — Disputed question of fact not required to be gone into by Court — But documents of unimpeachable character can be taken into consideration — Although Court should not encourage the practice of initiating criminal proceedings when large number of disputes could ordinarily be determined by civil courts, but Court cannot go beyond its jurisdiction to interfere with the criminal proceedings otherwise genuine — Plausible defence of accused not good enough for exercise of inherent powers — FIR lodged by appellant on charges under Ss. 406, 420 and 436 IPC alleging that blank cheques were issued by appellant to respondents which were later fraudulently used by respondents — Respondents after issuing notice on appellant filed complaint petition under Ss. 138 and 141 of Negotiable Instruments Act alleging dishonour of certain cheques issued by appellant and also filed application under S. 482 for quashing of FIR — Quashing application allowed by High Court taking the view that FIR was lodged only to pre-empt respondents from filing the complaint petition — Held, on facts, High Court erred in going into merits of the case and interfering with the criminal proceedings — However, since allegedly the blank cheques were earlier given to respondents for use for business purposes when relation between the parties were good but the alleged fraudulent use took place few years thereafter when dispute arose between them, S. 420 IPC not attracted as fraudulent inducement must be there at the inception and not at a later stage to attract S. 420 IPC — But S. 406 IPC was invocable — Hence investigation should be confined to charge under S. 406 IPC only — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

The private parties were Directors of the appellant Company and were closely related. The Company had two units. The Managing Director of the Company was one L. Allegedly, pursuant to negotiations between L on the one hand and Accused 2 and 3 Directors on the other, signed blank cheques were handed over by L to the said accused persons during period 2000 to 2004 as process for obtaining cheques from the Managing Director had been taking considerable time. However, dispute between the parties arose in 2005. A company petition was filed before the High Court. A scheme for arrangement submitted by the parties was approved, pursuant whereto one unit was transferred to Accused 1 and the other unit to L. For that purpose the units were demerged. L allegedly made oral requests to Accused 2 and 3 to return the unused signed blank cheques. However, allegedly on the premise that Respondents 2 and 3 entered into a conspiracy to misuse the said cheques L filed an informal complaint with the police in 2006 with an endorsement that there was no role for the police at that stage. The respondents thereafter issued a letter stating that with a view to repay a part of the institutional liability of Respondent 1 a cheque had been drawn by the appellant in favour of Respondent 1 which had been deposited for collection. A first information report was then lodged by the appellant alleging that the blank signed cheques issued in the year 2001-2002 had been fraudulently used. Legal notices were, however, issued by Respondent 1 upon the appellant with regard to dishonour of three cheques. On or about 13-11-2006 an application was filed before the High Court for quashing the first information report. On 6-12-2006, a complaint petition was filed by Respondent 1 under Sections 138 and 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act against the appellant and also its Chairman and Managing Director. The High Court not only considered the ingredients for the offences under Sections 406, 420 and 463 IPC but also the background facts leading to the dispute between the parties so as to enable it to ascertain whether the ingredients thereof stood satisfied or not. It proceeded on the basis that in view of the demerger scheme, the conduct of the appellant in keeping mum for a long time for getting the unused blank cheques returned is tell tale. It entered into the question as to whether the complaint petition was filed only with a view to pre-empt the respondents herein to take recourse to the remedies available to them to initiate a criminal proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act or the complaint petition in effect and substance should be permitted to be raised only by way of defence. It was held that the said complaint petition was filed on the basis whereof the first information report was directed to be lodged only to pre-empt the accused from filing a complaint petition under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and that even taking the allegations in the complaint to be true and correct, they did not make out a prima facie case of cheating or criminal breach of trust or forgery. Accordingly, the High Court held that continuation of the proceedings amounted to abuse of process of the Court.

Allowing the appeal in part,

Held :

The parameters of jurisdiction of the High Court in exercising its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC is now well settled. Although it is of wide amplitude, a great deal of caution is also required in its exercise. What is required is application of well-known legal principles involved in the matter. It is neither feasible nor practicable to lay down exhaustively as to on what ground the jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC should be exercised. (Paras 17 and 18)

Criminal proceedings should not be encouraged when it is found to be mala fide or otherwise abuse of the process of court. (Para 20)

Ordinarily, a defence of an accused although appears to be plausible should not be taken into consideration for exercise of jurisdiction under Section 482. The High Court at that stage would not ordinarily enter into a disputed question of fact. It, however, does not mean that documents of unimpeachable character should not be taken into consideration at any cost for the purpose of finding out as to whether continuance of the criminal proceedings would amount to an abuse of the process of court or that the complaint petition is filed for causing mere harassment to the accused. Although a large number of disputes should ordinarily be determined only by the civil courts, but criminal cases are filed only for achieving the ultimate goal, namely, to force the accused to pay the amount due to the complainant immediately. The courts on the one hand should not encourage such a practice; but, on the other, cannot also travel beyond its jurisdiction to interfere with the proceeding which is otherwise genuine. The courts cannot also lose sight of the fact that in certain matters, both civil proceedings and criminal proceedings would be maintainable. (Para 22)

In this case what has failed to attract the attention of the High Court was that maintainability of a criminal proceeding like the present one should not be determined only upon raising a presumption in terms of Section 139 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, it being a rebuttable one. (Para 23)

The High Court should have further taken into consideration the fact that in the event, the defence of the appellant is accepted in the criminal case, it will have no remedy to prosecute the respondents again. To contend that the acquittal of the appellant would have been the springboard for filing a complaint will not be correct. Nobody knows when the criminal case would come to an end. In a given situation, even it may become barred by limitation. It must also be borne in mind that commercial expediencies may lead a person to issue blank cheques. The course of action in the aforementioned situation, which could be taken recourse to was to make an attempt to find out as to whether the complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety constitutes an offence under Sections 420, 406 and 463 of the Penal Code or not. (Para 24)

Ingredients of cheating are:

(i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission; and

(ii) fraudulent or dishonest inducement of that person to either deliver any property to any person or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. (Para 25)

Sections 415 read with Section 420 IPC indicates that fraudulent or dishonest inducement on the part of the accused must be at the inception and not at a subsequent stage. In this case blank cheques were handed over to the accused during the period 2000-2004 for use thereof for business purposes but the dispute between the parties admittedly arose much thereafter i.e. in 2005. Thus no case for proceeding against the respondent under Section 420 of the Penal Code is, therefore, made out. (Paras 26 to 28)

Filling up of the blanks in a cheque by itself would not amount to forgery. Whereas in the complaint petition, allegations have been made that it was Respondents 2 and 3 who had entered into a conspiracy to commit the said offence as indicated hereinbefore, in the counter-affidavit, it has been alleged that the employees of the respondent Company did so. (Para 29)

Although, Section 120-B IPC has been added, there does not exist any averment that Respondents 2 and 3 had entered into any conspiracy with their employees. No case for proceeding with the offence of forgery against the respondents has, thus, also been made out. (Para 30)

However, a case for proceeding against the respondents under Section 406 IPC has been made out. A cheque being a property, the same was entrusted to the respondents. If the said property has been misappropriated or has been used for a purpose for which the same had not been handed over, a case under Section 406 IPC may be found to have been made out. It may be true that even in a proceeding under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the appellant could raise a defence that the cheques were not meant to be used towards discharge of a lawful liability or a debt, but the same by itself would not mean that in an appropriate case, a complaint petition cannot be allowed to be filed. (Para 31)

The respondents were keeping watch over the matter. As soon as a first information report was lodged, a notice was immediately sent. A quashing application was filed within a few days of the lodging of the first information report. The investigation was not allowed to take place at all. Whereas it would have been the duty of the court to uphold and/or to protect the personal liberty of an accused in a case, but where the first information report prima facie discloses commission of a cognizable offence, the High Court, ordinarily, should not have interfered with investigation thereof by the statutory authority. (Para 32)

Investigation by IO may now be confined to the charge under Section 406 IPC. (Para 33). Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd., (2008) 13 SCC 678: AIR 2008 SC 1683: (2008) 63 AIC 146 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-1-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Indian Oil Corp. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; All Cargo Movers (I) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776; B. Suresh Yadav v. Sharifa Bee, (2007) 13 SCC 107, relied on

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

[7426] — S. 482 — Cheating — Essentials to constitute offence — Intention to cheat — Held, misrepresentation from the very beginning is a sine qua non for constitution of an offence of cheating, although in some cases, intention to cheat may develop at a later stage of formation of the contract — Respondent co-sharer in joint property, lodging FIR against appellant co-sharers by levelling allegation against them that they executed a deed of sale in favour of a third party stating that they had one-third share in the joint property although they were not entitled therefor — On such facts, considering that appellants had not made any representation to respondent complainant and that no contract and/or transaction had been entered into by and between the complainant and the appellants, held, it could not be said that by reason of the alleged act of the appellants, the complainant had been cheated — Hence, criminal proceedings against appellants quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 415 and 420 (Paras 14 to 16). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

V.Y. Jose v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 3 SCC 78: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 996; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370; Ravindra Kumar Madhanlal Goenka v. Rugmini Ram Raghav Spinners (P) Ltd., (2009) 11 SCC 529, relied on [7427] — S. 482 — Fraud — Question to be determined — Quashment of proceedings if warranted — Positive assertion in complaint that assurance had been given by petitioner (attorney of Accused 1) to complainant that property in question was free from all encumbrances and that Accused 1 was sole owner and that had not such a representation been made relating to status of ownership of property in question, complainant may not have entered into transaction at all — Held, whether petitioner was truly mistaken as regards information given by him is an important issue which needs to be decided in answering the charge made — Prima facie case for going to trial, thus, made out — Hence, no interference with impugned judgment dismissing petitioner's application under S. 482 CrPC called for — Penal Code, 1860, S. 420 r/w S. 34 (Paras 15 to 20). S.P. Gupta v. Ashutosh Gupta, (2010) 6 SCC 562.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2010]

Nageshwar Prasad Singh v. Narayan Singh, (1998) 5 SCC 694: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1378, referred to [7428] — S. 482 — Forgery — Essentials to constitute offence of — Making of any false document, held, is a sine qua non therefor — What is necessary is that the document must have been executed with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document inter alia was made by the authority of a person by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made — In present case, respondent co-sharer in joint property, lodging FIR against appellant co-sharers by levelling allegation against them that they executed a deed of sale in favour of a third party stating that they had one-third share in the joint property although they were not entitled thereto — Held, if somebody was aggrieved by false assertions made in sale deed, it would be the vendees and not the co-sharers — Further, appellants were not alleged to be guilty of creating any false document — Thus, offence as to forgery not made out — Hence, criminal proceedings against appellants quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 463 and 465 (Paras 18 to 20). Devendra v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 495: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 461.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2009]

[7429] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Parameters of — Appellant's petition for quashing the charge-sheet and consequent proceedings initiated against him by complainant (Respondent 2) for allegedly committing offences punishable under Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC, dismissed by High Court on ground that it was not permissible for it to look into the materials placed before the Magistrate — Held, such an approach was not in consonance with the broad parameters, enumerated in a series of decisions of the Supreme Court to be applied while dealing with a petition under S. 482 for discharge and therefore, the impugned order unsustainable — To arrive at the conclusion whether or not the appellant had made out a case for quashing of the charge-sheet against him, High Court ought to have taken into consideration the material which was placed before the Magistrate — For dismissal of the petition, High Court had to record a finding that the uncontroverted allegations, as made, establish a prima facie case against the appellant — In absence of material stated to have been filed along with the charge-sheet, High Court did not get an opportunity to apply its mind as to whether on the basis of the material before the Magistrate, a prima facie case had been made out against the appellant-accused — Impugned order set aside and the matter is remitted to High Court for fresh consideration in accordance with law — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 (Paras 19, 21 and 22). Fakhruddin Ahmad v. State of Uttaranchal, (2008) 17 SCC 157: (2008) 6 All LJ 249: (2009) 1 ECrN 455 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4377: (2008) 3 APLJ 163 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and D.K. Jain, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-9-2008]

[7430] — S. 482 — Petition under, for quashing of criminal complaint under Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471 and 506 IPC — Principles for exercise of power under, restated — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471

The parameters of interference with a criminal proceeding by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC are well known. One of the grounds on which such interference is permissible is that the allegations contained in the complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety, commission of an offence is not disclosed. The High Court may also interfere where the action on the part of the complainant is mala fide. (Para 12). Hira Lal v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 89: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1247: AIR 2009 SC 2380: 2009 Cri LJ 2849: (2009) 4 All LJ 520: (2009) 78 AIC 134 (SC): (2009) 2 APLJ 42 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-2009]

[7431] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Alleged commission of the offences punishable under Ss. 420/465/467/468/471 and 120-B IPC — Appellants alleged to have transferred a portion of the property without having complete ownership over it — Appellants, however, in possession of the same and a decree restraining the respondents from interfering with their possession, and construction carried by them, passed in their favour — Order of mutation passed in their favour was, however, cancelled — Held, unless there exists a statutory interdict, a person in possession may transfer his right, title and interest in favour of a third party — Further held, only because the appellants are said to have transferred a portion of the property without having complete ownership over it by itself does not satisfy the ingredients of Ss. 467, 468 and 469 IPC — Furthermore, it is one thing to say that the appellants had committed acts of criminal misconduct while trying to obtain orders of mutation but it is another thing to say that only because they filed such an application, the same by itself would tantamount to commission of a criminal offence — Hence, institution of a criminal case must be held to be an act of mala fide on the part of the respondents — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420/465/467/468/471 (Paras 14, 15, 16 and 19). Ramesh Dutt v. State of Punjab, (2009) 15 SCC 429: (2009) 81 AIC 183 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-7-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[7432] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Where allegations contained in FIR, even if given face value and taken to be correct, do not disclose commission of the alleged offence and disclose only a civil dispute, FIR liable to be quashed — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 405 and 420. Dalip Kaur v. Jagnar Singh, (2009) 14 SCC 696: (2009) 80 AIC 212 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2009]

Ajay Mitra v. State of M.P., (2003) 3 SCC 11: 2003 SCC (Cri) 703; Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 712: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 620, relied on

R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; Hira Lal v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 89, applied

[7433] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — On facts, allowed — Huge quantities of paddy alleged to have been diverted by Accused 1 and made to disappear with active assistance of Accused 2 to 9 and further that he purchased properties in name of benamis with their assistance — No specific role ascribed to appellants (Accused 2, 3, 6, 7 and 8) — Allegations were bald and vague — Hence, held, no useful purpose would be served by allowing the prosecution to continue — Proceedings against them liable to be quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 420 and 424 r/w S. 37

A-1 was the sole proprietor of a rice mill. Accused 2 to Accused 5 were the family members of Accused 1, whereas Accused 6 to Accused 8 were the son-in-law, the daughter of Accused 1 and the brother of the son-in-law of Accused 1 respectively. Accused 2 and Accused 3 were the two sons of Accused 1 who are aged about 28 and 25 years respectively. Accused 1 was purchasing paddy from the local paddy growers in the village and he issued vouchers to some of them, while to others promissory notes ranging from Rs 30,000 to Rs 3 lakhs were executed as security towards the purchase of paddy. He had also obtained Rs 30 lakhs as loan from SBI. However, his business declined and consequently he owed debts to the banks, several financial institutions and to the public and his liabilities aggregated to Rs 89,51,600. Therefore, on 24-6-2005, he filed an insolvency petition. Consequent upon filing of the aforesaid insolvency petition several representations were made to the District Collector by the villagers making allegations against Accused 1 and his family members. A charge-sheet was filed under Ss. 406, 420 and 424 r/w S. 37 IPC against Accused 1 to 9. In the said charge-sheet the police stated that Accused 1 to Accused 9, developed an evil idea by colluding themselves and fraudulently directed the loans and gold secretly in benami names in order to defraud the persons who supplied paddy to them. It was further stated that during the year 2005 Accused 1 purchased paddy crop from several farmers saying that he would pay the cost of paddy as per the existing market value. They blindly believed Accused 1 and unloaded huge quantities of paddy produced by them and entrusted the same with Accused 1. But Accused 1 diverted part of the paddy to Accused 5 who was running rice mill on the ground of inadequate power supply and secretly sold it for his own use. It was further stated that 10 days before that he had also diverted huge quantities to "NRI Industries". Eventually, Accused 1 gained unlawfully to the tune of Rs 1,20,00,000 by cheating the abovementioned paddy suppliers.

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

Accused 1 to Accused 9 including the appellants herein (Accused 2 and Accused 3) jointly filed petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint and charge-sheet on the ground that it was only a civil liability arising out of breach of contract by Accused 1 in payment of price of paddy and, therefore, it was improper on the part of the police to come to their aid to recover the money under a transaction by filing criminal cases and that the said criminal complaint itself was a counterblast to the insolvency petition filed by Accused 1. However, High Court observed that accused had collected paddy from various agriculturists worth Rs 1,20,00,000 by making them to believe that the cost of paddy would be paid immediately but after having collected the paddy, they failed to pay the amount to the agriculturists and thereby they cheated those persons. So, it was held that there was prima facie material against all the accused i.e. Accused 1 to Accused 9. Accordingly, the High Court dismissed the criminal petition. Hence, the present appeal.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

When at an initial stage a prosecution is asked to be quashed, the test to be applied by the court is as to whether the uncontroverted allegations as made in the complaint filed prima facie establish the offence. It is also for the court to take into consideration any special feature that may appear in a particular case while considering whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. This is so on the basis that the court cannot be utilised for any oblique purpose. (Para 31)

In the instant case, on perusing the report filed with SHO, and the charge-sheet submitted by him, it is found that most of the allegations in the aforesaid charge-sheet are mainly directed against Accused 1. (Para 33)

The allegations made against the other accused are that Accused 1 diverted huge quantities of paddy to NRI Industries, and made it disappear with the active assistance of Accused 2 to Accused 9 and that he purchased lands in the name of benamis with the assistance of Accused 6 and Accused 2. These are the only allegations made against the role of the present appellants, namely, Accused 2 and 3 and Accused 6, 7 and 8. Without ascribing any specific role to any one of them the aforesaid allegation appears to be very bald and vague. Similarly the allegations made against Accused 2 and Accused 3 that they had helped their father in purchasing some property is also very vague as no specific role is ascribed to them. (Paras 34 and 35)

Hence, no useful purpose would be served by allowing the prosecution to be continued against them. Proceedings as against the appellants herein i.e. Accused 2 and 3 and Accused 6 to 8 quashed. However, no opinion expressed so far as the allegations made in the said charge-sheet against Accused 1 and the other accused persons are concerned. Further clarified that observations were only with respect to the criminal proceedings and none of these observations should be construed as an opinion so far civil liability, if any, is concerned. (Paras 36 and 37). Chunduru Siva Ram Krishna v. Peddi Ravindra Babu, (2009) 11 SCC 203: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1297.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-3-2009]

[7434] — Ss. 482 and 156 — Interference by High Court under S. 482 during investigation by police — Limitations of — Overstepping limits of judicial interference — Impermissibility — Offences under Ss. 406/420 IPC — Held, it is statutory obligation and duty of police to investigate into crime and courts normally ought not to interfere and guide investigating agency as to in what manner investigation has to proceed — Jurisdiction under S. 482 conferred on High Court has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution, only where such exercise is justified by the test laid down in provision itself — Herein, interference by High Court, without recording any reasons, with investigation, which is within exclusive domain of police, by virtually directing police to investigate case from a particular angle and take certain steps, which the police, depending upon evidence collected and host of other circumstances, may or may not have attempted to take in its discretion, held, was overstepping limits of judicial interference — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420

In the instant case, the respondent lodged an FIR against the appellants alleging commission of offences under Sections 406 and 420 IPC. The police, having registered the case against the appellants, commenced its investigation. Even while the investigation was in progress, for some inexplicable reasons, the respondent moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC, seeking directions to the police. The petition was filed within one week of registration of the crime, by which time the police had already started serious investigation. None of the appellants were impleaded as party-respondents to the petition filed under Section 482 CrPC. The State alone was impleaded as the respondent.

The High Court disposed of the same observing, inter alia, that it was obligatory on the part of the police to conduct investigation in accordance with law, including recording of statements from witnesses, arrest, seizure of property, perusal of various documents and filing of charge-sheet. The High Court accordingly directed the police to expedite and complete the investigation. The impugned order resulted in drastic consequences far-reaching in nature. Hence the present appeals.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

It is the statutory obligation and duty of the police to investigate into the crime and the courts normally ought not to interfere and guide the investigating agency as to in what manner the investigation has to proceed. The High Court, without recording any reason whatsoever, directed the police that it is obligatory on their part to record statements from witnesses, arrest, seize property and file charge-sheet. It is difficult to discern as to how such directions resulting in far-reaching consequences could have been issued by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, which also resulted in much harassment of the appellants. The High Court interfered with the investigation of crime, which is within the exclusive domain of the police, by virtually directing the police to investigate the case from a particular angle and take certain steps which the police, depending upon the evidence collected and host of other circumstances, may or may not have attempted to take any such steps in its discretion. (Paras 24, 25 and 31)

It is not necessary that every investigation should result in arrest, seizure of the property and ultimately in filing of the charge-sheet. The police, in exercise of its statutory power coupled with duty, upon investigation of a case, may find that a case is made out requiring it to file charge-sheet or may find that no case as such is made out. It needs no reiteration that the jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC conferred on the High Court has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution only where such exercise is justified by the test laid down in the provision itself. (Para 32)

There was no allegation of dereliction of any duty on the part of the investigating agency. There was also no allegation of any collusion and deliberate delay on the part of the investigating agency in the matter of investigation into the case, that had been promptly registered on the information lodged by the respondent. (Para 17)

The impugned order must be held to be an order passed overstepping the limits of judicial interference. Even in public interest litigation proceedings, appropriate directions may be issued and the purpose in issuing such directions is essentially to ensure performance of statutory duty by the investigating agency. The duty of the court in such proceedings is to ensure that the agencies do their duties in compliance with law. (Paras 28 and 29)

The High Court, in the instant case, did not even advert to the relevant facts. As stated in the order itself, it was more guided by the arguments made across the Bar that the police has not taken any steps to arrest the persons and seize the amounts involved in this case from the appellants though there is no such factual foundation as such laid in the petition. The High Court has altogether ignored the counter filed by the police that the police had already examined ten witnesses within a short span of time after the registration of crime and recorded their statements. (Para 30)

The submission made by the respondent that the High Court did not issue any directions but merely disposed of the petition with the observations reminding the police of its duty, is not impressive. The question that arises for consideration is whether there was any occasion or necessity to make those "observations" even if they are to be considered to be observations and not any directions. It is not even remotely suggested that there was any deliberate inaction or failure in the matter of discharge of duties by the police. There was no allegation of any subversion of processes of law facilitating the accused to go scot-free nor is there any finding as such recorded by the High Court in its order. (Para 35)

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

For the aforesaid reasons, the impugned judgment of the High Court cannot be sustained, and hence, is set aside. (Para 42). D. Venkatasubramaniam v. M.K. Mohan Krishnamachari, (2009) 10 SCC 488: (2009) 82 AIC 245 (SC): (2009) 3 APLJ 205 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and B. Sudershan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-2009]

King Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, (1943-44) 71 IA 203: AIR 1945 PC 18; State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 2 SCR 52; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272; M.C. Mehta (Taj Corridor Scam) v. Union of India, (2007) 1 SCC 110: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 264; M.C. Abraham v. State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 649: 2003 SCC (Cri) 628, relied on

[7435] — Ss. 482 and 250 — Quashment — Commercial transactions — Misuse of — Criminal proceedings — Need for exercise of power under S. 250 — If allegations in the complaint, taken at their face value, disclose a criminal offence, complaint cannot be quashed merely because it relates to a commercial transaction or breach of contract for which civil remedy is available or has been availed — A commercial transaction or dispute may also involve criminal offence — If it is found that a frivolous criminal complaint had been filed knowing well that remedy lay only in civil law, person who filed such complaint should himself be made accountable in accordance with law at the end of such proceeding — Court should exercise power under S. 250 CrPC frequently where there is malice or frivolousness or ulterior motives on the part of the complainant

The appellant Indian Oil Corporation (IOC) entered into a contract with the respondent NEPC India Ltd., agreeing to supply aircraft fuel. According to the appellant, in respect of the fuel supplied under the contract, the respondent committed default in making payments. The respondent hypothecated its two aircrafts to the appellant under a deed. It was stipulated in clause (2) of the deed that the hypothecation was by way of charge and as security for payment of the amounts due. Clause (3) read with the schedule set out the instalments' schedule for payment of the amount due. Under clause (6), NEPC India declared that it would not assign, sell, pledge, charge, underlet or otherwise encumber or part with the possession, custody or beneficial interest in respect of the two aircrafts without the previous written consent of IOC. It also undertook not to do any act which may diminish the value of the hypothecated property without clearing the entire outstanding amount. Clause (9) provided that if NEPC India failed to pay any of the instalments with interest within the stipulated time, or if any undertaking or assurance given by NEPC India was found to be false, IOC shall have the "right to take possession of the hypothecated property" and sell the same by public auction or by private contract and appropriate the sale proceeds towards the outstanding dues without recourse to court of law. Clause (12) confirmed that NEPC India had handed over the title deeds relating to the aircraft to IOC, and agreed to receive them back only after paying the amounts due. As the respondent failed to pay the first two instalments as per the schedule, appellant stopped supply of fuel. However, subsequently, under a fresh agreement, a revised payment schedule was agreed upon and the appellant agreed to recommence supply of aircraft fuel on "cash-and-carry" basis. But this agreement also came to an end as the instalments were not paid. Apprehending that the respondent may remove one of the hypothecated aircraft from Coimbatore Airport to a place outside its reach, the appellant filed a suit in the High Court seeking a mandatory injunction to the authorities concerned to detain the aircraft so as to enable it to take possession thereof. The High Court granted an interim injunction. In regard to the other hypothecated aircraft kept at Chennai Airport the appellant filed another suit in City Civil Court for a similar mandatory injunction. The appellant then filed two complaints against NEPC India and its two directors under Section 200 CrPC alleging that NEPC India unauthorisedly and clandestinely removed the engines and certain other parts from the two hypothecated aircrafts so as to defeat IOC's right to take possession of the two aircrafts in view of default in payments made by NEPC India and further that such act was against the terms of the hypothecation deed and would amount to offences punishable under Sections 378 (theft), 403 (dishonest misappropriation of property), 405 (criminal breach of trust), 415 (cheating), 425 (mischief) of the Penal Code, 1860. The respondents thereupon filed petitions under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the said two complaints on the following grounds:

(i) The complaints related to purely contractual disputes of a civil nature in respect of which IOC had already sought injunctive reliefs and money decrees.

(ii) Even if all the allegations in the complaints were taken as true, they did not constitute any criminal offence as defined under Sections 378, 403, 405, 415 or 425 IPC.

The High Court by a common judgment allowed both the petitions and quashed the two complaints. It accepted the second ground urged by the respondents herein, but rejected the first ground. The said order of the High Court is under challenge in these appeals. On the rival contentions urged, the following points arose for consideration:

(i) Whether existence or availment of civil remedy in respect of disputes arising from breach of contract, bars remedy under criminal law?

(ii) Whether the allegations in the complaint, if accepted on face value, constitute any offence under Sections 378, 403, 405, 415 or 425 IPC?

Held :

A given set of facts may make out: (a) purely a civil wrong; or (b) purely a criminal offence; or (c) a civil wrong as also a criminal offence. A commercial transaction or a contractual dispute, apart from furnishing a cause of action for seeking remedy in civil law, may also involve a criminal offence. As the nature and scope of a civil proceeding are different from a criminal proceeding, the mere fact that the complaint relates to a commercial transaction or breach of contract, for which a civil remedy is available or has been availed of, is not by itself a ground to quash the criminal proceedings. The test is whether the allegations in the complaint disclose a criminal offence or not. (Para 12)

In this case, it is no doubt true that IOC has initiated several civil proceedings to safeguard its interests and recover the amounts due. These acts show that civil remedies were and are available in law and IOC has taken recourse to such remedies. But it does not follow therefrom that criminal law remedy is barred or IOC is estopped from seeking such remedy. (Para 15)

The respondents, no doubt, have stated that they had no intention to cheat or dishonestly divert or misappropriate the hypothecated aircraft or any parts thereof. But these are defences that will have to be put forth and considered during the trial. Defences that may be available, or facts/aspects when established during the trial, may lead to acquittal, are not grounds for quashing the complaint at the threshold. At this stage, the only question relevant is whether the averments in the complaint spell out the ingredients of a criminal offence or not. (Para 16)

The High Court was, therefore, justified in rejecting the contention of the respondents that the criminal proceedings should be quashed in view of the pendency of several civil proceedings. (Para 17)

However, there is a growing tendency in business circles to convert purely civil disputes into criminal cases. This is obviously on account of a prevalent impression that civil law remedies are time consuming and do not adequately protect the interests of lenders/creditors. Such a tendency is seen in several family disputes also, leading to irretrievable breakdown of marriages/families. There is also an impression that if a person could somehow be entangled in a criminal prosecution, there is a likelihood of imminent settlement. Any effort to settle civil disputes and claims, which do not involve any criminal offence, by applying pressure through criminal prosecution should be deprecated and discouraged. (Para 13)

While no one with a legitimate cause or grievance should be prevented from seeking remedies available in criminal law, a complainant who initiates or persists with a prosecution, being fully aware that the criminal proceedings are unwarranted and his remedy lies only in civil law, should himself be made accountable, at the end of such misconceived criminal proceedings, in accordance with law. One positive step that can be taken by the courts, to curb unnecessary prosecutions and harassment of innocent parties, is to exercise their power under Section 250 CrPC more frequently, where they discern malice or frivolousness or ulterior motives on the part of the complainant. (Para 14). Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188: AIR 2006 SC 2780: (2006) 2 Guj LH 753.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: H.K. Sema and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-7-2006]

Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Central Bureau of Investigation v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045; State of Bihar v. Rajendra Agrawalla, (1996) 8 SCC 164: 1996 SCC (Cri) 628; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; M. Krishnan v. Vijay Singh, (2001) 8 SCC 645: 2002 SCC (Cri) 19; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283, relied on

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

[7436] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Propriety of quashing complaint against some of the accused when complaint made specific allegations against all — Complaint filed by appellant alleging that Chairman & MD (A-1), Principal Manager (Finance) and Company Secretary (A-2) Joint Secretary and Manager (Finance) (A-3) of a company together committed offence under Ss. 465 and 466 r/w S. 34 IPC by filing a forged certificate in court in a pending proceeding between them and the appellant — Magistrate coming to the conclusion that prima facie the offence as alleged was disclosed against all the three accused and accordingly issuing summons — Writ petition filed before High Court for quashing the proceedings — High Court taking the view that it was incumbent on the part of the complainant to plead the role of each accused in the making of the document and accordingly holding that A-2 was involved in the forgery but the allegations contained in the complaint were not sufficient to implicate A-1 and A-3 and as such quashing the proceedings initiated against them — Held, High Court erred in quashing the proceedings initiated against A-1 and A-3 when in the complaint it was specifically alleged that all the three accused had together forged the document which was presented in Court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 465/34 — Constitution of India — Art. 226. Tarun K. Shah v. C.R. Alimchandani, (2001) 9 SCC 728.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Kirpal and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-7-2000]

C.R. Alimchandani v. J.K. Shah, 1999 Cri LJ 2416 (Bom), reversed

[7437] — S. 482 — Offences under Ss. 406 and 420 IPC — Necessary ingredients — Allegation of intention to cheat and of refusal by appellants to pay price for goods received from complainant — No allegation in complaint however, that at very inception of the contract between the parties, there was any intention to cheat — Held, no criminal offence is disclosed, much less under Ss. 406 and 420 and the case is one purely of civil liability — Not quashing prosecution of the appellants on such a complaint would amount to an abuse of process of court, hence appeal allowed and prosecution quashed — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 37 and 73 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420. Hotline Teletubes and Components Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 261: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1515.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2004]

[7438] — S. 482 — Quashment — Breach of trust, fraud, cheating, etc. — Criminal complaint filed by the complainant alleging that the appellants had refused to execute the written agreement transferring the plot in his favour for which he had already paid part consideration pursuant to an oral agreement — Cognizance under Ss. 406, 419, 420 and 120-B IPC taken by the Magistrate — High Court by the impugned order dismissing appellants' petition for quashing the cognizance — Inherent jurisdiction of High Court — Held, should be exercised in extreme exceptions — Held on facts, version of the complainant was self-contradictory since at one place he had stated that the oral agreement to sell took place in July 2002, while at the other he alleged that he started paying consideration amount between 15-7-2000 and 15-12-2002 — No prima facie case was made out against the appellants involving them in the commission of alleged offences — Even if the allegations made in the complaint are accepted to be true and correct the appellants cannot be said to have committed any offence of cheating or criminal breach of trust — Neither can any guilty intention be attributed to them nor can there possibly be any intention on their part to deceive the complainant — Averments of the complaint and the statements of the complainant and his witnesses recorded by the Magistrate would amount to civil liability inter se the parties and not criminal liability — Hence, cognizance taken by the Magistrate was clearly an abuse of the process of court warranting interference in the interest of justice — Instant case was a case of extreme exception where the High Court ought to have exercised its inherent jurisdiction and power to set aside the unwarranted and unjustified order of the Magistrate — Impugned order quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 419, 420 and 120-B (Paras 4, 10 and 11). Ram Biraji Devi v. Umesh Kumar Singh, (2006) 6 SCC 669: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 176: AIR 2006 SC 2035: 2006 Cri LJ 2782: (2006) 102 Cut LT 385.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and Lokeshwar Singh Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2006]

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47, distinguished [7439] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — Complaints alleging commission of offences under Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B IPC, etc. — Held, no prima facie case made out against appellants in respect of alleged offences under Ss. 420 and 406 IPC, hence question of alleged conspiracy between appellants does not arise — Complaint lacks any such substance regarding conspiracy — It was a fit case where High Court should have exercised its jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC — Complaint case, quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 406 and 120-B (Paras 8 to 10, 14, 15 and 39 to 41). V.P. Shrivastava v. Indian Explosives Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 361: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-2010]

All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Dinesh Dutt Joshi v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 570: 2002 SCC (Cri) 24; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513, relied on

[7440] — S. 482 — Cheating — Pre-requisite for — Fraudulent and dishonest intention, from when to subsist — Distinction from breach of contract — Contract for supply of goods — Fraudulent and dishonest intention must be shown to be existing from the very beginning of the transaction — From mere failure to keep the promise at a subsequent stage, offence of cheating cannot be made out — Distinction between offence of cheating and mere breach of contract should be kept in mind — Mere use of words cheating in the complaint would not be sufficient — Substance of the complaint has to be seen — Having regard to the substance of the complaint in the instant case, held, it pertains to a civil case of breach of contract and not a criminal case of offence of cheating — Hence Magistrate erred in issuing process — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 73, 74 and 75 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 415, 418 and 420

The respondent Company filed a complaint against the appellant alleging that a memorandum of understanding (MoU) was executed between the accused-appellant and the complainant for supply of steel grip tapes inter alia stipulating that 50% of the payments against monthly quantity would be given in advance and balance 50% on receipt of the goods. The complainant delivered 56,94,120 reels of steel grip tapes valued at Rs 3,38,62,860 to the accused and out of this amount, the accused made only part-payment of Rs 3,05,39,086 leaving balance amount of Rs 33,23,774. It was alleged that after making this payment, the accused did not make further payment despite repeated demands and started giving reasons besides raising disputes in respect of the material purchased six years back being defective. After making the aforesaid averments in the complaint, it was concluded that "that MoU was signed by the accused with mala fide and criminal intention of grabbing money and goods from the complainant's Company and to deceive, cheat and cause wrongful loss to the complainant's Company, but the complainant was not aware of the criminal intention of the accused while execution of above MoU". The complainant had also sent a notice to the accused wherein there was no mention about any deceit or cheating. In a complaint filed by the complainant with the police also except for a vague allegation about cheating, nothing of substance was stated. According to the complainant, on the advice of the police the complaint in question was filed before the Magistrate. The Magistrate issued process against the accused. But the Sessions Court set aside the order of the Magistrate issuing process and the High Court reversed the judgment of the Sessions Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held:

From mere failure of a person to keep up promise subsequently, a culpable intention right at the beginning, that is, when he made the promises cannot be presumed. A distinction has to be kept in mind between mere breach of contract and the offence of cheating. It depends upon the intention of the accused at the time of inducement. The subsequent conduct is not the sole test. Mere breach of contract cannot give rise to criminal prosecution for cheating unless fraudulent, dishonest intention is shown at the beginning of the transaction. The substance of the complaint is to be seen. Mere use of the expression "cheating" in the complaint is of no consequence. (Paras 6 and 8)

In the present case except for mention of the words "deceive" and "cheat" in the complaint filed before the Magistrate and "cheating" in the complaint filed before the police, there is no averment about the deceit, cheating or fraudulent intention of the accused at the time of entering into MoU wherefrom it can be inferred that the accused had the intention to deceive the complainant to pay. It is clear from the substance of the complaint that present is a simple case of civil disputes between the parties. Requisite averments so as to make out a case of cheating are absolutely absent. The Sessions Court had rightly set aside the order of the Magistrate issuing process to the appellant. (Paras 8 and 10). Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, D.M. Dharmadhikari and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-10-2004]

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565, relied on [7441] — S. 482 — S. 406 IPC proceedings — Quashment — Matter purely of civil nature — Proceedings against petitioner for shortage of paddy and rice procured by him for FCI — Arbitration agreement between petitioner and respondent permitting shortage up to certain limit and for payment of

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

penalty beyond that at rates prescribed in the agreement — Matter referred to and pending arbitration — Meanwhile criminal proceedings under S. 406, IPC initiated and cognizance taken by Magistrate — In appeal against High Court's refusal to quash the criminal proceedings, held that matter being purely of a civil nature, the proceedings must be quashed — Penal Code, 1860, S. 406. Bal Kishan Das v. P.C. Nayar, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 412: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1055: AIR 1991 SC 1531: 1991 Cri LJ 1837.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1991]

[7442] — S. 482 — Criminal breach of trust — Ingredients of — Entrustment/dominion over property — Misappropriation — Held, there was nothing in complaint which even remotely suggested that respondent IEL had entrusted any property to appellant accused — No evidence that appellants had dominion over any of properties of respondent, which they dishonestly converted to their own use — Complaint quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 405 and 406 (Paras 33 to 38). V.P. Shrivastava v. Indian Explosives Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 361: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-2010]

Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 507; Common Cause v. Union of India, (1999) 6 SCC 667: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1196; Jaswantrai Manilal Akhaney v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 575: 1956 Cri LJ 1116; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

[7443] — S. 482 — Criminal breach of trust and cheating — Pleadings — Ingredients of the offence not averred in criminal complaint filed one year after civil suit — Civil suit was filed alleging negligence and breach of contractual obligations — Held, breach of contract simpliciter does not constitute an offence — Allegations in the criminal complaint must disclose the necessary ingredients therefor — Court can for the purpose of finding out as to whether the said allegations are prima facie correct, take into consideration the correspondences exchanged by the parties and other admitted documents — Criminal proceedings should not be encouraged, when it is found to be mala fide or otherwise an abuse of the process of the court — Superior courts while exercising inherent power should also strive to serve the ends of justice — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420

The parties had entered into a contract of carriage. The first respondent approached the appellants for delivery of six consignments valued at US $98,715.29 to the original consignee, M/s Universal Apparels (EPZ), Mombassa, Kenya. By reason of a fax message, the appellants asked their counterparts in Mombassa, Kenya to confirm delivery of consignment asking it to see that the cargo is delivered only against presentation of original bills of lading. The goods in question were said to have been delivered by the agent of the petitioner to the original consignee without their producing the bills of lading. The respondent complainant issued a notice to the accused persons attributing negligence to the agencies in delivering the cargo without the original bill of lading, committing a breach of carriage and acting in violation of their contract and obligation. A claim for a sum of US $84,353.31 was made and a suit filed by the respondent herein. More than one year after filing of the said suit a complaint petition was filed against the appellants for committing criminal breach of trust by causing criminal misappropriation of the valuable property of the complainant.

An application for quashing of the order issuing summons to the appellant was dismissed by the High Court which held that the allegations made in the complaint prima facie disclosed the offence of breach of trust.

Challenge in this appeal is to the order of the High Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The allegations made in the complaint petition, even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety, do not disclose an offence. No allegation whatsoever was made against the appellants in the notice. What was contended was negligence and/or breach of contract on the part of the carriers and their agent. Breach of contract simpliciter does not constitute an offence. For the said purpose, allegations in the complaint petition must disclose the necessary ingredients therefor. Where a civil suit is pending and the complaint petition has been filed one year after filing of the civil suit, the court can for the purpose of finding out as to whether the said allegations are prima facie correct, take into consideration the correspondences exchanged by the parties and other admitted documents. It is one thing to say that the Court at this juncture would not consider the defence of the accused but it is another thing to say that for exercising the inherent jurisdiction of this Court, it is impermissible also to look to the admitted documents. Criminal proceedings should not be encouraged, when it is found to be mala fide or otherwise an abuse of the process of the court. Superior courts while exercising this power should also strive to serve the ends of justice. (Para 16). All Cargo Movers India (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: AIR 2008 SC 247: (2007) 60 AIC 92 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-10-2007]

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513, followed

Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 746; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121, relied on [7444] — S. 482 — Exercise of power ex debito justitiae — Power to be exercised sparingly and only when prosecution is launched maliciously or with ulterior motive — Inherent power ought not be exercised to stifle legitimate prosecution — Criminal complaint filed against respondent Company on the ground that appellant Company was dishonestly induced to make investment in a subsidiary company floated by respondent Company thereby respondent Company committed offence of cheating — Complaint filed by appellant Company prima facie disclosing offence of cheating when allegations made in complaint taken on their face value — Both the parties had much to say in support of their respective cases — The case was of considerable importance not only to parties but also world of trade and commerce — There was nothing on record that complaint was filed with any mala fide motive — High Court quashing criminal proceedings at stage when trial court ordered issue of process — Held, High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in quashing the proceedings — Prosecution proceedings therefore allowed to continue (Paras 76 to 78). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Orissa v. Debendra Nath Padhi, (2005) 1 SCC 568: 2005 SCC (Cri) 415; M.N. Ojha v. Alok Kumar Srivastav, (2009) 9 SCC 682: (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 101; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; Raj Kapoor v. State, (1980) 1 SCC 43: 1980 SCC (Cri) 72; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Divine Retreat Centre v. State of Kerala, (2008) 3 SCC 542: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 9, considered and relied on

Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: 1991 SCC (Cri) 142; Central Railway Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, 1867 LR 2 HL 99; New Brunswick and Canada Railway Co. v. Muggeridge, (1860) 1 Dr & Sm 363 at pp. 381-82: 62 ER 418; Redgrave v. Hurd, (1881) 20 Ch D 1 at p. 13: (1881-85) All ER Rep 77 (CA); Aaron's Reefs v. Twiss, 1896 AC 273 (HL); Commr. (Assessment) v. Velliappa Textiles Ltd., (2003) 11 SCC 405: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1214; Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2005) 4 SCC 530: 2005 SCC (Cri) 961; Kalpnath Rai v. State, (1997) 8 SCC 732: 1998 SCC (Cri) 134; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 1; M.V. Javali v. Mahajan Borewell & Co., (1997) 8 SCC 72: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1239; A.K. Khosla v. T.S. Venkatesan, 1992 Cri LJ 1448 (Cal), cited

[7445] — S. 482 — Abuse of the process of law — Ingredients of offence not in the complaint — Breach of trust, cheating, etc. — Allegation against appellant that lesser salary was being paid to the complainant with signatures for higher amount — Complaint petition itself stating bona fide reasons for deductions such as repayment at the time of retirement, etc. — Contradictory stand by the complainant in S. 33-C(2) petition under Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 — High Court's conclusion that deductions were made without any rhyme or reason, held, was without any basis — The complaint was nothing but an abuse of the process of law — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 403, 405 and 415 r/w S. 34

A complaint was filed on 13-1-2006 alleging commission of offence punishable under Sections 403, 405 and 415 read with Section 34 IPC. The Judicial Magistrate took cognizance and issued process. In fact, the respondent had filed petition in terms of Section 33-C(2) of the ID Act and also filed writ petition claiming parity in salary which was disposed of by giving the direction to consider the respondent's case. In the petition under Section 33-C(2) the respondent had stated that lesser amounts were paid and signatures for higher amounts were taken. The High Court by the impugned order dismissed the 482 CrPC petition.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The complaint was nothing but an abuse of the process of law. Close reading of the complaint reveals that the ingredients of Sections 403, 405 and 415 IPC did not exist. The statements made in the complaint were contrary to the averments made in the petition in terms of Section 33-C(2), ID Act. High Court came to the conclusion that deductions were made without any rhyme and reason and without any basis. That was not the case of the complainant. On the other hand, it tried to make out a case that the deduction was made with an object. It was stated in the complaint that the complainant was given to understand that certain amounts were being deducted for repayment at the time of retirement or cessation of his job. In the writ petition before the High Court there was no mention about any deduction. In the notice issued on 23-11-2004, there was no mention about it either. (Paras 9, 7 and 3). K.L.E. Society v. Siddalingesh, (2008) 4 SCC 541: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 1071: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 455: AIR 2008 SC 1702: (2008) 64 AIC 124 (SC).

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866, relied on

[7446] — S. 482 — Complaint of theft, cheating and criminal breach of trust in case of recovery of possession by financier in hire-purchase contract — Petition under S. 482 by financier, held, ought to have been allowed — Hire-purchase contract — Held, recovery of possession of goods by owner-financier as per terms of the hire-purchase agreement, does not amount to a criminal offence — Such an agreement is an executory contract of sale, conferring no right in rem on the hirer until the conditions for transfer of the property to him have been fulfilled — Held, on facts, where respondent hirer had defaulted in instalment payments of motor vehicle and agreement specifically provided that appellant financiers were entitled to repossess the vehicle in case of default and their agents were authorised to enter any premises for the purpose, and appellants had actually recovered possession of the vehicle, no offence was made out against the appellants — High Court erred in dismissing their petition under S. 482 CrPC challenging issue of summons on complaint filed under Ss. 406/420/120-B and 379 IPC — Hire Purchase Act, 1972, Ss. 8 and 20 (not yet in pure)

The respondent S, entered into a hire-purchase agreement dated 3-5-1994 with the appellants, owners of a non-banking financial institution, in respect of a motor vehicle. Rs 3,02,884 was the total consideration agreed to be paid for the vehicle; S initially paid Rs 69,308 and agreed to pay the balance in 36 monthly instalments of Rs 8400 each. A dispute developed at some stage and on 3-12-1998 S filed a criminal complaint alleging that during the night of 16-9-1996, when the vehicle had been in the custody of a motor mechanic, the appellants had taken it away; they had thus committed offences under Sections 406/420/120-B IPC. Cognizance was taken by the Magistrate and summons issued to the appellants.

The appellants filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court seeking to have the proceedings quashed. They averred in the petition that S had defaulted in making the instalment payments, that as of 1-9-1996 the outstanding amount was Rs 1,34,887; they had therefore been obliged to terminate the hire-purchase agreement. They also stated that S surrendered the vehicle to them. The High Court, however, dismissed the petition under Section 482 CrPC holding that it was possible to make out offences, particularly under Section 379 IPC, on the basis of the allegations in the complaint.

In appeal before the Supreme Court, it was submitted on behalf of the appellant financiers that in recovering possession of the vehicle, they had only exercised their right under the hire-purchase agreement as owners of the vehicle; that no offence could be made out from the allegations in the complaint. The agreement, which was produced in court, contained a clear provision that the appellants could repossess the vehicle in case of default by the hirer-purchaser; the appellants or their agents were also entitled to enter any premises for the purpose of inspection or of repossession and were specifically exempted from civil or criminal liability at the instance of the hirer.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Hire-purchase agreements are executory contracts under which the goods are let on hire and the hirer has an option to purchase in accordance with the terms of the agreement. These types of agreements were originally entered into between the dealer and the customer and the dealer used to extend credit to the customer. But as hire-purchase schemes gained in popularity, the dealers who were not endowed with liberal amount of working capital found it difficult to extend the scheme to many customers. Then the financiers came into the picture. The finance company would buy the goods from the dealer and let them to the customer under hire-purchase agreement. The dealer would deliver the goods to the customer who would then drop out of the transaction leaving the finance company to collect instalments directly from the customer. Under hire-purchase agreement, the hirer is simply paying for the use of the goods and for the option to purchase them. The finance charge, representing the difference between the cash price and the hire-purchase price, is not interest but represents a sum which the hirer has to pay for the privilege of being allowed to discharge the purchase price of goods by instalments. (Para 5)

In the present case agreement executed by the parties is to the effect that the hirer would not become the owner of the property until he pays the entire instalments. (Para 10)

The whole case put forward by the respondent complainant is to be appreciated in view of the stringent terms incorporated in the agreement. If the hirer himself has committed default by not paying the instalments and under the agreement the appellants have taken repossession of the vehicle, the respondent cannot have any grievance. The respondent cannot be permitted to say that the owner of the vehicle has committed theft of the vehicle or criminal breach of trust or cheating or criminal conspiracy as alleged in the complaint. When the agreement specifically says that the owner has got a right to repossess the vehicle, there cannot be any basis for alleging that the appellants have committed criminal breach of trust or cheating. (Para 11)

The plea that the appellants have committed theft is without any basis as the appellants have taken repossession of the vehicle in exercise of their right under the agreement. There may be instances where the owner of the goods may commit theft of his own goods as indicated in Illustration (k) of Section 378 IPC. But in the instant case, the owner repossessing the vehicle delivered to the hirer under the hire-purchase agreement will not amount to theft as the vital element of "dishonest intention" is lacking. The element of "dishonest intention" which is an essential element to constitute the offence of theft cannot be attributed to a person exercising his right under an agreement entered into between the parties as he may not have an intention of causing wrongful gain or to cause wrongful loss to the hirer. (Paras 12 and 13)

The hire-purchase agreement in law is an executory contract of sale and confers no right in rem on the hirer until the conditions for transfer of the property to him have been fulfilled. Therefore, the repossession of goods as per the term of the agreement may not amount to any criminal offence. (Para 17)

In the present case the agreement specifically gave authority to the appellants to repossess the vehicle and their agents to enter any property or building wherein the motor vehicle was likely to be kept. Under the hire-purchase agreement, the appellants have continued to be the owners of the vehicle and even if the entire allegations against them are taken as true, no offence was made out against them. The learned Single Judge seriously flawed in his decision and failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in him by not quashing the proceedings initiated against the appellants. (Para 17). Charanjit Singh Chadha v. Sudhir Mehra, (2001) 7 SCC 417: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1557: AIR 2001 SC 3721.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2001]

R.M. Goode: Hire Purchase Law & Practice, 2nd Edn., p. 846; Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987; K.A. Mathai v. Kora Bibbikutty, (1996) 7 SCC 212: 1996 SCC (Cri) 281, relied on

[7447] — S. 482 — Criminal proceedings when can be quashed at preliminary stage by High court under — Breach of trust — Ingredients of offence wanting — Summons issued on a complaint filed by a trustee alleging that Secretary and Manager of the trust property in conspiracy with the co-trustee and his wife created tenancy in respect of the property in favour of the co-trustee's wife — Defence case that the property intended for tenancy and accordingly co-trustee's wife, being an independent person having her own income, inducted as tenant at the rate of rent which outgoing tenant was paying as higher rent was not chargeable under existing law — Tenant-wife volunteering to surrender the tenancy in response to a notice — On facts and in view of strained relationship between settlor of the trust and the co-trustee and his wife, held, High Court justified in quashing the proceedings as ingredients of criminal offence wanting — It was a civil wrong — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 467 r/w Ss. 34 and 120-B — Trusts Act, 1882, S. 53

When a prosecution at the initial stage is asked to be quashed, the test to be applied by the court is as to whether the uncontroverted allegations as made prima facie establish the offence. It is also for the court to take into consideration any special features which appear in a particular case to consider whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. This is so on the basis that the court cannot be utilised for any oblique purpose and where in the opinion of the court chances of an ultimate conviction are bleak and, therefore, no useful purpose is likely to be served by allowing a criminal prosecution to continue, the court may while taking into consideration the special facts of a case also quash the proceeding even though it may be at a preliminary stage.

Though a case of breach of trust may be both a civil wrong and a criminal offence but there would be certain situations where it would predominantly be a civil wrong and may or may not amount to a criminal offence. The present case is one of that type where, if at all, the facts may constitute a civil wrong and the ingredients of the criminal offences are wanting. Having regard to the relevant documents including the trust deed as also the correspondence following the creation of the tenancy, the submissions advanced on behalf of the parties, the natural relationship between the settlor and the trustee as mother and son and the fall out in their relationship and the fact that the wife of the co-trustee was no more interested in the tenancy, it must be held that the criminal case should not be continued. Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234: AIR 1988 SC 709: 1988 Cri LJ 853.

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Ranganath Misra, G.L. Oza and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-2-1988]

[7448] — S. 482 — Quashing criminal proceedings — Criminal breach of trust — Diversion of funds of company — Transactions prior to occupying the positions mentioned in S. 409, held, did not attract Ss. 409 & 120-B — Precondition for Respondents 1 and 2 to become directors of the company was to deposit a certain amount — In order to fulfil the said pre-condition they allegedly obtaining loan from a party who, as a supplier, had been advanced an identical sum by that company — In such circumstances, the said allegations even if accepted in entirety, held, did not constitute an offence under Ss. 120-B and 409 — Therefore, continuance of criminal proceedings against Respondents 1 and 2 under those provisions being manifestly unjust, the charge and the proceedings were rightly quashed by the High Court in exercise of its powers under S. 482, CrPC — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 409 & 120-B. Ashim Kumar Roy v. Bipinbhai Vadilal Mehta, (1998) 1 SCC 133: 1998 SCC (Cri) 269: AIR 1997 SC 3976: (1998) 91 Comp Cas 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1997]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: (1960) 3 SCR 388, applied

[7449] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Power to quash — Forgery of documents, records, etc. alleged — Held, said power must be exercised very sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of rare cases — Court cannot inquire about reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in FIR — Court has also no power to inquire whether the allegations are likely to be established or not — In a suit for permanent injunction filed by appellant, Respondents 2 to 4 filing written statement wherein they relied upon three documents — Appellant claiming that he never executed the said documents — Hence, on his complaint, FIR lodged against said respondents under Ss. 468, 470, 471 and 120-B IPC — Petition filed by Respondents 2 and 3 for quashing of FIR — High Court examining the documents, comparing the signatures thereon and then concluding that the documents were not false or fabricated — High Court holding the complaint to be vexatious, frivolous and false after considering the material produced by respondents — No conclusion by High Court that allegations in complaint, even if taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety, did not prima facie constitute any offence — Also, no conclusion that complaint did not disclose a cognizable offence — Quashing of FIR by High Court, held, not justified (Paras 6 and 5). M. Narayandas v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 11 SCC 251: 2004 SCC (Cri) 118.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-9-2003]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

[7450] — S. 482 — Petition under for quashing complaint — Court's prima facie satisfaction must be based only on the allegations made in the complaint taking them to be correct — If clear allegations constituting the offence alleged are made, the court should be reluctant to interfere

Per majority

In case no offence is committed on the allegation and the ingredients of Ss. 405 and 406, IPC are not made out, the High Court in exercise of power under S. 482, CrPC would be justified in quashing the proceedings. But the High Court should very sparingly exercise its discretion under S. 482, CrPC. For the purpose of exercising its power under S. 482, CrPC to quash an FIR or a complaint the High Court should proceed entirely on the basis of the allegations made in the complaint or the documents accompanying the same per se. It has no jurisdiction to examine the correctness or otherwise of the allegations. In the present case the allegations made in the complaint were clear, specific and unambiguous and prima facie constitute an offence under S. 406, IPC. Therefore, the appellant cannot be denied the right to prove her case at the trial by pre-empting it at the very behest by the order passed by the High Court. It is, of course, open to the accused at the trial to take whatever defences that were open to him but that stage had not yet come and therefore, the High Court erred in speculating on the merits of the case at that stage and quashing the proceedings.

Per Varadarajan, J. (dissenting)

In a petition under S. 482, CrPC for quashing a criminal complaint, the allegations made in the complaint have to be taken to be correct in order to find out whether they constitute the various ingredients of the offence alleged. For the purposes of the petition under S. 482, CrPC the articles mentioned in the list attached to the complaint in this case must be prima facie considered to be dowry or stridhan of the appellant-wife. Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180: AIR 1985 SC 628: 1985 Cri LJ 817.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali[1], A. Varadarajan[2] and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1985]

[7451] — S. 482 — Petition under, for quashing of criminal complaint under Ss. 415/420 IPC — High Court directing the CJM, with whom the matter was pending for disposal on merits, to consider all the objections raised by the petitioner and to pass a reasoned order — Petitioner-appellant then filing objections before CJM and seeking dropping of the proceeding — By a reasoned order CJM rejecting the application taking the view that summons should be issued to the accused — Appellant once again moving the High Court under S. 482 — High Court disposing of the petition with the observation that the applicant shall have right to raise all the grounds at the time of framing of charge — Held, High Court was not justified in declining to exercise its jurisdiction and adjudicating the matter on merits — Objection regarding maintainability of the complaint need not always be raised only at the time of framing the charge — Matter remitted to High Court for disposal afresh — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 415 and 420

On an earlier occasion when the appellant had moved the High Court, the High Court had directed the CJM, to consider the objections raised by the appellant and to pass a reasoned order. Thereafter, the CJM, passed an order overruling the objections and decided to proceed with the case. When the appellant approached the High Court again against the speaking order passed by the CJM, the High Court once again declined to decide the petition on merits, but left it to be raised before the trial court at the time of framing the charge. Now, raising the very same objections at the time of framing the charge would practically be an empty formality as the trial court had already taken a definite view in the matter. The High Court in passing the impugned order has virtually ignored the spirit behind the direction given and observations made in the earlier order. There is no hard-and-fast rule that the objection as to cognizability of offence and maintainability of the complaint should be allowed to be raised only at the time of framing the charge. Such was not the intention of the High Court in passing the earlier order. The determination of the question as regards the propriety of the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance and issuing process need not necessarily wait till the stage of framing the charge. It may be that in a given case it would be more appropriate and proper to raise objections of this nature at the time of the charge-framing, but this is not a case of that nature, especially looking at the observations made in the earlier order of the High Court. Therefore, the subsequent order of the High Court is set aside and the matter is remitted back to the High Court for fresh disposal of the petition for a decision expeditiously. As the High Court declined to express any view on the crucial question whether the alleged offence has been made out, it is not appropriate and proper to undertake the task of deciding the question which the High Court ought to have decided. (Paras 8 and 9). Kunstocom Electronics (I) (P) Ltd. v. Gilt Pack Ltd., (2002) 2 SCC 383: 2002 SCC (Cri) 336: AIR 2002 SC 739: 2002 Cri LJ 1012.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2002]

Ashok Chaturvedi v. Shitul H. Chanchani, (1998) 7 SCC 698: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1704, relied on

[7452] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint and criminal proceedings — Abuse of process of court — Breach of trust, cheating, etc — Transaction of sale of land by appellants to Respondent 2 Society — Cheques issued by Respondent 2 in favour of appellant dishonoured by bank because of insufficiency of amount in the account of drawer — FIR lodged under Ss. 406, 420 and 120-B IPC — As a counterblast complaint filed by Respondent 2 against appellants alleging offences under Ss. 418, 420, 423, 504 and 120-B IPC — Appellants filing petition for quashing of the complaint/FIR filed by Respondent 2 — Allegations in the complaint read as a whole not indicating, expressly or impliedly, any intentional deception on the part of the appellants right from the beginning of the transaction — Thus prima facie the allegations made by Respondent 2 not constituting offence punishable under S. 420 or allied offences mentioned in the complaint — Held, continuing the criminal proceedings against the appellants would amount to an abuse of process of the court — High Court erred in refusing to quash the complaint and the proceedings

The High Court was not right in declining to quash the complaint and the proceeding initiated on the basis of the same. That being the position the case comes within the first category of cases enumerated in State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal and as such warrants interference by this Court. (Para 16). Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786: AIR 2000 SC 2341: 2000 Cri LJ 2983.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and D.P. Mohapatra, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-3-2000]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

[7453] — Ss. 482 and 397 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Accused film-maker taking loan from a bank for which State of Punjab standing as guarantor — Accused undertaking to utilise entire amount of income in repayment of loan — Allegation that accused misappropriated entire proceeds of picture thereby committing offences under Ss. 406 and 420 IPC — Opportunities given by court to accused to settle the matter amicably but no settlement reached — On perusal of order of trial court and other documents on record held, no ground to quash criminal proceedings made out. Chetan Anand v. State of Punjab, (1994) 1 SCC 463: 1994 SCC (Cri) 544: (1994) 31 ACC 24: (1994) 1 BC 450.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-10-1993]

[7454] — S. 482 — Breach of trust, cheating, etc. — Quashment — Mere fact that the offence was committed during the course of a commercial transaction by itself not sufficient to quash the complaint — For quashing the complaint Court has to see whether on the fact situation 'civic profile' outweighs the 'criminal outfit' — Commission of offence under Ss. 120-B, 418, 415 and 420 r/w 34 IPC by respondent in the course of a contractual transaction alleged — Held, on facts, in the factual matrix quashing of complaint not warranted — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 415, 418, 420, 120-B

The respondents approached the appellant for the purpose of securing ethambutol hydrochloride drug in bulk for sale and use in various pharmaceutical drugs and products being manufactured by the respondent Company. The appellant has come out with a definite case that by reason of a promise of maintaining a continuous supply of raw materials to the appellant for the purpose of manufacturing ethambutol hydrochloride and in such a way so as not to cause any interruption or hindrance to the manufacturing activity of the appellant-complainant's factory, the complainant entered into an agreement. On failure to comply with that agreement the appellant filed a complaint alleging to have lost a substantial amount of money to the extent of about rupees one crore and the sufferance of loss has been by reason of specific assurance and representation which turned out to be false. Misrepresentation on the part of the accused-respondent persons to the complainant, had been the major grievance and a definite and specific case had been made out that such a misrepresentation was intentionally effected since the accused persons were in the know of things that in the event the supplies were not effected, as per the agreement, the complainant was likely to suffer a wrongful loss which in the interest of the transaction between the parties, the accused persons were bound to protect. Proceedings were initiated against the respondents under Sections 120-B, 418, 415 and 420 read with Section 34 IPC. Against the said proceedings the respondents moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint. A Single Judge of the High Court taking the view that the complaint did not disclose any offence allowed the petition for quashing the complaint. Allowing the appeal of the complainant,

Held :

The factual matrix would be relevant in the matter of assessment of the situation as to whether "civic profile" would outweigh the "criminal outfit". (Para 3)

In the matter of exercise of the High Court's inherent power, the only requirement is to see whether continuance of the proceeding would be a total abuse of the process of court. The Criminal Procedure Code contains a detailed procedure for investigation, charge and trial, and in the event the High Court is desirous of putting a stop to the known procedure of law, the High Court must use a proper circumspection and very great care and caution to quash the complaint in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. (Para 16)

While Section 415 is an offence of cheating, Section 418 deals with cheating with knowledge that wrongful loss may ensue to a person whose interest the offender is bound to protect and Section 420 is cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property. In order to attract the provisions of Sections 418 and 420 the guilty intent, at the time of making the promise is a requirement and an essential ingredient thereto and subsequent failure to fulfil the promise by itself would not attract the provisions of Section 418 or Section 420. Mens rea is one of the essential ingredients of the offence of cheating under Section 420. As a matter of fact Illustration (g) to Section 415 makes the position clear enough to indicate that mere failure to deliver in breach of an agreement would not amount to cheating but is liable only to a civil action for breach of contract and it is this concept which obviously has weighed with the Single Judge. But considering the factual aspect of the matter it must be held that the issue involved in this case is not one in which the criminal trial should have been short-circuited. (Paras 11 and 19). Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615: AIR 2000 SC 1869: 2000 Cri LJ 1487.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-2-2000]

Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; L.V. Jadhav v. Shankarrao Abasaheb Pawar, (1983) 4 SCC 231: 1983 SCC (Cri) 813; Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47; Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; Nagpur Steel & Alloys (P) Ltd. v. P. Radhakrishna, 1997 SCC (Cri) 1073; Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516, relied on

Dr. Sharma's Nursing Home v. Delhi Admn., (1998) 8 SCC 745: 1999 SCC (Cri) 91, distinguished

[7455] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint or FIR — Cheating alleged — Criminal prosecution, held, cannot be thwarted merely because a civil proceedings are also maintainable — Existence of an arbitration clause in the contract for supply of goods between appellant Company and another company, held, not a sufficient ground for quashing the complaint filed by the appellant against the supplier company alleging cheating by supplying inferior goods — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 415 and 420

The Chairman of the appellant Company filed a complaint before the Judicial Magistrate of the First Class alleging that the directors of another company offered to supply "toasted soyabean extractions" for a price higher than the market price. The appellant had to pay the price in advance as demanded by the accused. So the same was paid through cheques. But the accused sent the commodity which was of the most inferior and sub-standard quality, thereby the complainant suffered a loss of Rs 17 lakhs. According to the appellant he was induced to pay the price on the representation that the best quality commodity would be supplied and the price was paid on such representation. But by supplying the most inferior quality the accused deceived the complainant. The Magistrate forwarded the complaint of the appellant for investigation as per his order passed under Section 156(3) CrPC. The accused Directors thereupon moved the High Court of Gujarat under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint. The respondent's counsel in the High Court put forward mainly two contentions. The first was that the dispute was purely of a civil nature and hence no prosecution should have been permitted, and the second was that the Judicial Magistrate of the First Class had no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint. On the first count the Single Judge pointed out that there was a specific clause in the memorandum of understanding arrived at between the parties that disputes, if any, arising between them in respect of any transaction could be resolved through arbitration. The High Court took the view that the question whether the complainant Company did suffer the loss as alleged by it are matters to be adjudicated by the civil court and cannot be the subject-matter of criminal prosecution. The Single Judge also accepted the alternative contention regarding want of jurisdiction of the Magistrate. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Quashing of FIR or a complaint in exercise of the inherent powers of the High Court should be limited to very extreme exceptions. Merely because an act has a civil profile is not sufficient to denude it of its criminal outfit. The provision incorporated in the agreement for referring the disputes to arbitration is not an effective substitute for a criminal prosecution when the disputed act is an offence. Arbitration is a remedy for affording reliefs to the party affected by breach of the agreement but the arbitrator cannot conduct a trial of any act which amounted to an offence albeit the same act may be connected with the discharge of any function under the agreement. Hence, those are not good reasons for the High Court to axe down the complaint at the threshold itself. The investigating agency should have had the freedom to go into the whole gamut of the allegations and to reach a conclusion of its own. Pre-emption of such investigation would be justified only in very extreme cases. (Paras 7 to 9). Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: AIR 1999 SC 3499: 1999 Cri LJ 4325.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259, relied on

Followed in Sri Krishna Agencies v. State of A.P., (2009) 1 SCC 69

[7456] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Offence under S. 420 IPC alleged — Allegation in complaint that the complainant supplied material to the accused on unequivocal assurance given by him and accepted cheque which was later dishonoured for lack of funds — Held, merely because the alleged offence was committed during the course of a commercial transaction the High Court was not justified in quashing the complaint — Whether or not the allegations in the complaint were true is to be decided on the basis of the evidence led at the trial — Penal Code, 1860, S. 420. Nagpur Steel & Alloys (P) Ltd. v. P. Radhakrishna, 1997 SCC (Cri) 1073.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and K. Venkataswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1997]

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

[7457] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Forgery, criminal breach of trust, etc. — If complaint itself discloses an offence, High Court should not embark upon an inquiry as to genuineness of the allegations made in the complaint or whether those allegations were likely to be established on evidence or not — Where the complaint disclosed that goods had been entrusted to the transporter for transporting them to another place and the transporter had accepted the goods, issued lorry receipt but had not delivered the goods, held, police was obliged to register an FIR and/or to make an inquiry as to whether there was any criminal breach of trust and forgery as claimed in the complaint — In the circumstances High Court was justified in refusing to quash the complaint and dismissing the writ petition — Constitution of India — Art. 226

The second respondent filed a complaint with the police alleging that he had handed over a consignment of goods to a transporter firm for transporting the goods from Delhi to Guwahati in Assam and that the firm issued lorry receipt but did not deliver the consignment. In the complaint it was claimed that there was breach of trust and forgery on the part of the petitioners who were the proprietors of the said firm. On the basis of this complaint the police called the petitioners and thereafter registered an FIR. The petitioners had in the meantime applied for anticipatory bail. The same was refused by the Court. No appeal or revision was filed against the order refusing anticipatory bail. The petitioners then filed a writ petition in the High Court though in the Criminal Procedure Code there are sufficient provisions which enable a party to move the High Court if there is abuse of the process of law. The High Court dismissed the petition. However, by this method the petitioners have managed to stall a proper inquiry for the last over 2 1/2 years. The petitioners preferred the SLP. Before the Supreme Court it was submitted that one J.R. Consumer Electronics Pvt. Ltd. and the 2nd respondent were both companies of the 3rd respondent and that these companies had used the said firm for transport of their goods and had not paid charges and that therefore, even before the complaint was filed by the 2nd respondent the said firm had addressed a notice to J.R. Consumer Electronics Pvt. Ltd. calling upon them to pay outstanding amounts which were due and payable. It was pointed out that a copy of the notice was also sent to the second respondent. It was further submitted that thereafter the said firm had sent another notice to J.R. Consumer Electronics Pvt. Ltd., 2nd respondent and the 3rd respondent pointing out that over a crore of rupees was due and payable by them to the said firm and that a number of cheques issued by them had bounced and that in the notice it was stated that the firm was exercising their lien over the goods till their dues were paid. A copy of this notice was stated to have been sent to the police. Both the notices were said to have been received by those companies much prior to the complaint. It was submitted that these facts show that there was no case of breach of trust and/or of forgery and that the complaint was a false complaint made merely with the intention of misusing the process of law and subjecting the petitioners to undue harassment. It was submitted that on these facts the police should have refused to register an FIR and should have directed the parties to settle their disputes and differences in a civil court. Dismissing the SLP,

Held :

None of these facts can be gathered from the complaint. Further, even if these facts are correct, the alleged exercise of lien is not in respect of amounts due in respect of the consignment withheld but dues in respect of prior consignments which had already been delivered. It is not the petitioners' case that payment had not been made in respect of the consignments withheld by them. Also to be noted that goods are of the 2nd respondent. Yet they are also withheld for dues of J.R. Consumer Electronics Pvt. Ltd. Except for the say-so of the petitioners, it had not been established that the two companies were one and the same. (Para 7)

In this case the complaint only discloses that goods have been entrusted to the firm for transporting to Guwahati; that the transporter has accepted the goods, issued a lorry receipt but has not delivered the goods. The complaint does not disclose any further fact. It would have been dereliction of duty on the part of the police to look at facts outside the complaint. On those facts the police had to inquire whether there was any criminal breach of trust and forgery as claimed. On these facts it could not be said that the police should not have registered an FIR and/or to make an inquiry. (Paras 8 and 10)

Therefore, the High Court was right in dismissing the petition. No case has been made out for interference at all. As the petitioners have stalled inquiries for the last over 2 1/2 years, it is directed that the police should now complete the investigation as expeditiously as possible and submit the final report in accordance with law. It is clarified that the police are at liberty to seize and/or attach the goods and remove the same from the godown of the petitioners to some other place, if they so choose. (Para 11)

The power of quashing criminal proceedings must be exercised very sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of rare cases. One such case would be when the complaint itself does not disclose any offence. The present is not such a case. The court would not be justified in embarking upon an inquiry as to the reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint or as to whether the allegations in the complaint are likely to be established by evidence or not. (Paras 5 and 10). Mahavir Prashad Gupta v. State of National Capital Territory of Delhi, (2000) 8 SCC 115: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1453: AIR 2000 SC 3101.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-9-2000]

Punjab National Bank v. Surendra Prasad Sinha, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 499: 1993 SCC (Cri) 149; Sunil Kumar v. Escorts Yamaha Motors Ltd., (1999) 8 SCC 468: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1466; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786, distinguished

State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, (1992) Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

Mahabir Prasad Gupta v. State, (2000) 85 Delhi LT 56, affirmed

[7458] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint at initial stage — Partnership property in the hands of partner — Liability of partner for criminal breach of trust in respect of such property — It must be shown that the property was specially entrusted to the accused under a special contract and he held that property in fiduciary capacity under the special contract — On facts, allegation against the accused had not been made in his capacity as a partner of the firm — Hence, compliant cannot be quashed at initial stage — Penal Code, 1860, S. 406

Partnership firm is not a legal entity but a legal mode of doing business by all the partners. Until the firm is dissolved as per law and the accounts settled, all the partners have dominion in common over the property and funds of the firm. Only after the settlement of accounts and allotment of respective shares, a partner becomes owner of his share. However, criminal breach of trust under Section 406 is not in respect of the property belonging to the partnership firm, but is an offence committed by a person in respect of the property which has been specially entrusted to such a person under a special contract and he holds that property in fiduciary capacity under special contract. If he misappropriates the same, it is an offence. (Para 8)

In the instant case it is not the case of the complainant that the accused persons were entrusted with the dominion of the property of the firm in their capacity as partners of the complainant firm. On the other hand the complainant firm entered into a contract with the accused firm, entrusted a film for exhibition and for accounting the sale proceeds and to return the film. They had neither accounted for, nor returned the film. Under these circumstances it cannot be said that the imputations alleged against the appellant have been done in his capacity as a partner of the firm. Whether the offence has been made out, whether he is liable and what are the defences open to him are not matters at this stage for consideration. It is for the trial court to proceed with the trial and to deal with according to law. Therefore, the complaint cannot be quashed. (Para 10). Anil Saran v. State of Bihar, (1995) 6 SCC 142: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1051: AIR 1996 SC 204.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-8-1995]

[7459] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Accused charged under Ss. 420, 468, 471 IPC for defrauding a bank — Merely for the reason that a compromise had been reached between the bank officials and the accused and accused paid the disputed amount found due to the bank, held, High Court was not justified in quashing the trial which had reached almost the penultimate stage — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 468 and 471. Inspector of Police, CBI v. B. Raja Gopal, (2002) 9 SCC 533.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-1-2002]

[7460] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Charge against a Bank Manager of entering into criminal conspiracy with appellant and others — Overdraft facility alleged to have been granted by the manager to appellant beyond the scope of manager's power — Circumstances raising suspicion regarding payment of illegal gratification by appellant to the manager, which would require investigation — Some link or factor connecting the charge of criminal conspiracy existing — Held, no prejudice would be caused to the appellant in allowing the criminal proceedings to continue against him — Penal Code, 1860, S. 120-B

An FIR was lodged against one R, Branch Manager of a nationalised bank, alleging that he by entering into a criminal conspiracy with some named accused, had cheated the Bank to the tune of Rs 7,47,000 by misusing his official position and thus caused wrongful loss to the Bank and wrongful gain to himself. Though in the FIR name of the appellant was not mentioned as one of the accused but his name did figure therein as a person receiving large amount as loan in clear breach of financial obligation. However, subsequently, the appellant was made an accused and a charge-sheet was submitted by CBI in the Court of Special Judge stating that he having an account in the Bank had made an application on 8-2-1985 for sanction of loan of Rs 14 lakhs for urgent payment to labourers in contract work and R had given sanction and allowed a total amount of overdraft facility to the extent of Rs 21,50,000 on different dates to the appellant even though he had no power to grant overdraft facility beyond a sum of Rs 10,000. The Special Judge took cognizance of the matter and issued summons and the appellant in terms thereof appeared before the Special Court and was granted bail. Subsequently, however, upon receipt of the copies of the documents, the appellant moved an application before the Special Judge, CBI for discharging him from the case and to drop the proceedings against him. Similar application for discharge was also filed by other accused persons and the Special Court in a common judgment came to a conclusion that there were sufficient materials existing for a prima facie case against the said accused persons for framing of charges. The appellant moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC to quash the proceeding against him under Sections 120-B, 409, 420, 468, 471, 477-A IPC read with diverse provisions of Prevention of Corruption Act, pending before the Court of Special Judge. But the High Court dismissed the application. The Additional Solicitor General contended that there was a charge under Section 120-B and as such, question of setting free the appellant at this stage of the proceeding did not and could not arise. He contended that the offence under Section 120-B is an independent offence and while it is true that the gist of the offence is the agreement between two or more offenders, but particular facts of the conspiracy need not even be shown in the charge. Some general evidence pertaining to the conspiracy would be sufficient to form part of the charge of conspiracy in the charge-sheet. As a matter of fact some connecting link or connecting factor somewhere would be good enough for framing of charge since framing of charge and to establish the charge of conspiracy cannot possibly be placed on a par. To establish the charge of conspiracy, there is required cogent evidence of meeting of two minds in the matter of commission of an offence — in the absence of which the charge cannot be sustained — this is however not so, in the matter of framing of charge since the incidence of the offence shall have to be investigated. It is on this count that the Additional Solicitor General contended that since conspiracy is generally a matter of inference and since the appellant herein did take advantage of the overdraft facility knowing fully well that the same was beyond the financial limits of the Branch Manager, the natural inference may be drawn that the same must have been done upon some other consideration and it is the assessment of the same which should prompt the Supreme Court not to thwart such an attempt. Dismissing the appeal,

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

Held :

There may not be any direct evidence against the appellant as regards the payment of illegal gratification by him to the Branch Manager or the Accountant, but the factum of having enjoyed the privilege of having large sums of money on term loans without any authorisation to allow the same obviously raises some eyebrows somewhere and this is in spite of the fact of repayment of the term loan with interest. The question cannot be avoided as to the reasons for such an act which stands beyond the powers — is this a purely customer and bank relationship or something else — this is what is to be investigated more so having regard to this so-called habit of R. The criminal purpose in the matter cannot possibly be ruled out as against the appellant. The allegation pertaining to the factum of the habit of the Branch Manager, of receiving illegal gratification from the other accused may or may not be sufficient to bring home the charge of conspiracy but that by itself would not authorise the Court to call it a day in regard to the charge of conspiracy in the wake of the factual matrix of the situation at this stage of proceedings. Criminal prosecution does not necessarily mean harassment and in the event prosecution of this nature is allowed to be continued, it would not be a travesty of justice or any undue prejudice or even otherwise prejudicial, since ultimately in the event the charge is not proved, he would be acquitted. The counter-affidavit filed by the respondents does disclose some materials for scrutiny against the appellant; as such the order of the High Court cannot and ought not to be interfered with on the given set of facts. (Paras 9, 11 and 12). Hardeo Singh v. State of Bihar, (2000) 5 SCC 623: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1008: AIR 2000 SC 2245: 2000 Cri LJ 2978.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-5-2000]

[7461] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Forgery of documents — Document styled as "family arrangement" relied on by respondent-husband before Family Court — Appellant-wife filing complaint before the Court of Judicial Magistrate alleging the document to be forged and commission of offences under Ss. 465, 466 and 467 IPC by respondent — Magistrate taking cognizance of the offences and issuing process against the respondent — Respondent's revision before Sessions Court against the summons dismissed but his petition under S. 482 for quashing the summons allowed by High Court — Without going into the rival contentions regarding the forgery aspect of the document, held, Family Court may first decide the genuineness of the said document and question of initiating criminal proceedings would arise if Family Court reaches a finding that the document is forged. Mohini Hemant Jadia v. Hemant Ghanshyamlal Jadia, (2002) 9 SCC 767.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-10-2001]

[7462] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Power of High Court to interfere with the investigation — Limitations and factors to be considered — Forgery case — FIR u/Ss. 419, 467, 420 and 120-B IPC filed against respondents (two private persons) and 6 revenue officers for committing forgery of assessment order of compensation payable under Bihar Land Reforms Act and misappropriating govt. money — High Court quashed entire investigation against respondents — Held, the extraordinary power under Art. 226 or inherent power under S. 482 CrPC can be exercised by the High Court either to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice — Such power should be exercised sparingly and with circumspection and that too in rarest of the rare cases — In view of the settled law, where there were specific allegations in FIR against the accused persons disclosing commission of a cognizable offence, High Court erred in interfering with the investigation against the accused respondents — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 419, 467, 420 and 120-B

The respondents, two persons, on being helped in an illegal manner by the revenue officers committed the forgery of the assessment order of compensation payable under the Bihar Land Reforms Act and misappropriated the govt. money. The State impugned herein the judgment of the High Court which quashed the entire investigation against the respondents.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Law is well settled regarding interference by the High Court with an investigation of a case. The extraordinary power under Article 226 or inherent power under Section 482 CrPC can be exercised by the High Court either to prevent abuse of process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The power of quashing a criminal proceeding should be exercised sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of the rare cases. (Paras 4 and 7)

Thus, where specific allegations were made in the FIR and a prima facie case was made out against the accused persons including the respondents disclosing a cognizable offence, the High Court committed a grave error in quashing the entire proceedings against the respondents. (Para 8).State of Bihar v. Mohd. Khalique, (2002) 1 SCC 652: 2002 SCC (Cri) 228: 2002 Cri LJ 553: (2002) 1 CHN (Supp) 28.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-2001]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed [7463] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at initial stage — When not permissible — Forgery cases — Allegation in complaint against school authorities that they drew complainant's salaries and dearness allowance from government fund by forging his signatures when he had gone abroad for higher education — Copies of salary statements of the relevant period produced in the court — Held, a prima facie case of cheating, breach of trust and forgery clearly made out — High Court was not justified in quashing the complaint by considering rival versions and entering into debatable area of deciding which of the versions was true — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 409, 420 and 467. Mushtaq Ahmad v. Mohd. Habibur Rehman Faizi, (1996) 7 SCC 440: 1996 SCC (Cri) 443: AIR 1996 SC 2982.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.P. Bharucha and M.K. Mukherjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-1-1996]

[7464] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings on the ground of lack of jurisdiction of the Special Court — Proceedings under Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471, 120-B IPC and S. 5, Imports and Exports (Control) Act — Quashed mainly on the ground that the Special Court (Economic Offences) had no jurisdiction to try the offences under IPC as the said court was created by a notification for trial of offences relating to only certain specific Acts including the Imports and Exports (Control) Act —

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

Considering the relevant provisions of CrPC and the language of the notification, held, the said Special Court had jurisdiction to try the offences under IPC — None of the grounds stated by the High Court for quashing the proceedings held to be proper — However, since the Imports and Exports (Control) Act had been repealed and in the departmental proceedings taken under the aforesaid Act, the Central Government had passed orders in favour of the accused-respondents, held, no useful purpose would be served by the trial of the respondents at this stage — Hence, the proceedings against the respondents quashed

Sub-section (1) of Section 4 CrPC lays down that all offences under IPC shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions contained in the said Code. Sub-section (2) of the same section lays down that all offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying or otherwise dealing with such offences. The Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 does not make any provision for regulating the manner of trying of offences under the said Act and, therefore, they have to be inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions of CrPC. (Para 5)

Further, in view of specific provision contained in clause (a) of sub-section (4) of Section 3 CrPC, it is only a Judicial Magistrate who can try an offence under the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 and under Section 26 CrPC such a Magistrate has also the jurisdiction to try those offences under IPC, which the respondents are alleged to have committed. (Para 5)

That apart, the source of power for the State Government to issue a notification for creation of a Special Court is proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 11 CrPC and this provision nowhere says that upon issuance of such a notification the Judicial Magistrate concerned would be divested of the power and jurisdiction which he otherwise had under CrPC. The Judicial Magistrate, First Class, who by virtue of the notification became a Special Court (Economic Offences) was not divested of the jurisdiction which he otherwise possessed under Section 26 CrPC. Further, the language of the notification also does not show that powers or jurisdiction of a Judicial Magistrate, who is to perform the functions of a Special Court (Economic Offences) to try the offences under the Acts mentioned in the schedule are being affected or curtailed in any manner. (Para 6)

The High Court has referred to Section 5 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, Section 12-AA of the Essential Commodities Act and Section 9 of the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, and on the basis of these provisions, it has held that in the absence of any specific provision conferring power upon the Special Court (Economic Offences) to try the offences under IPC the said Special Court would not have the jurisdiction to try the offences under IPC. The aforesaid reasoning of the High Court is wholly fallacious. The enactments referred to above by the High Court are special statutes which themselves created the offences, made specific provision for appointment of a Special Judge or a Designated Court for trial of offences, laid down their powers and also made specific provisions regarding procedure which was to be followed by such courts. Such is not the position here. The State Government has merely exercised power under proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 11 CrPC for creation of a Special Court. The Acts mentioned in the schedule to the notification issued by the State Government do not themselves provide for creation of any Special Court nor do they lay down the procedure for trial of the offences therein. The only effect of the notification was that instead of the trials being held in the courts of various Judicial Magistrates posted in Bangalore Metropolitan Area and in the district of Bangalore, they were all to be tried by one court. (Para 7)

Thus, the view taken by the High Court is wholly unsustainable in law and must be set aside. (Para 12)

But as the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 has since been repealed and in the departmental proceedings taken under the aforesaid Act the Central Government has passed orders in favour of the respondents, no useful purpose would be served by the trial of the accused-respondents in the criminal court at this stage. The criminal proceedings instituted against the accused-respondents on the basis of the complaints filed by the Deputy Chief Controller of Imports and Exports are, therefore, quashed. (Para 13). Dy. Chief Controller of Imports & Exports v. Roshanlal Agarwal, (2003) 4 SCC 139: 2003 SCC (Cri) 788: AIR 2003 SC 1900: 2003 Cri LJ 1698: (2003) 155 ELT 216.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-3-2003]

[7465] — Ss. 482 and 196(2) — High Court's jurisdiction under S. 482 to quash criminal complaint and proceedings — Limits of — If prima facie offences made out on the basis of the allegations made in the complaint without going into truth or otherwise of the allegations, High Court cannot exercise its power under S. 482 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 120-B — Import and Export (Control) Act, 1947, S. 5

The Deputy Chief Controller of Imports and Exports (the appellant) made a complaint under S. 120-B, IPC and S. 5 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act against the accused persons (respondents) on charges that they in criminal conspiracy with each other and also with other persons illegally imported prohibited articles (beef tallow) by entering into a contract with a non-existent foreign firm in order to facilitate the import under licence under circumstances which were not permissible. The Metropolitan Magistrate took cognizance and issued summons against the accused. But the High Court quashed the complaint under S. 482, CrPC on the basis of a subsequent report of CBI which had not yet been proved and considered in the background of the allegations made.

Held :

The High Court erred in quashing the criminal proceedings under S. 482, CrPC on an erroneous basis when on prima facie being satisfied the Metropolitan Magistrate had taken cognizance of the alleged offences. The question at this stage, is not whether there was any truth in the allegations made but it is whether on the basis of the allegations, a cognizable offence or offences had been alleged to have been committed. The facts subsequently found out to prove the truth or otherwise on the allegation is not a ground on the basis of which the complaint can be quashed. Taking all the allegations in the complaint to be true, without adding or subtracting anything, at this stage, it can be said that a prima facie case for trial had been made out. That is the limit of the power to be exercised by the High Court under S. 482, CrPC. The High Court in the instant case exceeded that jurisdiction. J.P. Sharma v. Vinod Kumar Jain, (1986) 3 SCC 67: 1986 SCC (Cri) 216: AIR 1986 SC 833: 1986 Cri LJ 917.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Pathak and Sabyasachi Mukharji, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-4-1986]

(1985) 2 Comp LJ 225 (Del), reversed

[7466] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings under — Non-consideration of relevant aspects — Unsustainability — Reiterated, exercise of the inherent powers to quash criminal proceedings is called for where the complaint does not disclose any offence or is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive — If no material is shown that the complaint/FIR is mala fide, High Court is not justified in interfering — On facts, complaint filed against respondents alleging offence punishable under S. 120-B IPC for conveying joint property of land into unauthorised "colony" by violating provisions of S. 36 of Punjab Apartment and Property Regulation Act, 1995 — Under the Act, "colony" meant an area of land not less than 1000 sq m — Respondents, sold joint family property of 1861.16 sq yd (1556 sq m) area of land in a joint khasra to different purchasers dividing into equal shares of 465.29 sq yd i.e less than 1000 sq m — High Court quashed the proceedings against them holding that even if the property was a joint one, but respondents had sold their respective shares — Held, High Court did not consider relevant aspects for quashment of criminal proceedings in exercise of power under S. 482 — Individual share of land, whether could be less than 1000 sq m, was not a relevant aspect for such consideration — High Court's order unsustainable, hence quashed (Para 10). State of Punjab v. Inder Mohan Chopra, (2009) 3 SCC 497.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2009]

State of A.P. v. Bajjoori Kanthaiah, (2009) 1 SCC 114: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 481; State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522, relied on

[7467] — S. 482 — Quashment of proceedings — Evaluation of plausibility/credibility of averments in complaint — Permissibility — Doubt as to the same, held, must be based on some material — High Court cannot quash complaint if allegations prima facie disclose commission of cognizable offence — Complaint alleging sale of cooperative society land illegally for higher price but showing lesser price in records and conspiracy to cheat society and its members — High Court quashing entire criminal proceedings holding that averments in complaint were "imaginary" — Sustainability — In present case, allegations in complaint disclose conspiracy to put cooperative society and its members to loss in view of report of Registrar and hence prima facie disclose commission of cognizable offence — High Court's conclusion that averments in complaint are imaginary is not based on any material — Hence, judgment of High Court is unsustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 120-B and 34

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now a well-settled principle of law that the High Court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code may quash a criminal proceeding inter alia in the event the allegations made in the complaint petition even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not disclose commission of a cognizable offence. (Para 14)

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

The opinion of the High Court that the averments made in the complaint petition are imaginary is not based on any material. Even assuming that the complainant had a score to settle against the accused, the same by itself may not be a ground to quash the entire criminal proceedings particularly in view of the fact that at least a prima facie case has been established in view of the report of the Registrar. (Para 22)

The allegations made in the complaint petition disclose commission of a cognizable offence. A conspiracy is said to have been entered into for putting the Society and consequentially the members to a great loSs. A conspiracy is also said to have been hatched for the aforementioned purpose as a result whereof not only an allotment was made in favour of a person who was not entitled thereto but also the allotted plot was assigned in favour of a third party for a huge sum. Whether the allegations made in the complaint petition are correct or not have to be considered during trial. It may be true that the question as to whether the report of the Registrar can be relied upon for the purpose of showing as to how the act of cheating has been committed by the respondents is a matter which must be considered at the time of trial but there cannot be any doubt whatsoever that so long as the report is not set aside, the same could form the basis for forming of an opinion at least for the purpose of proceeding against the respondents that they manipulated the records of the cooperative Society to make unlawful gain for themselves and causing unlawful loss to the Society. (Paras 16, 17 and 19). K. Ashoka v. N.L. Chandrashekar, (2009) 5 SCC 199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, followed

[7468] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR/charge-sheet/complaint — Principles for — High Court should exercise its inherent power to quash FIR/ charge-sheet/complaint only in rarest of rare cases — Economic offences — It should not weigh the pros and cons of the prosecution case or consider effect of non-compliance of mandatory provision of law — In cases of economic offences or offences involving moral turpitude or crimes of grave nature greater circumspection and care and caution must be borne in mind by the High Court

The exercise of inherent power of the High Court is an exceptional one. Great care should be taken by the High Court before embarking to scrutinise the FIR/charge-sheet/complaint. In deciding whether the case is rarest of rare cases to scuttle the prosecution in its inception, it first has to get into the grip of the matter whether the allegations constitute the offence. It must be remembered that FIR is only an initiation to move the machinery and to investigate into a cognizable offence. After the investigation is concluded and the charge-sheet is laid, the prosecution produces the statements of the witnesses recorded under Section 161 of the Code in support of the charge-sheet. At that stage it is not the function of the court to weigh the pros and cons of the prosecution case or to consider necessity of strict compliance of the provisions which are considered mandatory and its effect of non-compliance. It would be done after the trial is concluded. The court has to prima facie consider from the averments in the charge-sheet and the statements of witnesses on the record in support thereof whether court could take cognizance of the offence on that evidence and proceed further with the trial. If it reaches a conclusion that no cognizable offence is made out, no further act could be done except to quash the charge-sheet. But only in exceptional cases, i.e., in rarest of rare cases of mala fide initiation of the proceedings to wreak private vengeance the criminal process is availed of in laying a complaint or FIR which itself does not disclose at all any cognizable offence — the court may embark upon the consideration thereof and exercise the power.

When the High Court exercises its inherent power under Section 482, the prime consideration should only be whether the exercise of the power would advance the cause of justice or it would be an abuse of the process of the court. When investigating officer spends considerable time to collect the evidence and places the charge-sheet before the court, further action should not be short-circuited by resorting to exercise inherent power to quash the charge-sheet. The social stability and order requires to be regulated by proceeding against the offender as it is an offence against the society as a whole. This cardinal principle should always be kept in mind before embarking upon exercising inherent power. The accused involved in an economic offence destabilises the economy and causes grave incursion on the economic planning of the State. When the legislature entrusts the power to the police officer to prevent organised commission of the offence or offences involving moral turpitude or crimes of grave nature and are entrusted with power to investigate into the crime in intractable terrains and secretive manner in concert, greater circumspection and care and caution should be borne in mind by the High Court when it exercises its inherent power. Otherwise, the social order and security would be put in jeopardy and to grave risk. The accused will have field day in destabilising the economy of the State regulated under the relevant provisions. State of H.P. v. Pirthi Chand, (1996) 2 SCC 37: 1996 SCC (Cri) 210: AIR 1996 SC 977.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-11-1995]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059, followed

[Ed.: In this case order of discharge passed by the Sessions Judge was confirmed by the High Court in its revisional jurisdiction. Scope of High Court's inherent jurisdiction to quash criminal proceeding was not in issue.]

[7469] — S. 482 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot hold a parallel trial in exercise of power under — If offence prima facie falls under the Penal Code, launching of prosecution cannot be thwarted by High Court under S. 482 merely because penal action open under any other statute — Cognizance of offence taken by Magistrate under S. 409 IPC against managing director and directors (appellants) of a public limited company on the basis of charge-sheet submitted by CBI and other material prima facie disclosing dishonest misappropriation of share and debenture moneys collected from public — Application filed by appellants under S. 482 seeking their discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act — Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 409, 420 and 405 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 69, 63 and 73

Though the Companies Act contains provisions regarding the issuance of prospectus, applications for shares and allotment thereof and provides different checks over the misuse of the fund collected from the public for issuance of shares or debentures, but where persons issue prospectus and collect moneys from public assuring them that they intend to do business with the public money for their benefit and the benefit of such public, but the real intention is to do no business other than collecting the moneys from the public for their personal gain, such persons cannot be said to be immune from the provisions of the Penal Code. The persons managing the affairs of such company cannot use the juristic entity and corporate personality of the company as a shield to evade themselves from prosecution for offences under the Penal Code, if it is established that primary object of the incorporation and existence of the Company is to defraud the public.

But, at the same time, while taking cognizance of alleged offences in connection with the registration, issuance of prospectus, collection of moneys from the investors and the misappropriation of the fund collected from the shareholders which constitute one offence or other under the Penal Code, court must be satisfied that prima facie an offence under the Penal Code has been disclosed on the materials produced before the court. For prosecution for offences under the Penal Code the complainant has to make out a prima facie case against the individuals concerned, regarding their acts and omissions which constitute the different ingredients of the offences under the Penal Code. There is a basic difference between the offences under the Penal Code and acts and omissions which have been made punishable under different Acts and statutes which are in nature of social welfare legislations. For framing charges in respect of those acts and omissions, in many cases, mens rea is not an essential ingredient; the concerned statute imposes a duty on those who are in charge of the management, to follow the statutory provisions and once there is a breach or contravention, such persons become liable to be punished.

In the facts of the present case itself, the prosecution has to prove that the appellant as promotors or directors, had dishonest intention since the very beginning while collecting the moneys from the applicants for the shares and debentures or that having collected such moneys they dishonestly misappropriated the same. The ingredients of the different offences under the Penal Code need not be proved only by direct evidence: they can be shown from the circumstances of a particular case that the intention of the promotors or the directors was dishonest since the very inception or that they developed such intention at some stage, for their wrongful gain and causing wrongful loss to the investors. All the circumstances and the materials to prove such a charge have to be collected during the investigation and inquiry and ultimately have to be produced before the court at the stage of trial for a verdict as to whether the ingredients of offence in question have been established on behalf of the prosecution.

(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/ commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc. (contd.)

In the present case the quashing of the prosecution pending against the appellants only on the ground that it was open to the applicants for shares to take recourse to the provisions of the Companies Act, cannot be accepted. It is a futile attempt on the part of the appellants, to close the chapter before it has unfolded itself. It will be for the trial court to examine the matter on the materials produced on behalf of the prosecution. That exercise cannot be performed either by the High Court or by the Supreme Court. The trial court should proceed with the case in accordance with law.

The High Court should not, while exercising power under S. 482 of the Code, usurp the jurisdiction of the trial court. The power under S. 482 of the Code has been vested in the High Court to quash a prosecution which amounts to abuse of the process of the court. But that power cannot be exercised by the High Court to hold a parallel trial, only on basis of the statements and documents collected during investigation or inquiry, for purpose of expressing an opinion whether the accused concerned is likely to be punished if the trial is allowed to proceed. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

[7470] — Ss. 482 and 2(d), 154, 155 and 190, 200 — Quashing of complaint — If averments in complaint prima facie make out a case for investigation the High Court cannot quash the complaint merely because one or two ingredients of the offence have not been stated in detail — Quashing of complaint on ground that the complaint disclosed a commercial or money transaction not justified — Many a cheating is committed in the course of commercial or money transaction — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420 & 417, 415

It is not necessary that a complainant should verbatim reproduce in the body of his complaint all the ingredients of the offence he is alleging. Nor is it necessary that the complainant should state in so many words that the intention of the accused was dishonest or fraudulent. Splitting up of the definition into different components of the offence to make a meticulous scrutiny, whether all the ingredients have been precisely spelled out in the complaint, is not the need at this stage. If factual foundation for the offence has been laid in the complaint the court should not hasten to quash criminal proceedings during investigation stage merely on the premise that one or two ingredients have not been stated with details. For quashing an FIR (a step which is permitted only in extremely rare cases) the information in the complaint must be so bereft of even the basic facts which are absolutely necessary for making out the offence.

It may be that the facts narrated in the present complaint would as well reveal a commercial transaction or money transaction. But that is hardly a reason for holding that the offence of cheating would elude from such a transaction. In fact, many a cheatings were committed in the course of commercial and also money transactions.

The crux of the postulate is the intention of the person who induces the victim of his representation and not the nature of the transaction which would become decisive in discerning whether there was commission of offence or not. The complainant has stated in the body of the complaint that he was induced to believe that the respondent would honour payment on receipt of invoices, and that the complainant realised later that the intentions of the respondent were not clear. He also mentioned that the respondent after receiving the goods had sold them to others and still he did not pay the money. Such averments would prima facie make out a case for investigation by the authorities.

In the present case the High Court seems to have adopted a strictly hypertechnical approach and sieved the complaint through a cullendar of finest gauzes for testing the ingredients under Section 415 IPC. Such an endeavour may be justified during trial, but certainly not during the stage of investigation. At any rate, it is too premature a stage for the High Court to step in and stall the investigation by declaring that it is a commercial transaction simpliciter wherein no semblance of criminal offence is involved. Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401: AIR 1999 SC 1216: 1999 Cri LJ 1833.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

(1998) 3 Chand Cri Cases 238 (P&H), reversed

Distinguished in Anil Ritolla v. State of Bihar, (2007) 10 SCC 110*

[7471] — Ss. 482 and 468 — Offences under Ss. 420, 467, 471 and 474 IPC — Quashing of complaint by High Court on the ground that it was filed belatedly — Legality — Bar of limitation under S. 468 — Applicability of — Most of the offences in question punishable with imprisonment for a term exceeding three years — Hence held, bar of limitation not attracted — Further, if the effect of delay, if any, in instituting the complaint was necessary to be determined for considering the merits of the charge, that could only be done at the stage of trial on the basis of the evidence on record — Accordingly, High Court's order set aside (Para 6). Harnam Singh v. Everest Construction Co., (2004) 6 SCC 754: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1828.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

[7472] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Power to quash criminal proceeding — Where FIR ex facie makes out no offence criminal proceeding instituted on the basis of such FIR liable to be quashed — Cheating, forgery, etc. — Allegations same against all accused — Prosecution of bank officials and account-holders for withdrawing certain amount from bank by making false credit entries in books of account and connected credit and debit vouchers — No particulars of alleged entries given in FIR — Absence of deliberate intention to cause any wrongful gain or wrongful loss — High Court rightly held that allegations made in FIR did not constitute any offence of cheating or forgery as such proceedings amounted to abuse of process of court — Failure to make entries in books of account cannot be characterised as false entries — Since allegations same against all accused persons entire proceedings and not only against one, as High Court did, liable to be quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 468, 471 and 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) read with S. 5(1)(d). State of U.P. v. R.K. Srivastava, (1989) 4 SCC 59: 1989 SCC (Cri) 713: AIR 1989 SC 2222: 1989 Cri LJ 2301.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Dutt, S. Ratnavel Pandian and Dr. T.K. Thommen, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-8-1989]

[7473] — S. 482 — Quashing of prosecution — When warranted — Complaint not disclosing any offence either under S. 420 or S. 120-B IPC — Case in question, a purely civil dispute — On such facts, held, allowing investigation to continue would amount to abuse of process of court — Hence, prosecution quashed — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420/120-B (Para 7). Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Agrawal and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

[7474] — Ss. 482, 154, 156(3) and 157 — Quashing of FIR and investigation — Propriety — Factors to be considered — Breach of trust, cheating etc. — Private complaint made to Magistrate alleging that general power of attorney issued in favour of first respondent was misused by him, hence appellant complainant had cancelled the same — Despite that Respondent 1 had executed a registered sale deed in favour of Respondent 2 — Magistrate handing over the complaint for investigation, on basis of which FIR lodged — However, said FIR quashed by High Court holding that it was a case of civil profile and none of the ingredients that constitute the offences punishable under Ss. 464, 423 and 420 r/w S. 34 IPC were discernible from the said allegations — Held, it is settled law that an FIR and the consequent investigation cannot be quashed unless there is no offence spelt out from the same — FIR is to be taken on its face value for adjudging the same — No question of considering the merits of the allegations contained in FIR at that stage or testing the veracity of allegations would arise — In the instant case, investigation was in progress and police had also not reported back to the Magistrate the result of their investigation — In such circumstances, FIR could have been quashed only and only if there appeared to be no offence spelt out therein — High Court at the stage of investigation could not have examined the nature of transaction or whether any offence was actually committed by the accused persons or not — Only enquiry that could have been undertaken was to see as to whether the complaint or FIR did contain allegations of any offence — High Court erred in quashing the FIR — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 464, 423, 420 r/w S. 34 (Paras 3, 4, 7 and 8). T. Vengama Naidu v. T. Dora Swamy Naidu, (2007) 12 SCC 93: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 231: (2007) 52 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Balasubramanyan and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-2-2007]

(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies

See also '(11)(xvii) Civil remedies available/Civil proceedings pending', and

'(11)(xviii) Quashment in case of economic offences/commercial transactions, breach of trust, cheating, etc.', above

[7475] — S. 482 — Prosecution of Chairman, Managing Director and Officers of the company for offences under S. 25-M read with S. 25-Q, ID Act — Maintainability and propriety of continuance of — Long lapse of time — The company, liable under a contract to pay 75% of electricity charges irrespective of the actual supply of electricity, being unable to clear electricity dues as its productive activities had suffered immensely due to chronic shortage of power supply — Consequently electricity disconnected — Co. resorting to lay-off without statutory permission — Repelling the challenge to the constitutionality of S. 25-M, maintainability of the prosecution upheld but in view of the inevitability of the lay-off under compulsive circumstances beyond the control of the company and the long lapse of time (about 12 years in this case), continuance of the prosecution prohibited — Further held, such course of action not only was within the scope of S. 482 of CrPC but would also secure the ends of justice — Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, Ss. 25-M, 25-Q and 32. Ashok Kumar Jain v. State of Bihar, (1995) 1 SCC 516: 1995 SCC (L&S) 353: (1995) 1 LLN 400: (1995) 1 CLR 207: (1995) 2 LLJ 685.

(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1994]

[7476] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint (under S. 73 of Companies Act) at the initial stage — Complaint quashed by the High Court on ground that the accused was not an officer in default and that the complainant had no locus standi to file the complaint — Held, High Court not justified in quashing the complaint — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 73, 621 and 621-A. P. C. Wadhwa v. S. C. Bhatia, 1995 Supp (4) SCC 244.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.S. Verma and K.S. Paripoornan, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1995]

[7477] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Power should be exercised sparingly by High Court — Complaint filed by a director of a company against other directors of the company alleging commission of offences under Ss. 60, 63, 68 and 68-A r/w S. 621 of Companies Act — Summons issued by Special Judge requiring the accused Directors (appellants) to appear in person before the Court — Petition filed by the accused under S. 482 for quashing the proceedings inter alia on ground that no offence was made out by the complaint — Having regard to the complaint, material produced by the complainant and relevant provisions of Companies Act, held, a prima facie case was made out against the accused-appellants — Hence High Court was justified in declining to quash the proceedings — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 60, 63, 68, 68-A & 621

The appellants and the first respondent are Directors of a Power Company (Spectrum Power Generation Ltd.) incorporated under the Indian Companies Act. The respondent filed a complaint alleging offences under Sections 60, 63, 68, 68-A read with Section 621 of the Act against the appellants, alleging inter alia that the accused persons by making false, deceptive and misleading statements and by suppressing relevant facts induced various persons to pay them money for purchase of shares of the Power Company; raised millions of dollars from Non-Resident Indians (NRIs); siphoned off those funds into bogus companies exclusively owned by them in offshore companies and purchased shares of the Power Company in India in the names of bogus offshore companies owned/controlled by them. In this process the original investors who were promised shares in the Power Company were never allotted any shares. On the other hand shares were allotted to offshore companies which have nothing to do with the Power Company and which are exclusively owned and controlled by the accused persons. It was specifically alleged in the complaint petition that the accused persons in effect committed fraud on the Power Company in whose name they collected money, invested that in their own companies and those companies in turn applied and got shares at the instance of the accused persons, with the result that all these overseas investors are left high and dry. On receipt of the complaint the Special Judge issued summons to the accused persons. On receipt of the same, the accused persons filed the petition under Section 482 CrPC in the High Court with the prayer to quash the criminal proceedings. The main grounds of challenge against the proceeding was that the complaint does not make out any of the offences alleged by the complainant and as such it is bad in law and not maintainable; that the Act has no application to the transactions alleged in the complaint as the petitioners are the citizens of USA and they are the Directors of the overseas company which has been incorporated and functioning abroad and that the offer for investment was made to NRIs in USA; that the investing companies headed by the petitioners have taken necessary RBI permission to invest in the Power Company and accordingly have made the investment, and therefore they have not violated any law of the land; that even otherwise, the investing companies did invest all the monies collected by them in the Power Company and as such the Power Company does not stand to lose anything; that the complainant who is not a mere shareholder but is the Vice-Chairman and Managing Director of the Power Company is in no way aggrieved by any of the alleged acts by the petitioner, and therefore, the complaint has been filed with an oblique motive. The further ground taken by the petitioners was that in view of the fact that the companies involved herein are not companies coming within the purview of the Companies Act and as there has been no prospectus issued by them as defined in Section 60 of the Act, the section has no applicability to the facts of the case on hand. The High Court declined to quash the complaint petition and to drop the case against the accused persons.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

Reading of the complaint petition and the materials produced by the complainant with it in the light of provisions of Sections 60, 63(1), 68 and 68-A of the Companies Act, it cannot be said that the allegations made in the complaint taken in entirety do not make out even prima facie, any of the offences alleged in the complaint petition. The merits of the case need not be discussed further since any observation in that regard may affect one party or the other. The allegations made are serious in nature and relate to the Power Company registered under the Act having its head office in this country. Whether the appellants were or were not citizens of India at the time of commission of the offences alleged and whether the offences alleged were or were not committed in this country, are questions to be considered on the basis of the evidence to be placed before the Court at the trial of the case. The questions raised are of involved nature, determination of which requires enquiry into facts. Such questions cannot be considered at the preliminary stage for the purpose of quashing the complaint and the proceeding initiated on its basis. It is relevant to note here that from Sections 4 and 188 CrPC, it is clear that even if the offence is committed by a citizen of India outside the country the same is subject to the jurisdiction of courts in India. Therefore, in the context of the facts and circumstances of the case, the High Court was right in declining to quash the complaint petition and the proceedings initiated on its basis. (Paras 23 and 24)

Power of quashing a criminal complaint and the proceeding initiated on its basis under Section 482 CrPC or Article 226 of the Constitution is to be exercised very sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of rare cases. (Para 13). A.V. Mohan Rao v. M. Kishan Rao, (2002) 6 SCC 174: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1281: AIR 2002 SC 2653: (2002) 111 Comp Cas 390.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and K.G. Balakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-7-2002]

Central Bank of India Ltd. v. Ram Narain, AIR 1955 SC 36: 1955 Cri LJ 152; Mobarik Ali Ahmed v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857: 1957 Cri LJ 1346: 1958 SCR 328; Ajay Aggarwal v. Union of India, (1993) 3 SCC 609: 1993 SCC (Cri) 961; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Mahavir Prasad Gupta v. State of National Capital Territory of Delhi, (2000) 8 SCC 115: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1453, relied on

[7478] — S. 482 — Deception — Scope of — Non-disclosure of relevant information — Held, to be treated as misrepresentation leading to deception — Further held, S. 415 Expln. gives statutory recognition to the judicially evolved principle that misleading statements which withhold vital facts for intentionally inducing a person to do or omit to do something, would amount to deception — Misleading statement causing damage wrongfully to the person deceived, amounts to cheating — A corporate body seeking investment by means of misleading statement may therefore be subjected to prosecution for cheating — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 56, 58-A, 60-A, 60-B and 61 to 68 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 415 Expln. and Ss. 24 and 23

Section 415 can be divided into two parts. The first part makes it necessary that the deception by the accused of the person deceived, must be fraudulent or dishonest. Such deception must induce the person deceived to either: (a) deliver property to any person; or (b) consent that any person shall retain any property. The second part also requires that the accused must by deception intentionally induce the person deceived either to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit, if he was not so deceived. Furthermore, such act or omission must cause or must be likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. Thus, it is evident that deception is a necessary ingredient for the offences of cheating under both parts of this section. The complainant, therefore, necessarily needs to prove that the inducement had been caused by the deception exercised by the accused. Such deception must necessarily produce the inducement to part with or deliver property, which the complainant would not have parted with or delivered, but for the inducement resulting from deception. The Explanation to the section would clearly indicate that there must be no dishonest concealment of facts. In other words, non-disclosure of relevant information would also be treated as a misrepresentation of facts leading to deception. (Para 68)

The Explanation appended to Section 415 gives a statutory recognition to the legal principles established through various judicial pronouncements that misleading statements which withhold the vital facts for intentionally inducing a person to do or to omit to do something would amount to deception. Further, in case it is found that misleading statement has wrongfully caused damage to the person deceived it would amount to cheating. (Para 72)

(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies (contd.)

The appellants were entitled to an opportunity to prove the averments made in the complaint. They were entitled to establish that they have been deliberately induced into making huge investments on the basis of representations made by Respondent 1 and its representatives, which representations subsequently turned out to be completely false and fraudulent. The appellants were entitled to an opportunity to establish that Respondent 1 and its representatives were aware of the falsity of the representations at the time when they were made. The appellants have given elaborate details of the positive assertions made by Respondent 1 which were allegedly false to its knowledge. It is also claimed by the appellants that Respondent 1 and its representatives wilfully concealed facts which were material and ought to have been disclosed, but were intentionally withheld so as to deceive the appellant into advancing and expending a sum of Rs 500 crores. (Para 75). Iridium India Telecom Ltd. v. Motorola Inc., (2011) 1 SCC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B. Sudershan Reddy and S.S. Nijjar, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2010]

Central Railway Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, 1867 LR 2 HL 99; New Brunswick and Canada Railway Co. v. Muggeridge, (1860) 1 Dr & Sm 363 at pp. 381-82: 62 ER 418, relied on

Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, (1999) 8 SCC 686: 2000 SCC (Cri) 47, referred to

Small v. Attwood, You 407: 159 ER 1051; Dobell v. Stevens, 3 B&C 623: 107 ER 864, cited

[7479] — S. 482 — Quashing of prosecution — High Court cannot hold a parallel trial in exercise of power under — If offence prima facie falls under the Penal Code, launching of prosecution cannot be thwarted by High Court under S. 482 merely because penal action open under any other statute — Cognizance of offence taken by Magistrate under S. 409 IPC against managing director and directors (appellants) of a public limited company on the basis of charge-sheet submitted by CBI and other material prima facie disclosing dishonest misappropriation of share and debenture moneys collected from public — Application filed by appellants under S. 482 seeking their discharge on ground of availability of penal provisions for such offence under Companies Act — Held, High Court justified in dismissing the application — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 409, 420 and 405 — Companies Act, 1956, Ss. 69, 63 and 73

Though the Companies Act contains provisions regarding the issuance of prospectus, applications for shares and allotment thereof and provides different checks over the misuse of the fund collected from the public for issuance of shares or debentures, but where persons issue prospectus and collect moneys from public assuring them that they intend to do business with the public money for their benefit and the benefit of such public, but the real intention is to do no business other than collecting the moneys from the public for their personal gain, such persons cannot be said to be immune from the provisions of the Penal Code. The persons managing the affairs of such company cannot use the juristic entity and corporate personality of the company as a shield to evade themselves from prosecution for offences under the Penal Code, if it is established that primary object of the incorporation and existence of the Company is to defraud the public.

But, at the same time, while taking cognizance of alleged offences in connection with the registration, issuance of prospectus, collection of moneys from the investors and the misappropriation of the fund collected from the shareholders which constitute one offence or other under the Penal Code, court must be satisfied that prima facie an offence under the Penal Code has been disclosed on the materials produced before the court. For prosecution for offences under the Penal Code the complainant has to make out a prima facie case against the individuals concerned, regarding their acts and omissions which constitute the different ingredients of the offences under the Penal Code. There is a basic difference between the offences under the Penal Code and acts and omissions which have been made punishable under different Acts and statutes which are in nature of social welfare legislations. For framing charges in respect of those acts and omissions, in many cases, mens rea is not an essential ingredient; the concerned statute imposes a duty on those who are in charge of the management, to follow the statutory provisions and once there is a breach or contravention, such persons become liable to be punished.

In the facts of the present case itself, the prosecution has to prove that the appellant as promotors or directors, had dishonest intention since the very beginning while collecting the moneys from the applicants for the shares and debentures or that having collected such moneys they dishonestly misappropriated the same. The ingredients of the different offences under the Penal Code need not be proved only by direct evidence: they can be shown from the circumstances of a particular case that the intention of the promotors or the directors was dishonest since the very inception or that they developed such intention at some stage, for their wrongful gain and causing wrongful loss to the investors. All the circumstances and the materials to prove such a charge have to be collected during the investigation and inquiry and ultimately have to be produced before the court at the stage of trial for a verdict as to whether the ingredients of offence in question have been established on behalf of the prosecution.

In the present case the quashing of the prosecution pending against the appellants only on the ground that it was open to the applicants for shares to take recourse to the provisions of the Companies Act, cannot be accepted. It is a futile attempt on the part of the appellants, to close the chapter before it has unfolded itself. It will be for the trial court to examine the matter on the materials produced on behalf of the prosecution. That exercise cannot be performed either by the High Court or by the Supreme Court. The trial court should proceed with the case in accordance with law.

The High Court should not, while exercising power under S. 482 of the Code, usurp the jurisdiction of the trial court. The power under S. 482 of the Code has been vested in the High Court to quash a prosecution which amounts to abuse of the process of the court. But that power cannot be exercised by the High Court to hold a parallel trial, only on basis of the statements and documents collected during investigation or inquiry, for purpose of expressing an opinion whether the accused concerned is likely to be punished if the trial is allowed to proceed. Radhey Shyam Khemka v. State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54: 1993 SCC (Cri) 591: (1993) 77 Comp Cas 356: 1993 Cri LJ 2888: (1993) 1 Crimes 1132.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1993]

[7480] — Ss. 482 and 202, 203 & 245 — Powers of High Court under S. 482 — Complaint case instituted by the Company, under S. 630 of the Companies Act, against the respondent — Respondent-accused, using Company property after ceasing to be the director of Company, moving petition for discharge under S. 245 CrPC and raising objections against the criminal proceedings due to the pendency of civil proceedings before different forums — Magistrate taking cognizance of the offence but High Court exceeding its jurisdiction under S. 482 by considering the documents purported to be filed by the respondent in civil suits and relying upon the orders/observations made thereunder while quashing the criminal proceedings against respondent — In view of the facts, held, powers of High Court under S. 482 should be cautiously exercised only to prevent the abuse of the process of court or gross miscarriage of justice — Setting aside the High Court's order, complaint proceedings directed to proceed in accordance with law — Companies Act, 1956, S. 630. Maratt Rubber Ltd. v. J.K. Marattukalam, (2000) 9 SCC 547: 2001 SCC (Cri) 646.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-1-2000]

[7481] — Ss. 482 and 190 — Quashment of proceedings — When justified — Offence by company — Ex-Director proceeded against — Where basic ingredients of the offence alleged against accused are altogether absent, held, he should not be compelled to face criminal prosecution — On totality of facts, such being the case, proceedings pending before Magistrate under S. 420 IPC r/w Ss. 3, 4, 5 and 6, Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978 against ex-Director of company which had invited deposits from public but had subsequently closed its business without paying interest and repaying dues of investors, quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 415, 24 and 25 — Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978, Ss. 3 to 6 — Companies Act, 1956, S. 290

The appellant was one of the Directors of a company. He resigned w.e.f. 27-12-1997. Respondent 2 filed a complaint FIR with the police alleging that the said company had invited deposits from the public and that monies had been invested by Respondent 2 and his wife in the Pensioner's Benefit Fund, pursuant to the approval of the scheme by Reserve Bank of India. That the company had since closed its business without repaying the money due to the complainant. Respondent 2 lodged an FIR alleging offences under Section 420, Penal Code, 1860 read with Sections 3, 4, 5 and 6 of the Prize Chits and Money Circulation Schemes (Banning) Act, 1978. Consequent to the FIR, the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate issued a non-bailable warrant against the appellant.

The appellant filed a petition before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashment of the proceedings on the ground that the appellant could not be held liable for any of the alleged illegalities committed by the company after he had resigned from the company. However, the High Court held that it was for the trial court to ascertain the questions arising in the petition and pass necessary orders. The appellant then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that even according to the averments of the complaint in the first information report there were no allegations whatsoever against the appellant, and the High Court ought to have quashed the proceedings against the appellant.

(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The inherent power should not be exercised to stifle the legitimate prosecution but at the same time no person be compelled to face criminal prosecution if basic ingredients of the offence alleged against him are altogether absent. (Para 38)

In the instant case, the appellant ceased to be a Director of the company from 27-12-1997 whereas the alleged offences, if any, were committed during the period from 24-5-1998 to 17-9-1999. There were no allegations against the appellant in the first information report. The company had invited investment from the depositors to invest in the business/benefit funds after receiving due approval of the scheme from Reserve Bank of India. Therefore, in any event, the element of cheating as alleged cannot be made out by any stretch of imagination. [Paras 37(a) to (c)]

Respondent 2 complainant has submitted in writing to that he does not want to proceed against the appellant because according to him the appellant has been inadvertently included as an accused by the investigating officer. He further mentioned in the letter that he had already received 55% of the deposited amount from the Official Liquidator and he did not want to proceed against the appellant. [Para 37(d)]

Even assuming that there could have been a vicarious liability thrust on the appellant, even then there cannot be any such vicarious liability in the absence of any allegations and material to show that the appellant was in charge of or responsible for the conduct of the company's business which had given rise to the offence. From any angle of the matter, the appellant cannot be compelled to face the criminal trial in the present case. [Para 37(e)]

On consideration of the totality of the facts and circumstances of the present case, the proceedings initiated against the appellant are quashed. (Para 39). M.A.A. Annamalai v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 8 SCC 524.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and A.K. Patnaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2010]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, considered

Rajesh Bajaj v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615, considered and relied on

Kuriachan Chacko v. State of Kerala, (2008) 8 SCC 708: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 631, cited

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Uma Shankar Gopalika v. State of Bihar, (2005) 10 SCC 336: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 49; S.V.L. Murthy v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 77: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 941; Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370, relied on [7482] — Ss. 482 & 204 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Offence by company — Non-application of mind in issuing summons — On the basis of a complaint, cognizance of offence under Ss. 24 and 25, punishable under Ss. 43 and 44 r/w S. 47 of Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 taken and issue of process ordered by Judicial Magistrate against appellant-directors of a company — No allegation made in the complaint or in the statement recorded by the Magistrate before issue of summons that the offence was committed by the company with the consent or connivance, of or was attributable to any negligence on the part of the appellants as required under S. 47(2) of the Act — Further, sample of water was taken immediately after the Factory Manager of the company had informed the Board that FRP lining provided in the oil and grease trap of the effluent treatment plant having got damaged at some places, the tank had to be shut down temporarily and would be restarted soon after repair/replacement — Held, summons was issued without application of mind and Judicial Magistrate committed error in issuing the same hence liable to be set aside — In view of the special facts and circumstances of the case, question regarding conflict, if any, between decisions of Supreme Court in Municipal Corpn. of Delhi v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi and State of Haryana v. Brij Lal Mittal on the one hand and in U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Modi Distillery on the other hand need not be considered — Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974, Ss. 43, 44 r/w 47 and 24 & 25. Nalin Thakor v. State of Gujarat, (2003) 12 SCC 461.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and S.B. Sinha and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

Distinguished in U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Dr. Bhupendra Kumar Modi, (2009) 2 SCC 147

[7483] — S. 482 — Quashment of proceedings under Ss. 192 and 199 r/w S. 34 IPC — Offence by company — Vicarious liability of its Chairman — When can be fastened — Requisite averments in complaint — Complaint filed against accused Company and its Chairman for fabricating documents produced on record in arbitration proceedings, on the basis of arbitrator's adverse observations in award — High Court declining to quash complaint — Sustainability —

Held, presumption cannot be drawn that a Chairman of a company is responsible for all acts committed by or on behalf of the company — Wherever by a legal fiction principle of vicarious liability is attracted it has to be specifically provided in the statute concerned — Neither S. 192 nor S. 199 IPC incorporate principle of vicarious liability — Therefore, it is incumbent on complainant to specifically aver role of each of accused in complaint — Absence of any such specific averment in complaint demonstrating role of Chairman (Appellant 2) in commission of offence — However, so far as (Appellant 1) Company is concerned, fact that said tampered document was submitted to support averments in written statement filed on their behalf to possibly influence decision of Arbitral Tribunal, offences under Ss. 192 and 199 IPC prima facie made out against it — No prima facie case made out against Appellant 2 in respect of offences under Ss. 192 and 199 IPC even with aid of S. 34 IPC — Complaint quashed against Appellant 2 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 192 and 199 r/w S. 34

Disposing the appeal in terms below,

Held :

Though the inherent powers of the High Court under Section 482 of the Code are very wide in amplitude, yet they are not unlimited. However, it is neither feasible nor desirable to lay down an absolute rule which would govern the exercise of inherent jurisdiction of the Court. Nevertheless, powers under the said provision have to be exercised sparingly and with caution to secure the ends of justice and to prevent the abuse of the process of the court. Where the allegations in the first information report or the complaint taken at its face value and accepted in their entirety do not constitute the offence alleged, the High Court would be justified in invoking its powers under Section 482 of the Code to quash the criminal proceedings. (Para 18)

For constituting an offence under Section 192 IPC the following ingredients must be satisfied:

(i) Causing any circumstance to exist, or making any false entry in any book or record or making any document containing a false statement.

(ii) Doing one of the above acts with the intention that it may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding, or in a proceeding taken by law before a public servant or an arbitrator.

(iii) Doing such act with the intention that it may cause any person, who in such proceeding, is to form an opinion upon the evidence to entertain an erroneous opinion touching any point material to the result of such proceeding. (Para 25)

Section 199 IPC requires the following ingredients to be established:

(i) Making of a declaration which a court or a public servant is bound or authorised by law to receive in evidence.

(ii) Making of a false statement in such declaration knowing or believing it to be false.

(iii) Such false statement must be touching any point material to the object for which the declaration is made or used. (Para 26)

It is trite law that wherever by a legal fiction the principle of vicarious liability is attracted and a person who is otherwise not personally involved in the commission of an offence is made liable for the same, it has to be specifically provided in the statute concerned. Neither Section 192 IPC nor Section 199 IPC incorporate the principle of vicarious liability, and therefore, it was incumbent on the complainant to specifically aver the role of each of the accused in the complaint. (Para 30)

The only averment made against Appellant 2 in the complaint is that Appellant 1 i.e. MSEB was acting under the control and management of Appellant 2 along with other three accused. Though Appellant 2 happened to be the Chairman of MSEB at the relevant time but it is a settled proposition of law that one cannot draw a presumption that a Chairman of a company is responsible for all acts committed by or on behalf of the company. In the entire body of the complaint there is no allegation that Appellant 2 had personally participated in the arbitration proceedings or was monitoring them in his capacity as the Chairman of MSEB and it was at his instance that the subject interpolation was made in commissioning report (Ext. C-64). Even the Board resolution, adduced by the complainant, does not establish that Appellant 2 was involved in the alleged fabrication of false evidence or adducing the same in evidence before the Arbitral Tribunal. In the absence of any such specific averment demonstrating the role of Appellant 2 in the commission of the offence, it is difficult to hold that the complaint, even assuming it to be correct in its entirety, discloses the commission of an offence by Appellant 2 under Sections 192 and 199 IPC. (Paras 27, 28 and 31)

Insofar as the case of Appellant 1 Company is concerned, the fact that Ext. C-64 was submitted with the intention to support the averments in the written statement filed on their behalf, which could possibly influence the decision of the Arbitral Tribunal in relation to the conduct of Respondent 1 while discharging their obligations under the contract between them and Appellant 1, prima facie, a case of offences under Sections 192 and 199 IPC is made out against them. (Para 32)

(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies (contd.)

No prima facie case has been made out against Appellant 2 in respect of offences under Sections 192 and 199 IPC even with the aid of Section 34 IPC. Therefore, it was a fit case where the High Court should have exercised its powers under Section 482 of the Code by quashing the complaint against Appellant 2. The appeal is dismissed qua Appellant 1; it is allowed in relation to Appellant 2; and consequently the order of the Magistrate taking cognizance against Appellant 2 in the complaint is quashed. (Paras 37 and 38). Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co. Ltd. v. Datar Switchgear Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 479: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 545.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910; R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, (1995) 6 SCC 194: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1059; Babu Lal v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 725: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 555; S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2005) 8 SCC 89: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1975; S.K. Alagh v. State of U.P., (2008) 5 SCC 662: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 686, relied on

Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259; K.L.E. Society v. Siddalingesh, (2008) 4 SCC 541: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 455: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 1071; Baijnath Jha v. Sita Ram, (2008) 8 SCC 77: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 428; Suneet Gupta v. Anil Triloknath Sharma, (2008) 11 SCC 670: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 920; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Sunita Jain v. Pawan Kumar Jain, (2008) 2 SCC 705: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 537; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; Keki Hormusji Gharda v. Mehervan Rustom Irani, (2009) 6 SCC 475: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 1113; N.K. Wahi v. Shekhar Singh, (2007) 9 SCC 481: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 203; Sharon Michael v. State of T.N., (2009) 3 SCC 375: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 103; Maksud Saiyed v. State of Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 692; Tarun K. Shah v. C.R. Alimchandani, (2001) 9 SCC 728: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1030; K.M. Mathew v. K.A. Abraham, (2002) 6 SCC 670: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1480, referred to [7484] — S. 482 — Company involved — Fastening of vicarious liability on persons running the affairs of the company — Requirements for — In the instant case, Respondents 1 and 2 were sought to be proceeded against on the premise that they were vicariously liable for the affairs of the company — For that the company must be made an accused as legal fiction is raised both against the company as well as the person responsible for the acts of the company — Besides, when the vicarious criminal liability is fastened on a person on the premise that he was in charge of the affairs of the company and responsible to it, all the ingredients laid down under the statute must be fulfilled — Respondents 1 and 2 were charged in their individual capacity for commission of offences of cheating, criminal breach of trust and forgery — As there had never been any interaction between the appellant and them, the question of any representation which is one of the main ingredients for constituting an offence of cheating, would not arise — So far as allegations in regard to commission of the offence of forgery are concerned, the same had been made only against Respondent 3 and not against Respondent 2 — Sending a copy thereof to the National Stock Exchange without there being anything further to show that Respondent 2 had any knowledge of the fact that the same was a forged and fabricated document cannot constitute an offence — Similarly, it has not been alleged that they were entrusted with or otherwise had dominion over the property of the appellant or they have committed any criminal breach of trust — Hence, impugned judgment quashing FIR against Respondents 1 and 2 calls for no interference — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 420, 463 & 405. R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-10-2008]

[7485] — S. 482 — Food adulteration offences by companies — Facts required to be pleaded in complaint regarding individual liability of a Director — Held, specific allegations regarding role of a Director in the management of a company has to be pleaded in order to make him liable — Further held on facts, when one particular manager had been named under S. 17(2) as person responsible for ensuring prevention of adulteration, other Directors could not be prosecuted therefor — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, Ss. 17(1) and (2)

In a complaint against a company and its Directors, the complainant has to indicate in the complaint itself as to whether the Directors concerned were either in charge of or responsible to the Company for its day-to-day management, or whether they were responsible to the Company for the conduct of its business. A mere bald statement that a person was a Director of the Company against which certain allegations had been made is not sufficient to make such Director liable in the absence of any specific allegations regarding his role in the management of the Company. Having considered the matter in its totality and also having regard to the fact that a manager had been nominated under Section 17(2) of the 1954 Act to be a person in charge of and responsible to the Company for the conduct of its business, the appeals are allowed. (Paras 50 and 52). Pepsico India Holdings (P) Ltd. v. Food Inspector, (2011) 1 SCC 176.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Altamas Kabir, Cyriac Joseph and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2010]

S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2005) 8 SCC 89: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1975, relied on

N. Rangachari v. BSNL, (2007) 5 SCC 108: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 460, distinguished

MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444; MCD v. Purshotam Dass Jhunjunwala, (1983) 1 SCC 9: 1983 SCC (Cri) 123, cited

[7486] — S. 482 — Quashing of summons — Propriety — Vicarious liability of Directors — "In charge of and responsible for conduct of business" — Absence of specific averments in respect of — Respondent-accused was Regional Technical Director handling quality control of offending Company whose quality of product was not found conforming to ISI specifications — Neither any specific role attributed to respondent in commission of alleged offence, nor established that respondent was in any way responsible or in charge of affairs of Company to be vicariously liable — Held, in absence of such clear averments in the complaint, respondent cannot be compelled to face criminal trial — Imperative to specifically aver in complaint that accused was in charge of and was responsible for conduct of business of the Company — Further held, every Director need not be and is not in charge of business of Company and in case of such non-Director officers, it is all the more necessary to state what his duties and responsibilities were, and how and in what matter he was liable — Insecticides Act, 1968, S. 33 (Paras 11 to 20). State (NCT of Delhi) v. Rajiv Khurana, (2010) 11 SCC 469: AIR 2010 SC 2986: (2010) 158 Comp Cas 151: (2010) 171 DLT 769: (2010) 93 AIC 28.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and K.S. Radhakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-2010]

S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2005) 8 SCC 89: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1975; Monaben Ketanbhai Shah v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 7 SCC 15: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1857; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Brij Lal Mittal, (1998) 5 SCC 343: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1315; K.P.G. Nair v. Jindal Menthol India Ltd., (2001) 10 SCC 218: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1038; Katta Sujatha v. Fertilizers & Chemicals Travancore Ltd., (2002) 7 SCC 655: 2003 SCC (Cri) 151; Sabitha Ramamurthy v. R.B.S. Channabasavaradhya, (2006) 10 SCC 581: (2007) 1 SCC (Cri) 621; K.K. Ahuja v. V.K. Vora, (2009) 10 SCC 48: (2010) 2 SCC (Cri) 1181, relied on

[7487] — Ss. 482 and 204 — Application for quashing summons — Maintainability of — Whether allegations in complaint petition disclosed commission of any cognizable offence — Ascertainment of — Vicarious liability — When not attracted — High Court dismissing appellants' applications under S. 482 for quashing summons issued to them on a complaint filed under Ss. 120-B, 409 and 420 IPC — Challenge to — Appellants contending that dispute between parties having arisen out of a contract qua contract, complaint petition not maintainable — Sustainability — Held, dispute between parties was civil in nature — Allegations made against appellants were in relation to execution of contract — No case of criminal misconduct on their part was made out before formation of contract — There is nothing to show that appellants, who held different positions in appellant Company, made any representation in their personal capacities and, thus, they cannot be made vicariously liable only because they were employees of the Company — Therefore, impugned judgment unsustainable, hence, set aside — Impugned summons issued to the appellants, quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B, 405, 409 and 420 — Ingredients of Ss. 405, 409 and 420, reiterated — Contract Act, 1872, Ss. 182 and 73

In the instant case, E, a German company, approached M in Hong Kong, for supply of certain garments. M contacted T, the appellant Company, to procure those goods and supply them to E. The appellant Company approached A, the complainant, for supply of the aforesaid goods. Pursuant thereto, in furtherance of the contract entered into by and between the parties, T and A, export of the said garments were made by A, which was certified by T to be in good condition.

The buyer company E, refused to accept the shipment on the premise that on a random checking too many defects disqualifying the goods were found and, thus, the goods being sub-standard, were not acceptable. They asked for the goods to be picked up from their warehouse. A, the complainant, however, did not make any attempt to re-export the said goods from Germany to India. It filed a complaint petition with the police to help it to recover dues from the appellant Company. The appellant Company, thereafter sent a legal notice to the complainant, inter alia, stating that it had suffered damages by the non-performance of the complainant asking it to pay compensation to the appellant Company. The complainant was also called to withdraw the complaint which amounted to malicious prosecution meant to harass the appellant Company.

An FIR was then lodged by the complainant for taking legal action against the appellants for the alleged offences committed by them and to recover the amount from them. Thereupon a case was registered and summons were issued to the appellants. The appellants then filed an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court for quashing the summons issued, which was dismissed. Hence the present appeal.

(11)(xix) Quashment re offences involving companies (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Indisputably the complainant is the producer of the garments. The buyer is a German company. Rightly or wrongly, the buyer refused to accept the goods, inter alia, on the premise that the same were defective and sub-standard. It is assumed that the appellant Company was assured payment for such supplies. Even if that be so, it would be a del credere agent. Its liability is, therefore, a civil liability. The allegations contained in the FIR did not reveal that any misrepresentation was made at the time of formation of the contract. The goods were to be supplied by the complainant. They were presumably required to meet the requirements of the buyer. Even if the certificate granted by the appellant Company was incorrect, an appropriate action against them could have been taken for breach of contract. (Para 12)

The FIR contains details of the terms of contract entered into by and between the parties as also the mode and manner in which they were implemented. Allegations have been made against the appellants in relation to execution of the contract. No case of criminal misconduct on their part has been made out before the formation of the contract. There is nothing to show that the appellants herein who hold different positions in the appellant Company made any representation in their personal capacities and, thus, they cannot be made vicariously liable only because they are employees of the Company. (Para 16)

The liability of the Company is, therefore, a civil liability. It is also not a case where although a prima facie case had been made out disclosing commission of an offence, the court is called upon to consider the defence of the accused. The FIR itself refers to the documents. They can, therefore, be taken into consideration for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether the allegations made in the complaint petition read as a whole, even if taken to be correct in its entirety, discloses commission of any cognizable offence or not. As admittedly the complainant was the supplier of garments which were found out to be defective in nature, therefore, the dispute between the parties is civil in nature. (Paras 18 and 19). Sharon Michael v. State of T.N., (2009) 3 SCC 375.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-2008]

R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516, relied on [7488] — S. 482 — Property entrusted to or in dominion of company, but Chairman sought to be made liable — Averments necessary to implicate Chairman — Respondent company making security deposit to bid for tenders with MSEB — Due to certain disputes, it sought immediate refund of said amount, as it was no longer interested in participating in tenders — MSEB informed respondent that deposit had been adjusted against dues payable by respondent — Respondents filed complaint against appellant, Chairman of MSEB, that said amount of Rs 5 lakhs was in dominion of appellant-accused, entrusted to MSEB for a specific purpose and, therefore, by adjusting said amount for some other purpose, accused dishonestly and wilfully, with common intention, deprived complainant use of money and committed offence in terms of S. 405 r/w S. 409 IPC — High Court declined to quash complaint — Held, said amount was deposited by complainant company with MSEB and there is nothing in complaint which may even remotely suggest that complainant had entrusted any property to appellant or that appellant had dominion over said money — In absence of any such specific averment demonstrating role of accused in commission of offence, no prima facie case has been made out against appellant in respect of offence under S. 409 r/w S. 405, even with aid of S. 34 IPC — It was a fit case where High Court should have exercised its powers under S. 482 CrPC by quashing complaint — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 405, 409 and 34 (Paras 3 to 7, 19 and 21 to 27). Asoke Basak v. State of Maharashtra, (2010) 10 SCC 660.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

S.K. Alagh v. State of U.P., (2008) 5 SCC 662: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 686, followed

[7489] — S. 482 — Cheating — Ingredients of — Mere failure to perform the promise, held, by itself not enough — To hold a person guilty of cheating, reiterated, it is necessary to show that at time of making promise he had fraudulent or dishonest intention to deceive or to induce person so deceived to do something which he would not otherwise do — Such a culpable intention right at the time of entering into an agreement cannot be presumed merely from his failure to keep the promise subsequently — In present case, there were no specific averments that appellant a retired senior employee of FCIL, officer-in-charge of supply of ammonium nitrate by FCIL at the time had dishonestly "induced" respondent IEL to enter into any agreement/arrangement with FCIL — On the contrary, complaint clearly reveals that IEL was fully conscious of precarious financial health of FCIL at the time IEL decided to enter into tripartite agreement —

Basis of complaint was that by deliberately suppressing fact that FCIL had already been referred to BIFR after erosion of net worth and thus likely to be declared a "sick company", appellant induced IEL to pay about Rs 4.2 crores as advance payment and in return FCIL did not supply goods as promised — Mere mention of words "defraud" and "cheat" in complaint is not sufficient to infer that appellants had dishonest intention right at the beginning — A tripartite agreement was signed after due deliberations considered to be in the interest of all parties concerned — Held, at best, it was a case of breach of contract, for which FCIL was already defending civil suit filed by IEL — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 415 and 420 (Paras 22 and 25 to 32). V.P. Shrivastava v. Indian Explosives Ltd., (2010) 10 SCC 361: (2010) 159 Comp Cas 529.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-2010]

Ram Jas v. State of U.P., (1970) 2 SCC 740: 1970 SCC (Cri) 516; Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129; Kuriachan Chacko v. State of Kerala, (2008) 8 SCC 708: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 631; Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E. Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 269: 2000 SCC (Cri) 615; Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121; Anil Mahajan v. Bhor Industries Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 228: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 746, relied on

(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases

[7490] — S. 482 — S. 138, NI Act proceedings — Notice — Service — Requirement of — Notice sent to respondents through registered post and under a certificate of posting to their correct address — High Court quashing the proceedings on ground that because of the endorsement of the postal peon, the service could not be said to have been effected — Held, High Court was not justified in so holding — Further held, it is well settled that once notice has been sent by registered post with acknowledgment due to a correct address, it must be presumed that the service has been made effective — Impugned order set aside and proceedings under S. 138 restored — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Paras 5 and 8 to 11). Indo Automobiles v. Jai Durga Enterprises, (2008) 8 SCC 529: (2008) 3 KLT 480.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-2008]

K. Bhaskaran v. Sankaran Vaidhyan Balan, (1999) 7 SCC 510: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1284; V. Raja Kumari v. P. Subbarama Naidu, (2004) 8 SCC 774: 2005 SCC (Cri) 393, followed

[7491] — S. 482 — Stop payment instructions, held, cannot obviate the offence under S. 138, NI Act if otherwise made out — Further held, neither such liability could have been avoided by giving notice to the payee or holder in due course prior to presentation of the cheque wherein the payee or holder in due course was advised not to present the same for encashment and he does present it and the cheque is returned as per the stop payment instructions — Ruling to that effect in para 6 of Electronics Trade and Technology Development Corpn. case, (1996) 2 SCC 739 and followed in K.K. Sidharthan case, (1996) 6 SCC 369, being contrary to the object and purpose Ss. 138-142, overruled — That presumption under S. 139 is attracted to such situation, held, was wrongly ignored — Drawer of cheque will have opportunity to rebut the presumption at the trial — High Court therefore was not justified, on facts, in quashing the complaint under S. 482, CrPC at the threshold — Matter therefore restored before the Magistrate concerned and all contentions will be open — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 139

It was alleged by the appellant that the respondent had drawn three cheques in Feb. 1994 in favour of the appellant in partial discharge of liability/debt. The appellant presented the cheques on 9-8-1994 for encashment through their banker. On 6-9-1994 the banker of the respondent returned the cheques as unpaid with the endorsement "payment stopped by the drawer". Later it transpired that the respondent by his letter dated 8-8-1994 to his banker had instructed to stop the payments. The appellant on 13-9-1994 sent a legal notice in terms of Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act to the respondent demanding payment of the amounts under the cheques. Since the respondent failed and neglected to make the payment of the amount of the aforesaid three cheques within the stipulated period of 15 days which expired on 2-10-1994, the appellant filed three criminal complaints against the respondent under Section 138. The respondent filed applications for staying the proceedings which were rejected. The respondent then filed three petitions under Section 482 CrPC in the High Court for quashing the complaints. The High Court allowed the petitions and quashed the complaints on the following reasons:

(i) The appellant had not pleaded in his complaint that the cheques were returned by the bank unpaid "either because the amount of money standing to the credit of that account is insufficient to honour the cheque or that it exceeds the amount arranged to be paid from that account by an agreement made with that bank". The necessary ingredients of Section 138 of the Act having not been pleaded the Court could not have taken cognizance of the offence.

(11)(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases (contd.)

(ii) Mere endorsement of the bank "payment stopped" was not sufficient to entertain the complaint as that was not an ingredient of the offence under Section 138 of the Act.

Allowing the appeals

Held :

Even if a cheque is dishonoured because of 'stop payment' instruction to the bank, Section 138 would get attracted.

The position will not be different even if the drawer had instructed the bank to stop the payment prior to the presentation of the cheques for encashment as in the present case. The observations of the Supreme Court in Electronics Trade & Technology Development Corpn. Ltd. in para 6 to the effect "Suppose after the cheque is issued to the payee or to the holder in due course and before it is presented for encashment, notice is issued to him not to present the same for encashment and yet the payee or holder in due course presents the cheque to the bank for payment and when it is returned on instructions, Section 138 does not get attracted", does not fit in with the object and purpose of the provision which is to promote the efficacy of banking operations and to ensure credibility in transacting business through cheques. Acceptance of this proposition will make Section 138 a dead letter, for, by giving instructions to the bank to stop payment immediately after issuing a cheque against a debt or liability the drawer can easily get rid of the penal consequences notwithstanding the fact that a deemed offence was committed. Once the cheque is issued by the drawer a presumption under Section 139 must follow and merely because the drawer issues a notice to the drawee or to the bank for stoppage of the payment it will not preclude an action under Section 138 of the Act by the drawee or the holder of a cheque in due course. Modi Cements Ltd. v. Kuchil Kumar Nandi, (1998) 3 SCC 249: AIR 1998 SC 1057: 1998 Cri LJ 1397: (1998) 92 Comp Cas 88: (1998) 1 KLT 582.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee, S.P. Kurdukar and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1998]

Electronics Trade & Technology Development Corpn. Ltd. v. Indian Technologists & Engineers (Electronics) (P) Ltd., (1996) 2 SCC 739: 1996 SCC (Cri) 454; K.K. Sidharthan v. T.P. Praveena Chandran, (1996) 6 SCC 369: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1340, overruled on this point

Kuchil Kumar Nandi v. Modi Cement Ltd., 1997 Cri LJ 805 (Cal), reversed

Affirmed in Goaplast (P) Ltd. v. Chico Ursula D'Souza, (2003) 3 SCC 232

[Ed.: While the legislature in introducing Sections 138-142 has attempted to promote the efficacy of banking operations and ensure credibility in transacting business through cheques, it is sad to note that the banks themselves have done little to amend their banking practices in keeping with the legislative change, though it is nearly a decade since the provisions were introduced. If only the language of the endorsements made while returning the unpaid cheque were amended and more details provided, many of the problems faced in cases under Section 138 would not have arisen.

Take the endorsement of "payment stopped by drawer". If it was made obligatory for banks to also specify in such instances whether funds or arrangement with the bank was sufficient or not at the time of returning the cheque it would lend transparency to the transaction which would help both in avoiding unnecessary litigation and in felicitating quick disposal of the complaint in case it is filed.

So also the endorsement "refer to drawer" should be substituted by a more explicit statement regarding insufficiency of funds or arrangement with the bank. Such euphemism or courtesy to the customer is misplaced and not in keeping with the object and purpose of Section 138. There has been some controversy about such endorsement. In Manohar v. Mahalingam, 1992 LW (Cri) 367, it was held that the answer 'Refer to Drawer' often adopted by the bankers could mean anything from shortage of funds to death or insolvency of the drawer and could also include insufficiency of funds. It is seen therefore, that the nomenclature of the return by itself would not be decisive of the cause of return. Again in Union Roadways v. Shah Raman Lal Satish Kumar, (1992) 2 BC 216: 76 Comp Cas (AP) 3151, it was held by the Andhra Pradesh High Court that from the endorsement 'Refer to Drawer' the complainant cannot draw an inference that the cheque was issued without funds and that in such a case offence under Section 138 was not made. In Dada Silk Mills v. Indian Overseas Bank, (1995) 82 Comp Cas 35, it has been held by the Gujarat High Court that the endorsement refer to drawer, necessarily in banking parlance means that 'the cheque has been returned for want of funds in the account of the drawer of the cheque.' Refer to Drawer in their ordinary meaning amounted to a statement by the Bank — 'We are not paying, go back to the drawer and ask him why'. M.M. Malik v. Prem Kumar Goyal, 1991 Cri LJ 2594.

Therefore it is high time the Reserve Bank of India or the association of Nationalised Banks intervened and made necessary change in banking practices and in the format/language of the memo attached while returning unpaid cheques to further the object of Section 138.]

[7492] — S. 482 — Dishonour of cheque on ground of insufficiency of funds — Notice issued to the Managing Director of the company who signed the cheques — Held, there was no infirmity in the notice — High Court not justified in quashing the complaint on ground that notice was sent to the Managing Director at his office address since that could not mean that the notice was sent to the company itself — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 142. Bilakchand Gyanchand Co. v. A. Chinnaswami, (1999) 5 SCC 693: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1034: AIR 1999 SC 2182: 1999 Cri LJ 3498: (1999) 98 Comp Cas 573.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.N. Kirpal and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-3-1999]

[7493] — S. 482 — Dishonour of cheque — As per complainant's own pleadings, bank account from where cheque had been issued, was not held in the name of appellant — Therefore, one of the requisite ingredients of S. 138 was not satisfied — Hence, continuance of further proceedings against appellant would be an abuse of process of court — High Court, under S. 482 CrPC should have quashed the complaint — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Paras 11, 22 and 21). Jugesh Sehgal v. Shamsher Singh Gogi, (2009) 14 SCC 683: (2009) 80 AIC 9 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-7-2009]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Som Mittal v. Govt. of Karnataka, (2008) 3 SCC 574: (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 910: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 1, relied on

[7494] — S. 482 — Dishonour of cheques — Continuance of prosecution after the entire amount involved was deposited with the court — Legality — Such payment although may have some effect in the matter of awarding of sentence, held, does not absolve the accused, of criminal liability — Hence, could not sustain the High Court's order quashing the criminal proceedings on that ground — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138

Once the offence is committed any payment made subsequent thereto will not absolve the accused of the liability of criminal offence, though in the matter of awarding of sentence, it may have some effect on the court trying the offence. But by no stretch of imagination, a criminal proceeding could be quashed on account of deposit of money in the court. (Para 7). Rajneesh Aggarwal v. Amit J. Bhalla, (2001) 1 SCC 631: 2001 SCC (Cri) 229: AIR 2001 SC 518: 2001 Cri LJ 708: (2001) 104 Comp Cas 332.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-1-2001]

[7495] — S. 482 — Dishonour of cheque — Cause of action to file complaint on non-payment despite issue of the notice, held, arises but once — Another cause of action would not arise on repeated dishonour on presentation of same cheque again subsequent to non-payment after the first notice — Payee is free to present the cheque repeatedly within its validity period but once notice has been issued and payment not received within 15 days of the receipt of the notice, payee has to avail the very cause of action arising thereupon and file the complaint — Dishonour of cheque on each presentation gives a fresh right to present it again during the period of its validity, but, held, it does not give rise to a fresh cause of action — Complaint has to be filed within one month from the day immediately following the day on which the period of 15 days from the date of receipt of the first notice by the drawer expires — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 & 142(b)

On 27-1-1995 the respondents gave a cheque of Rs 5,15,053.72 to the appellant in respect of balance amount payable to the appellant for supply of goods to them. The said cheque was dishonoured due to inadequacy of funds in the account. Hence, the appellant sent a lawyer's notice to the respondents on 17-2-1995 calling upon them to make the payment. The respondents requested the appellant to give some more time to pay the said amount. On the said request, the cheque was again presented on 6-7-1995, but the same was again dishonoured due to inadequacy of funds. Thereafter, another notice dated 24-7-1995 was served on the respondents demanding payment, but the respondents sent a reply on 10-8-1995 refuting the allegations contained in the legal notice. Hence, a complaint under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 (in short "the Act") was lodged on 28-8-1995.

By the impugned judgment, the High Court exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC quashed the proceedings by holding that the requirements of Section 142 of the Act were not met. Hence, the complainant preferred the instant appeal.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant submitted that the High Court erroneously placed reliance on the decision of the Supreme Court in Sadanandan Bhadran v. Madhavan Sunil Kumar, (1998) 6 SCC 514: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1471. It was pleaded that the period of limitation had to be reckoned from 10-8-1995 i.e. the date on which the respondents replied to the second legal notice dated 24-7-1995. As the complaint was filed on 28-8-1995 the same was well within time. On the contrary, the respondents supported the judgment of the High Court. They pointed out that the effect of the first notice was lost in view of the fact that the second notice was given. According to them, the High Court rightly applied the ratio in Sadanandan Bhadran case.

(11)(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases (contd.)

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Clause (a) of the proviso to Section 138 does not put any embargo upon the payee to successively present a dishonoured cheque during the period of its validity. This apart, in the course of business transactions it is not uncommon for a cheque being returned due to insufficient funds or similar such reasons and being presented again by the payee after some time, on his own volition or at the request of the drawer, in expectation that it would be encashed. The primary interest of the payee is to get his money and not prosecution of the drawer, recourse to which, normally, is taken out of compulsion and not choice. On each presentation of the cheque and its dishonour, a fresh right — and not a cause of action — accrues in his favour. He may, therefore, without taking pre-emptory action in exercise of his such right under clause (b) of Section 138, go on presenting the cheque so as to enable him to exercise such right at any point of time during the validity of the cheque. (Para 8)

But once he gives a notice under clause (b) of Section 138, he forfeits such right as in case of failure of the drawer to pay the money within the stipulated time he would be liable for the offence and the cause of action for filing the complaint will arise. (Para 9)

Proceeding on the basis of the generic meaning of the term "cause of action", certainly each of the above facts would constitute a part of the cause of action but clause (b) of Section 142 gives it a restrictive meaning, in that, it refers to only one fact which will give rise to the cause of action and that is the failure to make the payment within 15 days from the date of the receipt of the notice. A combined reading of Sections 138 and 142 makes it clear that cause of action is to be reckoned accordingly. The combined reading of the above two sections of the Act leaves no room for doubt that cause of action within the meaning of Section 142(b) arises — and can arise — only once. (Para 10)

One of the indispensable factors to form the cause of action envisaged in Section 138 of the Act is contained in clause (b) of the proviso to that section. It involves the making of a demand by giving a notice in writing to the drawer of the cheque "within fifteen days of the receipt of information by him from the bank regarding the return of the cheque as unpaid". If no such notice is given within the said period of 15 days, no cause of action could have been created at all. (Para 13)

Thus, it is well settled that if dishonour of a cheque has once snowballed into a cause of action it is not permissible for a payee to create another cause of action with the same cheque. The period of one month for filing the complaint will be reckoned from the day immediately following the day on which the period of fifteen days from the date of the receipt of the notice by the drawer expires. (Paras 14 and 11). Prem Chand Vijay Kumar v. Yashpal Singh, (2005) 4 SCC 417: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1153: (2005) 4 Mah LJ 100: (2005) 125 Comp Cas 338.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and S.H. Kapadia, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2005]

Sadanandan Bhadran v. Madhavan Sunil Kumar, (1998) 6 SCC 514: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1471, applied

SIL Import, USA v. Exim Aides Silk Exporters, (1999) 4 SCC 567: 1999 SCC (Cri) 600, relied on [Ed.: What if no notice is sent and cheque presented again, or again, and ultimately dishonoured? In this regard it is opined in para 13 that: 'If no such notice is given within the said period of 15 days, no cause of action could have been created at all.' Similar view has been expressed in Uniplas India Ltd. v. State, (2001) 6 SCC 8 where it has been opined that such dishonour would remain without further escalation and would not snowball into a cause of action. Hence it would seem that despite repeated presentations and dishonour each time, only when notice is sent after any of the subsequent dishonour (and payment not received) would the cause of action arise for the first time, to be availed for filing the complaint. Therefore it may be said that it is not essential to issue notice after the first dishonour. One can wait and see by presenting the cheque again before initiating the legal process under Section 138 by issue of a notice in writing.

It has been further clarified in Dalmia Cement (Bharat) Ltd. v. Galaxy Traders & Agencies Ltd., (2001) 6 SCC 463 that it is not the giving of the notice but its receipt by the drawer which culminates in the cause of action. Hence in that case, on the drawer intimating that the purported notice was an empty envelope, the second notice based on second presentation and its dishonour was held to be proper.]

[7496] — S. 482 — Presumption must be drawn that holder of the cheque received the cheque of the nature referred to in S. 138, NI Act for the discharge of any debt or other liability unless the contrary is proved — Held, therefore High Court not justified in quashing complaints at initial stage of proceedings — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 139 and 138. Maruti Udyog Ltd. v. Narender, (1999) 1 SCC 113.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1998]

[7497] — S. 482 — Offences by companies — Persons vicariously liable for — Proper stage for determination of such persons if any, held, is at the time of framing of charge and not earlier — Hence, where a company and its Directors were arraigned as accused and one of them, after unsuccessfully seeking under S. 482 quashment of the proceedings, approached Supreme Court and sought the resolving of the alleged conflict between Ram Kishan Rohtagi case reported in (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115 and Modi Distillery case reported in (1987) 3 SCC 684: 1987 SCC (Cri) 632, held, it was not necessary to advert to that question at this stage — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 141

The appellant was one of the Directors of a Company arraigned as accused along with the Company under Section 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881. One of them, having unsuccessfully tried for such relief before the High Court in jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC approached the Supreme Court. The matter was referred to a larger Bench to resolve an apparent conflict between the judgments in Ram Kishan Rohtagi case (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115 and Modi Distillery case, (1987) 3 SCC 684: 1987 SCC (Cri) 632.

Held :

Section 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act mandates that some facts must come on the record in order to figure as to who should answer the charge ultimately. Necessarily, pre-charge evidence assumes importance. The complainant will have to put his side of the case as given out in the complaint and the persons summoned would have to put on the record all what is material to extricate themselves out. In any case, the crucial time would be when framing charge whereat a decision in that respect would be required to be made by the court. Presently, it would be premature to resolve the conflict. Therefore, it would be for the court concerned to pass appropriate orders at the time of framing of charge. (Para 4). P. Rajarathinam v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 10 SCC 529: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1502.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and M. Srinivasan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-1-1998]

[7498] — S. 482 — Dishonour of cheque issued on behalf of a company — Post-dated cheque becoming due for payment after respondent had resigned from Directorship and had given notice of resignation to the complainant — Liability of such person — Held, lower courts rightly discharged respondent from array of accused persons — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 141, 138 and 140

A person who had resigned within the knowledge of the complainant in 1996 could not be a person in charge of the Company in 1998 when the cheque was dishonoured. He had no say in the matter of seeing that the cheque is honoured. He could not ask the Company to pay the amount. He as a Director or otherwise could not have been made responsible for payment of the cheque on behalf of the Company or otherwise. (Para 21)

When post-dated cheques are issued and the same are accepted, although it may be presumed that the money will be made available in the bank when the same is presented for encashment, but for that purpose, the harsh provision of constructive liability may not be available except when an appropriate case in that behalf is made out. (Para 23)

Section 140 of the Act cannot be said to have any application whatsoever in this case. Reason to believe on the part of a drawer that the cheque would not be dishonoured cannot be a defence. But, then one must issue the cheque with full knowledge as to when the same would be presented. It appears to be a case where the appellant has taken undue advantage of the post-dated cheques given on behalf of the Company. The statute does not envisage misuse of a privilege conferred upon a party to the contract. (Para 24). DCM Financial Services Ltd. v. J.N. Sareen, (2008) 8 SCC 1: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 401: AIR 2008 SC 2255: (2008) 2 KLT 762: (2008) 144 Comp Cas 55: 2008 Cri LJ 3178.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-5-2008]

Saroj Kumar Poddar v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2007) 3 SCC 693: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 135; Everest Advertising (P) Ltd. v. State, Govt. of NCT of Delhi, (2007) 5 SCC 54: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 444; Raghu Lakshminarayanan v. Fine Tubes, (2007) 5 SCC 103: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 455; Adalat Prasad v. Rooplal Jindal, (2004) 7 SCC 338: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1927, relied on [7499] — S. 482 — Company as an accused for commission of offence under S. 138, NI Act — Pleadings necessary — Persons who at the time of commission of offence were in charge of, and were responsible to the company for conduct of its business — Pleadings did not disclose any responsibility of Respondents 4 and 5 and therefore High Court rightly quashed criminal proceedings against them under S. 482 CrPC — However, Respondent 3 who was the authorised signatory and had signed the cheque could not be discharged, nor could Respondent 2 which was the accused firm — High Court judgment insofar as it discharged Respondents 2 and 3 therefore set aside — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 141 and 138 (Paras 3 to 6). Green Earth Asphalt & Power (P) Ltd. v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 8 SCC 278: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 481: (2008) 69 AIC 13 (SC): (2008) 106 Cut LT 696.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2008]

(11)(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases (contd.)

[7500] — S. 482 — Offence by company — General allegation that all Directors were responsible — No ground to quash the proceedings under S. 482 CrPC — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 141

So far as allegations against the Directors are concerned about their position in the Company the complaint specifically contained the averments regarding the position of the accused Directors in the company. (Para 8). Malwa Cotton & Spg. Mills Ltd. v. Virsa Singh Sidhu, (2008) 17 SCC 147: AIR 2008 SC 3273: 2008 Cri LJ 4316: (2008) 145 Comp Cas 61: (2008) 3 APLJ 142 (SC): (2008) 69 AIC 14 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2008]

S.V. Muzumdar v. Gujarat State Fertiliser Co. Ltd., (2005) 4 SCC 173: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1020; N. Rangachari v. BSNL, (2007) 5 SCC 108: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 460, relied on

[7501] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Not justified where disputed questions of fact involved — Complaint filed by appellant against Directors of a company alleging commission of offence under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act — High Court quashed the proceedings against Respondent 1 on ground that he had resigned from directorship before the cheques were issued, though Form 32, which was required to be filed with Registrar of Companies, was filed after the cheques were issued — High Court also quashed proceedings against other Directors in charge of day-to-day management work of the company on ground that there were no specific allegations and some general allegations were made that all Directors were responsible — Held, factual disputes were involved which were required to be established in trial and High Court was not justified in quashing the proceedings while dealing with applications under S. 482 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 142

In these cases, factual disputes are involved. What was the effect of delayed presentation before the Registrar of Companies is essentially a matter of trial. Whether Respondent 1 had intimated the Company and whether there was any resolution accepting his resignation are matters in respect of which evidence has to be led. Therefore, the High Court was not justified in its view. (Para 7). Malwa Cotton & Spg. Mills Ltd. v. Virsa Singh Sidhu, (2008) 17 SCC 147: AIR 2008 SC 3273: 2008 Cri LJ 4316: (2008) 145 Comp Cas 61: (2008) 3 APLJ 142 (SC): (2008) 69 AIC 14 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2008]

[7502] — S. 482 — Dishonour of cheque — Offence by company — Proceedings against Director of company — Propriety — Where complaint clearly alleged that the named Directors were in charge of and responsible to the company for the conduct of its business, held, High Court rightly refused to quash it under S. 482 CrPC — Questions whether the accused at the relevant time were not in charge of the affairs of the Company or any restriction on their power or existence of any special circumstance made them not liable to be convicted, could be considered during trial — Companies Act, 1956, S. 291 — Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 141 and 138

The present case involved commission of offence by a company under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

Two cheques were issued by a company D in favour of the respondent Bharat Sanchar Nigam Limited (hereinafter referred to as "BSNL"). The said cheques were duly presented by BSNL but were dishonoured for insufficiency of funds. BSNL thereupon issued requisite notices calling upon D to pay the amounts due under the cheques. The payments not having been made, BSNL filed a complaint under the NI Act, 1881.

In the complaint, BSNL alleged that the cheques were issued to it by D in discharge of a pre-existing liability based on the business transactions between the companies. The appellant and the other accused were Directors of D and they were in charge of and responsible for the conduct of the business of D.

The appellant moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC seeking the quashing of the complaint insofar as it related to him. The appellant pleaded that he being a nominated Chairman and holding an honorary post in the Company D, he was never assigned with any of the Company's financial or other business activities. He was the Chairman for namesake and was never entrusted with any job or business or constituted a signing authority. It was further pleaded that the two cheques that were the subject-matter of the complaint, were not signed by him. These cheques were dated 31-8-2004, after the appellant had effectively resigned. It was argued that as the complaint did not contain adequate averments to justify initiation of a criminal proceeding against the appellant, the same was liable to be quashed.

The High Court, on going through the complaint in the context of Sections 138 and 141 of the NI Act came to the conclusion that the Court could not decide the pleas put forward by the appellant in dealing with a petition filed under Section 482 CrPC and that the defences sought to be put forward by the accused had to be established at the trial. Taking the view that the complaint disclosed adequate material for proceeding against the appellant in terms of Section 138 read with Section 141 of the NI Act, the High Court refused to accede to the prayer of the appellant and dismissed the application filed under Section 482 CrPC. Hence, the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

Under Section 141 of the NI Act, 1881, a prosecution could be launched not only against the company on behalf of which the cheque issued has been dishonoured, but it could also be initiated against every person who at the time the offence was committed, was in charge of and was responsible for the conduct of the business of the company. In fact, Section 141 deems such persons to be guilty of such offence, liable to be proceeded against and punished for the offence, leaving it to the person concerned, to prove that the offence was committed by the company without his knowledge or that he has exercised due diligence to prevent the commission of the offence. (Para 16)

A company, though a legal entity, cannot act by itself but can only act through its Directors. Normally, the Board of Directors act for and on behalf of the company. This is clear from Section 291 of the Companies Act. Therefore, a person in the commercial world having a transaction with a company is entitled to presume that the Directors of the company are in charge of the affairs of the company. If any restrictions on their powers are placed by the memorandum or articles of the company, it is for the Directors to establish it at the trial. It is in that context that Section 141 of the NI Act provides that when the offender is a company, every person, who at the time when the offence was committed was in charge of and was responsible to the company for the conduct of the business of the company, shall also be deemed to be guilty of the offence along with the company. (Paras 17 and 19)

A person normally having business or commercial dealings with a company, would satisfy himself about its creditworthiness and reliability by looking at its promoters and Board of Directors and the nature and extent of its business and its memorandum or articles of association. Other than that, he may not be aware of the arrangements within the company in regard to its management, daily routine, etc. Therefore, when a cheque issued to him by the company is dishonoured, he is expected only to be aware generally of who are in charge of the affairs of the company. It is not reasonable to expect him to know whether the person who signed the cheque was instructed to do so or whether he has been deprived of his authority to do so when he actually signed the cheque. Those are matters peculiarly within the knowledge of the company and those in charge of it. So, all that a payee of a cheque that is dishonoured can be expected to allege is that the persons named in the complaint are in charge of its affairs. The Directors are prima facie in that position. (Para 21)

Hence, following the ratio in S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd., (2005) 8 SCC 89 what is to be looked into is whether in the complaint, in addition to asserting that the appellant and another are the Directors of the company, it is further alleged that they are in charge of and responsible to the company for the conduct of the business of the company. (Paras 23 and 17 to 20)

In the present case, reading the complaint as a whole, it is clear that the allegations in the complaint are that at the time at which the two dishonoured cheques were issued by the Company, the appellant and another were the Directors of the Company and were in charge of the affairs of the Company. It is not proper to split hairs in reading the complaint so as to come to a conclusion that the allegations as a whole are not sufficient to show that at the relevant point of time the appellant and the other are not alleged to be persons in charge of the affairs of the Company. Obviously, the complaint refers to the point of time when the two cheques were issued, their presentment, dishonour and failure to pay in spite of notice of dishonour. (Para 26)

Therefore, in the circumstances, the High Court has rightly come to the conclusion that it is not a fit case for exercise of jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint. In fact, an advertence to Sections 138 and 141 of the NI Act shows that on the other elements of an offence under Section 138 being satisfied, the burden is on the Board of Directors or the officers in charge of the affairs of the company to show that they are not liable to be convicted. Any restriction on their power or existence of any special circumstance that makes them not liable is something that is peculiarly within their knowledge and it is for them to establish at the trial such a restriction or to show that at the relevant time they were not in charge of the affairs of the Company. Reading the complaint as a whole, it is satisfied that it is a case where the contentions sought to be raised by the appellant can only be dealt with after the commencement of the trial. (Para 27). N. Rangachari v. BSNL, (2007) 5 SCC 108: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 460: AIR 2007 SC 1682: (2007) 137 Comp Cas 198: (2007) 2 KLT 1030: (2007) 5 Mah LJ 375: 2007 Cri LJ 2448.

(11)(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-4-2007]

R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1962 SC 1821: (1963) 1 SCR 253; Rajesh Bajaj v. State (NCT of Delhi), (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Bilakchand Gyanchand Co. v. A. Chinnaswami, (1999) 5 SCC 693: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1034; Rajneesh Aggarwal v. Amit J. Bhalla, (2001) 1 SCC 631: 2001 SCC (Cri) 229; Monaben Ketanbhai Shah v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 7 SCC 15: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1857, relied on

S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2005) 8 SCC 89: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1975, followed

Saroj Kumar Poddar v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2007) 3 SCC 693: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 135, distinguished

Distinguished in DCM Financial Services Ltd. v. J.N. Sareen, (2008) 8 SCC 1*

[7503] — S. 482 — Dishonour of cheque — Offence by company — Vicarious liability of Directors of company — If made out — Requirements for launching prosecution against Directors — Necessity of requisite averments in complaint — Rationale for, explained — Reiterated, merely being a Director would not make a person liable for offence committed by company — For launching prosecution against Directors under Ss. 138/141 Negotiable Instruments Act, there has to be a specific allegation in complaint in regard to part played by them in transaction in question — Allegations have to be clear and unambiguous showing that Directors were in charge of and responsible for business of company — Herein, save and except for statement in complaint that respondents and some of the other accused, were Directors of accused Companies and were responsible and liable for acts of said Companies, no specific allegation was made against any of them — Question of proving a fact which was not mentioned in complaint, therefore, does not arise — High Court, therefore, rightly quashed the proceedings against respondents — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 120-A and 120-B — Quashment, Ss. 120-B and 420 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138, 139 and 141 (Paras 17 to 19). Central Bank of India v. Asian Global Ltd., (2010) 11 SCC 203: AIR 2010 SC 2835: (2010) 93 AIC 141 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2010]

S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2005) 8 SCC 89: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1975; N.K. Wahi v. Shekhar Singh, (2007) 9 SCC 481: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 203, followed

[7504] — S. 482 — Cheque dishonour — Limitation — Proviso empowering court to extend the period of limitation for filing complaint under S. 138, NI Act — Temporal nature of — Proviso is prospective in nature — Complaint under S. 138 filed on 28-11-1998 by respondent averring that a cheque issued by appellant on 31-3-1998 was dishonoured by bank when presented on 1-4-1998 for which notice was issued on 27-4-1998 and that on appellant's assurance the cheque was again presented but was dishonoured on 30-9-1998 for which notice was again served on 13-10-1998 on appellant, but no payment made — Held, complaint barred by limitation prescribed under Cl. (b) — Since various events including filing of the complaint took place much prior to 2002 when the amending Act inserted the proviso to Cl. (b) and it was not the stand of respondent that the case was covered by the proviso, the proviso had no application in this case — Complaint thus being time-barred liable to be quashed — General Clauses Act, 1897, Ss. 5(1) & (3) — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 142(b) proviso (as inserted by Act 55 of 2002). Anil Kumar Goel v. Kishan Chand Kaura, (2007) 13 SCC 492: AIR 2008 SC 899: (2008) 1 KLT 50: (2008) 62 AIC 247 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 1386.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Aftab Alam, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-12-2007]

Sadanandan Bhadran v. Madhavan Sunil Kumar, (1998) 6 SCC 514; Punjab Tin Supply Co. v. Central Govt., (1984) 1 SCC 206, relied on

[7505] — S. 482 — Dishonour of cheque — Complaint pending in trial court — Interference with, by High Court in exercise of its inherent powers — Scope — Held, at this stage High Court could not examine the merits of the complaint and could not, merely because the application did not contain a specific allegation to the contrary, hold that the cheques were not issued for any debt or existing liability — Onus to prove the non-existence of a debt or liability lay on the drawer and had to be discharged at the trial — Constitution of India — Art. 226 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 139

The law is well settled that the power of quashing criminal proceedings should be exercised very stringently and with circumspection. It is settled law that at this stage the Court is not justified in embarking upon an enquiry as to the reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the complaint. The inherent powers do not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on the court to act according to its whim or caprice. At this stage the Court could not have gone into merits and/or come to a conclusion that there was no existing debt or liability. (Para 13). M.M.T.C. Ltd. v. Medchl Chemicals and Pharma (P) Ltd., (2002) 1 SCC 234: 2002 SCC (Cri) 121: AIR 2002 SC 182: (2002) 108 Comp Cas 48: 2002 Cri LJ 266.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-11-2001]

[7506] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal complaint — When warranted — Complaint under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act filed by appellant — In pre-summoning statement, complainant stated that as per instruction of accused he deposited two cheques for collection through bank but both the cheques were returned by the bank to the complainant without payment stating "payment stopped by the drawer", that for the same he had issued legal notice to the accused and that reply notice was received from lawyer of accused with false allegations — Complaint quashed by High Court in exercise of power under S. 482 on ground that complainant had not stated in clear terms that accused had not paid the amount nor had he given any other explanation withholding the payment, which was mandatory — Held, it was contrary to averments made in the complaint as also the pre-summoning statement of complainant — Hence exercise of power of quashing was unwarranted — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138. T.K. Koya v. K. Devaraj, (2005) 13 SCC 705: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 294.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-12-2003]

[7507] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Cognizance of offence by criminal court not barred under the RBI Act — Criminal proceedings, hence, not quashed — Offence under Ss. 420 and 120-B IPC, as well as S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act — Held, taking cognizance of criminal proceedings is not barred under the RBI Act — Bar under Ss. 45-QA and 58-E of the RBI Act applies only to offences committed under the RBI Act — High Court, held, rightly acted by not quashing the order of cognizance taken by the criminal court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420 and 120-B — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, Ss. 45-QA and 58-E. Prudential Capital Mkt. Ltd. v. State of Bihar, (2000) 9 SCC 539: 2001 SCC (Cri) 644: AIR 2000 SC 3668.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-4-2000]

[7508] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Prayer for — Grant of — Matters to be considered — Cheque dishonour, cheating, etc. — Where allegations contained in complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety do not disclose an offence, the complaint can be quashed — Cheques issued by accused towards payment regarding purchase of welding rods, got dishonoured — On demand of said money, accused allegedly stating that he had issued fabricated cheques knowingly with an intention to cheat the complainant and grab his money — Complaint filed alleging commission of offences of criminal breach of trust and cheating — Held, non-payment or underpayment of price of goods by itself does not amount to commission of offence of cheating or criminal breach of trust — It is essentially a civil dispute — Merely because the accused issued cheques which got dishonoured, the same by itself would not mean that he cheated the complainant — There was no allegation as to act of inducement on the part of the accused and intention to cheat the complainant from the very inception — Thus, in the absence of allegations in the complaint showing existence of ingredients of the alleged offences, held, the said offences not made out — Complaint was liable to be quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 405, 406, 409, 415, 420 & 417 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138

The appellant and the respondents entered into a contract for sale and purchase of welding rods. The appellant allegedly did not pay some amount due from him towards supply of the said article. He issued two cheques, but the said cheques were dishonoured. Alleging that by reason of such act, the appellant had committed offences under Sections 406, 409, 420 and 417 of the Penal Code, a complaint petition was filed by the first respondent. The complainant alleged that he contacted the accused several times regarding the dishonour of the said cheques and payment of money, but the accused kept on making excuses in making payment. At last the accused is alleged to have stated to the complainant that he had issued fabricated cheques knowingly with an intention to cheat the complainant and grab his money. The accused challenged the complainant that he would not pay his money and the complainant could do what he liked.

After the court took cognizance against the appellant, the appellant filed an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court for quashing of the said criminal proceeding. The High Court refused to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. Hence, the present appeal.

(11)(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The principle underlying exercise of jurisdiction by the High Court under Section 482 CrPC is now well settled viz. that the allegations contained in the complaint petition even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety do not disclose an offence or not is the question. (Para 7)

In the present case, the dispute between the parties is essentially a civil dispute. Non-payment or underpayment of the price of the goods by itself does not amount to commission of an offence of cheating or criminal breach of trust. No offence, having regard to the definition of criminal breach of trust contained in Section 405 IPC can be said to have been made out. Neither any allegation has been made to show existence of the ingredients of the aforementioned provision nor any statement in that behalf has been made. (Para 8)

The ingredients of Section 420 IPC are: (i) deception of any persons; (ii) fraudulently or dishonestly inducing any person to deliver any property; or (iii) to consent that any person shall retain any property and finally intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit. In the instant case, no act of inducement on the part of the accused-appellant has been alleged by the complainant. No allegation has been made that he had an intention to cheat the complainant from the very inception. (Para 13)

In law, only because the accused had issued cheques which were dishonoured, the same by itself would not mean that he had cheated the complainant. What has been alleged in the complaint petition as also the statement of the complainant and his witnesses relate to subsequent conduct of the appellant. The date when the statements in question (alleged to be constituting the offences involved herein) were made by the appellant had not been disclosed by the witnesses of the complainant. Assuming that such a statement had been made, the same does not exhibit that there had been any intention on the part of the appellant to commit an offence under Section 417 IPC. (Paras 15 and 14)

Hence, in the facts and circumstances of the case, no offence is made out. The impugned judgment is set aside. The order taking cognizance is quashed. (Para 17). Vir Prakash Sharma v. Anil Kumar Agarwal, (2007) 7 SCC 373: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 370: 2007 Cri LJ 3735: (2007) 57 AIC 32 (SC): (2007) 5 All LJ 321.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-8-2007]

Hridaya Ranjan Prasad Verma v. State of Bihar, (2000) 4 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (Cri) 786; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, relied on

[7509] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings for dishonour of cheque — Notice — Nature and object of — Held, is to give a chance to the drawer of the cheque to rectify his mistake and to protect an honest drawer — Thus notice must make a demand for payment of the amount of the cheque — Last line of notice stating: "Kindly arrange to make the payment to avoid the unpleasant action of my client" — Held, on facts, High Court erred in overlooking this clear demand for payment and quashing pending criminal proceedings under S. 482 Criminal Procedure Code — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 proviso (b)

Respondent 1, a partnership firm, took a loan of over 1 crore rupees from the appellant Bank. The respondent issued three cheques dated 29-3-1994 for the amounts of Rs 1 lakh, Rs 2 lakhs and Rs 39,50,000 towards part-repayment of the loan. The three cheques were presented for collection, but were received back by the appellant unpaid on 25-4-1994 and 19-6-1994 with the remark "funds insufficient" on each. The appellants then sent, through their advocate, two registered notices dated 2-5-1994 and 27-6-1994. The notices, which were admittedly received, stated that the appellant Bank would present the cheques for collection again and if they were returned unpaid the matter would be reported to the police. Both notices reserved the right to initiate appropriate criminal cases and ended with the sentence "Kindly arrange to make the payment of the cheques if you intend to avoid the unpleasant action of my client".

Upon the second presentation of the cheques, they were returned once again with the remark "funds insufficient". The appellant then filed two complaints under Section 138 Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 in the court of the Judicial Magistrate 1st class, where cognizance was taken. However, the High Court quashed the criminal proceedings under Section 482 CrPC on the ground that there was no proper notice as required by Section 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

Allowing the Bank's appeals,

Held :

The object of notice is to give a chance to the drawer of the cheque to rectify his omission and also to protect an honest drawer. Service of notice of demand in clause (b) of the proviso to Section 138 is a condition precedent for filing a complaint under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881. (Para 8)

Though no form of notice is prescribed in clause (b) of the proviso to of Section 138, the requirement is that the notice shall be given in writing within fifteen days of receipt of information from the bank regarding return of the cheque as unpaid and in the notice a demand for payment of the amount of the cheque has to be made. (Para 7)

Regarding demand for payment, the High Court was of the opinion that "the intention in the notice was that cheque was being presented again and the applicant/petitioner should arrange the payment on re-presentation of the cheque". But a cheque can be presented any number of times to the bank within the period of its validity. The appellant Bank had a legal right to re-present the cheques to the Bank as indicated in the notices and, therefore, the respondents could have arranged payment either through the Bank or directly to the appellant Bank. By not doing so the provision of Section 138 is clearly attracted. (Paras 10 and 11)

In fact in the present case, the following last line of the notice reading "Kindly arrange to make the payment to avoid the unpleasant action of my client" is a clear demand required by clause (b) of Section 138 proviso. The High Court erred in overlooking this line in the notice and in holding that there was no demand of payment. (Para 10). Central Bank of India v. Saxons Farms, (1999) 8 SCC 221: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1411: AIR 1999 SC 3607: (1999) 35 CLA 199: (1999) 98 Comp Cas 712.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1999]

[7510] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings — On the ground of bar of limitation — Validity — Complaint under S. 138, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — Contention by accused that notice for payment was issued beyond 15 days of communication by bank regarding dishonour of cheque and, therefore, the complaint was clearly barred by limitation — As per the complainant, communication of dishonour of cheque was received after three days and, therefore, notice sent to accused was within 15 days thereafter — This being a matter of evidence, held, High Court was not justified in quashing the proceedings by holding that the complaint was barred by time — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Paras 3 and 4). T.N. Newsprint & Papers Ltd. v. Lakshmi, (2004) 13 SCC 366.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-9-2004]

[7511] — S. 482 — Quashment of complaint on assumption of certain facts even before the evidence was led by the parties — Impermissibility — Trial court's order summoning the accused — Interference with, by High Court on assumption of certain facts — Impermissibility — Dishonour of cheque issued by firm — Complaint against partners including S — Summonses issued but evidence was yet to be led — Order passed under S. 482 by High Court just at this stage annulling the summons issued to S on the assumption that S was not in charge of, or responsible for, the conduct of the business of the firm, held, improper — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 141

At the stage of summoning when evidence was yet to be led by the parties, the High Court could not on an assumption of facts come to a finding of fact that the respondent was not responsible for the conduct of the business. (Para 4). Raj Lakshmi Mills v. Shakti Bhakoo, (2002) 8 SCC 236.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.N. Kirpal, C.J. and K.G. Balakrishnan and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2002]

[7512] — S. 482 — Refusal to quash proceedings — Upheld — Dishonour of cheques of Company declared sick under the Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985 — Proceedings initiated under S. 138, NI Act — Challenge to — Unsustainability of — Appellant Company with full knowledge of having been declared sick placing orders for purchase of goods from respondent and making representation that payment would be made — But cheques issued towards payment for goods dishonoured — In reply to legal notice Company for the first time contending that it had been declared a sick company and, therefore, no legal proceedings for recovery could be initiated against it — Facts not only indicated that there was an undisputed debt, but also showed that right from the inception the appellant Company had no intention of making payment — In these circumstances, held, appellant Company not entitled to any interference under Art. 136 of the Constitution — High Court's judgment declining to quash the proceedings in question under S. 482 CrPC, upheld — Trial court directed to dispose of the cases within six months — Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1985, Ss. 22(1) & (3) — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 141 (Paras 9 to 12). Southern Steel Ltd. v. Jindal Vijayanagar Steel Ltd., (2008) 5 SCC 762: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 75: (2008) 66 AIC 26 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3960: (2008) 143 Comp Cas 466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-5-2008]

BSI Ltd. v. Gift Holdings (P) Ltd., (2000) 2 SCC 737: 2000 SCC (Cri) 538; Kusum Ingots & Alloys Ltd. v. Pennar Peterson Securities Ltd., (2000) 2 SCC 745: 2000 SCC (Cri) 546, distinguished on facts

(11)(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases (contd.)

[7513] — S. 482 — Scope — Complaint under S. 138, NI Act alleging dishonour of cheque — Cognizance of the complaint is taken on being satisfied about existence of a prima facie case — Issuance of cheque raises a presumption under S. 139 — Drawer of the cheque gets an opportunity to rebut that presumption at the trial — Petition under S. 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint can be entertained only when no prima facie offence is made out — Whether a prima facie offence under S. 138 is made out would depend upon the averments made in the complaint — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 & 139

The Court taking cognizance of the complaint under Section 138 of the Act is required to be satisfied as to whether a prima facie case is made out under the said provision. The drawer of the cheque undoubtedly gets an opportunity under Section 139 of the Act to rebut the presumption at the trial. A petition under Section 482 CrPC is tenable when no offence even prima facie was made out in the complaint. But the application thereof will depend upon the averments made in the complaint. In this case the complaints of the appellant could not have been dismissed by the High Court at the threshold. Modi Cements Ltd. v. Kuchil Kumar Nandi, (1998) 3 SCC 249: AIR 1998 SC 1057: 1998 Cri LJ 1397: (1998) 92 Comp Cas 88: (1998) 1 KLT 582.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee, S.P. Kurdukar and K.T. Thomas, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-3-1998]

Kuchil Kumar Nandi v. Modi Cement Ltd., 1997 Cri LJ 805 (Cal), reversed

[7514] — Ss. 482, 407 and 220 — Transfer of complaint case S for joint trial with another complaint case F which was filed earlier — Direction by High Court in respect of — Propriety — Absence of prayer for joint trial — Further, delay in filing of complaint S despite the knowledge of alleged offence — Proceedings in case F at final stage — On such facts, held, there was no ground for directing the said transfer and joint trial — High Court's said direction set aside — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138

A cheque was issued by Company KT in favour of the respondent, who, in turn, endorsed it in favour of the first appellant. On 26-12-2001, KT made a complaint that the first appellant and the respondent and their companies had forged the cheque in question by altering the date from 21-5-2001 to 21-8-2001 and the amount from Rs 2 lakhs to Rs 42 lakhs. The said complaint was registered on 25-3-2002. (This complaint was stayed and is not relevant for the present controversy.)

The cheque in issue was deposited by the first appellant with the bank and on its dishonour, a complaint CC No. 67 of 2002 was filed under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act by the first appellant against the respondent on 23-1-2002. That apart, on 12-3-2003, a complaint CC No. 181 of 2003 was filed under Section 200 CrPC by the respondent against the first appellant, his wife and another, inter alia, alleging intimidation by the accused and forgery of the cheque in question by the first appellant. The appellants moved the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing of this complaint. While dismissing the petition for quashing, the High Court transferred CC No. 181 of 2003 to the Court where CC No. 67 of 2002 was pending (in fact had reached its final stage and evidence of complainant had been recorded) and directed joint trial.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Apart from the fact that there was no prayer in the petition filed under Section 482 CrPC seeking joint trial nor was any independent petition filed by the respondent seeking joint trial, even otherwise, having regard to the facts and circumstances, there was no ground to direct transfer of the complaint and joint trial of the two complaint cases. The allegations about forgery were made as far back as in December 2001 and the complaint under Section 138 was filed as far back as on 23-1-2002 but the respondent filed his complaint nearly two years later on 12-3-2003. Further, the fact that the proceedings in complaint 67 of 2002 filed under Section 138 were at final stage, was another important aspect which ought to have been borne in mind. These aspects were not taken into consideration by the High Court while passing the impugned order. In the aforesaid circumstances, the direction in the impugned order for transfer of CC No. 181 of 2003 to be tried with CC No. 67 of 2002 is set aside. (Paras 5 and 6). T.V. Mylsamy v. R. Meenakshi Sundaram, (2004) 13 SCC 514.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-11-2004]

[7515] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Abuse of process of court — FIR not making out any offence — Rightly quashed — Cheque given by the appellant to respondents bouncing — Appellants filing FIR under Ss. 420/406/468 alleging therein that respondents by an act of conspiracy committed criminal breach of trust by presenting for encashment blank cheques signed by the appellant for a purpose other than that for which the cheque had been given to them and thereby causing to the appellant loss of a certain amount — Apart from the fact that the said allegations did not make out the offence of cheating or criminal breach of trust, attendant circumstances indicating that FIR was lodged to pre-empt the filing of complaint under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act against the appellant — In such circumstances, held, High Court was well within its jurisdiction to quash the FIR as amounting to abuse of the process of court — Hence, High Court's decision called for no interference under Art. 136 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420/406/468 — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Para 5). Sunil Kumar v. Escorts Yamaha Motors Ltd., (1999) 8 SCC 468: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1466: AIR 2000 SC 27.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-10-1999]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, (1999) 3 SCC 259: 1999 SCC (Cri) 401; Punjab National Bank v. Surendra Prasad Sinha, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 499: 1993 SCC (Cri) 149, considered

[7516] — Ss. 482 and 204 — Dishonour of cheque — Offence by Company — Requisite averments in complaint — Strict compliance with the statutory requirements — Absence of — Effect — Complaint not containing any statement that the appellant-accused were in charge of the business of the Company at the material time — Nor the statement of PW alleging that appellants were in charge of the business of the Company — Held, requirements of S. 141, NI Act not complied with — Hence, impugned judgments set aside and process issued against the appellants quashed — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138, 139 and 141

Two complaint petitions were filed by the respondent herein describing appellants herein as Accused 6 and 8. In the said complaint petitions it was stated that the Company which had been dealing with imparting of computer education in rural areas borrowed a sum of Rs 2,25,000 from the respondent on an interest of 24% per annum. Towards payment of the said loan the accused had issued two cheques allegedly on behalf of the Company on 23-6-2001 and 30-6-2001 for a sum of Rs 1,24,406 each, in favour of the respondent, which upon being presented were dishonoured as the Company did not have sufficient funds. The appellants were not the Directors of the said Company at the material time. It was submitted by the complainant that the accused persons failed to clear the liability. It was further submitted that the accused, being the company, all the Directors were responsible for the clearance of liability under Section 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and that the acts and deeds of the accused persons were punishable under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. Process were directed to be issued on the said statement for alleged commission of an offence under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. The appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC praying for quashing of the process issued against them in the said proceedings. The High Court dismissed the said application.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

A bare perusal of the complaint petitions demonstrates that the statutory requirements contained in Section 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act had not been complied with. It may be true that it is not necessary for the complainant to specifically reproduce the wordings of the section but what is required is a clear statement of fact so as to enable the court to arrive at a prima facie opinion that the accused are vicariously liable. Section 141 raises a legal fiction. By reason of the said provision, a person although is not personally liable for commission of such an offence would be vicariously liable therefor. Such vicarious liability can be inferred so far as a company registered or incorporated under the Companies Act, 1956 is concerned only if the requisite statements, which are required to be averred in the complaint petition, are made so as to make the accused therein vicariously liable for the offence committed by the company. Before a person can be made vicariously liable, strict compliance with the statutory requirements would be insisted upon. Not only the averments made in the complaint petitions do not meet the said statutory requirements, the sworn statement of the witness made by the son of the respondent herein does not contain any statement that the appellants were in charge of the business of the Company. In a case where the court is required to issue summons which would put the accused to some sort of harassment, the court should insist upon strict compliance with the statutory requirements. (Para 7). Sabitha Ramamurthy v. R.B.S. Channabasavaradhya, (2006) 10 SCC 581: AIR 2006 SC 3086: 2006 Cri LJ 4602.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dalveer Bhandari, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-9-2006]

Monaben Ketanbhai Shah v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 7 SCC 15: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1857; Katta Sujatha v. Fertilizers & Chemicals Travancore Ltd., (2002) 7 SCC 655: 2003 SCC (Cri) 151; S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2005) 8 SCC 89: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1975, followed

K.P.G. Nair v. Jindal Menthol India Ltd., (2001) 10 SCC 218: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1038, relied on

(11)(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases (contd.)

[7517] — Ss. 482 and 245(2) — Quashing of complaint/discharge of accused — Dishonour of cheque — Requisite averments to be made in complaint — Quashing of complaint/discharge of accused when called for — Relevant considerations — Held, not necessary to reproduce language of S. 141, NI Act verbatim in the complaint — If the substance of the allegations made in the complaint fulfil requirements of the said section, complaint has to proceed and is required to be tried — In construing a complaint a hypertechnical approach should not be adopted so as to quash the same — Power of quashing should be exercised very sparingly — Where, read as a whole, factual foundation for the offence has been laid in the complaint, it should not be quashed — But, court must discharge the accused if taking everything stated in the complaint as correct and construing the allegations made therein liberally in favour of the complainant, the ingredients of the offence are altogether lacking — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 and 141 (Para 4). Monaben Ketanbhai Shah v. State of Gujarat, (2004) 7 SCC 15: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1857: AIR 2004 SC 4274: (2004) 3 KLT 428.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2004]

K.P.G. Nair v. Jindal Menthol India Ltd., (2001) 10 SCC 218: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1038; Katta Sujatha v. Fertilizers & Chemicals Travancore Ltd., (2002) 7 SCC 655: 2003 SCC (Cri) 151, relied on

[Ed.: See also (1981) 2 SCC 335: 1981 SCC (Cri) 453: (1998) 5 SCC 343: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1315: (2000) 1 SCC 1: 2001 SCC (Cri) 174]

[7518] — Ss. 482 and 251 — Proceedings under S. 138, Negotiable Instruments Act — Quashing of by High Court on the ground that the Magistrate under S. 251 had not recorded a finding that the respondent alone was responsible to or in charge of the firm for conduct of the business so as to attract the provisions of S. 141 of Negotiable Instruments Act — Setting aside High Court's order, held, Magistrate under S. 251 CrPC is required to incorporate substance of accusation and not details — Also liability under S. 141, Negotiable Instruments Act is not limited to a single director of a company or a single partner of a firm — Complaint specifically naming the respondent as one responsible for running the business. Bharat K. Gupta v. Arun Kumar, (2000) 10 SCC 658: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1517.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-10-1998]

[7519] — Ss. 482 and 402 — Cheque dishonour case — Deemed service of notice sent by registered post — Presumption of receipt of notice — When arises — Fraudulent avoidance of notice — Nature and proof — Held, when drawer refuses to accept the notice or when he evades service of the notice by fraudulent or unscrupulous means so that the envelope containing the notice is returned with a false endorsement such as premises locked or addressee not available, court may presume receipt of the notice by the drawer — Whether service of notice was fraudulently avoided by the drawer is a question of fact to be determined by court on the basis of evidence on record — There is no fixed rule that whenever notice could not be served due to non-availability of the addressee, court would presume service of the notice — When respondent drawee of the cheque issued notice to appellant drawer but the same was returned with the endorsement "Party not in station, arrival not known" whereupon respondent filed a complaint under S. 138, NI Act stating that the notice may be deemed to have been served and Magistrate passed orders under S. 204 CrPC registering a criminal case and issuing process against appellant, held, petition filed by appellant under S. 482 CrPC for quashing of the proceedings was premature as it was open to respondent to prove at trial that the endorsement was not correct and the drawer with the knowledge of the notice had deliberately avoided to receive the same — Therefore, High Court should not exercise its jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC in such a situation — Object of S. 138, NI Act and especially its proviso (c) considered — Mischief rule of interpretation applied — General Clauses Act, 1897, S. 27 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 138 proviso (b), (c) and 142

The drawer of the cheque makes himself liable for prosecution under Section 138 of the Act if he fails to make the payment within fifteen days of the receipt of the notice given by the drawee. His failure to make the payment within the stipulated period gives rise to a cause of action to the complainant to prosecute the drawer under Section 138 of the Act. It is not the "giving" of the notice but it is the failure to pay after "receipt" of the notice by the drawer which gives the cause of action to the complainant to file the complaint within the statutory period. (Paras 9 and 21)

It is no doubt true that the receipt of the notice has to be proved, but if the notice is refused by the addressee, it may be presumed to have been served. In a case where notice is not claimed even though sent by registered post, with the aid of Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, the drawer of the cheque may be called upon to rebut the presumption which arises in favour of service of notice. However, no rule of universal application can be laid down that in all cases where notice is not served on account of non-availability of the addressee, the court must presume service of notice. (Paras 21, 14 and 11)

The question is whether in a case of this nature, where the postal endorsement shows that the notice could not be served on account of the non-availability of the addressee, a cause of action may still arise for prosecution of the drawer of the cheque on the basis of deemed service of notice under clause (c) of proviso to Section 138 of the Act. (Para 11)

If in each such case the law is understood to mean that there has been no service of notice, it would completely defeat the very purpose of the Act. Also, if the complainant does not file a complaint within one month of the date on which the cause of action arises under clause (c) of the proviso to Section 138 of the Act, his complaint gets barred by time. Thus, a person who can dodge the postman for about a month or two, or a person who can get a fake endorsement made regarding his non-availability can successfully avoid his prosecution because the payee is bound to issue notice to him within a period of 30 days from the date of receipt of information from the bank regarding the return of the cheque as unpaid. He is, therefore, bound to issue the legal notice which may be returned with an endorsement that the addressee is not available on the given address. It may be that the address is correct and even the addressee is available but a wrong endorsement is manipulated by the addressee. In such a case, if the facts are proved, it may amount to refusal of the notice. If the complainant is able to prove that the drawer of the cheque knew about the notice and deliberately evaded service and got a false endorsement made only to defeat the process of law, the court shall presume service of notice. This, however, is a matter of evidence and proof. Thus even in a case where the notice is returned with the endorsement that the premises has always been found locked or the addressee was not available at the time of postal delivery, it will be open to the complainant to prove at the trial by evidence that the endorsement is not correct and that the addressee, namely, the drawer of the cheque, with knowledge of the notice had deliberately avoided to receive notice. (Paras 14 and 15)

Therefore, the question as to whether the service of notice has been fraudulently refused by unscrupulous means and whether there was deemed service of notice, in the sense that the endorsement made on the returned envelope was a manipulated and false endorsement, is essentially a question of fact, and that must be considered in the light of the evidence on record. (Paras 15 and 24)

Therefore, it would be premature at the stage of issuance of process, to move the High Court for quashing of the proceeding under Section 482 CrPC. In such a case the High Court ought not to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482. In the present case, the High Court was right in rejecting the petitions filed by the appellant under Section 482 CrPC. (Paras 15 and 24)

There may be unscrupulous complainants, who may manage to get a false postal endorsement of "refusal" or "unclaimed" or "party not available" and then prosecute an innocent or bona fide drawer. In such cases the drawer is not without remedy. He can also establish by evidence the said endorsement of "refusal" or "unclaimed" or "not found" during delivery time to be false. Alternatively, he may pay the amount due and compound the matter. Be that it may. (Para 25)

Section 138 of the Act was enacted to punish those unscrupulous persons who purported to discharge their liability by issuing cheques without really intending to do so, which was demonstrated by the fact that there was no sufficient balance in the account to discharge the liability. With a view to avoid unnecessary prosecution of an honest drawer of a cheque, or to give an opportunity to the drawer to make amends, the proviso to Section 138 provides that after dishonour of the cheque, the payee or the holder of the cheque in due course must give a written notice to the drawer to make good the payment. Clause (c) of proviso to Section 138 provides that the section shall not apply unless the drawer of the cheque fails to make the payment within 15 days of the receipt of the said notice. The proviso is meant to protect honest drawers whose cheques may have been dishonoured for the fault of others, or who may have genuinely wanted to fulfil their promise but on account of inadvertence or negligence failed to make necessary arrangements for the payment of the cheque. The law treats such lapses induced by inadvertence or negligence to be pardonable, provided the drawer after notice makes amends and pays the amount within the prescribed period. The proviso is not meant to protect unscrupulous drawers who never intended to honour the cheques issued by them, it being a part of their modus operandi to cheat unsuspecting persons. (Para 13)

It is well settled that in interpreting a statute the court must adopt that construction which suppresses the mischief and advances the remedy. This is a rule laid down in Heydon's case also known as the rule of purposive construction or mischief rule. (Para 12). D. Vinod Shivappa v. Nanda Belliappa, (2006) 6 SCC 456: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 114: AIR 2006 SC 2179: 2006 Cri LJ 2897: (2006) 130 DLT 534: (2006) 3 KLT 94.

(11)(xx) Quashment in cheque dishonour cases (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-5-2006]

K. Bhaskaran v. Sankaran Vaidhyan Balan, (1999) 7 SCC 510: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1284; Dalmia Cement (Bharat) Ltd. v. Galaxy Traders & Agencies Ltd., (2001) 6 SCC 463: 2001 SCC (Cri) 1163; V. Raja Kumari v. P. Subbarama Naidu, (2004) 8 SCC 774: 2005 SCC (Cri) 393; Prem Chand Vijay Kumar v. Yashpal Singh, (2005) 4 SCC 417: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1153; Sadanandan Bhadran v. Madhavan Sunil Kumar, (1998) 6 SCC 514: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1471, relied on

Heydon's case, (1584) 76 ER 637: 3 Co Rep 7a, relied on

Affirmed in C.C. Alavi Haji v. Palapetty Muhammed, (2007) 6 SCC 555*

[7520] — Ss. 482, 190 and 200 — Criminal proceedings initiated with ulterior motive — Continuance of such proceedings — Impermissibility of — Ingredients for exercising power under Art. 226 and S. 482, to prevent abuse of process of any court or to secure ends of justice, restated — On facts, trial court taking cognizance of offence punishable under Ss. 406 and 420 IPC against appellants in a complaint filed by respondent — High Court declining to interfere under S. 482 CrPC with the order passed — Sustainability — Complaint nothing but abuse of process of law, being a counterblast to the proceedings initiated by appellants under S. 138, NI Act, 1881 against respondent — Held, perusal of complaint showed ulterior motive — Proceedings initiated by respondent clearly amounted to abuse of process of law — Hence, relying on Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, reiterating that where a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge, held, proceedings initiated before trial court, by the respondent, stand quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406 and 420 — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 — Constitution of India — Art. 226 (Paras 2, 4, 18 to 20). Mahindra & Mahindra Financial Services Ltd. v. Rajiv Dubey, (2009) 1 SCC 706.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-12-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

[7521] — S. 482 — Multiple presentations, multiple notices — Precise date for arising of cause of action under S. 142(b), NI Act when cheque presented three times, dishonoured every time and notices of dishonour also issued thrice — First two notices issued to wrong addressee — First notice also not received by the drawer — Second notice withdrawn by the complainant on an objection raised by drawer itself — Third notice addressed properly to drawer and received by him but payment not made within fifteen days — Held, cause of action arose with reference to third notice — Complaint was filed within a month thereof — All the conditions precedent for launching prosecution under S. 138 were therefore satisfied — Plea for quashing the proceedings under S. 482 CrPC, rejected — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 — Ss. 142(b) and 138 proviso, cls. (c) and (b)

By successive issue of notices, the respondent merely made all attempts to comply with the legal requirements. The first notice was not served. The second notice was withdrawn. Therefore, the complainant cannot be said to have committed any illegality in presenting the cheque for the third time and issuing third notice upon the defaulter. As issuance of cheque, non-payment thereof on presentation, issuance of valid notice calling upon the drawer to pay the amount, and appellants' failure to pay to the complainant the amount in question within 15 days from the date of receipt of notice served upon them, the complainant cannot be said to have committed any illegality in presenting the cheque for the third time and issuing third notice upon the defaulter. (Paras 19, 20 and 22)

Herein, the cause of action for filing a complaint arose only once and not more than once. (Para 23). S.L. Constructions v. Alapati Srinivasa Rao, (2009) 1 SCC 500.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-10-2008]

Sadanandan Bhadran v. Madhavan Sunil Kumar, (1998) 6 SCC 514: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1471, relied on

(xxi) Quashment re defamation allegations

[7522] — S. 482 — Defamation — True report — If defamatory — Publication of news item disclosing accurate and true report of proceedings of Legislative Assembly — Statement of Minister disclosing misappropriation of govt. fund — Name of complainant mentioned as one of the persons involved in such misappropriation — Circumstances disclosing that the news item was published about public conduct of public servants for public good in good faith believing the statement to be true — Order of the Additional Sessions Judge quashing the proceedings in exercise of its revisional power restored — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 499, 500, 501 and 502 read with S. 34. Jawaharlal Darda v. Manoharrao Ganpatrao Kapsikar, (1998) 4 SCC 112: 1998 SCC (Cri) 815: AIR 1998 SC 2117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and V.N. Khare, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1998]

[7523] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at preliminary stage — Allegation not making out any case — Defamation complaint — Complaint under S. 500 IPC filed in 1966 against the appellant alleging that in order to give credence to a book published by him the appellant falsely represented to the readers that the same was based on a manuscript of King Bhagyachandra — Complaint ending in compromise in 1968 in which the appellant tendered apology — Second complaint alleging that in 1989 the appellant reiterated his stand that the first book, which was the subject-matter of the 1966 complaint, was based on King Bhagyachandra's write-up — Held, there is no abuse of process of court and it cannot be said that a stale matter is being reagitated out of jealousy — However, complaint quashed on ground that allegations in the complaint do not make out any case against the appellant — Since the claim about the manuscript being in the hand of King Bhagyachandra had hurt the feelings of the people of the State, the appellant directed to make a public statement that the manuscript in question was not in the hand of King Bhagyachandra and he must give an undertaking not to state so in future — Constitution of India — Art. 226. Guru Bipin Singh v. Chongtham Manihar Singh, (1996) 11 SCC 622: AIR 1997 SC 1448.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1996]

[7524] — S. 482 — Quashment — Defamation — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 499 & 500

According to the appellant the respondents made false and malicious allegations with intention or knowingly or having reasons to believe that such imputations would harm his reputation; due to these imputations made by them, the reputation of the appellant has been lowered in the eyes of his partners, the staff and the workers of the factory. Hence he prayed for punishing the respondents for the offence under Section 500 IPC. The Magistrate, on the complaint, after taking cognizance of the offence, recorded the sworn statement of the complainant (appellant herein) and held that "there were sufficient grounds to proceed the case against the accused persons for the offence punishable under Section 500 IPC". Hence he issued summons to Respondents 1 to 3. Allowing the appeal,

Held:

For deciding whether the criminal proceedings should be allowed to continue or the same should be quashed, two aspects are to be satisfied: (1) whether the uncontroverted allegations, as made in the complaint, prima facie establish the offence, and (2) whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. On a plain reading of the order of the Magistrate issuing summons to the respondents, keeping in view the allegations made in the complaint and sworn statement of the appellant, it appears that a prima facie case is made out at that stage. There are no special features in the case to say that it is not expedient and not in the interest of justice to permit the prosecution to continue. The Single Judge of the High Court failed to apply this test. The High Court could not say at that stage that there was no reasonable prospect of conviction resulting in the case after a trial. Assuming that the imputations made could be covered by Exception 9 of Section 499 IPC, several questions still remain to be examined — whether such imputations were made in good faith, in what circumstances, with what intention, etc. All these can be examined on the basis of evidence in the trial. Having regard to the facts of the case it must therefore, be held that the High Court committed a manifest error in quashing the criminal proceedings exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. (Paras 8 and 11).M.N. Damani v. S.K. Sinha, (2001) 5 SCC 156: 2001 SCC (Cri) 823: AIR 2001 SC 2037: 2001 Cri LJ 2571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and Shivaraj V. Patil, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2001]

Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjia, Chief Editor, Weekly Blitz, (1981) 3 SCC 208: 1981 SCC (Cri) 698; Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310, relied on

Manjaya v. Sesha Shetti, ILR (1888) 11 Mad 477; Sayed Ally v. King Emperor, AIR 1925 Rang 360; Anthoni Udayar v. Velusami Thevar, AIR 1948 Mad 469: 49 Cri LJ 724: (1948) 1 MLJ 420; Baboo Gunnesh Dutt Singh v. Mugneeram Chowdry, (1872) 11 WR 283 SC; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234: AIR 1988 SC 709, distinguished [7525] — S. 482 — Quashing criminal proceedings — Defamation — Complaint alleging offence under S. 500 IPC filed by petitioner against 7 accused — Summons issued by Magistrate to all the accused — Magistrate's order challenged by accused-respondents 3 to 6 without impleading accused-respondent 2 as party — Notice under S. 251 given to all the accused — Petition filed under S. 482 for quashing the criminal proceedings and the notice under S. 251 — High Court finding that facts of the case did not disclose the offence of defamation against respondent 2 even taking the allegations in the complaint as correct on its face value and accordingly by its order quashing the proceedings against him — Held, order does not warrant interference of Supreme Court — Constitution of India — Art. 136. Dhanwanti Vaswani (Dr.) v. State, 1991 Supp (2) SCC 329: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1040: AIR 1993 SC 1206.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-9-1991]

(11)(xxi) Quashment re defamation allegations (contd.)

[7526] — S. 482 — Quashment of criminal proceedings — Prosecution under Ss. 153-A, 499, 500, 509, 292 IPC and Ss. 4 and 6, Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act, 1986 — Complaints not making out prima facie case for any of the offences alleged — Criminal proceedings, therefore, quashed — Constitution of India — Arts. 19(1)(a) and 136

I, a news magazine conducted a survey on the subject of sexual habits of people residing in the bigger cities of India. One of the issues discussed therein was the increasing incidence of premarital sex. Thereafter, the magazine published the views expressed by various persons, including the appellant, a well-known actress. Expressing her personal opinion, she noted the increasing incidence of premarital sex, especially in the context of live-in relationships and called for societal acceptance of the same. Subsequently, D, a Tamil daily reproduced the appellant's statement published in the said magazine. It added that in a conversation with its correspondent, the appellant had defended her views and stated: "The persons who are protesting against my interview, are talking about which culture? Is there anyone who does not know about sex in Tamil Nadu? Is there anyone who does not know about AIDS? How many men and women do not have sex before marriage?" The appellant, however, in a legal notice to the editor of the said daily denied the said statement.

Several persons and organisations, particularly functionaries of a political party PMK filed as many as 23 criminal complaints against the appellant for the offences contemplated under Sections 499, 500, 509, 153-A and 292 IPC read with Sections 4 and 6 of the Indecent Representation of Women (Prohibition) Act, 1986. Most of the complaints were filed in various districts of T.N. State while one was filed in M.P.

The appellant then approached Madras High Court under Section 482 CrPC seeking quashment of said proceedings. Taking the view that the questions involved in the complaints required consideration by a trial Judge, the High Court rejected the plea of the appellant. However, the High Court directed all the complaints to be consolidated and tried by CJM at E. Aggrieved thereby, the appellant filed the present batch of appeals by special leave.

Before the Supreme Court, the appellant contended that: (i) the respondent complainants were not "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 199(1) CrPC and could not therefore maintain the complaints; (ii) the opinion expressed by the appellant was protected by Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution; (iii) the allegations made in the complaints, even if taken on their face value, did not disclose any offence under the provisions specified therein; and (iv) the criminal proceedings were instituted in a mala fide manner by workers of a particular political party to vilify the appellant and gain undue political mileage.

The respondents supported the order of the High Court.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The Framers of the Constitution recognised the importance of safeguarding the freedom of speech and expression since the free flow of opinions and ideas is essential to sustain the collective life of the citizenry. While an informed citizenry is a precondition for meaningful governance in the political sense, a culture of open dialogue must also be promoted when it comes to societal attitudes. (Para 45)

No doubt, in India, marriage is an important social institution, that there are certain individuals or groups who do not hold the same view. Notions of social morality are inherently subjective and the criminal law cannot be used as a means to unduly interfere with the domain of personal autonomy. Morality and criminality are not coextensive. (Paras 46 and 50)

If the complainants vehemently disagreed with the appellant's views, then they should have contested her views through the news media or any other public platform. The law should not be used in a manner that has chilling effects on the freedom of speech and expression. Dissemination of news and views for popular consumption is permissible under our constitutional scheme. An expression of opinion in favour of non-dogmatic and non-conventional morality has to be tolerated as the same cannot be a ground to penalise the author. (Paras 47, 50 and 45)

In order to establish the offence under Section 509 IPC it is necessary to show that the modesty of a particular woman or a readily identifiable group of women has been insulted by a spoken word, gesture or physical act. Clearly this offence cannot be made out when the complainants' grievance is with the publication of what the appellant had stated in a written form. (Para 23)

Likewise Section 153-A IPC has no application to the present case since the appellant was not speaking on behalf of one group and the content of her statement was not directed against any particular group either. (Para 23)

References to sex cannot be considered obscene in the legal sense without examining the context of the reference. (Paras 25 and 32)

There are numerous decisions, both from India and foreign countries which mandate that "obscenity" should be gauged with respect to contemporary community standards that reflect the sensibilities as well as the tolerance levels of an average reasonable person. (Para 27)

In the present case, the appellant has merely referred to the increasing incidence of premarital sex and called for its societal acceptance. At no point of time the appellant described the sexual act or said anything that could arouse sexual desires in the mind of a reasonable and prudent reader. Furthermore, the statement has been made in the context of a survey which has touched on numerous aspects relating to the sexual habits of people in big cities. It was published in a news magazine thereby serving the purpose of communicating certain ideas and opinions on the abovementioned subject. In the long run, such communication prompts a dialogue within society wherein people can choose to either defend or question the existing social mores. It is not possible to hold that the statements published as part of the survey were in the nature of obscene communications. (Paras 28 and 24)

The respondents' claim that the appellant's remarks could have the effect of misguiding young people by encouraging them to indulge in premarital sex is a little far-fetched since the appellant had not directed her remarks towards any individual or group in particular. For the sake of argument, even if it were to be assumed that the appellant's statements could encourage some people to engage in premarital sex, no legal injury has been shown since the latter is not an offence. (Para 29)

"Offence" means "an act or instance of offending"; "commit an illegal act" and "illegal" means, "contrary to or forbidden by law". "Offence" has to be read and understood in the context as it has been prescribed under the provisions of Sections 40, 41 and 42 IPC which cover the offences punishable under IPC or under special or local law or as defined under Section 2(n) CrPC or Section 3(38) of the General Clauses Act, 1897. (Para 30)

There is no statutory offence that takes place when adults willingly engage in sexual relations outside the marital setting, with the exception of "adultery" as defined under Section 497 IPC. (Para 31)

Moreover, it is necessary to fully understand the context and the purpose for which references to sex have been made in any given setting. (Paras 32 and 25)

There is no prima facie case of defamation in the present case. There was neither any intent on the part of the appellant to cause harm to the reputation of the complainants as contemplated by Section 499 IPC nor can one discern any actual harm done to their reputation. In short, both the elements i.e. mens rea and actus reus are missing. The appellant's statement published in I is a rather general endorsement of premarital sex and her remarks are not directed at any individual or even at a "company or an association or collection of persons". Even in the remarks published in D which have been categorically denied by the appellant, there is no direct attack on the reputation of anyone in particular. Instead, the purported remarks are in the nature of rhetorical questions wherein it was asked if people in Tamil Nadu were not aware of the incidence of sex. Even if those remarks are considered in their entirety, nowhere has it been suggested that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in premarital sex. (Paras 34 and 35)

The fact that most of the complainants are associated with PMK, a political party does add weight to the suggestion that the impugned complaints had been filed with the intention of gaining undue political mileage. (Para 36)

In respect of the offence of defamation, Section 199 CrPC mandates that the Magistrate can take cognizance of the offence only upon receiving a complaint by a person who is aggrieved. This limitation on the power to take cognizance of defamation serves the rational purpose of discouraging the filing of frivolous complaints which would otherwise clog the Magistrates' Courts. In the given facts of the present case, the complainants cannot be properly described as "persons aggrieved" within the meaning of Section 199(1) CrPC as there was no specific legal injury caused to any of them. (Para 37)

In the present case, the complainants have alleged defamation in respect of imputations against the character of Tamil-speaking women, which could perhaps be viewed as a class of persons. However, the appellant's remarks did not suggest that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in premarital sex. Even if it were assumed that the news item carried in D caused mental agony to some sections of women in Tamil Nadu, there is no prima facie case for any offence. (Para 43)

(11)(xxi) Quashment re defamation allegations (contd.)

Thus, it has to be held that the institution of the numerous criminal complaints against the appellant was done in a mala fide manner. In order to prevent the abuse of the criminal law machinery, it would be appropriate to grant the relief sought by the appellant. In such cases, the proper course for Magistrates is to use their statutory powers to direct an investigation into the allegations before taking cognizance of the offences alleged. It is not the task of the criminal law to punish individuals merely for expressing unpopular views. The threshold for placing reasonable restrictions on the freedom of speech and expression is indeed a very high one and there should be a presumption in favour of the accused in such cases. It is only when the complainants produce materials that support a prima facie case for a statutory offence that Magistrates can proceed to take cognizance of the same. (Para 44)

In conclusion, it is held that the various complaints filed against the appellant do not support or even draw a prima facie case for any of the statutory offences as alleged. Therefore, the impugned judgment and order of the High Court is set aside. (Para 54). S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and Deepak Verma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2010]

S. Rangarajan v. P. Jagjivan Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 574; Ranjit D. Udeshi v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 881: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 8; Samaresh Bose v. Amal Mitra, (1985) 4 SCC 289: 1985 SCC (Cri) 523; Gillick v. West Norfolk and Wisbech Area Health Authority, 1986 AC 112: (1985) 3 WLR 830: (1985) 3 All ER 402 (HL); M.S. Jayaraj v. Commr. of Excise, (2000) 7 SCC 552, followed

Proprietary Articles Trade Assn. v. Attorney General of Canada, AIR 1931 PC 94; Thomas Dana v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 SC 375: 1959 Cri LJ 392; Jawala Ram v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1962 SC 1246: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 303; Standard Chartered Bank v. Directorate of Enforcement, (2006) 4 SCC 278: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 221; Lata Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 5 SCC 475: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 478, relied on

G. Narasimhan v. T.V. Chokkappa, (1972) 2 SCC 680: 1972 SCC (Cri) 777; Knupffer v. London Express Newspaper Ltd., 1944 AC 116: (1944) 1 All ER 495 (HL), considered

[7527] — Ss. 482, 200 and 196 — Quashing of criminal complaint — Defamation — Private complaint alleging commission of offence under S. 500 IPC by appellant — Magistrate prima facie coming to conclusion that allegations in the complaint might come within the definition of 'defamation' under S. 499 IPC and could be taken cognizance of — Held, at this stage Supreme Court's interference by quashing the complaint not called for — Penal Code, 1860, S. 500 — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 136

It is not the province of the Supreme Court to appreciate at this stage the evidence or scope of and meaning of the statement. Certain allegations came to be made but whether these allegations do constitute defamation is a matter to be considered by the Magistrate at a later stage. At this stage, the Supreme Court cannot embark upon weighing the evidence and come to any conclusion to hold, whether or not the allegations made in the complaint constitute an offence punishable under Section 500. It is the settled legal position that a court has to read the complaint as a whole and find out whether allegations disclosed constitute an offence under Section 499 triable by the Magistrate. The Magistrate prima facie came to the conclusion that the allegations might come within the definition of 'defamation' under Section 499 IPC and could be taken cognizance of. But these are the facts to be established at the trial. The case set up by the appellant are either defences open to be taken or other steps of framing a charge at the trial at whatever stage known to law. Prima facie at this stage it is not a case warranting quashing of the complaint. Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, Faizan Uddin and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1996]

[7528] — S. 482 — Miscarriage of justice — Factual error — Alleged harassment of Accused 6 by her husband and father-in-law published in newspaper at instance of Accused 6 and her father (Accused 5) — Criminal complaint for defamation filed against editor, publisher, reporter, newspaper (Accused 1 to 4 respectively) and Accused 5 and 6 by appellant (father-in-law of Accused 6) and husband of Accused 6 (who committed suicide during pendency of complaint) — Subsequently at request of appellant proceedings against Accused 6 dropped — High Court by impugned judgment quashing complaint against Accused 1 to 4 on ground that since proceedings against principal tortfeasors Accused 5 and 6 had been dropped, whole genesis of complaint had vanished — However, factually proceedings were dropped only against Accused 6 — Held, inadvertent factual error about dropping of proceedings against Accused 5 had influenced the Court to great extent, resulting in miscarriage of justice — Hence, matter remanded to High Court for consideration afresh — Penal Code, 1860, S. 499 r/w Ss. 107/34 (Paras 4, 7, 11 and 12). S.D. Kathuria v. N. Ravi, (2010) 13 SCC 771.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2009]

[7529] — Ss. 482, 228 and 240 — Quashing of proceeding — Application for — Rejection of, by High Court — Propriety — High Court not interfering with the matter as the same was pending at the stage of charge — Accused challenging High Court's order by contending that taking into consideration the allegations as made in the complaint, no offence under S. 499 IPC was made out — Matter requiring detailed consideration — It was desirable that High Court should hear the parties and pronounce a reasoned order — Hence, matter remitted to High Court for disposal afresh — Penal Code, 1860, S. 499 (Para 4). Terumo Penpol Ltd. v. NCT of Delhi, (2005) 10 SCC 273: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1513.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-4-2005]

[7530] — Ss. 482 and 200 first proviso, 190(1)(a) & 204 — Private complaint in writing before Magistrate — Quashing of — Complaint must disclose all necessary facts constituting the offence alleged before taking cognizance of the offence — Complaint alleging that appellant in an interview published in a magazine made statements outraging religious feeling of Marwari community and alleging that the members of that community were not a class belonging to India, having no faith and love towards India and being traitors and enemies of India — Magistrate taking cognizance and issuing notice to appellant for appearance — Writ petition preferred by appellant before High Court — High Court quashing the complaint as not constituting offence under S. 295-A IPC and no appeal filed against the same — However, High Court also observing that prima facie the allegations constituted an offence under S. 500 IPC — Held, allegations do not disclose offence under S. 500 and hence Magistrate not justified in issuing process against the appellant — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 295-A and 500. Shatrughna Prasad Sinha v. Rajbhau Surajmal Rathi, (1996) 6 SCC 263: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1310.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Ramaswamy, Faizan Uddin and G.B. Pattanaik, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-9-1996]

[7531] — Ss. 482 and 204 — Quashing of order issuing process on complaint — Applicability of Exception 8 to S. 499 IPC — Allegation in complaint that the accused persons made a complaint to the Treasury Officer containing false imputation to the effect that the complainant had come to the office in a drunken state and abused the Treasury Officer — Magistrate directing the Treasury Officer to hold enquiry and submit a report — Report of the Treasury Officer indicating that a departmental enquiry had been initiated and the complainant was found guilty — Held, in the circumstances Exception 8 to S. 499 attracted — No case of defamation made out — Order of issuance of process and the proceeding itself quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 500 and 499 Exception 8. Rajendra Kumar Sitaram Pande v. Uttam, (1999) 3 SCC 134: 1999 SCC (Cri) 393: AIR 1999 SC 1028: 1999 Cri LJ 1620.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-1999]

[7532] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Application for quashing complaint petition filed by respondent against appellant under S. 500 IPC dismissed by High Court — Propriety — FIR registered on basis of complaint made by appellant that the respondent had advised one N and one K to damage his nine coconut trees by pouring acid mixed with kerosene on them — However, no charge-sheet was filed within six months, nor extension of time was sought for conducting further investigation — Hence, closure of proceedings ordered by Magistrate — However, said allegations published in various newspapers — Hence, respondent filing private complaint alleging defamation under S. 500 IPC — Application by appellant for quashing said complaint dismissed by impugned order — Held, allegations made in the said complaint petition, make out a case for proceeding against the appellant under S. 500 IPC as thereby imputation concerning the respondent had been made intending to harm or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation would harm his reputation — For the purpose of bringing his case within the purview of Eighth and Ninth Exception appended to S. 499 IPC, it would be necessary for the appellant to prove good faith for the protection of the interests of the person making it or of any other person or for the public good — Well settled that those who plead exception must prove it — Hence, burden of proof that his action was bona fide would, thus, be on the appellant alone — At that stage, however, it would have been premature for High Court to consider the materials placed by the appellant before it so as to arrive at a definite conclusion that there was no element of bad faith on the part of the appellant in making the said complaint before the police authorities — Question as to whether a totally false complaint has been made as against the respondent or not as he was not even in India prior to the date of occurrence, is required to be gone into by the learned trial Judge — No interference with impugned order called for — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 499 and 500 (Paras 2, 18 to 21, 23 and 24). M.A. Rumugam v. Kittu, (2009) 1 SCC 101.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-11-2008]

Rajendra Kumar Sitaram Pande v. Uttam, (1999) 3 SCC 134: 1999 SCC (Cri) 393, considered

(11)(xxi) Quashment re defamation allegations (contd.)

[7533] — Ss. 482, 436 and 81 — Bailable offence — Forfeiture/Cancellation of bail granted by Magistrate under S. 482 on ground of violation of principles of natural justice — Bail cancelled on ground that complainant's right of being heard not complied with by Magistrate while granting bail — Sustainability — Magistrate in an alleged offence under Ss. 399 and 500 IPC for defamatory remarks made by accused against complainant on a TV channel granting bail the very same day by noticing that offences alleged to have been committed were bailable — High Court cancelling bail on the ground that opportunity of hearing was not given to the complainant, held, unsustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 399 and 500

The respondent filed a complaint case against the appellant-accused on the ground that the appellant-accused gave a defamatory interview against him on a TV channel. When the appellant-accused approached the Magistrate for grant of bail, the same was granted the very same day without hearing the respondent complainant by noticing that the offences alleged to have been committed were bailable offences under Sections 499 and 500 IPC. The High Court in a Section 482 CrPC petition filed by the respondent complainant cancelled the bail of the appellant-accused on the ground that the principles of natural justice had not been followed in as much as the complainant was not heard on the issue of grant of bail. Aggrieved thereagainst, the appellant-accused invoked the remedy under Article 136 of the Constitution of India.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The bail granted to the appellant for alleged commission of bailable offence could not have been cancelled by the High Court on the ground that the respondent complainant was not heard by the Magistrate while granting bail and that the principles of natural justice were violated. Principles of natural justice are not a "mantra" to be applied in a vacuum in all cases. The question as to what extent, the principles of natural justice are required to be complied with, will depend upon the facts of the case. They are not required to be complied with when it will lead to an empty formality. Therefore, the order of the High Court cancelling the bail granted to the appellant is hereby set aside and the order passed by the Magistrate is restored. (Paras 19 to 21)

The right to claim bail granted by Section 436 CrPC in a bailable offence is an absolute and indefeasible right. In bailable offences there is no question of discretion in granting bail as the words of Section 436 are imperative. As soon as it appears that the accused person is prepared to give bail, the police officer or the court before whom he offers to give bail, is bound to release him on such terms as to bail as may appear to the officer or the court to be reasonable. It would even be open to the officer or the court to discharge such person on his executing a bond as provided in Section 436 instead of taking bail from him. (Paras 10 and 9)

The only choice available to the officer or the court is as between taking a simple recognizance of the accused and demanding security with surety. The persons contemplated by Section 436 cannot be taken into custody unless they are unable or willing (sic unwilling) to offer bail or to execute personal bonds. There is no manner of doubt that bail in a bailable offence can be claimed by the accused as of right and the officer or the court, as the case may be, is bound to release the accused on bail if he is willing to abide by reasonable conditions which may be imposed on him. (Para 10). Rasiklal v. Kishore, (2009) 4 SCC 446.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-2009]

State Bank of Patiala v. S.K. Sharma, (1996) 3 SCC 364: 1996 SCC (L&S) 717; Karnataka SRTC v. S.G. Kotturappa, (2005) 3 SCC 409: 2005 SCC (L&S) 484, relied on

(xxii) Quashment re taxation offences

[7534] — S. 482 — Prosecution under S. 276-C, IT Act — Quashment of, on grant of immunity by Settlement Commission — AY 1988-89 — Assessee filing settlement application prior to launching of prosecution under S. 276-C — Assessee approaching High Court under S. 482 CrPC seeking quashment of prosecution in view of the pendency of the settlement application — In the absence of any order of Settlement Commission granting immunity to the assessee, High Court refusing relief — Assessee approaching Supreme Court and by then Settlement Commission granting immunity to the assessee against prosecution — In such circumstances, the view taken by High Court at that stage, held, justified — But, after the grant of immunity by Settlement Commission, prosecution under S. 276-C, held, liable to be quashed — However, further held, in case of failure to comply with the conditions of the grant of immunity the assessee would render himself liable as if no immunity had been granted — Income Tax Act, 1961, Ss. 276-C, 245-C, 245-F and 245-H(1) & (1-A)

On 27-5-1991, the appellant firm filed an application for settlement in terms of Section 245-C in respect of AY 1988-89. Subsequently, on 27-2-1992, prosecution was launched against it for alleged concealment of income and wilful attempt to evade tax, and for making false statement on verification in terms of Section 276-C, IT Act. Cognizance was taken by the Special Court, Economic Offences. The appellant approached the Patna High Court under Section 482 CrPC contending that the criminal proceedings should not continue as settlement applications were pending before the Settlement Commission. However, in the absence of any order of the Settlement Commission granting any immunity, the High Court refused relief. The appellant then filed the instant appeals. The Settlement Commission meanwhile passed an order dated 20-9-1999 granting immunity to the appellant from prosecution under the IT Act and the Penal Code. The appellant contended that the criminal proceedings could not be continued. On the other hand, the respondent State contended that in case of a conditional order of the Commission unless the conditions stipulated were fulfilled, the proceedings ought to be continued.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The view taken by the High Court in declining to quash the proceedings on the ground that proceedings were pending before the Commission is on terra firma. But the position had changed as after the High Court's judgment final orders had been passed by the Commission according immunity on the application presented, apparently before the institution of the proceedings for prosecution. (Para 8). Ashirvad Enterprises v. State of Bihar, (2004) 3 SCC 624: (2004) 168 ELT 433: (2004) 266 ITR 578.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2004]

Ashirvad Enterprises v. State of Bihar, (1998) 150 CTR 458 (Pat), partly reversed

P. Jayappan v. S.K. Perumal, 1984 Supp SCC 437: 1985 SCC (Tax) 7, relied on [7535] — S. 482 — Tax evasion alleged — Summons issued by magistrate challenged in petition before High Court — High Court finding that prima facie case made out against the assessee, hence trial to proceed — On facts, appeal dismissed by Supreme Court — Income Tax Act, 1961, Ss. 35(2-A), 276-C(1) Explanation (iv) and 278 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 120-B, 193 and 196. General Sales (P) Ltd. v. Gopal Mukherjee, ITO, 1987 Supp SCC 737: (1987) 166 ITR 87.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: R.S. Pathak, C.J. and Ranganath Misra and M.M. Dutt, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-1987]

General Sales (P) Ltd. v. ITO, (1987) 166 ITR 77 (Del), affirmed

[7536] — S. 482 — Continuation of criminal proceedings even after order setting aside levy of excise duty and penalty had attained finality — Sustainability — In this case, since respondent Revenue did not take a contrary stand and also expressed the intention of not pressing for prosecution, Supreme Court quashed criminal complaint against appellant (Paras 7 and 8). J.P. Tobacco Products (P) Ltd. v. CCE, (2008) 17 SCC 488: (2008) 229 ELT 325.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Ashok Bhan and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-2008]

[7537] — S. 482 — Abuse of the process of court — Power of High Court to prevent — Immunity from prosecution granted under S. 91, Kar Vivad Scheme — Scope — Per Ar. Lakshmanan, J.: Held, protects from proceeding under any and all laws and not only from the proceedings under the taxing statutes — In the present case, Gujarat Cancer Society (GCS) importing certain machines availing of duty exemption under Customs Noti. Nos. 279/83-Cus. and 64/88-Cus. on the basis of exemption certificate issued in the name of Gujarat Cancer and Research Institute (GCRI) on the bona fide belief that since GCS funded all the activities of GCRI and all the operations of GCS were carried out through GCRI, the same was permissible — However, Collector of Customs holding otherwise and raising a demand but in view of charitable and philanthropic activities of GCS, not recommending any prosecution and imposing only a token redemption fine of Re 1 — CEGAT affirming Collector's decision and GCS filing appeal before Supreme Court — KVSS, 1998 coming into effect and GCS making a declaration thereunder — Designated authority determining the liability to duty — GCS withdrawing its appeal from Supreme Court — Certificate of full and final settlement issued granting to GCS immunity from prosecution for any offence under Customs Act or from imposition of penalty thereunder — In such circumstances, prosecution of office-bearers of GCS under Ss. 120-B/420 IPC on the ground of cheating the Government by evasion of customs duty and violation of the "actual-user" condition as per import-export policy, held, not maintainable — Further held, continuance of such prosecution would amount to subjecting the accused persons to double jeopardy after honourable acquittal by Collector of Customs — More so, when the accused persons were senior citizens aged 92 and 70 years — Further held, in penal law there is no vicarious liability unless provided in the statute — On facts held, the ingredients of Ss. 120-B, 420 and 415 were not made out — Further held, such offences, if any, stood compounded by virtue of the settlement — Hence, the process issued by the Magistrate was liable to be quashed under S. 482 CrPC and Art. 227 — Per Brijesh Kumar, J.: concurring in view of S. 95(iii), subsequent to the settlement, the Government cannot turn around and get the declarant convicted — More so, when under S. 90(4) the declarant was obliged to withdraw his appeal from the Supreme Court which might have affected the criminal proceedings too on merits — Hence, the prosecution would amount to abuse of the process of court — Per curiam: Therefore, the proceedings under S. 420 read with S. 120 IPC are quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 415 and 120-B — Ingredients of offences under, on facts, held, not made out — Constitution of India, Arts. 227 and 20(2) — Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme, 1998, Ss. 91, 90(2), (3) & (4), 95(ii) & (iii), 88, 89 and 87(h) & (j)

(11)(xxii) Quashment re taxation offences (contd.)

The Gujarat Cancer Society (for short "GCS") imported MRI and lithotripsy machines availing of duty exemption under Notifications Nos. 279/83-Cus. and 64/88-Cus. on the basis of exemption certificate issued in the name of Gujarat Cancer and Research Institute (for short "GCRI"). GCS did so on a bona fide premise that since all the activities of GCRI were funded by GCS and all the operations of GCS were carried out through GCRI and that they were akin to holding a subsidiary company, the same was permissible. Later, the Customs Authority raided the premises of GCRI and seized the machines and necessary paperwork on the ground that the exemption certificate was issued in the name of GCRI and not in the name of GCS and thus GCS was not entitled to exemption and was, therefore, liable to pay customs duty. The machines were immediately released on giving the usual undertaking. After issuing a show-cause notice on 11-10-1991 under the proviso to Section 28(1), Customs Act, the Collector of Customs held GCS to be liable to pay the customs duty and not entitled to exemption. Therefore, he raised a demand in a certain sum against GCS. However, considering the charitable and philanthropic activities of GCS, no prosecution was recommended and only a token redemption fine of Re 1 was imposed. Personal penalty under Section 112(a), Customs Act was also imposed on certain parties. After unsuccessfully approaching CEGAT, GCS filed an appeal before the Supreme Court. During the pendency of the appeal, the Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme, 1998 (for short "KVSS") came into effect. The case of GCS was settled under KVSS and the tax liability was determined on 10-2-1999 by the Designated Authority. On 16-3-1999, the appellants withdrew the appeal from the Supreme Court. On 19-7-1999, a certificate for full and final settlement of tax arrears in respect of the KVSS, 1998 was issued to GCS. The said certificate, inter alia, certified the receipt of payment from GCS towards full and final settlement of tax arrears determined in the order dated 10-2-1999 and further granted immunity to GCS from any proceedings for prosecution for any offence under the Customs Act, 1962 or from the imposition of penalty under the said enactment, in respect of the matters covered in the declaration made by GCS. However, on 6-1-1999, consequent to an FIR lodged by the Joint Secretary, Ministry of Health, Government of India, the respondent CBI registered a case alleging that the appellants herein, who were office-bearers of GCS, in conspiracy with the Director of GCRI, Secretary of GCS and certain others had cheated the Government of India in terms of evasion of customs duty and had violated the provisions of "actual-user" condition as per the import-export policy during the year 1987-88. A charge-sheet was filed under Sections 120-B and 420 IPC. The trial court took cognizance and issued process. The appellants filed petitions under Section 482 CrPC read with Article 227 before the Delhi High Court seeking quashment of the FIR. The High Court dismissed the said petitions. Therefore, the appellants filed the instant two appeals by way of SLPs. Opposing the appeals and supporting the High Court's order as well as the issue of process by the Magistrate, the respondent CBI contended that the charges of cheating and other offences under IPC against the appellants were supported by documentary evidence. That it was not a civil dispute but a case of commission of criminal offences. That subsequent payment of duty could not be a ground for quashing criminal proceedings or absolving the accused persons of their criminal liability. That the settlement under KVSS, 1998 protected the individual only from prosecution under the taxing statute and not from criminal proceedings under the Penal Code. That the criminal proceedings could not be quashed merely on account of the fact that customs duty payment had been settled. That the machines were liable to confiscation under Section 111(o), Customs Act.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

Per Ar. Lakshmanan, J.

The grant of immunity by the Designated Authority (KVSS-98) from instituting any proceeding for prosecution for any offence under the Customs Act, 1962, or from the imposition of penalty under the said enactment, in respect of matters covered in the declaration made by the declarant, the decision of the Collector not to recommend prosecution and to impose only a token fine of Re 1 only show that the Customs Authorities were satisfied that there was no intention to evade the customs duty. GCS is immune from any criminal proceedings pursuant to the certificate issued under KVSS. The appellants are being prosecuted in their capacity as office-bearers of GCS. As the customs duty has already been paid, the Central Government has not suffered any financial loss. Moreover, as per KVSS, 1998, whoever is granted the benefit under the said Scheme is granted immunity from prosecution for any offence under the Customs Act, 1962 including the offence of evasion of duty. In the circumstances, the complaint filed against the appellants is unsustainable. (Paras 23 and 24)

From the case of Sushila Rani, (2002) 2 SCC 697, it is clear that if an assessee takes the option under KVSS, he obtains immediate immunity under any proceeding under any and all laws in force. As such the present proceedings initiated under Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC are bad and ought to have been quashed with immediate effect. (Para 27)

Moreover, in the present case, the alleged criminal liability stands compounded on a settlement with respect to the civil issues and, therefore, the FIR was erroneously issued and was totally unwarranted. From the judgment in Duncans Agro Industries Ltd. case, (1996) 5 SCC 591, the proposition that follows is that KVSS, 1998 was a voluntary scheme whereby if the disputed demand was settled by the authority and pending proceedings were withdrawn by the importer, the balance demand against the importer shall be dropped and the importer shall be immune from penal proceedings under any law in force. Therefore, the respondent's argument that KVSS, 1998 did not absolve the appellants of criminal liability under IPC cannot be sustained. The continuance of the proceedings in the instant case would only tantamount to driving the present appellants to double jeopardy when they had been honourably exonerated by the Collector of Customs, and further, GCS of which one of the appellants is the General Secretary in which capacity he is accused in the present case was granted amnesty under KVSS, 1998. The present case does not warrant subjecting a citizen especially senior citizens of the age of 92 and 70 years to fresh investigation and prosecution on an incident or fact situation giving rise to offence under both the Customs Act and IPC when the matter has already been settled. (Para 29)

Under the penal law, there is no concept of vicarious liability unless the statute covers the same within its ambit. In the instant case, under the said law which prevails in the field i.e. the Customs Act, 1962 the appellants have been wholly discharged and GCS granted immunity from prosecution. It is a well-established principle of law that the matter which has been adjudicated and settled need not be dragged into the criminal courts unless and until the act of the appellants could have been described as culpable. The true fact and import of KVSS, 1998 is that once the said Scheme is availed of and all the formalities complied with including the payment of the duty, the immunity granted under the provisions of the Customs Act, 1962 also extends to such offences that may prima facie be made out on identical allegations i.e. of evasion of customs duty and violation of any notification issued under the said Act. (Para 30)

In the present case, there is no prima facie case made out in respect of the alleged offence under Section 120-B read with Section 420 IPC and, therefore, the charge-sheet and the process issued thereunder has to be quashed. To bring home the charge of conspiracy within the ambit of Section 120-B IPC, it is necessary to establish that there was an agreement between the parties for doing an unlawful act. It is difficult to establish conspiracy by direct evidence. (Paras 31 and 32)

The ingredients of Section 420 IPC are also not made out. There is no reason as to why the appellants must be made to undergo the agony of a criminal trial. (Para 33)

To hold a person guilty of cheating under Section 415 IPC, it is necessary to show that he had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making the promise with an intention to retain the property. As the customs duty was paid by GCS, there was no fraudulent or dishonest intention on the part of GCS or its office-bearers to retain the property. Moreover, there was no inducing on the part of GCS or its office-bearers intentionally to retain the property since customs duty had been paid by GCS and, therefore the ingredients of the offence of cheating are missing for issuing the process against the appellants and, therefore, the same is liable to be quashed and set aside. (Paras 34 and 35)

Section 111(o) of the Customs Act, 1962 is not attracted in the present case. The subsequent proceedings initiated for confiscation of the goods is of no relevance nor does it retrospectively render the import illegal. (Para 37)

(11)(xxii) Quashment re taxation offences (contd.)

It is settled law that for establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. From his failure to keep promise subsequently, such a culpable intention right at the beginning cannot be presumed. The records show that the exemption certificate contained necessary conditions which were required to be complied with after importation of the machine. Since GCS could not comply with it, it rightly paid the necessary duties without taking advantage of the exemption certificate. The conduct of GCS clearly indicates that there was no fraudulent or dishonest intention of either GCS or the appellants in their capacities as office-bearers right at the time of making application for exemption. Therefore, the question of committing an offence under Section 420 IPC does not arise. There is no allegation in the first information report or the charge-sheet indicating expressly or impliedly any intentional deception or fraudulent/dishonest intention on the part of the appellants right from the time of making the promise or misrepresentation. Nothing has been said on what those misrepresentations were and how the Ministry of Health was duped and what were the roles played by the appellants in the alleged offence. The appellants could not be attributed any mens rea of evasion of customs duty or cheating the Government of India as the Cancer Society is a non-profit organisation and, therefore, the allegations against the appellants levelled by the prosecution are unsustainable. The KVSS certificate and the law laid down by the Supreme Court clearly absolve the appellants herein of all charges and allegations under any other law once the duty so demanded has been paid and the alleged offence has been compounded. It is also settled law that once a civil case has been compromised and the alleged offence has been compounded, to continue the criminal proceedings thereafter would be an abuse of the judicial process. (Para 40)

Per Brijesh Kumar, J. (concurring)

On the one hand final settlement was made after determining the tax liability, as postulated in Section 95(iii), KVSS, 1998, that the appellants were neither convicted nor criminal proceedings were pending, relating to any offence under Chapter IX or XVII IPC, yet the criminal proceedings are being prosecuted which is apparently against the very spirit of KVSS. In view of the condition precedent under Section 95(iii) for settlement, when on that basis a settlement is brought about, it does not mean that later on, one could turn around and get the declarant convicted for a criminal offence too. More so, when in view of Section 90(4) of the Scheme the declarant is obliged to withdraw an appeal or proceedings regarding tax liability pending before the High Court or the Supreme Court, which had also been done in the present case. The declarant could not be dragged and chased in criminal proceedings after closing the other opening, making it a dead end. It is highly unreasonable and arbitrary to do so and initiation and continuance of such proceedings lack bona fides. (Para 44)

Therefore, it has to be inferred that the position as it stood, in regard to the criminal prosecution and conviction on the date the declaration was filed, as conditions precedent to settlement under the Scheme, would also stand finalized on full and final settlement of the matter under the Scheme. Later on, the declarant could not be or continued to be subjected to criminal prosecution to alter the position as it stood on the relevant date of the submission of declaration. The appellants virtually foreclosed their right to further pursue the proceedings before the authorities or courts of law challenging the legality, validity or the tax liability in terms of the Scheme. Undoubtedly, if the appellants' appeal which was pending in the Supreme Court had been allowed it might have affected the criminal proceeding too on merits. In certain circumstances, it could be put up as a defence by the declarant, in the criminal case but in terms of the Scheme he was bound to withdraw his appeal. The criminal prosecution could not be allowed to proceed by putting an end to a possible defence, beforehand. It certainly amounts to abuse of the process of law. (Para 45)

Per curiam

The FIR in question and the proceedings initiated in pursuance thereto against the appellants in the Court of Chief Metropolitan Magistrate under Sections 120-B and 420 IPC are quashed. (Para 46). Hira Lal Hari Lal Bhagwati v. CBI, (2003) 5 SCC 257: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1121: AIR 2003 SC 2545: (2003) 104 DLT 699: 2003 Cri LJ 3041: (2003) 155 ELT 433: (2003) 262 ITR 466.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Brijesh Kumar[2] and Dr. AR. Lakshmanan[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-5-2003]

Sushila Rani v. CIT, (2002) 2 SCC 697; CBI v. Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., (1996) 5 SCC 591: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1045; Union of India v. Sampat Raj Dugar, (1992) 2 SCC 66, followed

G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513, relied on

Distinguished on facts in M. Natarajan v. State, (2008) 8 SCC 413*

Held limited in M. Natarajan v. State, (2008) 8 SCC 413*

[7538] — S. 482 — Quashment — Relevant considerations — Preventing abuse of process of court or securing ends of justice — Nature of dispute — Quashment of proceedings relating to TDS — Where proceeding is of civil nature which cannot be adjudicated by criminal court, High Court would be justified in exercising its inherent jurisdiction and quashing the same — High Court erred in refusing to exercise its jurisdiction under S. 482 and passing a cryptic order without assigning any reasons therefor when complaint did not disclose any offence of criminal nature — In face of assertion made by appellants that deduction towards income tax were made from salaries of all employees liable to pay the same in view of statutory provisions of IT Act, appropriate remedy for respondent was to approach authority/officer concerned — Moreover, report of SI had indicated that matter in issue was civil in nature — Proceedings against appellants quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406/120-B — Income Tax Act, 1961, Ss. 192, 200, 206, 271-C, 276-B & 276-BB

A private complaint was filed by the respondent before ACJM under Sections 461/468/406 read with Section 120-B IPC against the appellants alleging discrimination by unduly deducting Rs 1640 p.m. from the monthly salary as income tax and a further wrongful deduction of Rs 3050 on account of cooperative loan issued by the appellants/Company. It was also stated in the complaint that the amount so deducted was not deposited with the Income Tax Authority and should be refunded back. The ACJM directed SI to conduct an inquiry into the allegations made in the complaint. On 30-4-2004, the appellants informed that the amount of income tax deducted in consonance with Section 192 of the Income Tax Act being deposited in due course as tax to the credit of the respondent employee in terms of Section 199 of the Income Tax Act as uniformly done in respect of every employee and also produced Form 16 of the respondent for the period from 1-4-2003 to 31-3-2004. The report submitted by SI showed that complaint in issue was civil in nature. However, JM issued summons against the appellants for an offence under Sections 406/120-B of the Penal Code. In response to the summons, the appellants made an application under Section 205 of the Code before the Judicial Magistrate which was rejected. Subsequently, vide order dated 12-9-2005, the Judicial Magistrate issued warrant of arrest against the appellants.

The appellant's application under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the complaint and order dated 12-9-2005 was dismissed by the impugned judgment. Hence, the present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the complaint, the respondent mentioned about the filing of a writ petition in 1991 before the High Court of Calcutta and the order passed therein in 2003. He also referred to his contempt petition before the High Court. He alleged that due to the direction of the High Court, which was issued at his instance, the officers entered into a criminal conspiracy and with a view to pressurise him for withdrawing the said contempt, started threatening him and illegally deducting Rs 1640 per month from his monthly salary as income tax though he did not fall within taxable income category. It was also pointed out that a sum of Rs 3050 had been deducted from his salary illegally on account of cooperative loan although, in the previous month, the deduction was only to the extent of Rs 50. (Paras 10 to 13)

A perusal of Sections 192, 200, 206, 271, 276-B and 276-BB of the Income Tax Act, makes it clear that it is obligatory on the part of the persons responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "salaries", at the time of payment, to deduct income tax computed on the basis of the rates in force for the financial year on the estimated income of the assessee and pay the same to the authority concerned. They also make it clear that on failure to deduct tax at source they shall be liable to pay, by way of penalty, a sum equal to the amount of tax which such persons failed to deduct or pay. They also show that failure to pay tax to the credit of the Central Government in certain cases or pay the tax collected at source under Section 276-BB shall be punishable with imprisonment. (Para 23)

In the case on hand, it is the categorical stand of the appellant management that the amount of tax that has been deducted from the respondent's salary as TDS under the head "salaries" in terms of Section 192 is uniformly done in respect of each and every employee of the Company and the amount so deducted is deposited to the credit of the employees including the respondent in terms of Section 199. They also produced a copy of Form 16 being the certificate under Section 203 of the Income Tax Act, 1961 for the tax deducted at source from the income of the respondent. (Para 24)

The JM had forwarded the complaint to SI for conducting an inquiry who had concluded that "the matter is civil in nature" and forwarded the same to the Additional CJM with a request to clarify the same. In spite of that the ACJM after recording stand of complainant had found that there was sufficient ground for proceeding against accused. It is not clear on what grounds ACJM had found so. From the materials placed, particularly, the contents of the complaint, relevant statutory provisions of the Income Tax Act, report of the SI, the complaint does not disclose any case to proceed against the accused persons as arrived at by the Additional CJM. Even if the respondent had some grievance with the appellants about non-promotion, direction of the High Court, pendency of contempt, etc. it is not a case for criminal prosecution. If he is very much interested to vindicate his grievance, the respondent could have very well approached the officer concerned of IISCO or the Income Tax Authority concerned. Though in the complaint, it is stated that the respondent had sent a notice under registered post with acknowledgment due on 17-11-2003, admittedly, no such proof had been placed before the Court. In fact, the appellants stoutly denied the receipt of such a notice. (Paras 26 and 27)

(11)(xxii) Quashment re taxation offences (contd.)

In spite of all the details and materials since the Additional CJM issued summons, the appellants approached the High Court under Section 482 of the Code for quashing the same. The High Court, by the impugned order, without adverting to any of the abovementioned relevant materials passed a cryptic order refusing to exercise its inherent jurisdiction which is unsustainable in law. (Para 28). Rajeswar Tiwari v. Nanda Kishore Roy, (2010) 8 SCC 442.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-2010]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Sardar Trilok Singh v. Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396: 1979 SCC (Cri) 987; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513: 2001 SCC (Cri) 565; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188, considered and relied on [7539] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Finding of Income Tax Appellate Tribunal conclusive — Held, prosecution cannot be sustained. G.L. Didwania v. ITO, 1995 Supp (2) SCC 724.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Jayachandra Reddy and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-1993]

[7540] — Ss. 482, 190, 228, 240 & 246 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Relevant considerations — Consideration of the relevant statute to decide whether it provided complete immunity to the accused from prosecution — Permissibility of — Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme, 1998, S. 91 [of Finance (No. 2) Act, 1998]

In the present case, the High Court came to the conclusion that it was permissible to look into the Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme (KVSS), 1998 (which granted immunity from prosecution for any offence under any direct/indirect tax enactment on settlement of tax dues) to decide as to whether the present prosecution was legally launched or not and could continue or not. The Public Prosecutor argued that for the purposes of framing charges under the provisions of CrPC what could be seen was the material produced by the prosecution in charge-sheet and no other material. Therefore, the High Court could not have looked into the KVSS, 1998.

Held :

The High Court was right in examining the KVSS, 1998 to decide whether it provided complete immunity from the prosecution since that was the mainstay of the appellants' attack against the prosecution. (Para 17). M. Natarajan v. State, (2008) 8 SCC 413: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 507: (2008) 226 ELT 679.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.P. Naolekar and V.S. Sirpurkar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

(xxiii) Quashment/stay re ecological offences/environmental matters

[7541] — S. 482 — Casual approach in respect of offences relating to forests, deprecated — Provisions of the Forest Act should be strictly complied with — Generally the seized forest produce and the vehicle, boat, tools etc. used in commission of forest offence should not be released — Even if court is inclined to release the same, the authorised officer must specify reasons therefor and must insist on furnishing of bank guarantee as the minimum condition — Forest produce transported in violation of provisions of the Act — Vehicle used in connection with the transportation along with the forest produce seized — Vehicle released by authorised officer subject to certain conditions including furnishing of bank guarantee — Petition filed under S. 482 CrPC for quashing of the order of the authorised officer and unconditional release of the vehicle — Condition regarding bank guarantee modified by High Court and the petitioner-respondent instead directed to furnish two solvent sureties to the extent of Rs 1,50,000 each for the purpose of getting interim custody of the vehicle — Held, High Court adopted a casual approach and its order was contrary to law — Karnataka Forest Act, 1963 (5 of 1964), Ss. 71-A, 71-C, 71-G, 62 & 2(7)

The provisions of the Act are required to be strictly complied with and followed for the purposes of achieving the object for which the Act was enacted. Liberal approach in the matter with respect to the property seized, which is liable to confiscation, is uncalled for as the same is likely to frustrate the provisions of the Act. Before passing an order for releasing the forest produce or the property used in the commission of the forest offence, the authorised officer or the appellate authority has to specify the reasons which justify such release, apparently, prima facie excluding the possibility of such forest produce or the property being confiscated ultimately. Generally, therefore, any forest produce and the tools, boats, vehicles, cattle, etc., used in the commission of the forest offence, which are liable to forfeiture, should not be released. This, however, does not debar the officers and the authorities under the Act including the appellate authority from passing appropriate orders under the circumstances of each case but only after assigning valid reasons. The liberal approach in the matter would perpetuate the commission of more offences with respect to the forest and its produce which, if not protected, is surely to affect mother earth and the atmosphere surrounding it. The courts cannot shut their eyes and ignore their obligations indicated in the Act enacted for the purposes of protecting and safeguarding both the forests and their produce. The forests are not only the natural wealth of the country but also the protector of human life by providing a clean and unpolluted atmosphere. When any vehicle is seized on the allegation that it was used for committing a forest offence, the same shall not normally be returned to a party till the culmination of all the proceedings in respect of such offence, including confiscatory proceedings, if any. Nonetheless, if for any exceptional reasons a court is inclined to release the vehicle during such pendency, furnishing a bank guarantee should be the minimum condition. No party shall be under the impression that release of vehicle would be possible on easier terms, when such vehicle is alleged to have been involved in commission of a forest offence. Any such easy release would tempt the forest offenders to repeat commission of such offences. Its casualty will be the forests as the same cannot be replenished for years to come. (Para 7)

The High Court had adopted a very casual approach while disposing of the petition under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Besides that the order impugned is contrary to law, the Supreme Court has its reservations with respect to the powers of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC in the matter which need not be expressed in this case. (Para 8). State of Karnataka v. K. Krishnan, (2000) 7 SCC 80: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1289: AIR 2000 SC 2729: 2000 Cri LJ 3971.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2000]

Followed in Oma Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (2008) 5 SCC 502

[7542] — S. 482 — High Courts directed ordinarily not to grant stay of criminal proceedings initiated by Board under Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act against industrialists responsible for causing such pollution on their applications under S. 482, CrPC — Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 — Constitution of India — Arts. 32, 21, 48-A and 51-A(g)

Since the problem of pollution of the water in the river Ganga has become very acute the High Courts should not ordinarily grant orders of stay of criminal proceedings in such cases and even if such an order of stay is made in any extraordinary case the High Courts should dispose of the case within a short period. The High Courts were, therefore, to take up for hearing all the cases where such orders have been issued under S. 482 of Cr PC, 1973 staying prosecutions under the Water Act within two months from the date of institution of such case. M.C. Mehta v. Union of India, (1988) 1 SCC 471: 1988 SCC (Cri) 141: AIR 1988 SC 1115.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah and K.N. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-1988]

[7543] — S. 482 — Order passed by Sessions Judge in appeal under S. 59(2), Forest Act — Challenge to — Invocation of S. 482 CrPC to deal with — Not permissible in view of bar under S. 59(3) — Forest Act, 1927, Ss. 59(2) & (3) [inserted by H.P. Act 15 of 1991] (Para 4). State of H.P. v. Dhanwant Singh, (2004) 13 SCC 331: 2005 SCC (Cri) 248: AIR 2004 SC 1636: 2004 Cri LJ 1431.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2004]

[7544] — S. 482 — Exercise of power under — Stay of proceedings under Forest Act — Held, High Court in exercise of such power erred in staying proceedings under S. 44(2-A) of A.P. Forest Act, 1967 merely because of subsequent initiation of prosecution under S. 45 of that Act. Divl. Forest Officer v. G.V. Sudhakar Rao, (1985) 4 SCC 573: 1986 SCC (Cri) 34: AIR 1986 SC 328.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and D.P. Madon, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1985]

(11)(xxiii) Quashment/stay re ecological offences/environmental matters (contd.)

[7545] — S. 482 — Quashment of complaint — Principles reiterated — Quashing of complaint proceedings by High Court — Justifiable grounds — Matters to be considered at stage of issuing process — High Court quashing complaint on ground of inadequacy of materials on record though specific and detailed averments regarding commission of offence for violation of Ss. 25 and 26, Water Pollution Act, 1974 made in complaint — Pollution Board (through its officers) filing complaint under S. 44 against Respondent 1 and other accused persons — Specific averments of continuous commission of offence, made — Specific role of each accused person in the day-to-day affairs and decision-making process, stated — Copies of inspection reports and communications regarding non-compliance with statutory provisions/conditional consent of Pollution Board regarding discharge/treatment of effluent, produced — Though Magistrate took cognizance of allegations, High Court quashed the complaint as against Respondent 1 (a Joint Managing Director of the Company) on main ground that there was no material on record to show that Respondent 1 was, at the relevant time, in charge of and responsible to the Company for conduct of its business — Held, in view of the specific averments in the complaint and Ss. 25, 26, 44 and 47, High Court was not correct in quashing the complaint relating to Respondent 1 — Appellant Board was not even required to place all the materials on record at the threshold — At stage of issuing process, Magistrate is only to be prima facie satisfied whether there are sufficient grounds for proceeding against the accused — Therefore, order of High Court quashing complaint set aside — Special Judicial Magistrate (Pollution) directed to proceed with complaint and dispose of the same in accordance with law — Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 — Ss. 49, 47, 44, 25, 26 and 2(k)

A complaint before the Magistrate under Section 44 of the Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 (the Act) was filed by the appellant [the U.P. Pollution Control Board (Board)] through its officers against Respondent 1 (a Joint Managing Director of the Company) and others for violation of Sections 25 and 26 of the Act. The High Court by the impugned order quashed the complaint so far as it related to Respondent 1 on the main ground that there was no material on record to show that Respondent 1 was, at the relevant time, in-charge and responsible to the Company concerned for conduct of its business.

The complaint showed that the Company had applied for the grant of consent of the Board for the discharge of its trade effluent on 29-9-1982 which was received by the Board on 4-10-1982 and after considering all aspects conditional consent was issued in favour of the Company. According to the complainant, the Company had not sent the report for proper compliance with the condition which was imposed. According to the Board, the accused persons intentionally failed to comply with the conditions of the consent order dated 22-1-1983 and to construct a proper effluent treatment plant and were discharging the effluent without the consent of the Board.

It was not in dispute that Respondent 1, before letting out trade effluent into a stream or a river had to satisfy certain conditions in terms of the provisions of the Act and the order of the authorities concerned. It was also not in dispute that without a consent order by the Board, the Company could not let out untreated effluent into a land or stream or river. Though a consent order was issued by the Board, it has been specifically stated in the complaint that the conditions contained therein had not been fulfilled by the Company.

Allowing the appeal of the Board and setting aside the quashment of the complaint,

Held :

In view of the specific averments in the complaint and Sections 25, 26, 44 and 47 of the Act, the High Court was not correct in quashing the complaint relating to Respondent 1. The Company and all the persons in charge of the day-to-day affairs are required to abide by the mandatory provisions for operating their industrial establishment. In Para 17 of the complaint, it was specifically stated that at the time of commission of offence all the accused persons were in charge of the business of the Company and responsible for the day-to-day working of the Company and also for conducting of the business of the Company and continuous commissioning of offence under Section 44 of the Act and the construction of the effluent treatment plant could be taken up only when these senior authorities resolved to do so. Apart from specific averments regarding the guilt of Respondent 1 and others as well as their specific role in the day-to-day affairs and decision-making process, the Board also placed a letter dated 22-1-1983 granting conditional consent to Respondent 1, copy of the inspection reports, various letters/communications and their reply as Annexures P-1 to P-7. Therefore, the order of the High Court quashing the complaint is set aside. The Special Judicial Magistrate (Pollution) is directed to proceed with the complaint and dispose of the same in accordance with law. (Paras 14 to 19, 33 and 42)

Considering the facts, the appellant Board was not required to place all the materials on record at the threshold. In the interest of the public health, the appellant Board through its officers laid a complaint against the persons who were in charge of the day-to-day affairs and in the decision-making process. When the High Court quashed the complaint against Respondent 1 (a Joint Managing Director of the Company), the issue was about the averments/allegations against him in respect of his concern in the day-to-day affairs and in the decision-making process. It is a settled legal position that at the stage of issuing process, the Magistrate is mainly concerned with the allegations made in the complaint or the evidence led in support of the same and he is only to be prima facie satisfied whether there are sufficient grounds for proceeding against the accused. (Paras 21 to 23)

Though the present case commenced in the year 1985, nonetheless lapse of such a long period cannot be a reason to absolve the respondents from the trial. Courts cannot afford to deal lightly with cases involving pollution of air and water. The message must go to all persons concerned whether small or big that the courts will share the parliamentary concern and legislative intent of the Act to check the escalating pollution level and restore the balance of our environment. Those who discharge noxious polluting effluents into streams, rivers or any other water bodies which inflicts harm on the public health at large, should be dealt with strictly dehors technical objections. Since escalating pollution level of our environment affects the life and health of human beings as well as animals, the courts should not deal with the prosecution for offences under the pollution and environmental Acts in a casual or routine manner as the High Court did by quashing the complaint by exercising inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. Again, exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC is the exception and under the rule there are three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised i.e. (a) to give effect to an order of the court; (b) to prevent abuse of process of court; (c) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. (Paras 38 and 39). U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Dr. Bhupendra Kumar Modi, (2009) 2 SCC 147.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan, C.J. and P. Sathasivam, J. [Date of decision: 12-12-2008]

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Mohan Meakins Ltd., (2000) 3 SCC 745, relied on

MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115, clarified

U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Modi Distillery, (1987) 3 SCC 684: 1987 SCC (Cri) 632, explained and distinguished

State of Karnataka v. Pratap Chand, (1981) 2 SCC 335: 1981 SCC (Cri) 453; State of Haryana v. Brij Lal Mittal, (1998) 5 SCC 343: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1315; Nalin Thakor v. State of Gujarat, (2003) 12 SCC 461: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 471, distinguished

[7546] — S. 482 — Exercise of power under, where bar of jurisdiction of criminal court in the matter concerned existing under the relevant Act — Legality — Confiscation proceeding before authorised officer under Forest Act — Interim release of vehicles involved in forest offence during pendency of — Direction in respect of, made by High Court exercising jurisdiction under S. 482 — Held, not justified — Forest Act, 1927 — S. 52 [as amended by W.B. Act 22 of 1988, S. 10] and Ss. 59-A to 59-G [as inserted by W.B. Act 22 of 1988, S. 17]

The High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in releasing the vehicles in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. Once a confiscation proceeding is initiated in terms of Section 59-G of the Act, the jurisdiction of the criminal court in this behalf stands excluded. The criminal court although indisputably has the jurisdiction to deal with the property which is the subject-matter of offence in terms of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure but once a confiscation proceeding is initiated, the said power cannot be exercised by the Magistrate. (Paras 41 and 31). State of W.B. v. Sujit Kumar Rana, (2004) 4 SCC 129: 2004 SCC (Cri) 984: AIR 2004 SC 1851.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-1-2004]

Divisional Forest Officer v. G.V. Sudhakar Rao, (1985) 4 SCC 573: 1986 SCC (Cri) 34; State of W.B. v. Gopal Sarkar, (2002) 1 SCC 495: 2002 SCC (Cri) 161; State of Karnataka v. K.A. Kunchindammed, (2002) 9 SCC 90: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1085; Section Forester v. Mansur Ali Khan, (2004) 1 SCC 293; Shambhu Dayal Agarwala v. State of W.B., (1990) 3 SCC 549: 1990 SCC (Cri) 489; Dy. Commr., Dakshina Kannada District v. Rudolph Fernandes, (2000) 3 SCC 306: 2000 SCC (Cri) 632, followed

[7547] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings under — When justified — Held, to be in very rare cases — Complaint (lodged against forest officers) involving mala fides — Inherent improbabilities in complainant's case — Held, continuance of proceedings in such case would amount to abuse of the process of law — High Court erred in rejecting the petition under S. 482 — Judgment of the High Court set aside — Proceedings quashed

The respondent filed a complaint against the appellants (six officers of the Orissa State Forest Department) alleging that they had falsely implicated him for offences under the Orissa Forest Act,

(11)(xxiii) Quashment/stay re ecological offences/environmental matters (contd.)

1972 and the Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972. He further alleged that being not content with the said illegal acts, they seriously assaulted him thereby committing offences punishable under Sections 341, 323, 325, 506 and 386 read with Section 34 IPC. Before the Sub-Divisional Judicial Magistrate (SDJM), the appellants took the stand that the complaint was lodged as a counterblast and retaliatory measure because a large quantity of ivory was seized from the complainant and he could not produce any material to justify the possession thereof. According to them, the acts of search, seizure and arrest were done in pursuance of their official duty and they could not be proceeded against without necessary sanction as contemplated under Section 197 CrPC. The SDJM took the view that there was no necessity for sanction under Section 197. Thereafter the appellants preferred a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court. The High Court, after taking the view that Section 197 CrPC had no application to the facts of the case, rejected the said petition.

Before the Supreme Court the appellants contended that in relation to the offences committed by the respondent, he was produced before the Magistrate. While hearing the bail application of the respondent when the SDJM specifically asked the respondent as to whether there was any ill-treatment, he did not make any grievance of any ill-treatment and on the contrary admitted that there was no ill-treatment. The respondent got himself examined by a private doctor after three days of the alleged incident and the complaint was lodged after 13 days. The appellants submitted that the complaint instituted by the respondent was nothing but an abuse of the process of the court and the High Court was not justified in holding that Section 197 CrPC was not applicable.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

When the background facts of the case are considered, the question regarding applicability of Section 197 CrPC takes a temporary back seat. The respondent was produced before the Magistrate on 28-2-1991. He was specifically asked as to whether there was any ill-treatment. Learned SDJM specifically records that no complaint of any ill-treatment was made. This itself strikes at the credibility of the complaint. Additionally, the doctor who has examined him stated that for the first time on 2-3-1991 he treated the complainant. Though there are several other aspects highlighted in the version indicated in the complaint and the materials on record are there, it is not necessary to go into them because of the inherent improbabilities of the complainant's case and the patent mala fides involved. (Para 20)

It is no doubt true that at the threshold interference by exercise of jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC has to be in very rare cases, and this case appears to be of that nature. The continuance of the proceeding by way of prosecution in this case would amount to abuse of the process of law. (Paras 20 and 21). State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104: AIR 2004 SC 2179: 2004 Cri LJ 2011.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

Kumar Raghavendra Singh v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (1996) 81 Cut LT 94 (Orissa), reversed

[7548] — S. 482 — Without hearing appeal on merits and coming to a clear finding that an offence is made out against the accused, held, High Court has no jurisdiction to issue notice directing the accused to show cause why he should not be sent for trial — The order passed by the High Court at the initial stage amounts to a serious abuse of the process of the court inasmuch as it compels the accused appellant to rebut a charge never made or an allegation never proved against him. Such a cause of action at this stage results in gross and substantial injustice to the appellant and amounts to a gross misuse of power of the High Court under S. 482 CrPC. R.V. Murthy v. State of Maharashtra, (1981) 4 SCC 157: 1981 SCC (Cri) 810: AIR 1982 SC 677.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.P. Sen, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1981]

[7549] — Ss. 482 & 204 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Offence by company — Non-application of mind in issuing summons — On the basis of a complaint, cognizance of offence under Ss. 24 and 25, punishable under Ss. 43 and 44 r/w S. 47 of Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974 taken and issue of process ordered by Judicial Magistrate against appellant-directors of a company — No allegation made in the complaint or in the statement recorded by the Magistrate before issue of summons that the offence was committed by the company with the consent or connivance, of or was attributable to any negligence on the part of the appellants as required under S. 47(2) of the Act — Further, sample of water was taken immediately after the Factory Manager of the company had informed the Board that FRP lining provided in the oil and grease trap of the effluent treatment plant having got damaged at some places, the tank had to be shut down temporarily and would be restarted soon after repair/replacement — Held, summons was issued without application of mind and Judicial Magistrate committed error in issuing the same hence liable to be set aside — In view of the special facts and circumstances of the case, question regarding conflict, if any, between decisions of Supreme Court in Municipal Corpn. of Delhi v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi and State of Haryana v. Brij Lal Mittal on the one hand and in U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Modi Distillery on the other hand need not be considered — Water (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, 1974, Ss. 43, 44 r/w 47 and 24 & 25. Nalin Thakor v. State of Gujarat, (2003) 12 SCC 461.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: V.N. Khare, C.J. and S.B. Sinha and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2003]

Distinguished in U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Dr. Bhupendra Kumar Modi, (2009) 2 SCC 147

[7550] — Ss. 482 & 451 — Release of confiscated vehicle involved in a forest offence during pendency of proceedings — Grounds for — High Court directing release of such vehicle since expeditious disposal of proceedings not possible and on grounds of equity — Propriety of — Held, though power of the High Court to direct interim release is undisputed but it is to be exercised for good reasons and in exceptional cases only — Delay in disposal of proceedings, held, not a sufficient ground — Further held, while doing so minimum condition of furnishing a bank guarantee is to be strictly complied with — Karnataka Forest Rules, 1969, R. 69 — Forest Act, 1927, S. 53 — Karnataka Forest Act, 1963 (5 of 1964), Ss. 62, 63, 71-A and 71-G (Paras 6, 8 to 10). Section Forestor v. Mansur Ali Khan, (2004) 1 SCC 293: 2004 SCC (Cri) 333: AIR 2004 SC 1251.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-12-2003]

State of Karnataka v. K. Krishnan, (2000) 7 SCC 80: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1289, relied on [7551] — Ss. 482 and 452 — Seizure of elephant — On facts, plea of the accused that on the date of seizure of the elephant his application for licence was pending accepted — Criminal proceedings against the accused quashed and custody of the elephant directed to be given to the Mutt on the basis of the affidavit filed by the accused — No law point laid down. Sh. Gunnaseelam v. State of T.N., AIR 1994 SC 1816: 1994 Cri LJ 3835.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and R.M. Sahai, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1993]

(xxiv) Quashment in food/liquor/drugs/chemicals offences

[7552] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Prosecution of company and its Managing Director under Ss. 7/16, Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954 for the manufacture of adulterated beverage — Preliminary evidence not showing as to how it could be said that the appellants were manufacturers of either the bottle or the beverage or both — Absence of material on record to show that the appellants held licence under Fruit Products Order, 1955 for the manufacture of the offending beverage — Held, in the circumstances of the case, continuance of proceedings against the appellants would be abuse of process of law — Hence quashed — Fruit Products Order, 1955, Cl. 8(1)(b) — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 227. Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400: AIR 1998 SC 128: 1998 Cri LJ 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sujata V. Manohar and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-1998]

[7553] — S. 482 — Entitlement of accused, for getting second sample examined under S. 13(2) PFA — Delay of 15 months in serving Public Analyst's report of first sample on accused — Delay leading to deterioration of second sample — Futility of further examination of second sample, leading to deprivation of valuable right conferred on accused by S. 13(2), PFA — Quashing of criminal proceedings on such grounds, refused by High Court — Held, in such a case there is no reason for continuing proceedings (which had lasted for about 20 years) in absence of any valid and reliable report with regard to second sample — Therefore, pending criminal proceedings, quashed — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, Ss. 16(1)(a)(i) and 13(2) (Paras 9 to 11). Girishbhai Dahyabhai Shah v. C.C. Jani, (2009) 15 SCC 64: (2009) 3 KLT 596.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-7-2009]

MCD v. Ghisa Ram, AIR 1967 SC 970: (1967) 2 SCR 116, followed

[7554] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Specific allegations against respondent-accused about illegal transportation of black jaggery for preparation of illicit distilled liquor — Prosecution also placing reliance on laboratory analysis report mentioning that seized jaggery was fit for fermentation, producing alcohol unfit for consumption — Held, in such circumstances, whether raw material in existence would be sufficient for holding respondent-accused guilty or not, has to be considered

(11)(xxiv) Quashment in food/liquor/drugs/chemicals offences (contd.)

only at time of trial — Further, at time of framing charge, it can be decided whether prima facie case has been made out showing commission of offence and involvement of charged persons — It is immaterial whether case is based on direct or circumstantial evidence — Hence, interference at the threshold, quashing FIR, is to be exceptional and not routine, as ordered by High Court herein — It is not a case where it can be said that complaint did not disclose commission of an offence — Acceptability of materials to fasten culpability on accused persons is a matter of trial — Proceedings restored — Andhra Pradesh Excise Act, 1968 (17 of 1968), Ss. 34(e), 41 and 42 (Paras 21 to 23). State of A.P. v. Gourishetty Mahesh, (2010) 11 SCC 226: 2010 Cri LJ 3844: (2010) 92 AIC 98.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Sathasivam and Anil R. Dave, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-2010]

[7555] — S. 482 — High Court quashing FIR registered under Ss. 7-A/8(e), Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1995 r/w S. 109 IPC — Sustainability — Appellant State contending that High Court's approach was erroneous — That, it was not such a case where there was no material to show commission of crime — Whether there was adequate material already in existence or which could have been collected during investigation and its relevance, was essentially a matter of trial — Relying on settled principles of law, held, High Court's action in quashing FIR, herein, was not justified and cannot be maintained — Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1995 (17 of 1995), Ss. 7-A/8(e) — Penal Code, 1860, S. 109 (Paras 4 to 7). State of A.P. v. Aravapally Venkanna, (2009) 13 SCC 443: AIR 2009 SC 1863: (2009) 78 AIC 65 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1805, relied on [7556] — S. 482 — Liability of Directors (appellants herein) for affairs of company, under — Drug manufactured by Company for human consumption, found defective because of growth of fungus — Complaint against Company and its Directors therefor — Active involvement of Directors in offence, pleaded — Petition under S. 482 CrPC by Company and its Directors thereagainst, dismissed by High Court — Sustainability — Held, specific averments in complaint that by manufacturing of such medicine for sale, Company and its Directors had committed breach of Drugs and Cosmetics Act — Thus, there was clear allegation that Directors were privy to manufacturing of medicine concerned by Company — Averments in complaint were not bald statements — Offence involved has direct impact on public health, hence, is serious — Therefore, High Court rightly took the view that Directors were responsible for affairs of Company and, therefore, when a drug manufactured by Company is found to be defective, all Directors could be prosecuted — It correctly proceeded on basis of specific language of S. 34(2) to hold that complaint filed against Directors could not be disposed of under S. 482 CrPC as it required appreciation of facts on basis of evidence to be led before trial court — Hence, interference with High Court's order not warranted — However, it will be open for Directors to prove before trial court that they had nothing to do with manufacturing process and, therefore, they should not be held liable under S. 34(2) — Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940', S. 34(2) (Paras 8, 9, 1 and 10). Dinesh B. Patel v. State of Gujarat, (2010) 11 SCC 125.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-8-2010]

State of Haryana v. Brij Lal Mittal, (1998) 5 SCC 343: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1315, distinguished [7557] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Not justified — Respondents stored the food articles in the business premises with the intention to sell, and actually sold the articles to the Food Inspector — Public analyst report showed that the samples contained "saccharin" — In the petition under S. 482 the specific stand was that there was no violation and the ingredients were within the permissible limit — High Court did not consider that there was no specific stand taken about the requisite norms having not been followed by the public analyst — Held, factual controversies involved could not have been adjudicated in the proceedings under S. 482 — The exercise of power under S. 482 is clearly indefensible — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, S. 16 r/w Ss. 7(1) and 7(5) (Para 8). State of Gujarat v. Rameshchandra Shivratan Kosar, (2009) 12 SCC 583: (2009) 81 AIC 149 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-2009]

[7558] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Propriety — High Court by impugned judgment quashed FIR registered under S. 7-A r/w S. 8(e) of Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1955 r/w S. 109 IPC — Held, interference at the threshold with the FIR is to be in very exceptional circumstances — Whether the material already in existence or to be collected during investigation would be sufficient for holding the accused persons concerned guilty has to be considered at the time of trial — Charge can be framed if there are materials showing possibility about the commission of the crime as against certainty — At that stage also evidence cannot be gone into meticulously and it is immaterial whether case is based on direct or circumstantial evidence — In the instant case, it could not be said that the FIR did not disclose commission of an offence — Therefore, High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR — Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1995 (17 of 1995), S. 7-A r/w S. 8(e) r/w S. 109 IPC (Paras 1, 6 and 7). State of A.P. v. Vangaveeti Nagaiah, (2009) 12 SCC 466: AIR 2009 SC 2646: (2009) 78 AIC 201 (SC).

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2009]

State of A.P. v. Golconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1805, followed

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866, relied on

[7559] — S. 482 — Power to quash trial proceedings under — Complaint alleging offence under Ss. 7/16/17, Prevention of Food Adulteration Act clearly stating that Chairman, Managing Director and Directors of the mill were in charge of and responsible for the conduct of its business at the time of commission of offence — In view of the clear averment of the role played by each respondent and extent of their liability, held, complaint not liable to be quashed — Complaint not vague — Extent of available evidence against them not relevant at this stage

In the instant case the complaint made a clear averment regarding the active role played by the accused-respondents and the extent of their liability. The complaint thus implicated all the respondents and the High Court failed to consider that the allegations were quite clear and explicit so as to be sufficient for taking cognizance of the offence against the accused. Thus a prima facie case for summoning the accused has been made out and as such it was not a fit case in which the High Court should have exercised its discretion under S. 482 in order to quash the proceedings against the accused-respondents. Municipal Corpn. of Delhi v. Purshottam Das Jhunjhunwala, (1983) 1 SCC 9: 1983 SCC (Cri) 123: AIR 1983 SC 158.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-1982]

Municipal Corporation of Delhi v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1, distinguished

Followed in Madhumilan Syntex Ltd. v. Union of India, (2007) 11 SCC 297: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 143*

[7560] — S. 482 — Quashing of trial proceedings under — If a complaint ex facie makes out no offence, proceedings commenced pursuant thereto can be quashed at initial stages — Food adulteration offences — Complaint against accused Manager and Directors of manufacturing company for commission of offence under Ss. 7/16, Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, presuming that the accused were incharge of and responsible for the conduct of business of the Company at the time of sampling — Held, prima facie offence made out against the Manager in view of the very nature of his office and functions, but the complaint vague as regards the Directors and no offence revealed against them — Hence High Court justified in quashing proceedings against the Directors but erred in doing so against the Manager

The Food Inspector, Municipal Corporation filed a complaint before the Metropolitan Magistrate against the respondents alleging commission of offence under Ss. 5/7, Prevention of Food Adulteration Act as the sample of food article (Morton toffees) manufactured by the Company (respondent 5) had been found by the Public Analyst to be not of the prescribed standard. The Inspector alleged in the complaint that the accused-respondents were manager (respondent 1) and Directors (respondents 2 to 4) of the Company (respondent 5) "and as such they were in charge of and responsible for the conduct of business of accused 2 (the Company) at the time of sampling". Pursuant to the complaint the proceedings against the respondents were commenced. But the High Court quashed the proceedings against all the respondents under S. 482, CrPC on the ground that the complaint did not disclose any offence.

The proceedings against an accused in the initial stages can be quashed under S. 482. The test is that taking the allegations and the complaint as they are, without adding or subtracting anything, if no offence is made out then the High Court will be justified in quashing the proceedings in exercise of its powers under S. 482, CrPC.

From the very nature of duties of the Manager of the Company, it is manifest that he must be in the knowledge about the affairs of the sale and manufacture of the disputed sample. Therefore, a case was clearly made out against him and he was vicariously liable for the offence, vicarious liability being an incident of an offence under the Act. But as regards the Directors, there was no evidence to show, apart from the presumption drawn by the complainant, that there is any act committed by the Directors from which a reasonable inference can be drawn that they could also be vicariously liable.

(11)(xxiv) Quashment in food/liquor/drugs/chemicals offences (contd.)

In these circumstances, therefore, no case against the Directors had been made out ex facie on the allegations made in the complaint and the proceedings against them were rightly quashed. MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115: AIR 1983 SC 67: 1983 Cri LJ 159.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and E.S. Venkataramiah, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-12-1982]

Clarified in U.P. Pollution Control Board v. Dr. Bhupendra Kumar Modi, (2009) 2 SCC 147

[7561] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint under PFA, 1954 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, 1955 — R. 32(b) — Misbranded biscuits — Complaint alleging misbranding of an article of food (biscuits) in contravention of S. 7(2), PFA, 1954 punishable under S. 16(1)(a)(i) inasmuch as packets of biscuits manufactured by A-1 which were purchased by appellant from A-3 were not labelled in accordance with requirement of R. 32(b) — Cash-memo filed along with the complaint merely recording sale of "biscuits" for Rs 4 without mentioning the brand name of the biscuits — Sanction order of Director, Health Service also filed along with the complaint showing that sanction was granted to prosecute A-1 only — No sanction for prosecution of A-2 or A-3 was granted — Held, on facts, complaint alleging misbranding was not maintainable in absence of mention in the cash-memo the brand name of the biscuits — Moreover, no sanction having been granted for prosecution of A-2 and A-3, trial court erred in issuing process against them — That apart in absence of sanction for prosecution of A-3, A-1 could not be prosecuted — Trial court failed to look into all these aspects before issuing the process against A-1 to A-3 — High Court, therefore rightly, quashed the complaint and the proceedings taken by the Magistrate — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, Ss. 7(2), 16(1)(a)(i) & 2(ix)(k) (Para 5). Consumer Action Group v. Cadbury India Ltd., (2000) 9 SCC 56: 2000 SCC (Cri) 1160.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand, C.J. and K.T. Thomas, S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-1-2000]

[7562] — Ss. 482 and 468 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — On ground of bar of limitation — Offence under Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — Plea before High Court that maximum punishment for the alleged offence under S. 7(1)(a)(ii), EC Act was one year and, therefore, the charge-sheet filed about two years after the date of offence was clearly barred by limitation — Quashing of proceedings by accepting the said plea — Validity — Held, maximum punishment for an offence relatable to S. 7(1)(a)(ii) is not one year but seven years — Hence, High Court's order liable to be set aside — Essential Commodities Act, 1955, S. 7(1)(a)(ii) (Paras 7 and 9). State of A.P. v. Farmers Service Coop. Society, (2004) 6 SCC 683: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1826.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-8-2004]

[7563] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Prosecution under Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954 — Plea that appellant's company had nominated a person under S. 17(2) of the Act who would only be liable for any breach of the provisions of the Act — Held, this question is one of fact which can be gone into at the stage of trial — Constitution of India, Art. 136. Hari Shankar Jalan v. Food Inspector, Cherukole, 1997 SCC (Cri) 968.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-1997]

[7564] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Complaint alleging commission of offences punishable under S. 18(c) r/w S. 27(b)(ii) of the Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940 quashed by High Court — Sustainability — Allegation that the three accused persons were manufacturing, selling and storing DXN Ganocelium (GL) and DXN Rishi and (RG) capsules, which are "drugs", without a manufacturing licence — Submission by respondent-accused that the seized drugs were nothing but ayurvedic drugs and that the licence was subsequently granted — Held, whether the goods in question are ayurvedic drugs is essentially a matter for trial — Mere fact that application for licence was filed, did not entitle the respondent to manufacture and/or to sell the drugs concerned — High Court, therefore, was not justified in quashing the proceedings — It was not a case where threshold interference by exercising power under S. 482 of the Code was called for — Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940, S. 18(c) r/w S. 27(b)(ii) and S. 3(b) — Quashment of complaint (Paras 2 and 8 to 12). State of Kerala v. Orison J. Francis, (2009) 2 SCC 160.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[7565] — Ss. 482, 173 and 240 — Quashment of proceedings — Whether justified — Proper stage for exercise of power — Associate unit of a body corporate violating order under S. 3 of Essential Commodities Act, 1955 — At the stage of filing charge-sheet, final report to supplementary challan specifically mentioning officers of unit as liable under S. 10 of 1955 Act — Trial court summoning officers — High Court however quashing trial court's order holding unit was not covered by S. 10 of 1955 Act — Propriety — Held, the stand taken by accused officers before High Court was a defence to be taken at the stage of trial — Hence, High Court's order set aside (Para 14). State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi) v. D.A.M. Prabhu, (2009) 3 SCC 264.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-2-2009]

Dulichand Laxminarayan v. CIT, AIR 1956 SC 354; Sheoratan Agarwal v. State of M.P., (1984) 4 SCC 352: 1984 SCC (Cri) 620; State of Punjab v. Kasturi Lal, (2004) 12 SCC 195: 2004 SCC (Cri) Supp 168, applied

[7566] — S. 482 — Technical offence — Sample of Pan Masala and Mouth Freshner found to contain saccharin to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. which was in violation of R. 47, PFA Rules as then existing — Rule valid and operative at the relevant time — Hence initiation of criminal cases against accused cannot be held to be without jurisdiction — Prima facie case made out — Petition for quashing the complaint rightly dismissed by the High Court — However, in view of the revised standard the addition of saccharin in Pan Masala and Mouth Freshner to the extent of 2000 and 2450 cannot be said to be injurious to health — Hence appellants have committed only technical offence — In special facts of the case criminal cases against the appellants are quashed on payment of costs at Rs 7500 in each of the appeals — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, Ss. 7/16 — Technical breach — Constitution of India, Art. 142 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, 1955, R. 47 (as it stood prior to 1993 amendment)

In this case it was contended that even if addition of saccharin to the extent as stated to have been found by the analyst is accepted to have been correctly determined, such addition, as a matter of fact, was neither injurious to health nor it degenerated the articles sold so that they could be branded as adulterated food. The ban on the use of saccharin in pan masala and mouth freshner was imposed on a misconception and erroneous view of its injurious effect on human system. But later on, it has been accepted by the rule-making authority that use of saccharin to the extent of 8000 p.p.m. in pan masala will not be harmful for human consumption and Rule 47 of the Rules has been amended. As use of saccharin to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. was not injurious to health at any point of time, it must be held that even before amendment of Rule 47 such use of saccharin to the above extent did not constitute an offence for adulterating food with substances injurious to health.

Held :

At the relevant time, saccharin content in pan masala and mouth freshner to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. as found by the analyst was not permissible under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules. Rule 47 was valid and operative at the relevant time. Hence, there had been violation of the Food Adulteration Act and the Rules framed thereunder in selling pan masala and mouth freshner with saccharin content to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. Hence, the complaints made by the Health Department of Delhi Administration and initiation of criminal cases against the accused cannot be held to be without justification. It cannot also be contended that on the face of the complaint, no offence was prima facie committed. Hence, the impugned decision of the High Court in dismissing the applications under Section 482 CrPC cannot be held to be unjustified.

Even if the complaint is accepted to be correct, the only offence committed by the appellants amounts to technical violation of the mandate of Rule 47 for adding saccharin to the extent of 2000 and 2450 p.p.m. in the Chutki Pan Masala and Mouth Freshner. Such addition of saccharin cannot be held to be injurious to health because, considering later findings on research and analysis on the effect of saccharin on human system, addition of saccharin to the extent of 8000 p.p.m. in pan masala has been allowed by amending Rule 47. The articles sold are not alleged to be injurious to health and such allegations, even if made, cannot be accepted. There is no allegation that any other injurious substance was added to the articles sold making them potentially health hazards. It is also not the case that pan masala and mouth freshner were of inferior quality and substandard. In a case like this, the offence committed is on account of technical violation of Rule 47. It should be emphasised that strict adherence to Prevention of Food Adulteration Act and Rules framed thereunder should be insisted and enforced for safeguarding the interest of consumers of articles of food.

The trial of the accused persons directed to be quashed on payment of costs at Rs 7500 in each of the appeals as on conviction of the appellants in the criminal cases initiated against them, such fine would have met the ends of justice. Krishan Gopal Sharma v. Govt. of N.C.T. of Delhi, (1996) 4 SCC 513.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.N. Ray and B.L. Hansaria, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-5-1996]

Pyarali K. Tejani v. Mahadeo Ramchandra Dange, (1974) 1 SCC 167: 1974 SCC (Cri) 87: (1974) 2 SCR 154, followed

(11)(xxiv) Quashment in food/liquor/drugs/chemicals offences (contd.)

[7567] — S. 482 — Inherent power of High Court to quash criminal proceedings — Circumstances warranting exercise of power under S. 482 — Sweetened carbonated water (Pepsi) containing pesticide residue, carbofuran, to the extent of 0.001 mg/litre — Whether an adulterated food warranting prosecution — Failure of Central Government to define methods of analysis under S. 23(1-A)(hh), and to prescribe laboratories where food samples or adulterants to be analysed under S. 23(1-A)(ee) — Effect — Limit up to which pesticide could be added to sweetened carbonated water also not prescribed in Table to R. 65(2) of 1955 Rules when samples were collected in 2006 — Samples however declared adulterated by adopting standards prescribed by Directorate General of Health Services (DGHS) — Held, in absence of parameters which ought to have been defined by Central Government under Ss. 23(1-A)(hh) & (ee) and R. 65(2), samples could not be considered as adulterated, particularly when content of pesticide residue was within tolerable limits (0.001 mg/litre) prescribed subsequently vide Noti. dt. 17-6-2009 — Pre-defining of these parameters is necessary so that public authorities have clear guidance as to which articles of food are to be subjected to chemical analysis and by what standards they are to be tested — This would avoid pick-and-choose method by public authorities — Mere presence of pesticide does not in itself render food as adulterated unless quantity of pesticide exceeds tolerance limit which has to be prescribed by Central Government in Rules itself — Criminal proceedings initiated against appellant Company therefore quashed — Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, 1955, R. 65(2), Table — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954', Ss. 23(1-A)(ee), (hh) and 2(i-a)(h)

Prosecution was launched against appellant Company on the ground that cold drinks (sweetened carbonated water) sold by them contained pesticide residue, carbofuran, which was found to be 0.001 mg per litre, which exceeded the limit as prescribed by Directorate General of Health Services (DGHS). The appellants challenged findings of Public Analyst on the ground that samples were not analysed in prescribed laboratory, and that there were no prescribed methods of analysis. The appellants approached the High Court for quashing of criminal proceedings under Section 482 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973. The High Court (Single Judge) refused to interfere in criminal proceedings inter alia by holding that Sections 23(1-A)(ee) and (hh) were only enabling provisions under which the Central Government was empowered to define methods of analysis and to prescribe laboratories where samples could be tested but it was not necessary to do before a food sample could be declared as adulterated. The appellants approached the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court framed the following issues for consideration:

(1) In the absence of any prescribed and validated method of analysis under Section 23(1-A)(hh) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, could a prosecution have been launched against the appellants based on a report submitted by the public analyst using the method of the Directorate General of Health Services (DGHS)?

(2) Could a prosecution have been launched against the appellants in the absence of any validated method of analysis to ascertain the percentage of pesticide residue present in a carbonated beverage, which renders the report of the public analyst unreliable, particularly when it does not indicate that such percentage of the pesticide residue is injurious to health and, therefore, "adulterated" within the meaning of Section 2(i-a)(h) of the aforesaid Act?

(3) What is the effect of non-specification of the level of tolerance in respect of the presence of pesticide residue in sweetened carbonated water in the Table appended to Rule 65(2) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, 1955?

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The High Court misconstrued the provisions of Sections 23(1-A)(ee) and (hh) in holding that the same were basically enabling provisions and were not mandatory and the issue could, in any event, be solved by the Central Government by framing the Rules thereunder, by which specified tests to be held in designated laboratories could be spelt out. Consequently, the High Court also erred in holding that the non-formulation of rules under the aforesaid provisions of the 1954 Act could not be said to be fatal for the prosecution. The observation of the High Court that if the submissions made on behalf of the appellants herein were to be accepted, the mechanism of the Act and the Rules framed thereunder would come to a grinding halt, is not acceptable, since the same could lead to a pick and choose method to suit the prosecution. However, in any event, the percentage of carbofuran detected in the sample of Pepsi which was sent for examination to the forensic laboratory is within the tolerance limits prescribed for sweetened carbonated water with effect from 17-6-2009, hence the same would not attract the provisions of Sections 2(i-a)(h) or (m) of the 1954 Act or the consequences thereof. (Paras 44, 43, 39 and 40)

Both the questions regarding the failure of the Central Government to frame Rules to define the laboratories, where samples of food could be analysed by the public analyst, or to define the validated methods of analysis and the liability of the Directors, who are the appellants herein, are of great importance for the purpose of bringing home a charge against the accused for violation of the provisions of Rule 65 of the 1955 Rules and Section 2(i-a)(h) of the 1954 Act and for holding that the sweetened carbonated water manufactured by the appellants was adulterated in terms of the said Rules. Since the range indicated as to the limits of tolerance of the presence of pesticides in different articles of food, including sweetened carbonated water, which was included in the Table appended to Rule 65(2) with effect from 17-6-2009, provides very little or practically no margin for error, the selection of laboratories and the prescription of tolerance limits for different articles of food acquires great significance. (Para 47)

The High Court does not appear to have considered the implications of the failure of the Central Government to frame Rules for the aforesaid purpose. The mere presence of pesticide residue does not ipso facto render the article of food adulterated. Tolerance limits have been prescribed in the Table for this very purpose and the subsequent inclusion of sweetened carbonated water seems to indicate so and leans more in favour of the appellants. (Paras 48 and 40)

The High Court also appears to have overlooked the fact that the percentage of pesticides found by the public analyst in the sweetened carbonated water manufactured by the appellants was within the tolerance limits subsequently prescribed in respect of such product. The presence of insecticides within the limits prescribed in the Table to Rule 65 cannot be said to have caused adulteration of the article of food in question. (Paras 49 and 40). Pepsico India Holdings (P) Ltd. v. Food Inspector, (2011) 1 SCC 176.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Altamas Kabir, Cyriac Joseph and Deepak Verma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2010]

Hindustan Lever Ltd. v. Food Inspector, (2004) 13 SCC 83: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 288; Prem Ballab v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1977) 1 SCC 173: 1977 SCC (Cri) 78, relied on [7568] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR by High Court — Propriety — FIR filed by the Prohibition and Excise Officers alleging commission of offences punishable under Andhra Pradesh Excise Act, 1968 (17 of 1968) and Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1995 (17 of 1995) quashed by High Court holding that there was no material to show that the seized articles were intended to be used for manufacturing illicit distilled liquor — In all the cases the allegation was that the accused concerned was either transporting or storing black jaggery/molasses for the purpose of manufacturing illicit distilled liquor or was an abettor so far as the offence of manufacturing illicit liquor is concerned — Held, ultimately the acceptability of the materials to fasten culpability on the accused persons is a matter of trial — These are not the cases where it can be said that the FIR did not disclose commission of an offence — Therefore, the High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR in the cases concerned — Andhra Pradesh Excise Act, 1968 (17 of 1968) — Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1995 (17 of 1995) (Paras 2, 5 and 6). State of A.P. v. Bajjoori Kanthaiah, (2009) 1 SCC 114.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-10-2008]

[7569] — S. 482 — Delay in filing complaint under S. 27, DCA, 1940 — Effect — Loss of right under Ss. 25(3) and 25(4), DCA for retesting of drug — Sample collected on 14-6-2000, for which Drug Inspector receiving Drug Analyst's report on 6-7-2001 — Show-cause notice issued to appellant Company on 14-8-2001 to which replies given vide letters dated 28-8-2001 and 13-9-2001 wherein analyst's report disputed — Complaint filed against appellant under S. 27 on 2-7-2002 whereas shelf life of the sample drug was to expire next month i.e. August 2002 — Magistrate's sample therefore could not be got tested in time, as provided in S. 25(4) — Held, appellant's rights under Ss. 25(3) and 25(4) lost due to delay in filing complaint and therefore complaint quashed — Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940, Ss. 25(3), 25(4), 27 and 23(4)(i)

There is no explanation as to why the complaint itself had been filed about a month before expiry of shelf life of the drug and concededly the filing of the complaint had nothing to do with the appearance of the accused in response to the notices which were to be issued by the Court after complaint had been filed. Likewise, requests for retesting of drug had been made by the appellant in August/September 2001 and there is absolutely no reason as to why complaint could not have been filed earlier and fourth sample sent for retesting well within time. Facts of the case suggest that the appellants have been deprived of a valuable right under Sections 25(3) and 25(4) of the Act which must necessitate quashing of proceedings against them. (Para 19). Medicamen Biotech Ltd. v. Drug Inspector, (2008) 7 SCC 196: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 20: AIR 2008 SC 1939.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2008]

(11)(xxiv) Quashment in food/liquor/drugs/chemicals offences (contd.)

State of Haryana v. Brij Lal Mittal, (1998) 5 SCC 343: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1315, distinguished

State of Haryana v. Unique Farmaid (P) Ltd., (1999) 8 SCC 190: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1404; Amery Pharmaceuticals v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 4 SCC 382: 2001 SCC (Cri) 724, relied on

Medicamen Biotech Ltd. v. Rubina Bose, (2006) 4 Cal HN 727, reversed

[7570] — S. 482 — Quashment — When warranted — Valuable statutory right of defence of accused having been violated — Effect — Statutory right of accused under S. 24, Insecticides Act, 1968 to get seized sample of insecticide examined in Central Insecticides Laboratory denied due to inaction of and delay by Insecticides Inspector, whereby shelf life of substance had expired and hence same had become untestable — Criminal proceedings, held, should have been quashed for said negligence — Insecticides Act, 1968, Ss. 24, 22 and 3(k)

As per the report of the States Insecticides Laboratory, the sample did not conform to the prescribed standard and was therefore, misbranded. A Section 482 CrPC petition against the criminal prosecution was dismissed by the impugned order of the High Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Ordinarily in the absence of any material to the contrary, the report of the Insecticides Analyst will be accepted as final and conclusive of the material contained therewith. This is however, subject to the valuable right of the accused to have the sample examined by the Central Insecticides Laboratory provided he communicates his intention for the purpose within 28 days of the receipt of the copy of the report. (Para 11)

Continuing with the criminal prosecution against the appellant would be futile exercise and abuse of the process of Court. The appellants had intimated the Insecticides Inspector their intention to have the sample tested in the Central Insecticides Laboratory within the prescribed period of 28 days of the receipt of the copy of the State Analyst's Report. Due to the Insecticide Inspector's sheer inaction, it became impossible for appellants to have the sample examined by the Central Insecticides Laboratory and in the meantime, the shelf life of the sample of insecticide seized expired and for that reason no further step could be taken for its examination. Thus the High Court was not right in dismissing the Section 482 CrPC petition. The order passed by the High Court is, therefore, set aside. (Paras 12 and 13). Gupta Chemicals (P) Ltd. v. State of Rajasthan, (2010) 7 SCC 735.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra, Brijesh Kumar and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-4-2002]

[7571] — S. 482 — Offences under Insecticides Act, 1968 — Taking of samples of insecticide — Non-delivery of one portion of sample to the person from whom the insecticide was taken — Held, accused has been deprived of his statutory opportunity to have the sample tested by the CIL — Complaint is liable to be quashed — Complaint should be lodged with utmost dispatch so that the accused may opt to avail of the statutory defence — Procedure for taking sample indicated — Insecticides Act, 1968, Ss. 22, 24 and 21. State of Punjab v. National Organic Chemical Industries Ltd., (1996) 11 SCC 613.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-1996]

[7572] — S. 482 — Abuse of the process of court — Accused's right to get the sample tested from CIL — Loss of, on account of non-response of Insecticides Inspector to the accused's request for the said purpose — Vitiating effect on continuance of prosecution — In reply to notice of alleged violation of the provisions of the Act and Analyst's report the accused, within the statutory time-limit, notifying to the Inspector of the accused's intention to adduce evidence in controversion of the report, and requesting him to get the sample analysed from CIL at the accused's cost but the Inspector ignoring the same on the ground that such request could be made only to the court, and filing complaint — By the time the accused was summoned by the court to stand trial shelf life of the insecticides expiring and rendering the sending of the sample to CIL at that stage purposeless — In such circumstances, held, the accused was deprived of the right to get the sample tested by CIL and was thereby prejudiced in his defence — Hence, High Court rightly quashed the complaint as continuance thereof would amount to abuse of the process of the court — Contention that in absence of a statutory time-limit, the shelf life of sample was not relevant, rejected — Constitution of India, Art. 227 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, Ss. 11 and 13 — Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940, Ss. 23 and 25 — Insecticides Act, 1968, Ss. 24, 29, 22, 21, 30 and 3(k)

An Insecticides Inspector appointed under the Insecticides Act, 1968 visited the shop premises of a firm and drew samples of Monochrotophos-36% SL insecticide. He gave one sample to the proprietor of the firm, sent the second sample to the Senior Analyst, Quality Control Laboratory (Insecticides) for testing and the third sample was deposited with the Deputy Director, Agriculture. Another firm U was the manufacturer of the said insecticide. The Quality Control Laboratory in its analysis report found the sample to be misbranded. Accordingly, notices along with the analysis report of the sample were sent on 30-9-1994 to the said firm and to U alleging that provisions of Sections 3(k)(i), 17 and 18 of the Act had been contravened. U sent a reply denying the said allegations and notifying its intention to adduce evidence to support its contention and requested for getting a sample tested by CIL at U's cost. Without adverting to the said request of U, the Insecticide Inspector filed a criminal complaint against several parties including U. Thereafter, U and its Sale Officer approached the High Court under Section 482 of the CrPC and Article 227 of the Constitution. They contended that on the one hand their request for retesting of the sample was ignored by the Inspector, and on the other, by the time they were asked to appear in the Court to stand their trial, the shelf life of the insecticide, of which sample was taken, had already expired. They were, thus, deprived of the valuable right of their defence. The High Court upheld their contention and quashed the complaint. Before the Supreme Court the appellant State contended: (i) that the request for retesting of the sample ought to have been made to the court and not to the Insecticide Inspector; (ii) that no defence other than prescribed under Section 30 of the Act could be allowed to be raised in the prosecution filed under the Act, and (iii) that the shelf life of the sample was not relevant as the Act did not prescribe any expiry date. Rejecting these contentions and dismissing the appeals,

Held :

If the expiry date of the sample was not relevant, there was no reason why in the form prescribed for submission of the report by the Insecticide Analyst, the dates of manufacture of the article and the expiry date are mentioned. (Para 10)

Section 30 provides for defences which may or may not be allowed in prosecution under the Act. Section 30(1) only prescribes in effect that ignorance would be no defence but that does not mean that if there are contraventions of other mandatory provisions of the Act, the accused have no remedy. The procedure for testing the sample is prescribed and if it is contravened to the prejudice of the accused, he certainly has the right to seek dismissal of the complaint. Then in order to safeguard the right of the accused to have the sample tested from the Central Insecticides Laboratory, it is incumbent on the prosecution to file the complaint expeditiously so that the right of the accused is not lost. In the present case, by the time the respondents were asked to appear before the Court, the expiry date of the insecticide was already over and sending of the sample to the Central Insecticides Laboratory at that late stage would be of no consequence. Therefore, in view of Sections 24(3) and 24(4) of the Insecticides Act the report of the Insecticide Analyst was not conclusive. A valuable right had been conferred on the accused to have the sample tested from the Central Insecticides Laboratory and in the circumstances of the case the accused have been deprived of that right, thus, prejudicing them in their defence. In these circumstances, the High Court was right in concluding that it would be an abuse of the process of the court if the prosecution was continued against the accused persons. The High Court rightly quashed the criminal complaint. (Paras 10 to 13). State of Haryana v. Unique Farmaid (P) Ltd., (1999) 8 SCC 190: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1404.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Wadhwa and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-10-1999]

State of Punjab v. National Organic Chemical Industries Ltd., (1996) 11 SCC 613: 1997 SCC (Cri) 312, followed

[7573] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Sought on the grounds of (i) bar of limitation, and (ii) lack of authority of Drugs Inspector, Vijayawada, A.P. to lodge the complaint as he could not have assumed jurisdiction under the notification issued by Govt. of A.P. which was confined to Telangana area of A.P. only — Complaint filed within the period of limitation (i.e. one year), but cognizance taken by court beyond the limitation period — Held, complaint not barred by limitation — Further held, the notification was applicable to the entire State of A.P. and not restricted to Telangana area only — Thus, High Court was justified in dismissing the petition under S. 482 CrPC (Paras 10, 11, 8 and 13). Bharat Damodar Kale v. State of A.P., (2003) 8 SCC 559: 2004 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2003 SC 4560.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and B.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2003]

[7574] — Ss. 482 and 451 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — When not justified — Seizure of molasses along with tanker while in transit and confiscation of the same on the ground that it was intended to be used for manufacturing illicit distilled liquor — Where there was material to proceed against the accused and commission of offence was disclosed held, High Court erred in quashing the entire proceedings — Acceptability of material to fasten guilt on accused further held, is a matter of trial — Proceedings revived — Direction for release of tanker and seized articles, set aside — Application for the said release, if filed before the court concerned, directed to be considered in accordance with law — Andhra Pradesh Excise Act, 1968 (17 of 1968), S. 45 — Andhra Pradesh Prohibition Act, 1995 (17 of 1995), S. 12

In the present case, the statement of the driver of the vehicle and the panchnama show that there was some material to proceed against the accused-respondents. Obviously, the acceptability of the materials to fasten guilt on the accused is a matter of trial. This cannot be said to be a case where commission of offence was not disclosed. Therefore, the High Court was not justified in quashing the entire proceedings. Since the proceedings were held to be without authority of law, consequentially direction for release was given. No other reason has been given for directing release. That being so, the direction for release of the tanker and the seized articles cannot be sustained. The proceedings shall revive and continue in accordance with law. (Paras 4, 6, 7 and 8). Dy. Commr. of Prohibition and Excise v. Balaji Cattle Feeds, (2004) 7 SCC 274: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1925: AIR 2004 SC 4260.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 31-8-2004]

State of A.P. v. Goloconda Linga Swamy, (2004) 6 SCC 522, relied on

(xxv) Quashment re NDPS Act offences

[7575] — S. 482 — Arrest and search by an officer not empowered or authorised, in violation of Ss. 41 and 42, ADPS Act being per se illegal would vitiate the trial — In such case powers under S. 482 CrPC can be invoked to quash the proceedings — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 41 & 42

The appellant was searched by the Excise Inspector, Devikulam. On the allegation of recovering "ganja" from his possession the appellant was taken into custody. Under Section 20(b)(i) of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 a charge was laid against him by the Excise Inspector whereas the statutory notification under which he became competent so to do, was issued by the Government of Kerala in GOMs No. 168/92/TD, authorising officers of and above the rank of Excise Inspectors of the Excise Department to file complaints under Section 36-A(1)(d) of the NDPS Act, on the ground that the Excise Inspector was not authorised to file the charge-sheet against the appellant and, therefore, the complaint was not maintainable, the appellant was discharged under Section 227 CrPC. The said Excise Inspector, Devikulam, however, filed a fresh charge-sheet against the appellant. The case was committed to the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge. The appellant filed a Crl. MC before the High Court of Kerala praying that the entire proceedings in sessions case be quashed. By the order under challenge the High Court dismissed the petition. Allowing the appeal and setting aside the order of the High Court, allowing the Crl. MC and quashing the proceedings in the sessions case,

Held :

No officer than an empowered officer can resort to Section 41(2) or exercise powers under Section 42(1) of the NDPS Act or make a complaint under clause (d) of sub-section (1) of Section 36-A of the NDPS Act. It follows that any collection of materials, detention or arrest of a person or search of a building or conveyance or seizure effected by an officer not being an empowered officer or an authorised officer under Section 41(2) of the NDPS Act, lacks sanction of law and is inherently illegal and as such the same cannot form the basis of a proceeding in respect of offences under Chapter IV of the NDPS Act and use of such a material by the prosecution vitiates the trial. (Para 16)

The power under Section 482 CrPC has to be exercised by the High Court, inter alia, to prevent the abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. Where criminal proceedings are initiated based on illicit material collected on search and arrest which are per se illegal and vitiate not only a conviction and sentence based on such material but also the trial itself, the proceedings cannot be allowed to go on as it cannot but amount to abuse of the process of the court; in such a case not quashing the proceedings would perpetuate abuse of the process of the court resulting in great hardship and injustice to the accused. So, exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC to quash proceedings in a case like the one on hand, would indeed secure the ends of justice. (Para 18)

In the present case the search and recovery were by an officer who was not empowered so to do. If the proceedings in the instant case are not quashed, the illegality will be perpetuated resulting in grave hardship to the appellant by making him to undergo the ordeal of trial which is vitiated by the illegality and which cannot result in conviction and sentence. It is a fit case to exercise power under Section 482 CrPC to quash the impugned proceedings. (Para 20). Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42: AIR 2001 SC 137.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.S.M. Quadri and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-11-2000]

State of Punjab v. Baldev Singh, (1999) 6 SCC 172: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1080, distinguished

State of Punjab v. Balbir Singh, (1994) 3 SCC 299: 1994 SCC (Cri) 634, relied on [7576] — S. 482 — Power of High Court to quash criminal proceedings — When and how to be exercised — Complaint under NDPS Act — Held, said power has to be exercised sparingly and with caution and not to stifle legitimate prosecution — Such a power is required to be exercised in a case where the complaint does not disclose any offence and it is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive — At that stage, there cannot be meticulous analysis of the case — Complaint indicating huge recovery of heroin — Accused stated to be the real owner of the recovered substance — He not responding and failing to appear before the NCB officers despite written notices — Held, it could not be said that there was no material for taking cognizance — High Court in revision rightly declined the prayer to quash the complaint at this initial stage — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, Ss. 21(c), 29 and 42 (Paras 8 and 6). Mohd. Malek Mondal v. Pranjal Bardalai, (2005) 10 SCC 608: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1640: AIR 2005 SC 2406: 2005 Cri LJ 2613.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2005]

Mohd. Malek Mondal v. Pranjal Bardalai, (2003) 4 CHN 521, affirmed

[7577] — S. 482 — Complaint under NDPS Act — Quashing of — Prayer in respect of, made on the ground of non-compliance with S. 42 of the said Act — Rejection of, by High Court — Propriety of — Held, was proper — Question whether S. 42 complied with or not was a question of fact — Hence, it had to be considered on appreciation of evidence that might be adduced before the trial court — High Court rightly declined the prayer to quash the complaint at the initial stage when only cognizance had been taken — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 42 (Para 6). Mohd. Malek Mondal v. Pranjal Bardalai, (2005) 10 SCC 608: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1640: AIR 2005 SC 2406: 2005 Cri LJ 2613.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-2005]

Mohd. Malek Mondal v. Pranjal Bardalai, (2003) 4 CHN 521, affirmed

[7578] — Ss. 482 and 378 — Prayer for quashing conviction under S. 58, NDPS Act, 1985 — Sustainability — Appellant and Tahsildar convicted under S. 58, NDPS Act on basis of evidence led in trial held in respect of person whom they had allegedly sought to implicate under NDPS Act — Said person exonerated by trial court and based thereon, trial court convicting appellants under S. 58(1)(c), NDPS Act — Appellants failing to accept notice issued by trial court along with non-bailable warrants and instead filing petition under S. 482 — Appellants neither challenging findings recorded by trial court nor their conviction before High Court — High Court dismissing appellants' petition directing them to raise all issues and also to challenge findings recorded against them before trial court — Held, High Court committed no error in doing so — Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, S. 58 — CrPC, 1973 — S. 482 (Paras 9 and 10). Rajbir Singh v. State of Haryana, (2009) 17 SCC 419.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-5-2009]

(xxvi) Quashment re caste related offences

[7579] — S. 482 — Inherent powers of High Court — Exercise of, held on facts, was called for — Caste related offences — Quashing of complaint filed against appellant by Respondent 3 — Complaint alleging that appellant abused Respondent 3 with name of his caste, demolished the compound wall of his plot, and intimidated him — Held, according to S. 3(1)(x) of the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 the complainant ought to have alleged that the appellant-accused was not a member of the Scheduled Caste or a Scheduled Tribe and he (Respondent 3) was intentionally insulted or intimidated by the accused with intent to humiliate in a place within public view — When the basic ingredients of the offence are missing in the complaint, then permitting such a complaint to continue and to compel the appellant to face the rigmarole of the criminal trial would be totally unjustified leading to abuse of process of law — Further, Respondent 3 was not even in possession of the suit property on the date of incident which fact had not been disputed — In such circumstances allegation made in the complaint, that the appellant demolished the wall are totally baseless and without any foundation — Criminal complaint was prima facie false and frivolous and filed with an oblique motive — Hence, High Court ought to have exercised its jurisdiction under S. 482 CrPC and quashed the complaint — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 503, 506, 447 and 426 — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, S. 3(1)(x) (Paras 3 to 6, 11 and 27). Gorige Pentaiah v. State of A.P., (2008) 12 SCC 531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-8-2008]

(11)(xxvi) Quashment re caste related offences (contd.)

Connelly v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 1964 AC 1254: (1964) 2 WLR 1145: (1964) 2 All ER 401 (HL); Director of Public Prosecutions v. Humphrys, 1977 AC 1: (1976) 2 WLR 857: (1976) 2 All ER 497 (HL); R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., (2000) 2 SCC 636: 2000 SCC (Cri) 513; Roy V.D. v. State of Kerala, (2000) 8 SCC 590: 2001 SCC (Cri) 42; Zandu Pharmaceutical Works Ltd. v. Mohd. Sharaful Haque, (2005) 1 SCC 122: 2005 SCC (Cri) 283; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259, considered and relied on

[7580] — S. 482 — Quashing of charges/criminal proceedings under S. 306 IPC — Allegation that appellant wife who belonged to higher caste used to harass the deceased husband who belonged to lower caste and was working as a Civil Judge — Held, High Court rightly appreciated material on record before quashing the complaint — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 306 and 107 (Para 8)

The present Respondent 1 was married to MA (hereinafter referred to as "the deceased") in the year 2003. According to the prosecution, the deceased was working as a Civil Judge. Respondent 1's in-laws did not approve of the marriage as Respondent 1 belonged to an upper caste while the deceased belonged to the Scheduled Caste. A child was born to them. The deceased consumed some poisonous substance and lost his life in 2007.

It was the case of the prosecution that during enquiry it surfaced that Respondent 1-accused used to harass the deceased and subject him to mental cruelty as she belonged to higher caste and she did not like association of the deceased with his parents and relatives. This was stated to be the ground of suicide and the accused abetted the suicide. Charge-sheet was filed in the Court of Magistrate.

An application under Section 482 of the Code was filed questioning the order passed by the learned Magistrate. The High Court quashed the proceedings. It was held that the ingredients of Section 306 were not established.

Dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Kailashi Bai v. Aarti Arya, (2009) 13 SCC 548: (2009) 79 AIC 256 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-4-2009]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539, applied

[7581] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Relevant considerations while exercising power as to, reiterated — Caste based offences — Held, proceedings cannot be quashed where on perusal of FIR, treating the allegations made therein to be correct, a criminal offence is prima facie made out against accused — Quashing is permissible in relation to accused against whom no prima facie offence is disclosed in the FIR — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, S. 3(1)(x) — Constitution of India — Art. 226

At this stage where the trial has still to be held, all that the High Court can see in the petition under Section 482 CrPC or in a writ petition is whether on a perusal of the FIR, treating the allegations to be correct, a criminal offence is prima facie made out or not or whether there is any statutory bar. At this stage the correctness or otherwise of the allegations in the FIR has not to be seen by the High Court, and that will be seen at the trial. (Para 8)

Treating the allegations in the FIR to be correct, an offence under Section 3(1)(x) of the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 is prima facie made out against Appellants 2 and 3. Hence, the FIR against Appellants 2 and 3 cannot be quashed. It will be open to Appellants 2 and 3 to put up their defence at the trial, and the trial court may or may not accept the correctness of the allegations made against them in the FIR. (Paras 25 and 26)

But, so far as Appellant 1 is concerned, a perusal of the FIR shows that no prima facie offence is made out against Appellant 1. Hence, the proceedings against him are quashed. (Paras 33 and 34). Swaran Singh v. State, (2008) 8 SCC 435: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 527: (2008) 69 AIC 25 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 4369.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Altamas Kabir and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2008]

Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on [7582] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings initiated under S. 3(i)(v) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act — High Court proceeding on an erroneous assumption that the petitioner before it was in possession of the disputed plots and on that basis quashing the criminal proceedings — Setting aside the impugned order, held on facts, the High Court exceeded its jurisdiction while exercising power under S. 482 CrPC — Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, S. 3(i)(v). Ram Narain v. Murat, (2002) 9 SCC 705: AIR 2002 SC 2417.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and U.C. Banerjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-3-2001]

[7583] — Ss. 482, 154 and 156(2) — Quashing of FIR — Case law discussed — Caste of accused not mentioned in FIR for offence under S. 3(1)(xi) of SCs and STs (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 — Effect — Not mentioning caste of accused in FIR for offence under S. 3(1)(xi) of the 1989 Act, held, not a ground for quashing FIR — Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, S. 3(1)(xi)

The appellant filed an FIR under Section 154 CrPC alleging commission of offence punishable under Section 3(1)(xi) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989. A petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the FIR was filed by the respondent-accused. The basic stand was that in the FIR the caste of the accused was not mentioned and therefore the proceedings could not be continued and deserved to be quashed. The High Court by the impugned order placing reliance on earlier decisions of the High Court allowed the petition of the respondent.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

During investigation or at the time of framing of charge or at the time of trial it is open to the respondent-accused to show that he either belongs to SC or ST so that applicability of S. 3(1)(xi) of the Act is ruled out. It needs no reiteration that the FIR is not expected to be an encyclopdia. After ascertaining the facts during the course of investigation it is open to the IO to record that the accused either belongs to or does not belong to SC or ST. After final opinion is formed, it is open to the court to either accept the same or take cognizance. Even if the charge-sheet is filed at the time of consideration of the charge, it is open to the accused to bring to the notice of the court that the materials do not show that the accused does not belong to Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribe. Even if charge is framed at the time of trial, materials can be placed to show that the accused either belongs or does not belong to SC or ST. (Paras 14,10 and 12)

The scope for interference on the basis of an application under Section 482 CrPC is well known. (Paras 8, 9 and 13). Ashabai Machindra Adhagale v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 3 SCC 789.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, Dr. M.K. Sharma and H.L. Dattu, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-2-2009]

CBI v. Tapan Kumar Singh, (2003) 6 SCC 175: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1305; Masumsha Hasanasha Musalman v. State of Maharashtra, (2000) 3 SCC 557: 2000 SCC (Cri) 722; Dinesh v. State of Rajasthan, (2006) 3 SCC 771: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 1; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310, relied on

(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/ dowry, etc. disputes

[7584] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings, held, justified on facts — Criminal proceedings initiated by wife after divorce notice from husband — FIR lodged by respondent wife against appellant husband and his family members after issuance of legal notice by appellant intimating that he had divorced the respondent — Case registered under Ss. 406/498-A/34 IPC — Application for grant of anticipatory bail filed by appellant — Parties governed by Muslim Law — Settlement arrived at between the parties before and on the intervention of Addl. Sessions Judge averring that out of the total amount of Rs 2,75,000 payable by appellant to respondent, Rs 2,25,000 had been paid to her and the balance amount of Rs 50,000 would be paid at the time of her making statement and entering no objection for quashing of the FIR and that no dispute remained between the parties regarding payment of dower amount (mehar), dowry articles etc. — Pursuant to the settlement, application purportedly under S. 482 CrPC filed by appellants before High Court for quashing of the FIR — Respondent, however, instead of complying with the averment made in the agreement as also in her affidavit, filed objections to the application contending that she was not aware of the contents of the agreement and the affidavit which were got signed by her by misrepresentation of facts — In view of the stand taken by the respondent, High Court took the view that there was no ground to interfere as respondent wanted to continue with her complaint and was not intending to compromise the matter — Held, denial of execution of the deed of settlement was an afterthought and cannot be accepted in view of the fact that the settlement was arrived at the intervention of a judicial officer of the rank of Addl. Sessions Judge — Ex facie, the settlement appears to be genuine — In view of conduct of the respondent, continuance of the criminal proceedings would be an abuse of the process of court — Hence in exercise of jurisdiction under Art. 142, High Court's judgment set aside and the FIR quashed — Constitution of India — Arts. 136 & 142. Mohd. Shamim v. Nahid Begum, (2005) 3 SCC 302: 2005 SCC (Cri) 722: AIR 2005 SC 757: 2005 Cri LJ 889: (2005) 99 Cut LT 631.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-1-2005]

Ruchi Agarwal v. Amit Kumar Agrawal, (2005) 3 SCC 299: (2004) 8 Supreme 525, relied on

(11)(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes (contd.)

[7585] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings under — Legality — Bigamy — Alleged offence of — Decree for dissolution of marriage — Appeal against, filed before High Court by wife — Punjab & Haryana High Court vide order dt. 24-11-2000 staying the operation of said decree and restraining the husband from remarrying till further orders — Wife filing complaint before Judicial Magistrate alleging that during subsistence of a valid marriage, her husband contracted second marriage — Wife submitting that second marriage solemnised on 8-3-2001 when the order of stay dt. 24-11-2000 was in operation — J&K High Court, while quashing the proceedings initiated on the said complaint, acted on the basis that second marriage was solemnised on 8-3-2001 — No reference to the order of stay made in the impugned order — As per husband, second marriage was solemnised subsequent to the date of said decree but prior to the date of order of stay — High Court directed to rehear the matter afresh by taking into account the effect of the order of stay and adjudicating upon the question as to when the second marriage actually took place — Penal Code, 1860, S. 494 — Ranbir Penal Code, 1932 (1989 Smvt.), S. 494 — J&K Code of Criminal Procedure, 1989, S. 561-A (akin to S. 482 CrPC)

Disposing of the appeal,

Held :

It is not in dispute that the order dated 24-11-2000 clearly restrained the husband from remarriage and the operation of the decree of divorce was stayed. The High Court, while acting under Section 561-A, Jammu and Kashmir Code of Criminal Procedure, 1989, proceeded on the basis that the marriage between the husband and U (second wife) took place on 8-3-2001 and applying the ratio in Krishna Gopal case, (2002) 10 SCC 216 it held that no offence was made out. The impugned order does not refer to the order of stay and the effect thereof. There is a great deal of factual distinction between Krishna Gopal case and the case at hand. Again it has to be noted that there is a dispute, as presently raised by the respondent husband, that the date of marriage was much before the date on which the order of stay was passed and subsequent to the date on which the decree for dissolution of marriage was passed. (Para 6)

In view of the above controversy, the matter needs to be reheard by the High Court. While considering the matter afresh, the effect of the order of stay dated 24-11-2000 shall be taken note of. Much would depend on the date when the marriage took place. There is no dispute that the respondent husband has married U. The crucial question is when the marriage took place. All these aspects are to be adjudicated by the High Court while dealing with the matter afresh. (Para 7). Kunti Devi v. Som Raj, (2004) 11 SCC 278.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-9-2004]

Krishna Gopal Divedi v. Prabha Divedi, (2002) 10 SCC 216: 2004 SCC (Cri) 473: AIR 2002 SC 389, distinguished on facts

[7586] — S. 482 — Exercise of inherent power under, to quash proceedings initiated pursuant to complaint when not called for — Divorce, Second marriage, etc. — Complaint alleging offences under Ss. 494, 496, 498-A, 112, 120-B of Penal Code, 1860 — On facts, High Court was wrong in quashing the proceedings

The appellant had married the first respondent but later they separated and the first respondent moved a divorce petition. The appellant instituted a criminal complaint against the respondent. The Court of Metropolitan Magistrate took cognizance of the offences under Ss. 494, 496, 498-A, 112, 114, 120, 120-B and 34 IPC. It was alleged that the first respondent secretly married the second respondent in the presence of respondents 3 to 6 while the proceedings for decree of divorce were still pending. On the application of the first respondent under S. 482 CrPC the High Court proceeded to analyse the case of the complainant in the light of all the probabilities in order to determine whether a conviction would be sustainable and on such premises arrived at a conclusion that the proceedings are to be quashed against all the respondents.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There are specific allegations in the complaint disclosing the ingredients of the offence taken cognizance of. It is for the complainant to substantiate the allegations by evidence at a later stage. In the absence of circumstances to hold prima facie that the complaint is frivolous when the complaint does disclose the commission of an offence there is no justification for the High Court to interfere under S. 482 CrPC.

In proceedings instituted on complaint, exercise of the inherent power to quash the proceedings is called for only in cases where the complaint does not disclose any offence or is frivolous, vexatious or oppressive. If the allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute the offence of which cognizance is taken by the Magistrate it is open to the High Court to quash the same in exercise of the inherent powers under S. 482. It is not, however, necessary that there should be a meticulous analysis of the case, before the trial to find out whether the case would end in conviction or not. The complaint has to be read as a whole. If it appears on a consideration of the allegations, in the light of the statement on oath of the complainant that ingredients of the offence/offences are disclosed, and there is no material to show that the complaint is mala fide, frivolous or vexatious, in that event there would be no justification for interference by the High Court. Dhanalakshmi v. R. Prasanna Kumar, 1990 Supp SCC 686: AIR 1990 SC 494: 1990 Cri LJ 320: 1990 Mah LJ 32.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: E.S. Venkataramiah, C.J. and K.N. Singh and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-11-1989]

Prasanna Kumar v. Dhanalakshmi, (1988) 2 Crimes 896: 1989 Cri LJ 1829, reversed

[7587] — S. 482 — Bigamy — Quashment application — Where clear and specific allegation made in the complaint that accused 1 and 2, having married during subsistence of a valid marriage of accused 1 with the complainant, committed offence under S. 494 IPC and Magistrate having regard to the statement made on oath by the complainant as also evidence of witnesses produced by her and other material, reached his satisfaction regarding existence of a prima facie case against the accused, held, High Court not justified in quashing the complaint and the criminal proceedings on ground of abuse of process of court by relying on some additional material produced by the accused not admitted or accepted by the complainant

The appellant was married to the first respondent but later they started living separately. The appellant lodged a complaint before the Chief Judicial Magistrate making specific and clear allegations that during the subsistence of the earlier valid marriage with her respondents 1 and 2 entered into a second marriage and thereby committed an offence falling under S. 494 IPC. She affirmed the fact on oath. She also produced two witnesses before the magistrate who supported her case. On the basis of the statement on oath of the complainant read along with the evidence of the two witnesses thus recorded and the materials available before the magistrate to get himself satisfied that cognizance should be taken and process issued, the magistrate was satisfied that an offence had been disclosed and accordingly the summons had been issued. But the High Court took the view that the continuance of the proceedings would be an abuse of the process of the court, only on the basis of the additional materials produced by the respondents. The materials thus produced had not been admitted or accepted by the appellant.

Allowing the appeal

Held :

The truth or otherwise of the allegations in the complaint is a matter for proof. When the materials relied on by the respondent require to be proved, no inference can be drawn on the basis of those materials to conclude that the complaint is false. The High Court was not justified in assuming that the first information report had been lodged by the complainant/appellant solely because she had not filed any reply before the High Court denying the fact. It does not appear that the sufficient opportunity was given to the appellant to do so. The affidavits of one of the persons who is stated to have performed the ceremonies would also be of no assistance in drawing any inference either way. Thus the High Court had clearly erred in reaching the conclusion that the proceedings are liable to be quashed. In the light of the allegations made in the complaint and the materials produced in support of those allegations by the appellant before the magistrate, the issue of the process to respondents 1 and 2 who are alleged to have solemnised the second marriage during the subsistence of an earlier valid marriage of the appellant is proper and when process has been issued, the proceedings have to continue in accordance with law against respondents 1 and 2. However, the allegations against the other accused namely, their parents and family members were vague and it may said that they had been unnecessarily and vexatiously roped in. Chand Dhawan (Smt) v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636: AIR 1992 SC 1379: 1992 Cri LJ 1956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1992]

[7588] — S. 482 — Petition under, filed by husband for quashing criminal proceedings against him initiated by wife — Cognizance of offence taken by Magistrate under Ss. 498-A & 494 IPC — Held, High Court erred in taking the view that cognizance of offence under S. 498-A IPC barred under S. 468 and quashing the entire proceedings on that ground under S. 482 — Moreover bar under S. 468 not applicable to offence under S. 494 IPC. Vanka Radhamanohari v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 SCC (Cri) 571.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and N.P. Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-4-1993]

(11)(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes (contd.)

[7589] — Ss. 482 and 320 — Inherent powers under S. 482 — Exercise of, in relation to matrimonial disputes — Scope — Non-compoundable offences (offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC in this case) — Quashing of criminal proceedings or FIR or complaint by High Court in respect of — Held, permissible since S. 320 does not limit or affect the powers under S. 482 — Constitution of India — Art. 226

If for the purpose of securing the ends of justice, quashing of FIR becomes necessary, Section 320 would not be a bar to the exercise of power of quashing. It is, however, a different matter depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case whether to exercise or not such a power. Thus, the High Court in exercise of its inherent powers can quash criminal proceedings or FIR or complaint and Section 320 of the Code does not limit or affect the powers under Section 482 of the Code. (Paras 8 and 15)

It is, however, to be borne in mind that in the present case the appellants had not sought compounding of the offences. They had approached the Court seeking quashing of FIR. (Para 9)

It is well settled that the powers under Section 482 have no limits. Of course, where there is more power, it becomes necessary to exercise utmost care and caution while invoking such powers. Exercise of such power would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case but with the sole purpose to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. (Para 6)

In the present case, the wife filed an affidavit that the FIR was registered at her instance due to temperamental differences and implied imputations. There may be many reasons for not supporting the imputations. In such eventuality, there would almost be no chance of conviction. So it would not be proper to decline to exercise power of quashing on the ground that it would be permitting the parties to compound non-compoundable offences. It would, however, be a different matter if the High Court on facts declines the prayer for quashing for any valid reasons including lack of bona fides. Further, in Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692 it was held that while exercising inherent power of quashing under Section 482, it is for the High Court to take into consideration any special features which appear in a particular case to consider whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. The special features in such matrimonial matters are evident. It becomes the duty of the court to encourage genuine settlements of matrimonial disputes. (Paras 10, 11 and 12)

The object of introducing Chapter XX-A in IPC was to prevent torture to a woman by her husband or by relatives of her husband. Section 498-A was added with a view to punishing a husband and his relatives who harass or torture the wife to coerce her or her relatives to satisfy unlawful demands of dowry. A hypertechnical view would be counterproductive and would act against the interests of women and against the object for which this provision was added. There is every likelihood that non-exercise of inherent power to quash the proceedings to meet the ends of justice would prevent women from settling earlier. That is not the object of Chapter XX-A of IPC. (Para 14). B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, (2003) 4 SCC 675: 2003 SCC (Cri) 848: AIR 2003 SC 1386: (2003) 2 KLT 1062: 2003 Cri LJ 2028.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-2003]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10, considered and explained

Surendra Nath Mohanty v. State of Orissa, (1999) 5 SCC 238: 1999 SCC (Cri) 998, distinguished

Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; State of Karnataka v. L. Muniswamy, (1977) 2 SCC 699: 1977 SCC (Cri) 404; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; G.V. Rao v. L.H.V. Prasad, (2000) 3 SCC 693: 2000 SCC (Cri) 733, relied on

Followed in Nikhil Merchant v. CBI, (2008) 9 SCC 677

[7590] — S. 482 — Quashing of charge under S. 498-A IPC against parents-in-law of complainant-wife by High Court on the basis of concession made by the Government Advocate without going through the record, held, was improper — On facts, there was sufficient material on record to frame a charge under S. 498-A against them — Government Advocates must conduct the case in more responsible manner in such cases — High Court also should verify the record before accepting the concession — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A. Deepti v. Akhil Rai, (1995) 5 SCC 751: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1020.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and G.T. Nanavati, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-9-1995]

[7591] — S. 482 — Quashing of complaint — Considerations — Mala fides — Absurdity — Allegation of theft of bangles by appellant (brother of daughter-in-law of Respondent 1) during raid by police at Respondent 1's house — Respondent 1 arrested on complaint of his daughter-in-law —

Held, it is absurd to think that appellant, who was present with police party, would venture to pocket the bangles in their presence — Accompanying police officers have not been made accused in complaint — Complaint wholly lacks bona fides — Complaint has to be quashed if allegations are found absurd and without any basis — When complaint is seen in backdrop of prosecution of Respondent 1 for offences under Ss. 498-A, 406 IPC, absurdity becomes more prominent — Criminal complaint was in retaliation to criminal prosecution which was being faced by Respondent 1 — Complaint quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406 (Paras 2 to 6 and 9 to 13). Manoj Mahavir Prasad Khaitan v. Ram Gopal Poddar, (2010) 10 SCC 673.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-10-2010]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

[7592] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — FIR lodged by brother of divorced wife against husband and his family members alleging offences under Ss. 494 and 498-A IPC against accused persons — Ingredients of Ss. 494 and 498-A IPC not made out from allegations made in FIR — Held, FIR manifestly attended with mala fides and actuated with ulterior motives — Prosecution of appellant was not legitimate, rather was frivolous, vexatious, unwarranted and abuse of process — Hence FIR liable to be quashed (Paras 12 to 14). Pashaura Singh v. State of Punjab, (2010) 11 SCC 749: AIR 2010 SC 922: (2009) 4 APLJ 122: 2010 Cri LJ 875: (2010) 2 Guj LR 1817: (2010) 1 ECrN 708: (2009) 84 AIC 5.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and R.M. Lodha, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-11-2009]

[7593] — S. 482 — Applicability — Cruelty to married woman — Allegations of — Ingredients for presumption of offence under — Whether made out — Complaint filed by respondent against husband and his appellant parents — Summons and non-bailable warrants issued against appellants — High Court dismissing application for quashing summoning order — Appeal against — Held, allegations relating to place where marriage took place have nothing to do with offence under S. 498-A IPC — Allegations that A-2 (mother-in-law) kicked respondent and told her that her mother was a liar, may make out some other offence but not one punishable under S. 498-A — Allegations that A-2 poisoned ears of her son against respondent; she gave two used lady's suits of her daughter to complainant; giving perpetual sermons to complainant; threatening her son may be divorced for the second time, held, do not give rise to offences punishable under S. 498-A — No case made out under S. 498-A IPC — Hence, summoning order passed against appellants, except A-2 set aside as proceedings against her could continue under S. 406 IPC only — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A, 406 and 34 (Paras 32, 36, 37, 40 and 61). Bhaskar Lal Sharma v. Monica, (2009) 10 SCC 604: (2009) 161 DLT 739.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 27-7-2009]

[7594] — S. 482 — Applicability — Held, in order to be charged under S. 498-A, one has to be "relative" of husband by blood, marriage or adoption — Appellant being foster sister of complainant's husband and not belonging to his family or being his "relative" in any manner as referred to in S. 498-A, cannot be tried for offence under S. 498-A — Charge re S. 498-A IPC, quashed — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A (Paras 11 to 13). Vijeta Gajra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2010) 11 SCC 618: AIR 2010 SC 2712: 2010 Cri LJ 3841: (2010) 92 AIC 76 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.S. Sirpurkar and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-7-2010]

U. Suvetha v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 757: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 36, followed

T. Ashok Pai v. CIT, (2007) 7 SCC 162; Shivcharan Lal Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 15 SCC 369: (2010) 3 SCC (Cri) 729, referred to

R. Ramanatha Aiyar's Advance Law Lexicon, Vol. 4, 3rd Edn., referred to [7595] — S. 482 — Disputed question of fact — Whether complainant was the legally wedded wife of appellant — Non-interference, in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction — High Court by impugned judgment dismissing application of appellant for quashing complaint filed against him under S. 498-A r/w S. 34 IPC, on ground that it involved disputed question of fact — Appellant contending that complainant was not his legally wedded wife as he was already married, and therefore S. 498-A IPC had no application — Held, no interference with impugned judgment called for — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A r/w S. 34 (Paras 2, 3, 8 and 9). Koppisetti Subbharao v. State of A.P., (2009) 12 SCC 331: AIR 2009 SC 2684: (2009) 2 KLT 531: 2009 Cri LJ 3480: (2009) 2 APLJ 114 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-4-2009]

Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, (2004) 3 SCC 199: 2004 SCC (Cri) 699, followed

Mayne: Early History of Institution, p. 319; Banerjee: Marriage and Stridhan, p. 345; Mayne's Hindu Law and Usage, cited

(11)(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes (contd.)

[7596] — S. 482 — Exceptional circumstances justifying exercise of power under S. 482 — Abuse of process of court — Criminal proceedings launched to harass husband and in-laws due to matrimonial differences — Matrimonial dispute arising in Canada whereas FIR lodged in India — No prima facie case of cheating or criminal breach of trust made out — Superintendent of Police after conducting investigation concluding that husband and in-laws had not committed any offence, yet charge-sheet filed against appellants — Held, High Court ought to have exercised its discretion under S. 482 in favour of appellants — Proceedings in question, quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 415 and 420

Appellant 1 (husband) and Respondent 3 (wife) were married in India but settled in Canada. Sometime in early 2006, matrimonial differences arose between Appellant 1 and Respondent 3 and the parties started living separately. Appellant 1 moved a divorce petition against Respondent 3 sometime around 1-5-2006. Before that, Respondent 3's father came to India and lodged complaint against appellants sometime around 21-4-2006 under Sections 406 (criminal breach of trust) and 420 (cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property) IPC, inter alia alleging that Appellant 1 married Respondent 3 solely for the purpose of getting entry into Canada and settling there, and that appellants had taken away dowry articles belonging to Respondent 3. The Superintendent of Police, after investigation, concluded that no allegations was proved against appellants and therefore the case should be closed, yet a charge-sheet was filed against appellants.

The appellants moved High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing criminal proceedings but High Court refused to do so. The issue involved was whether any offence was prima facie made out against appellants, or the High Court ought to have exercised its discretionary jurisdiction under Section 482 in favour of appellants.

Allowing the appeal and quashing the proceedings,

Held :

It is not a case where the court has to undertake a difficult task of appreciating the evidence brought on record by the parties. The submission that marriage between Appellant 1 and Respondent 3 was solemnised only for the purpose of getting the family settled at Canada is far-fetched. For the purpose of constituting an offence for criminal breach of trust and/or cheating, the ingredients thereof as contained in Sections 405 and 415 respectively must be borne out from the records. (Paras 21 and 22)

The larger part of offence, if any, has been committed only in Canada. It is difficult to comprehend why Respondent 3's father had to come from Canada to Jalandhar (in India) to lodge an FIR. Respondent 3 and the first informant do not say that the inquiry report submitted by the Superintendent of Police on the representation made by Appellant 2 was incorrect. It has also not been stated that as to on what material, the charge-sheet had been submitted. There is no doubt in the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case that allegations contained in the FIR had been made with an ulterior motive to harass the appellants. Continuance of criminal proceeding against them would, therefore, amount to abuse of process of the court. (Para 32)

Upon taking a holistic view of the matter vis-à-vis statutory provisions, it has to be held that the appellants have made out an exceptional case to invoke the inherent jurisdiction of High Court under Section 482 of the Code. It was obligatory on the part of the High Court to exercise its discretionary jurisdiction to prevent abuse of process of the court. (Para 35). Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, (2009) 7 SCC 712: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 620: 2009 Cri LJ 3462.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; All Cargo Movers (India) (P) Ltd. v. Dhanesh Badarmal Jain, (2007) 14 SCC 776: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 947; V.Y. Jose v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 3 SCC 78: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 996; Hira Lal v. State of U.P., (2009) 11 SCC 89, relied on

Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia v. State of Punjab, Criminal Miscellaneous No. M-40020 of 2007 decided on 13-12-2007 (P&H), reversed

[7597] — S. 482 — Petition for quashing complaint under S. 498-A IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 — Rejected by High Court — Marriage between Appellant 1 and complainant taking place on 25-11-1998, and Appellant 1 leaving for USA six months later — Complaint filed on 6-2-2000 — Held, even a cursory perusal of the complaint shows that the case falls within Category (7) highlighted in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 viz. "where, a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge" — Hence, said complaint liable to be quashed — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 (Paras 9, 7, 2, 3 and 5). Sunder Babu v. State of T.N., (2009) 14 SCC 244.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, L.S. Panta and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-2-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, considered and applied

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310; Priya Vrat Singh v. Shyam Ji Sahai, (2008) 8 SCC 232: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 463, relied on [7598] — S. 482 — Inherent Powers of High Court — Quashment of proceedings — General grounds for quashment — Quashing of charge-sheet — Factors to be considered — Possibility of discharge under S. 239 CrPC — Nature of cases being warrant cases — Relevance — FIR by appellant wife alleging that her respondent husband married another lady in presence of other accused persons, from which a child was born and that appellant was subjected to cruelty for refusing to consent to her abortion and was driven out from her matrimonial home — Charge-sheet under Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A IPC filed — High Court quashed charge-sheet under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC because of non-fulfilment of ingredients constituting offences under these sections — Sustainability — Held, while considering application for quashing of charge-sheet, allegations made in FIR and materials collected during course of investigation are required to be considered — Truthfulness or otherwise of allegation is not fit to be gone into at this stage as it is always a matter of trial — High Court ought not to have interfered after submission of charge-sheet and even before Magistrate examining as to whether accused persons deserved to be discharged under S. 239 CrPC — When a report is submitted to Magistrate, he is required to be prima facie satisfied that facts disclosed therein constitute an offence — Magistrate is not bound by conclusion of investigating agency in police report i.e. in charge-sheet and it is open to him, after exercise of judicial discretion, to take view that facts disclosed in report do not constitute any offence for taking cognizance — Quashing of Ss. 406 and 494 IPC from charge-sheet, even before exercise of discretion by Magistrate under S. 190 CrPC, undesirable — Moreover, all offences are triable by Magistrate and quashing of charge-sheet under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC had not resulted in exonerating accused persons from facing trial itself — Matter would have been different had offences under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC been triable as a sessions case — Herein, High Court ought to have allowed aforementioned provisions of CrPC their full play — For all these reasons, High Court erred in holding that charge-sheet does not reveal ingredients constituting offences under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC — Hence, impugned judgment set aside — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A (Paras 13 to 20). K. Neelaveni v. State, (2010) 11 SCC 607: AIR 2010 SC 3191: 2010 Cri LJ 2819: (2010) 2 ECrN 541 (SC): (2010) 88 AIC 58 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2010]

[7599] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — No ingredients of offence allegedly made out on face of the record — Respondent 2 alleged that she was married to the appellant who worked in Saudi Arabia and who had come home on leave for four months and Rs 5 lakhs was given to him as dowry which he spent in buying properties for his family; that initially for about 2-3 months he sent her money for household expenses and was affectionate towards her, but later believing his family members who were spreading wrong information about her conduct stopped to do so — It was further alleged that when he came to India on leave he stayed with his younger brother and when Respondent 2 went there she was driven out, and hence, because of such treatment meted out to her she was suffering both mentally and physically — Held, for application of Expln. (a) of S. 498-A IPC there has to be such conduct on the part of the appellant which could be said to be amounting to cruelty of such a nature as is likely to cause Respondent 2 to commit suicide or to cause any injury to her life — Said ingredients not mentioned either in the FIR or in the charge-sheet and in absence thereof, no case made out — As far as Expln. (b) of S. 498-A is concerned in order to constitute cruelty under the said provision there has to be harassment of the woman with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security or a case is to be made out to the effect that there was a failure by her or any person related to her to meet such demand — When the allegation made in the FIR and the charge-sheet is examined in the present case in the light of the aforesaid provision, no prima facie case even under the aforesaid provision is made out to attract a case of cruelty — Marriage of Respondent 2 had taken place in 1997 when Rs 5 lakhs was alleged to have been given as dowry and in the FIR filed in 2002 there was no allegation that subsequent thereto any harassment was made by the appellant with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property — Thus, neither Expln. (a) nor Expln. (b) of S. 498-A IPC attracted in the present case — Hence, both the FIR as also the charge-sheet liable to be quashed — High Court failed to appreciate the facts in proper perspective, and erred in rejecting appellant's petition for quashing FIR/charge-sheet — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A Explns. (a) & (b) (Paras 27 to 33). Shakson Belthissor v. State of Kerala, (2009) 14 SCC 466: (2009) 80 AIC 192 (SC).

(11)(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-7-2009]

Alpic Finance Ltd. v. P. Sadasivan, (2001) 3 SCC 513, followed

Nagawwa v. Veeranna Shivalingappa Konjalgi, (1976) 3 SCC 736: 1976 SCC (Cri) 507; Drugs Inspector v. Dr. B.K. Krishnaiah, (1981) 2 SCC 454: 1981 SCC (Cri) 487; MCD v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Sheonandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, (1987) 1 SCC 288: 1987 SCC (Cri) 82; Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400; S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; R. Kalyani v. Janak C. Mehta, (2009) 1 SCC 516: (2009) 1 SCC (Cri) 567, considered and relied on

Chunduru Siva Ram Krishna v. Peddi Ravindra Babu, (2009) 11 SCC 203: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1297; V.V.S. Rama Sharma v. State of U.P., (2009) 7 SCC 234: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 356, relied on

[7600] — S. 482 and Ch. XV — Quashing of private complaint — Maliciously instituted proceedings to wreak vengeance on the accused [as per Category 7 in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335] — Applicability — Complaint case instituted by the father of the appellant-accused's earlier wife (frustrated with marriage, living separately and divorced) against appellant, his family members, subsequent wife and subsequent in-laws under Ss. 494, 120-B and 109 IPC r/w Ss. 3/4 of Dowry Act — Case instituted in 1994, allegations of dowry torture in 1992 and dowry demand by husband in 1993 — Appellant-accused's subsequent marriage on 2-3-1993 was after the time-limit for filing appeal against ex parte decree of divorce had expired — No specific allegation against other accused (except appellant-accused) though they were impleaded in the private complaint — In spite of service of notice none appeared on behalf of Respondent 1 (complainant) — Category 7 of Bhajan Lal case for quashing of complaint, on facts, held, applicable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 494, 120-B and 109 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 15

M, left her husband P and started living in her parental house. On 1-1-1993, an ex parte decreed for dissolution of marriage was passed against M on the ground of cruelty and harassment. After the time for filing appeal against the ex parte decree dated 1-1-1993 under Section 28(4) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 (the Marriage Act) expired on 31-1-1993, and no appeal was preferred, P married S on 2-3-1993. The respondent (M's father), thereafter, on 6-12-1994 filed a private complaint wherein all the appellants (P, his family members and in-laws) were arrayed as accused persons for offences punishable under Sections 494, 120-B and 109 IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (the Dowry Act). By the impugned order, the High Court rejected the Section 482 CrPC petition of the appellants on the ground that the trial court can be directed to conclude the trial expeditiously and at the time of framing charges, the appellants can raise such points as have been raised in the present dispute.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The present case appears to be one where Category 7 of the illustrations given in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 is clearly applicable. The parameters for exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC have been laid down by the Supreme Court in several cases. In the complaint filed, the allegation is that the dowry torture was made sometime in 1992. It has not been explained as to why for more than two years no action was taken. Apart from P (husband of M), his mother, mother's sister, S (subsequently married wife), brother-in-law and S's father were impleaded as parties. No role has been specifically ascribed to anybody except the husband and that too of a dowry demand in February 1993 when the complaint was filed on 6-12-1994 i.e. nearly after 22 months. It is to be noted that in spite of service of notice, none appeared on behalf of Respondent 1. The proceedings pending before the CJM, are, therefore, quashed. (Paras 8 to 13). Priya Vrat Singh v. Shyam Ji Sahai, (2008) 8 SCC 232: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 463: (2008) 5 All LJ 673: 2008 Cri LJ 4367.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-2008]

Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36, followed

Raghubir Saran (Dr.) v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1; Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 310; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on [7601] — Ss. 482 and 154 — Quashing of FIR — Scope of High Court's jurisdiction — Complaint filed by appellant alleging offences punishable under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC against respondents — Complaint registered as FIR — Before commencement of investigation, petition moved under S. 482 by respondent for quashing the FIR — High Court on the basis of certain statements made by appellant in a divorce proceeding between her and first respondent finding that the FIR prima facie not disclosing any cognizable offence against the respondents and proceeding to quash the FIR — Held, this was too premature a stage for High Court to give such a finding when even the investigation had not started and investigating agency had no occasion to find out whether there was material to file a charge-sheet or not — Though finding given by civil court is binding on criminal court, but such consideration to finding of civil court cannot be given by High Court entertaining criminal petition for quashing FIR wherein investigation has not even started — Finding of civil court that allegations made by appellant in the divorce case were not established, rendered subsequent to High Court's judgment quashing the FIR not relevant at this stage, though it may be taken note of by investigating agency or court before which charge-sheet is filed (Paras 5 to 9). Savita v. State of Rajasthan, (2005) 12 SCC 338.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: N. Santosh Hegde and S.B. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-2005]

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234, distinguished

V.M. Shah v. State of Maharashtra, (1995) 5 SCC 767: 1995 SCC (Cri) 1077, considered

[7602] — Ss. 482 and 154, 211 & 210 — Quashing of FIR for offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — Stage up to which possible — Where charge-sheet already filed and charges also framed, held, question of quashing FIR does not arise — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406 (Para 14). Manjula Sinha v. State of U.P., (2007) 12 SCC 503: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 271: (2007) 5 All LJ 245.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-2007]

[7603] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Stay when the better option — FIR lodged by respondent against appellants, husband and sister-in-law, alleging adultery — Appellants thereupon filing complaint cases — High Court quashing the proceedings initiated in the complaint cases and directing that the complainants would be at liberty to approach the court in case finding in the case arising out of FIR goes in their favour — Held, proper course to follow would be to stay the proceedings in the complaint cases, to be taken up after decision in the case arising out of FIR (Paras 2 and 3). Kamal Chandra Das v. Anjana Das, (2005) 11 SCC 588.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-4-2005]

[7604] — S. 482 — Quashing of trial in a complaint alleging harassment by husband and his parents for more dowry — Absence of reasons — Sustainability — Held, order indefensible since disposed of in casual manner without indicating any basis or reasons for exercising jurisdiction under S. 482 — Order set aside and matter remitted for consideration afresh — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 (Para 14). Samira Khanum v. Mohd. Asfar Towheed, (2009) 4 SCC 49.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2009]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, impliedly relied on [7605] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Whether allegations in FIR made out the offence of which cognizance could be taken — Allegations against appellant sister-in-law only relating to causing insult, making derogatory remarks and behaving rudely against informant and not pertaining to dowry demand or entrustment and misappropriation of property belonging to her — Allegations of abetment of alleged offences, also not made against this appellant — Held, alleged offences under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act on facts not made out from such allegations, hence Magistrate not justified in taking cognizance thereof — Proceedings liable to be quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A & 406 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 (Para 6). Ramesh v. State of T.N., (2005) 3 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 735: AIR 2005 SC 1989: 2005 Cri LJ 1732.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Venkatarama Reddi and A.K. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2005]

[7606] — Ss. 482, 190, 173(2) and 239 — Quashing of charge-sheet — Factors to be considered — Possibility of discharge under S. 239 — Nature of cases being warrant cases — Relevance — FIR by appellant wife alleging that her respondent husband married another lady in presence of other accused persons, from which a child was born and that appellant was subjected to cruelty for refusing to consent to her abortion and was driven out from her matrimonial home — Charge-sheet under Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A IPC filed — High Court quashed charge-sheet under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC because of non-fulfilment of ingredients constituting offences under these sections — Sustainability — Held, while considering application for quashing of charge-sheet, allegations made in FIR and materials collected during course of investigation are required to be considered — Truthfulness or otherwise of allegation is not fit to be gone into at this stage as it is always a matter of trial — High Court ought not to have interfered after submission of charge-sheet and even before Magistrate examining as to whether accused persons deserved to be discharged under S. 239 CrPC — When a report is submitted to Magistrate, he is required to be prima facie satisfied that facts disclosed therein constitute an offence — Magistrate is not bound by conclusion of investigating agency in police report i.e. in charge-sheet and it is open to him, after exercise of judicial discretion, to take view that facts disclosed in report do not constitute any offence for taking cognizance — Quashing of Ss. 406 and 494 IPC from charge-sheet, even before exercise of discretion by Magistrate under S. 190 CrPC, undesirable — Moreover, all offences are triable by Magistrate and quashing of charge-sheet under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC had not resulted in exonerating accused persons from facing trial itself — Matter would have been different had offences under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC been triable as a sessions case — Herein, High Court ought to have allowed aforementioned provisions of CrPC their full play — For all these reasons, High Court erred in holding that charge-sheet does not reveal ingredients constituting offences under Ss. 406 and 494 IPC — Hence, impugned judgment set aside — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 406, 494 and 498-A (Paras 13 to 20). K. Neelaveni v. State, (2010) 11 SCC 607: AIR 2010 SC 3191: 2010 Cri LJ 2819: (2010) 2 ECrN 541: (2010) 88 AIC 58.

(11)(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes (contd.)

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.K. Jain and C.K. Prasad, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-2010]

[7607] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings initiated under Ss. 498-A and 406 r/w S. 34 IPC — Propriety of — Where there were clear allegations of cruelty meted out to the appellant wife on demand of dowry, High Court's order quashing the proceedings by holding that prima facie no case for offence under S. 498-A was made out against the respondent, held, not sustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406 r/w S. 34 (Paras 4 and 5). Banhisikha Roy v. Somnath Roy, (2005) 12 SCC 500.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.M. Dharmadhikari and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-7-2005]

[7608] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Complaint lodged by Respondent 2 against her husband and husband's brother (Appellant 1), his father (Appellant 2) and mother — FIR registered for offence under S. 406 IPC — After investigation, charge-sheet filed, cognizance taken by Magistrate and process for appearance issued — Petitions filed under S. 482 by the appellants for quashing the FIR against them — On facts held, in absence of any allegation to connect Appellant 1 (living in USA) with offence under S. 406 IPC, proceedings against him liable to be quashed — But since allegation against Appellant 2 regarding non-return of certain articles to Respondent 2 had to be gone into at trial, proceedings against him need not be quashed

There were no allegations, much less of specific nature even to remotely connect the first appellant with the alleged offence under Section 406. It is not the case of the informant that any of her articles were entrusted to him at the time of marriage. There is no dispute that he went back to U.S.A. after a brief stay immediately after the marriage. The alleged act of beating the complainant, which took place beyond the territory of India, even if assumed to be correct, does not make out a case to proceed against the first appellant for an offence under Section 406 IPC. The High Court, in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC, ought to have quashed the criminal proceedings against the 1st appellant. (Paras 5 and 6)

However, the order of the High Court refusing to quash the criminal proceedings against Appellant 2 need not be disturbed. It was stated in the FIR that certain articles (mentioned therein) belonging to the first respondent are not being returned to her with a dishonest intention. No doubt some documents are being relied upon to establish that the respondent had herself taken her jewellery and other valuable items. But the truth or otherwise of the respective versions should be gone into at the trial. Assuming that there was an omission in giving certain details about the alleged entrustment of movable properties of the informant and the dishonest intentions of the appellant, that by itself, in the circumstances of the case, does not afford a valid ground to quash the proceedings against the second appellant also. (Para 7). Rishi Anand v. Govt. of NCT of Delhi, (2002) 4 SCC 72: 2002 SCC (Cri) 725: AIR 2002 SC 1531.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: D.P. Mohapatra and P. Venkatarama Reddi, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-3-2002]

S.W. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, (2002) 1 SCC 241: 2002 SCC (Cri) 129, relied on husband) who were neither residing with complainant in her matrimonial home nor visited her — Demand of luxury car, passing of sarcastic remarks (without stating actual wordings), and physical assault alleged against parents-in-law, husband and appellants — Appellant 1 (married sister-in-law of complainant) residing in her own matrimonial home with her husband for more than 7 years, while Appellant 2 was permanent resident of Goregaon, Maharashtra — Appellants never visiting place where alleged occurrence had taken place, and neither living with complainant and her husband at any time — No specific allegation made against appellants in complaint, and none of the witnesses attributing any role to them — Held, their implication was only meant to harass and humiliate husband's relatives — Permitting complainant to pursue complaint would be abuse of process of law — Hence, complaint against appellants quashed — Courts cautioned to scrutinise such vexatious and frivolous complaints with great care and circumspection — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A and Ss. 406, 341, 323 & 120-B and Ss. 3 & 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (Paras 4, 27, 28, 35 and 38). Preeti Gupta v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 7 SCC 667.

[7609] — S. 482 — Quashment — Matrimonial offences — Quashing of complaint under S. 498-A IPC, against appellants (unmarried brother and married sister of complainant's

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dalveer Bhandari and K.S. Radhakrishnan, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-8-2010]

[7610] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR for alleged offences punishable under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC — Factors to be considered — Perusal of FIR revealing absence of allegation of torture for dowry so as to constitute offence under S. 498-A IPC — But FIR containing allegations relating to offence under S. 406 IPC — If ultimately prosecution is unable to substantiate the plea relating to S. 406 IPC the result would follow — Hence, proceedings so far as relating to offence under S. 498-A IPC only liable to be quashed in exercise of power under S. 482 — But power under S. 482 cannot be exercised in respect of allegations relating to S. 406 IPC — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406 (Paras 9 and 10). Manjula Sinha v. State of U.P., (2007) 12 SCC 503: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 271: (2007) 5 All LJ 245.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-7-2007]

Minu Kumari v. State of Bihar, (2006) 4 SCC 359, relied on

[7611] — Ss. 482, 177 and 178 — Quashing of proceedings — Ground — Lack of jurisdiction of the Magistrate concerned to deal with the matter — Complaint filed under Ss. 498-A and 406 IPC and S. 4, Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 against husband and his relations by the wife at place C where she came to stay after leaving her husband's house at place N — All the offences alleged to have taken place at N — Said offences not continuing ones — No part of cause of action arose at place C — Hence, considering Ss. 177 and 178 CrPC, held, the Magistrate at C had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter — Proceedings quashed — Complainant given liberty to file complaint in appropriate court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406 — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, S. 4 — Constitution of India — Art. 136

Respondent 2 (wife of one of the appellants) filed a complaint in the Court of the Magistrate alleging commission of offences punishable under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC and Section 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. The Magistrate directed the police to investigate the case. After investigation, the police filed the charge-sheet. When the matter stood thus, the appellants filed an application under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court alleging that the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction even to entertain the complaint even if the allegations contained therein were accepted in toto as no part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the court concerned. The complaint itself disclosed that after 15-4-1997, the respondent left the place N (where she was residing with her appellant husband) and came to the city C. Since all the alleged acts as per the complainant took place at N, the courts at C did not have the jurisdiction to deal with the matter. On the other hand, Respondent 2 submitted that the offences were continuing in terms of Section 178(c) CrPC and, therefore, the court at C had jurisdiction to deal with the matter.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the present case, the inevitable conclusion is that no part of cause of action arose in the city C and, therefore, the Magistrate concerned had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter. (Para 19). Y. Abraham Ajith v. Inspector of Police, (2004) 8 SCC 100: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2134: AIR 2004 SC 4286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-8-2004]

[7612] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings by High Court — Allegation of mala fides against informant — Effect of — Allegations of cruelty, dowry demand by appellant wife — On facts, held, allegation of mala fides against informant are of no consequence and cannot by themselves be the basis for quashing the proceedings — Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, Ss. 3 and 4 — Penal Code, 1860, S. 498-A (Paras 10, 9 and 6)

(11)(xxvii) Quashment re family/marital/dowry, etc. disputes (contd.)

The appellant wife, married Respondent 3, R on 1-7-1998, alleging mental and physical torture for dowry demands made a complaint alleging commission of offences punishable under Section 498-A IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 (the Act). The police registered an FIR. In the suit for divorce filed by the husband, Family Court directed maintenance at the rate of Rs 2000 p.m. and the cost of litigation to be paid to the appellant. The appellant's father-in-law filed Miscellaneous Case No. 12 of 2001 questioning correctness of the maintenance order on the ground that the appellant's husband has no share in the ancestral property and maintenance cannot be paid out of it. Charge-sheet was filed on 12-8-2000. An application for discharge in terms of Section 239 CrPC was filed on 28-8-2001. The prayer was rejected on 7-9-2001 by SDJM. The Sessions Judge dismissed the revision application of the respondents. However, by the impugned order, the High Court quashed the proceedings initiated against Respondents 1 to 7, in purported exercise of power under Section 482 CrPC.

Allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court held as above. Renu Kumari v. Sanjay Kumar, (2008) 12 SCC 346.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat, C.K. Thakker and L.S. Panta, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-2008]

State of Karnataka v. M. Devendrappa, (2002) 3 SCC 89: 2002 SCC (Cri) 539; State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353; State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo, (2005) 13 SCC 540: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, distinguished

[7613] — S. 482 — Quashment of criminal proceedings on initiation of civil proceedings — Permissibility — Held, filing of divorce petition in civil court cannot be a ground to quash criminal proceedings under S. 482 as it is well settled that criminal and civil proceedings are separate and independent and pendency of a civil proceeding cannot bring to an end a criminal proceeding even if they arise out of same set of facts — Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, S. 13 — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 498-A and 406

The present appeal was preferred against the judgment and order of the High Court whereby the High Court in the exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC quashed FIR dated 31-12-2001 lodged at the instance of the appellant. The said FIR was registered by the appellant complainant against the respondent-accused for the alleged offences under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC.

In the facts of the case, the appellant had married Respondent 2 on 25-1-2000. Respondents 1, 3, 4 and 5 were the mother-in-law, brother-in-law, maternal father-in-law and the father-in-law of the appellant respectively. The appellant left her matrimonial home on 25-5-2001 with her father and brother. On 31-7-2001, the husband, Respondent 2, filed a petition before the Family Court praying for a decree of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty. On 31-12-2001, the appellant lodged an FIR against the respondents for the alleged offences under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC. The FIR was challenged by the respondents before the High Court under Section 482 CrPC praying for quashing of the same. While the petition under Section 482 CrPC was pending, a final investigation report was submitted on 13-2-2004 in the High Court.

The High Court by the impugned order quashed the FIR on the basis of the report of the investigating officer submitted before it and concluded that no offence under Sections 498-A and 406 IPC was made out by the appellant against the respondents. The High Court also observed that the FIR must be quashed to avoid undue harassment and mental agony to the respondents, more so when the divorce petition was still pending before the Family Court. Hence the present appeal.

Two questions arose in the present case:

(i) Whether the High Court while quashing the FIR in exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC was entitled to go beyond the complaint filed by the complainant; and

(ii) Whether the High Court was entitled to look into and consider the investigation report submitted by four officers of the rank of Dy. Superintendent of Police, for quashing the FIR, even before the same could be filed before the Magistrate concerned.

Partly allowing the appeal,

Held :

In the facts and circumstances of the case, the High Court was not justified in drawing an adverse inference against the appellant wife for lodging the FIR on 31-12-2001 on the ground that she had left the matrimonial home at least six months before that. This is because the High Court had failed to appreciate that the appellant and her family members were during this period making all possible efforts to enter into a settlement so that Respondent 2, the husband, would take her back to the matrimonial home. If any complaint was made during this period there was every possibility of not entering into any settlement with Respondent 2, the husband. (Para 15)

The complaint was filed only when all efforts to return to the matrimonial home had failed and Respondent 2, the husband, had filed a divorce petition under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. (Para 16)

Filing of a divorce petition in a civil court cannot be a ground to quash criminal proceedings under Section 482 CrPC as it is well settled that criminal and civil proceedings are separate and independent and the pendency of a civil proceeding cannot bring to an end a criminal proceeding even if they arise out of the same set of facts. (Para 16)

From a plain reading of the findings arrived at by the High Court while quashing the FIR, it is apparent that the High Court while exercising its inherent powers under Section 482 CrPC has gone beyond the allegations made in the FIR and has acted in excess of its jurisdiction and, therefore, the High Court was not justified in quashing the FIR by going beyond the allegations made in the FIR or by relying on extraneous considerations. (Paras 14 and 16). Pratibha v. Rameshwari Devi, (2007) 12 SCC 369: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 399: (2007) 59 AIC 159 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 329.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.K. Mathur and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-9-2007]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, followed

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kumar, (1985) 2 SCC 370: 1985 SCC (Cri) 180; Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, (1988) 1 SCC 692: 1988 SCC (Cri) 234; State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1988) 4 SCC 655: 1989 SCC (Cri) 27, relied on [7614] — Ss. 482 & 125 — Interference with concurrent findings of fact without adverting to evidence and without recording reasons not justified — Trial court under S. 125 refusing to grant maintenance to respondent wife on the finding that there was no justifiable reason for her separation from her appellant husband and that her father was demanding Rs 30,000 for sending her to her matrimonial house — Findings of fact recorded by trial Magistrate confirmed by revisional court — Petition filed under S. 482 — Treating it as second revision, High Court awarding maintenance @ Rs 500 p.m. with effect from a specified date and @ Rs 1000 p.m. thereafter without considering evidence and without recording any reasons — Held, judgment of High Court perverse and liable to be set aside — High Court, even in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction, not empowered to set aside concurrent findings of fact of courts below without adverting to evidence or recording reasons therefor (Paras 5 and 6). Ramkaran v. Gyarsi, (2005) 12 SCC 341.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-1-2005]

(xxviii) Quashment re sexual offences

[7615] — S. 482 — Quashing of FIR — Allegation against a large number of accused persons of sexual exploitation under threat, coercion, force and allurement — Quashment set aside — Investigation directed to be reimitiated — Case registered under Ss. 366-A, 372, 376, 344 IPC and Immoral Traffic Act — High Court not justified in embarking upon an enquiry by sifting evidence and coming to conclusion with regard to the age of the prosecutrix and also recording a finding that no offence of rape had been committed — Uncharitable comments made by the High Court against the prosecutrix deprecated — High Court exceeded its jurisdiction to record a finding that the prosecutrix was a consenting party — Order of the High Court set aside and the investigating agency directed to proceed with the investigation and conclude the same in accordance with law — Constitution of India — Arts. 226, 227 and 136. State of Kerala v. O.C. Kuttan, (1999) 2 SCC 651: 1999 SCC (Cri) 304: AIR 1999 SC 1044: 1999 Cri LJ 1623.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and M.B. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-2-1999]

State of W.B. v. Swapan Kumar Guha, (1982) 1 SCC 561: 1982 SCC (Cri) 283; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; State of U.P. v. O.P. Sharma, (1996) 7 SCC 705: 1996 SCC (Cri) 497; Rashmi Kumar v. Mahesh Kumar Bhada, (1997) 2 SCC 397: 1997 SCC (Cri) 415, relied on

[7616] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Sexual offences — Where on a complaint the Magistrate taking the view that there was sufficient ground for proceeding under Ss. 363, 366, 376, IPC issued process, High Court in a petition under S. 482 filed by the accused was not justified in quashing the complaint

At the stage when on the statement of complainant and the two witnesses, the Magistrate came to the opinion that there was sufficient ground for proceeding in the complaint and he issued process against the accused-respondents, to judge the sufficiency or otherwise of the ground for proceeding was beyond the power of the High Court so as to quash the proceedings under S. 482, CrPC. The value to be attached to the statement made by the appellant under S. 164, CrPC was to be examined at the enquiry at the pre-charge stage and possibly at the trial, if charge was to be framed. The steps in investigation could also be commented upon likewise at the said two stages. In the facts and circumstances of the case, the High Court was not justified in quashing the proceedings at the initial stage so as to strangulate it at its inception. The accused-respondents have all their rights preserved under law at the stage of the enquiry as also at the trial, if there is one, eventually. Therefore, the High Court's order is set aside and the Magistrate is directed to proceed further in the complaint in accordance with law. Maninder Kaur v. Rajinder Singh, 1992 Supp (2) SCC 25: 1992 SCC (Cri) 522.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.M. Punchhi and K. Ramaswamy, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-1991]

(xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences

[7617] — S. 482 — Investigation — Persons authorised to carry out — Investigation if on facts was not by authorised officer — Pursuant to an information, case registered under Ss. 13(1)(e) and 13(2), PC Act, 1988 and investigation started by Deputy Superintendent of Police, SPE, but under order of Superintendent of Police, SPE, completed by Inspector (SPE) — The said order containing reasons for entrustment of investigation to the Inspector — Moreover, the time-lag (about two-and-a-half years in this case) between registration of FIR and the said order itself showing application of mind by the Superintendent of Police to the authorisation — In such circumstances, held, High Court erred in concluding that the investigation was not conducted by an officer authorised under S. 17, PC Act — Hence, High Court's order under S. 482 CrPC quashing the investigation and consequent proceedings, set aside — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 17 second proviso, 13(1)(e) & 13(2)

After receiving a secret information on 4-7-1992, it was found on verification that the respondent while posted as an officer in the Excise Department had earned moveable and immovable properties allegedly disproportionate to his known sources of income during the check period commencing from 1-1-1982 to 4-8-1992. Resultantly a case under Sections 13(1)(e) and 13(2) of the Act was registered against him. The initial investigation was conducted by a Deputy Superintendent of Police, Special Police Establishment, Gwalior and thereafter by an Inspector, SPE, who was stated to have been duly authorised by the Superintendent of Police, SPE, vide Order No. SPE/2766/94 dated 12-12-1994 issued under Section 17 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. After investigation, sanction was obtained and charge-sheet was filed. Exercising its powers under Section 482 CrPC, the M.P. High Court quashed the investigations and consequent proceedings on the ground that for the offence punishable under Section 13(1)(e) of the Act the investigation had not been conducted by an authorised officer in terms of Section 17 of the Act. Similar was the question involved in the connected cases. Allowing the State's appeals,

Held:

Admittedly in the instant cases, even in the absence of the authority of the SP the investigating officer was in law authorised to investigate the offence falling under Section 13 of the Act with the exception of one under sub-section (1)(e) thereof. After registration of the FIR the Superintendent of Police is shown to be aware and conscious of the allegations made against the respondents, the FIR registered against them and pending investigations. The reasons for entrustment of investigation to the Inspector can be discerned from the order itself. The appellant State is, therefore, justified in submitting that the Superintendent of Police had applied his mind and passed the order authorising the investigation by an Inspector under the peculiar circumstances of the case. The High Court should not have construed liberally in favour of the accused the provisions of an Act which had been legislated to curb the illegal and corrupt practices of public officers. (Para 14)

The High Court was not right in holding that merely because the order of the Superintendent of Police was in typed pro forma that showed the non-application of mind or could be held to have been passed in a mechanical and casual manner. The order rather clearly indicates the name of the accused, the number of the FIR, the nature of the offence and power of the Superintendent of Police permitting him to authorise a junior officer to investigate. The time between the registration of the FIR and authorisation in terms of the second proviso to Section 17 shows further the application of mind and the circumstances which weighed with the Superintendent of Police to pass the order. (Para 15). State of M.P. v. Ram Singh, (2000) 5 SCC 88: 2000 SCC (Cri) 886: AIR 2000 SC 870: 2000 Cri LJ 1401.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-2-2000]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, distinguished

[7618] — S. 482 — Delay as ground for quashing FIR/proceedings — FIR lodged under Ss. 13(1)(e) & (2) PC Act — Followed by search 3/4 days later when incriminating evidence found — S. 482 CrPC petition filed merely a month after lodging of FIR — Interference by High Court on ground of delayed investigations, held on facts, was improper — It is not a case where charge-sheet had not been filed or that there was no explanation for the delay — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1)(e) & (2)

On the authorisation of Superintendent of Police, an FIR was registered against the respondent on 12-6-2000 in respect of offences punishable under Section 13(1)(e) read with Section 13(2) of the PC Act. Search was conducted in the house of the respondent on 15-6-2000/16-6-2000 and certain records and documents relating to the respondent, his son-in-law, his daughter and son were seized. By the impugned order the High Court accepted the Section 482 CrPC petition dated 11-7-2000 filed by the respondent and quashed the proceedings.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Interference by the High Court on the ground of delayed investigations cannot be maintained because petition under Section 482 CrPC was filed only after about a month of lodging of FIR and the order of the Superintendent of Police relating to investigation. It is not a case where charge-sheet had not been filed or that there was no explanation for the delay. FIR was lodged on 12-6-2000, house of the respondent was searched on 15-6-2000/16-6-2000 and few days thereafter Section 482 CrPC petition was filed on 11-7-2000. Application seeking permission to substitute additional grounds was filed in the year 2005. It is interesting to note that while the High Court quashed the proceedings because of alleged delayed investigation, it permitted the authorities to take decision to continue the proceedings. (Paras 12 and 9). Supdt. of Police, Karnataka Lokayukta v. B. Srinivas, (2008) 8 SCC 580: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 587: (2008) 69 AIC 49 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2008]

[7619] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — No case made out against accused — Criminal complaint alleging collusion and fraud between Special Officer of Board and allottees of developed land given in lieu of compensation — Disputes arising out of agreement of sale of 20 bighas of land to Society which was refused compensation for lands acquired by Board — No complaint with respect to lands of Respondents 1 and 2 — High Court quashing FIR against Respondents 1 and 2 and Special Officer of Board — Sustainability — Held, no complaint of commission of any offence regarding 13 bighas of land of first respondent, therefore no question of involvement in any offence of cheating or forgery — Quashing of FIR qua Respondents 1 and 2, upheld — But, finding of High Court that Collector/Special Officer was a Judge set aside, quashing of FIR with reference to the Special Officer unwarranted — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471

One C entered into an agreement of sale agreeing to sell 20 bighas of land in Khasra No. 9 in Sukhalpura Village to Shiva Cooperative Housing Society Ltd. Some lands in Sukhalpura Village, including 31 bighas in Khasra No. 9, were acquired for a housing scheme floated by the Rajasthan Housing Board. C filed a revenue suit for a declaration that Khasra No. 9 was not government land and that he was one of the owners of the said land and for consequential reliefs which suit was decreed and was affirmed by the Revenue Board. In pursuance of it, the following five persons were shown as owners of Khasra No. 9 in the revenue records, their share being shown in brackets: C (15/33), M (2/33), G (2/33), KD (1/33) and KL (13/33).

The State Government formulated a scheme enabling the landowners to opt for allotment of developed land equal to 15% of the acquired land in lieu of the compensation for the acquired land.

The landowners/power-of-attorney holders of Khasra No. 9 approached the Board for such allotment. One KC, the successor (legatee) of C was one of them and he claimed allotment of developed land in lieu of 15 bighas of acquired land. The Society also filed an application before the Board claiming compensation in respect of 20 bighas in Khasra No. 9 on the basis of the agreement of sale which claim was rejected.

The power-of-attorney holders of four owners of Khasra No. 9 (KC, M, G and KL) entered into separate agreements with the Housing Board, consenting for allotment of developed land (15% of the extent of the acquired land) in lieu of compensation. In the said agreements, the landowners asserted and declared that their respective shares in the land were not subject to any encumbrance and no dispute or litigation was pending in regard to the same. A settlement award was passed by the Special Officer of the Rajasthan Housing Board recording the agreement to allot 15% developed land in lieu of compensation in respect of 28 bighas 17 biswas in Khasra No. 9 and pattas were issued in regard to such allotted land. Thereafter, the members of the Society filed a complaint before the Board claiming that the Society ought to have received the said 15% developed land in lieu of compensation relating to the 20 bighas of the acquired land. Some members of the Society, through a forum also made a representation to the Chief Minister alleging that the khatedars/power-of-attorney holders of Khasra No. 9 in collusion with the Special Officer had practised fraud and grabbed the valuable land from the Rajasthan Housing Board. The Chief Minister's office suggested action on such representation in pursuance of which the appellant on behalf of the Board lodged an FIR alleging that the khatedars/power-of-attorney holders of Khasra No. 9 had made false representations to the Board and in collusion with the Special Officer of the Board and office-bearers of the Society had fraudulently obtained allotment pattas.

(11)(xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences (contd.)

The first respondent herein who claimed to be the owner of 13 bighas in Khasra No. 9 and Respondent 2 herein who was his power-of-attorney holder filed a petition under Section 482 of the Code for quashing the FIR. The High Court allowed the said petition and quashed the FIR insofar as Respondents 1 and 2 are concerned as also the Special Officer of the Board on the following two grounds:

(i) The Land Acquisition Officer, when passing an award under Section 11(2) of the Act functions as a "Judge" as defined in Section 19 of the Penal Code, 1860 ("IPC", for short) and therefore, is entitled to the protection of Section 77 IPC. Therefore making a settlement award by the Special Officer of the Board granting developed land in lieu of compensation to the landowners could not, under any circumstances, give rise to an offence under the Penal Code.

(ii) The allegations in the FIR did not constitute an offence of cheating or forgery punishable under Sections 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC.

Disposing of the appeal in terms below,

Held :

The question whether the Collector/Land Acquisition Officer while making an enquiry and award under the Act, acts in a judicial capacity or not, has been considered in a series of judgments. The well-settled principles are:

(a) Any inquiry as to the market value of property and determination of the amount of compensation by the Collector is administrative and not judicial in nature even though the Collector may have the power to summon and enforce the attendance of witnesses and production of documents. In making an award or making a reference or serving a notice, the Collector neither acts in a judicial nor quasi-judicial capacity but purely in an administrative capacity, exercising statutory powers as an agent and representative of the Government/acquiring authority.

(b) The award by a Collector is merely an offer of the amount mentioned as compensation on behalf of the Government/acquiring authority to the person(s) interested. It is neither an executable decree, nor binds the owners or persons interested in the acquired property.

(c) The Collector does not function as a Judicial Officer who is required to base his decision only on the material placed in the enquiry in the presence of parties, but functions as a valuer who ascertains the market value on material collected from all sources, personal inspection and his own knowledge and experience. (Para 22)

Only Judges (as defined in Section 19 IPC) acting judicially are entitled to the protection under Section 77 IPC. The Collector is neither a Judge as defined under Section 19 nor does he act judicially, when discharging any of the functions under the Act. Therefore he is not entitled to the protection under Section 77 IPC. The decision of the High Court that the FIR is to be quashed as the subject-matter of the complaint related to the action taken by the Collector/Special Officer in his capacity as a "Judge" is opposed to law and therefore, liable to be set aside. (Para 23)

Respondents 1 and 2 approached the High Court pointing out that neither the Society nor the members of the Society at any point of time had made any claim in regard to the 13 bighas in Khasra No. 9 which belonged to the first respondent, that the entire complaint related to 20 bighas agreed to be sold by C to the Society, and that as there was no complaint of irregularity or commission of any offence in regard to the 13 bighas of land belonging to the first respondent, there was no question of involvement of the first respondent or his power-of-attorney holder (second respondent) in any offence of cheating or forgery. Even the suit filed by the Society that was said to be pending at the relevant time was against C in regard to the 20 bighas in Khasra No. 9 and that no suit or proceeding was pending in regard to the remaining 13 bighas claimed by the first respondent. Only in January 2003, the second respondent and some others were impleaded in the said suit relating to 20 bighas in pursuance of an application filed on 14-11-2002, long after Respondents 1 and 2 had executed the agreement and consent award had been made. The High Court rightly held that the allegations in the FIR, even if accepted as true, did not relate to Respondents 1 and 2 but to others who had claimed to be the owners/the attorney holders in regard to power-of-remaining 20 bighas of land. The High Court was justified in holding that the allegations even if taken at their face value did not prima facie constitute an offence under Sections 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC by Respondents 1 and 2. (Paras 25 to 27)

The FIR specifically alleged collusion between KC and the Special Officer of the Board in regard to 20 bighas of land which was agreed to be sold to the Society by C. In fact the writ petition filed by KC for quashing the FIR was rejected by the High Court. As the finding of the High Court that the Collector/Special Officer was a Judge has been set aside, the quashing of the FIR with reference to the Special Officer cannot be upheld. The quashing of the FIR with reference to the then Special Officer is set aside. The quashing of FIR as against Respondents 1 and 2 will have no bearing on the FIR insofar as the other accused with reference to the 20 bighas of land are concerned. (Paras 28 and 29). Surendra Kumar Bhatia v. Kanhaiya Lal, (2009) 12 SCC 184: AIR 2009 SC 1961.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.V. Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-1-2009]

Ezra v. Secy. of State for India in Council, (1904-05) 32 IA 93; Raja Harish Chandra Raj Singh v. Land Acquisition Officer, AIR 1961 SC 1500: (1962) 1 SCR 676; N. Boman Behram v. State of Mysore, (1974) 2 SCC 316; Khorshed Shapoor Chenai v. CED, (1980) 2 SCC 1: 1980 SCC (Tax) 156; Sharda Devi v. State of Bihar, (2003) 3 SCC 128; Kiran Tandon v. Allahabad Development Authority, (2004) 10 SCC 745; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd., (2006) 6 SCC 736: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 188; Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal, (2007) 12 SCC 1: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 259, relied on

Gokul Krishna Banerji v. Secy. of State, AIR 1932 Pat 134, approved

[7620] — S. 482 — Exercise of power under — When justified — Bhajan Lal (7) — Complaint filed against government official as a counterblast to action taken by him in his official capacity — Facts also showed that complaint was an afterthought to rope in appellant on account of action taken by him against Respondent 2 — Held, this case was of the nature mentioned at Category (7) in Bhajan Lal case, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 — Continuance of proceeding against appellant would amount to abuse of process of law — Criminal proceedings therefore quashed (Paras 12 and 14). Anjani Kumar v. State of Bihar, (2008) 5 SCC 248: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 582: AIR 2008 SC 1992: (2008) 66 AIC 72 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 2558.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2008]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, applied

R. Balakrishna Pillai v. State of Kerala, (1996) 1 SCC 478: 1996 SCC (Cri) 128; State of H.P. v. M.P. Gupta, (2004) 2 SCC 349: 2004 SCC (Cri) 539; State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104; Rakesh Kumar Mishra v. State of Bihar, (2006) 1 SCC 557: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 432, relied on

[7621] — S. 482 — Inherent jurisdiction cannot be exercised if an enactment contains a specific bar — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19(3)(c)

Per Variava, J.

Section 19(3)(c) Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 provides:

(a) that no court should stay the proceedings under the Act on any ground, and

(b) that no court shall exercise the powers of revision in relation to any interlocutory order passed in any inquiry, trial, appeal or other proceedings.

The latter part of clause (c) of Section 19(3) as stated in (b) above is identical to Section 397(2) CrPC which deals with the revisional power of the court. If Section 19 was only to deal with revisional powers then the portion set out in (b) above would have been sufficient. The legislature has, therefore, by adding the words "no court shall stay the proceedings under this Act on any other ground" clearly indicated that no stay could be granted by use of any power on any ground. This therefore would apply even where a court is exercising inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC. (Para 14)

Further, Section 482 CrPC starts with the words "Nothing in this Code". Thus the inherent power can be exercised even if there was a contrary provision in the Criminal Procedure Code. Section 482 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not provide that inherent jurisdiction can be exercised notwithstanding any other provision contained in any other enactment. Thus if an enactment contains a specific bar then inherent jurisdiction cannot be exercised to get over that bar. (Para 15)

There is no substance in the submission that Section 19 would not apply to a High Court. Section 5(3) of the said Act shows that the Special Court under the said Act is a Court of Session. Therefore the power of revision and/or the inherent jurisdiction can only be exercised by the High Court. (Para 16)

Since in a large number of cases stays have been granted by the High Courts in matters under the Prevention of Corruption Act, even though there is a specific bar against the grant of any stay the Registrars of all the High Courts are directed to list all cases in which such stay is granted before the Court concerned so that appropriate action can be taken by that Court in the light of this decision. The Registrar of the Supreme Court is directed to send a copy of this order to the Registrars of all the High Courts. (Para 20)

(11)(xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences (contd.)

Per Thomas, J. (concurring)

Clause (b) of Section 19(3) contains the prohibition against stay of proceedings under this Act, but it is restricted to the sanction aspect alone. The mere fact that yet another prohibition was also tagged with the above does not mean that the legislative ban contained in clause (c) is restricted only to a situation when the High Court exercises powers of revision. It would be a misinterpretation of the enactment if a court reads into clause (c) of Section 19(3) a power to grant stay in exercise of the inherent powers of the High Court. (Paras 26 and 28)

The prohibition contained in clause (c) of Section 19(3) is couched in a language admitting of no exception whatsoever. When Parliament imposed an undiluted ban against granting stay of any proceedings involving an offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 on any ground whatsoever, no court shall circumvent the said ban through any means. The reason which prompted Parliament to divest all the courts in India of the power to stay the proceedings in the trial courts involving any such offence, is to foreclose even the possible chance of delaying such trials on account of any party to such proceedings raising any question before the High Court during the pendency of trial proceedings. (Para 22). Satya Narayan Sharma v. State of Rajasthan, (2001) 8 SCC 607: 2002 SCC (Cri) 39: AIR 2001 SC 2856.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-9-2001]

Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Janata Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary, (1992) 4 SCC 305: 1993 SCC (Cri) 36; Indra Sawhney v. Union of India, (2000) 1 SCC 168: 2000 SCC (L&S) 1, relied on

ITO v. M.K. Mohd. Kunhi, AIR 1969 SC 430: (1969) 2 SCR 65, distinguished

[7622] — S. 482 — Quashment sought on ground that CBI had no jurisdiction — Petition filed under S. 482 by respondent for quashing FIR registered by CBI, alleging commission of offences under IPC and Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, on ground that CBI had no jurisdiction to register the FIR under Delhi Special Police Establishment Act in absence of requisite consent of the State concerned for operation of the Act in the State — High Court accepting the stand of the respondent — Held, High Court was not justified in quashing the proceedings — Contention regarding lack of jurisdiction of CBI to register the FIR not made out — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), Ss. 3, 5 and 6

Respondent 1 a member of Indian Administrative Service, filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the FIR registered by the appellant alleging commission of offences punishable under Sections 120-B, 167, 168, 177-A IPC and Sections 13(2) and 13(1) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, on the ground that CBI had no jurisdiction to register the FIR under the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946. With reference to Sections 3, 5 and 6 of the Act, Respondent 1 took the stand that CBI had no jurisdiction to register the case. In substance the stands were:

"Consent necessary by the State concerned for operation of the Act had been withdrawn as is evident from the letter dated 26-6-1999 of the Secretary, Special Officer (Home Department), in response to the letter dated 21-11-1989 written by the Government of India, Department of Personnel and Training, New Delhi. (b) Consent of the State Government which was given in 1956 was extended in 1989 after the PC Act was promulgated but subsequently the State Government had not considered it appropriate to accord consent to extend some provisions of the Act to the whole of the State of Rajasthan. (c) Though the consent had been given by the State of Rajasthan in 1956 and extended in 1989, same did not relate to any particular officer to act in terms of the Act and, therefore, the FIR as lodged had no validity in the eye of the law."

The High Court accepted the stands of the respondent.

It was submitted on behalf of the appellant that the High Court committed patent errors of law. First, prayer of Respondent 1 could not have been adjudicated in a petition instituted under Section 482 of the Code. Secondly, the High Court lost sight of the fact that the notification issued under Section 5 of the Act had not been rescinded or revoked at any point of time. Further an interdepartmental communication has been treated as a notification to hold that the State Government had not extended the notification. The authority of the person who wrote that letter has not been established. In any event, the same cannot be treated to be one covered under Article 166 of the Constitution. Thirdly, there was no specific order required in respect of each officer as has been held in various decisions of this Court

Allowing the CBI's appeal,

Held :

As regards the stands taken by the respondent, there was no notification revoking the earlier notification. The letter on which great emphasis has been laid by Respondent 1 and highlighted by the High

Court, the authority to write the letter has not been indicated. It has also not been established that the person was authorised to take a decision. In any event, the same does not meet the requirements of Article 166 of the Constitution. The letter is not even conceptually a notification. The High Court was, therefore, not justified in holding that there was a notification rescinding the earlier notification. (Para 13)

The High Court was, therefore, not justified in quashing the proceedings instituted on the basis of the FIR lodged. (Para 14). CBI v. Ravi Shankar Srivastava, (2006) 7 SCC 188: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 233: AIR 2006 SC 2872.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and Altamas Kabir, JJ. [Date of decision: 10-8-2006]

[7623] — S. 482 — Nature of power under — Release of property confiscated under PCA — Whether can be released on deposit of appropriate amount — Appellants' father convicted by trial court and punished with imprisonment of one year and fine of Rs 20,000 — Certain items of property, including a house, directed to be sold by public auction and sale proceeds to be taken by the State — Father dying during pendency of appeal — However, High Court in due course sustaining the conviction though the sentence of imprisonment stood abated due to death — Legal heirs filing application under S. 482 CrPC for release of confiscated items on account of their sentimental attachment with them and offering to deposit Rs 6 lakhs plus, or such other sum as considered appropriate by court — Application dismissed by High Court on the ground that it had no power under S. 482 CrPC to pass such order — Held, the present value and not the past value of the seized property was relevant — High Court rightly rejected appellants' prayer — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 16, 13(2) and 13(1)(e) — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) proviso (Para 7). N. Naveen Kumar v. State of A.P., (2008) 9 SCC 800: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 880.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-10-2008]

[7624] — S. 482 — Deficiency alleged in authorisation by Superintendent of Police authorising Inspector to investigation — Quashment on basis of — Sustainability — Quashing of proceedings was improper since impugned order was elaborate with reasons clearly discernible — Besides, High Court failed to take into consideration provisions of S. 19(3), PC Act — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 17 r/w Ss. 13(1)(e) & (2) and 19(3)

On the authorisation of Superintendent of Police, an FIR was registered against the respondent on 12-6-2000 in respect of offences punishable under Section 13(1)(e) read with Section 13(2) of the PC Act. Search was conducted in the house of the respondent on 15-6-2000/16-6-2000 and certain records and documents relating to the respondent, his son-in-law, his daughter and son were seized. By the impugned order the High Court accepted the Section 482 CrPC petition dated 11-7-2000 filed by the respondent and quashed the proceedings.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The second reason indicated by the High Court to quash the proceedings also has no substance. The question relates to the alleged deficiency in authorisation made by the Superintendent of Police authorising the Inspector to investigate the case. If one looks at the order passed, which formed the subject-matter of challenge in Ram Singh case, (2000) 5 SCC 88 it is crystal clear that the order passed in the present case by the Superintendent of Police is more elaborate and the reasons are clearly discernible. Even otherwise, the effect of Section 19(3) of the PC Act relating to prejudice has been completely lost sight of by the High Court. (Paras 13 and 16). Supdt. of Police, Karnataka Lokayukta v. B. Srinivas, (2008) 8 SCC 580: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 587: (2008) 69 AIC 49 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-8-2008]

State of M.P. v. Ram Singh, (2000) 5 SCC 88: 2000 SCC (Cri) 886, relied on

[7625] — Ss. 482 and 193, 190, 156 & 157 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Bofors case — Grounds for quashing, restated — Said power, held, to be exercised in a rare case and with great circumspection — Offences under S. 120-B r/w S. 420 IPC and S. 5(2) r/w S. 5(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — High Court holding that filing of charge-sheet in court by CBI without placing the same before Central Vigilance Commission (CVC) was violative of the directions issued by the Supreme Court in Vineet Narain case, (1998) 1 SCC 226 and, therefore, an illegality had been committed during the course of investigation — Thus, High Court quashing the cognizance taken by the Special Judge and all consequential proceedings — Held, Magistrate or a court cannot interfere with the investigation or during the course of investigation — Quashing of proceedings by High Court in the instant case, held, was not based on any of the grounds settled by the decisions of Supreme Court in this regard — Further, directions in Vineet Narain, held, do not confer

(11)(xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences (contd.)

any right upon the accused to approach CVC or to challenge the action of CBI in submission of a charge-sheet in court on the ground of some purported irregularity in making a report to CVC regarding the progress of investigation — Hence, High Court's judgment and order, held, liable to be set aside — Constitution of India — Art. 136 — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5(2) r/w S. 5(1)(d) — Penal Code, 1860, S. 120-B r/w S. 420 — Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (Central Act 25 of 1946), S. 4

On 22-10-1999, CBI submitted a charge-sheet under Section 120-B IPC read with Section 420 IPC and Section 5(2) read with Section 5(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 against certain accused persons in the Court of Special Judge, Delhi in the famous Bofors case. It was mentioned in the said charge-sheet that investigations concerning the role of three Hinduja brothers and some others were also in progress. The learned Special Judge took cognizance of the offence on 4-11-1999. Thereafter on 9-10-2000 CBI submitted a supplementary charge-sheet against the three Hinduja brothers. On 15-4-2000, accused P (one of the Hinduja brothers) moved an application before the Special Judge for dismissing the charge-sheets submitted by CBI and revoking the cognizance taken and the process issued against the accused. The said application was moved on the ground that the cases were never reported to CVC and CVC has neither reviewed the cases nor had considered them fit for continuance of the prosecution and as such there was non-compliance with the directions issued by the Supreme Court in the case of Vineet Narain, (1998) 1 SCC 226. The Special Judge rejected the said application. But the High Court allowed the petition filed by P (Respondent 1 in the instant appeal) under Section 482 CrPC by quashing the cognizance taken by the learned Special Judge and all consequential proceedings. The High Court proceeded on the ground that there was violation of directions issued in the Vineet Narain case as CBI had filed the charge-sheet without placing the same before CVC, and therefore, it held that an illegality had been committed in the course of investigation which entitled the High Court to quash the cognizance taken by the Special Judge and all proceedings of the case. Before the Supreme Court, the appellants contended (i) that the High Court had completely misunderstood the judgment made in the case of Vineet Narain as the said judgment did not give any kind of a right to an accused to challenge the charge-sheet on account of any alleged non-observance or violation of the directions issued regarding the functioning and responsibility of CVC, and (ii) that the entire object to issue the said directions was to insulate CBI from any kind of external influence or pressure so that it may perform its duty as enjoined in the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act. On the other hand, Respondent 1 supported the impugned judgment of the High Court by placing extensive reliance upon the observations made in the Vineet Narain case. He also submitted that the evidence sought to be relied upon by CBI was wholly deficient and could under no case establish any charge against accused-Respondent 1. It was further contended that the appellant Union of India had committed contempt of the order passed by the Supreme Court in the Vineet Narain case as the directions issued therein have not been complied with, and therefore, the Union of India should not be heard in the instant case.

Allowing the appeals

Held :

Section 482 CrPC saves inherent powers of the High Court and such a power can be exercised to prevent abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The power can therefore be exercised to quash the criminal proceedings. The grounds on which the prosecution initiated the proceedings can also be quashed. (Para 9)

The grounds on which power under Section 482 CrPC can be exercised to quash the criminal proceedings are: (1) where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused, (2) where the uncontroverted allegations made in the FIR or complaint and the evidence collected in support of the same do not disclose the commission of any offence and make out a case against the accused, (3) where there is an express legal bar engrafted in any of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure or the Act concerned to the institution and continuance of the proceedings. But this power has to be exercised in a rare case and with great circumspection. (Para 9)

The proceedings in the present case have not been quashed on any one of the abovementioned grounds. The High Court has not examined the nature of the allegations made in the FIR or the evidence by which the prosecution seeks to establish the charge against the accused during the trial. There is not even a whisper in the impugned order of the High Court that the FIR does not disclose a cognizable offence. Similarly, there is no reference to any statutory bar like want of valid sanction etc.

to the taking of the cognizance of the offence. In fact the accused-respondent P is not a public servant and consequently no sanction is required from any authority for his prosecution. The only ground on which the High Court has proceeded is that CBI had filed the charge-sheet without placing the same before CVC and therefore an illegality had been committed in the course of investigation which entitled the High Court to quash the cognizance taken by the Special Judge and all proceedings of the case. (Para 9)

The legal position is absolutely clear and also settled by judicial authorities that the court would not interfere with the investigation or during the course of investigation which would mean from the time of the lodging of the first information report till the submission of the report by the officer in charge of the police station in court under Section 173(2) CrPC, this field being exclusively reserved for the investigating agency. (Para 20)

The Supreme Court in H.N. Rishbud case has held that if cognizance is in fact taken on a police report initiated by the breach of a mandatory provision relating to investigation, the result of the trial, which follows it, cannot be set aside unless the illegality in the investigation can be shown to have brought about a miscarriage of justice and that an illegality committed in the course of investigation does not affect the competence and the jurisdiction of the court for trial. Hence, even assuming for the sake of argument that CBI committed an error or irregularity in submitting the charge-sheet without the approval of CVC, the cognizance taken by the learned Special Judge on the basis of such a charge-sheet could not be set aside nor could further proceedings in pursuance thereof be quashed. (Para 21)

The directions issued in the case of Vineet Narain, (1998) 1 SCC 226 cannot be interpreted in abstract but have to be read and understood in the context of the facts and circumstances leading to the filing of the writ petition therein. The facts which were revealed and were brought to light during the course of hearing in that case showed that CBI had failed to perform its statutory duty and legal obligation of investigating offences and after completing the investigation taking it to its logical conclusion of launching prosecution against all those who were found to have committed offences. The direction issued was never meant to create or confer some kind of additional rights in favour of the accused as was held by the High Court. The accused has absolutely no right to approach CVC for taking any steps to stop CBI from either proceeding against him or from launching prosecution against him by filing a charge-sheet. Further, the directions issued do not confer any kind of a right upon the accused to assail the charge-sheet on the ground that CBI had not reported the progress of investigation to CVC or had not taken some kind of approval or concurrence from it before submission of the charge-sheet in court. The view taken by the High Court that as CBI submitted the charge-sheet without reporting and taking approval or consent from CVC, the same was illegal and no cognizance could be taken thereon is, therefore, wholly erroneous and does not at all follow from the judgment in Vineet Narain. (Paras 28, 27 and 22)

The averments made in counter-affidavits, which were filed by CBI and CVC before the High Court, clearly show that the investigation report was sent to CVC by CBI before filing of the first charge-sheet and CVC was also apprised of the developments in the case. The High Court committed serious error in not giving due consideration to the counter-affidavits filed by CBI and CVC and especially to the fact that on account of non-passing of the CVC Bill by the Rajya Sabha and lapsing of the Ordinance, the duties and functions of CVC are to be performed in accordance with the Government of India resolution dated 4-4-1999, which nowhere provided for taking any kind of a concurrence or approval from CVC before submission of the charge-sheet. (Para 32)

That apart, the judgment of the High Court is quite confusing and self-contradictory. There was absolutely no occasion for allowing the petition and quashing the cognizance and further proceedings in the case. (Paras 34 and 35). Union of India v. Prakash P. Hinduja, (2003) 6 SCC 195: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1314: AIR 2003 SC 2612: 2003 Cri LJ 3117.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Rajendra Babu and G.P. Mathur, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-7-2003]

R.P. Kapur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 SC 866: 1960 Cri LJ 1239; Madhu Limaye v. State of Maharashtra, (1977) 4 SCC 551: 1978 SCC (Cri) 10; Municipal Corpn. of Delhi v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115; Raj Kapoor v. State, (1980) 1 SCC 43: 1980 SCC (Cri) 72; State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426; Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18: 46 Cri LJ 413; State of W.B. v. S.N. Basak, AIR 1963 SC 447: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 341; Abhinandan Jha v. Dinesh Mishra, AIR 1968 SC 117: 1968 Cri LJ 97; State of Bihar v. J.A.C. Saldanha, (1980) 1 SCC 554: 1980 SCC (Cri) 272, relied on

Gokulchand Dwarkadas Morarka v. R., AIR 1948 PC 82: 49 Cri LJ 261; Prabhu Dayal Deorah v. District Magistrate, (1974) 1 SCC 103: 1974 SCC (Cri) 18, distinguished

H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi, AIR 1955 SC 196: (1955) 1 SCR 1150: 1955 Cri LJ 526, followed

Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226: 1998 SCC (Cri) 307, explained

(11)(xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences (contd.)

[7626] — Ss. 482 and 195 — Premature conclusion that bar under S. 195 CrPC attracted — Complaint was wrongly quashed — Limits to — Interference in collateral proceedings not warranted in exercise of High Court's extraordinary powers under Art. 226 — Appellant filing complaint which registered as FIR with local police alleging harassment, by certain politically influential persons, in the form of numerous and successive false criminal complaints and repeated arrests of appellant and family members — Serious allegations that Judicial Magistrate issuing warrants illegally — Public interest writ petition filed after matter receiving publicity in media — High Court directing Director General of Police to conduct inquiry — Accused persons then filing writ petition before High Court which quashing complaints of appellant and also pending public interest petition — Held, High Court exceeded its extraordinary jurisdiction under Art. 226 when it quashed public interest petition on the finding that the bar under S. 195 CrPC was attracted to the case — On facts, held, High Court's finding was premature and it erred in quashing complaints and inquiry initiated on basis of FIR — Constitution of India — Art. 226

This case seems to have begun as a result of a business dispute between the appellant-complainant, M, and the accused K, who was an influential person in political circles. K had invested money in stocks and shares, and had sustained losses for which he held the appellant responsible. According to M's complaint to the police, K pressurised M to compensate him for his losses. When M refused to oblige, K filed numerous false criminal complaints against M and members of his family in several different towns of Gujarat. K also obtained warrants of arrest against M and his relations, who were in fact arrested and lodged in various jails and police stations. Each time one of these persons was released on bail, he was charged in some other case and promptly re-arrested. These events and in particular the casual and repeated illegal issuance of arrest warrants by the Judicial Magistrate at Dakor Court in District Kheda were reported in local and Bombay newspapers. This publicity led to the filing of a public interest petition before the High Court of Gujarat. The High Court directed the Director General of Police to conduct an inquiry and to submit a report.

It was contended on behalf of M that the various reports submitted to the High Court established his innocence and that of his relations; that he and they were being harassed by false and frivolous criminal proceedings. While the public interest petition was pending, the High Court acting on the administrative side suspended the Judicial Magistrate at Dakor Court. At this stage K and other accused persons moved the High Court in writ jurisdiction and consequently the High Court quashed not only the complaints by M and his relations, but also the pending public interest petition. Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The High Court in exercise of its power under extraordinary jurisdiction cannot interfere with a collateral proceeding initiated by the High Court itself in an application filed in public interest. There cannot be any dispute that the facts revealed a serious scandal in the functioning of some subordinate court in the State of Gujarat and, therefore, the High Court took cognizance of the matter and directed inquiry to be conducted, and on the basis of the said inquiry, it was open for the High Court to issue necessary directions and at that stage the impugned order has emanated. The order in the impugned judgment setting aside the aforesaid public interest petition is erroneous. (Para 4)

So far as the quashing of the complaints and inquiry on the basis of FIR registered by the complainant are concerned, the High Court was not justified in interfering with the same and quashing the proceedings by an elaborate discussion on the merits of the matter and in coming to the conclusion that Section 195 CrPC will be a bar. It was rather premature for the High Court to come to the aforesaid conclusion and on account of the orders passed, the investigation into several serious allegations are being throttled. (Para 5). Manohar M. Galani v. Ashok N. Advani, (1999) 8 SCC 737: AIR 2000 SC 202.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-1999]

[7627] — S. 482 — Proceedings under Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — Quashing of — Sought on the ground that Special Judge trying the case was appointed by State Govt. notification to try the offences under the old Act of 1947 and thus a fresh notification under S. 3 of the 1988 Act was required to enable the appointment of Special Judges for proceeding with the new cases under the 1988 Act — Having regard to the deeming fiction contained in S. 26 of the 1988 Act, held, Special Judge appointed for the purposes of 1947 Act has jurisdiction and is competent to try the offences under the 1988 Act — No fresh notification under the 1988 Act appointing the Special Judges required — Thus, proceedings in question, held, could not be quashed on the said ground (Paras 6, 10 and 11). Vasant Arjunrao Bhandak v. State of Karnataka, (2003) 1 SCC 448: AIR 2003 SC 161: 2003 Cri LJ 394.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: U.C. Banerjee and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-11-2002]

Nar Bahadur Bhandari v. State of Sikkim, (1998) 5 SCC 39: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1252; Bishambhar Nath Kohli v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 573: (1966) 2 SCR 158, relied on

[7628] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Delay in filing charge-sheet — Offence of abetting public servant to commit offence under S. 13(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act alleged against two old ladies aged 80 and 81 years — On facts, criminal prosecution against them quashed — Constitution of India — Art. 136

The only offence alleged against the two appellant senescent ladies is that they abetted the public servant to commit the offence under Section 13(2) of the PC Act. Firstly, the materials are too insufficient to prove that those two old ladies intentionally abetted the public servant in acquiring assets which are disproportionate to his known sources of income. As such they should not be compelled to embark upon a trial which, in all probabilities, cannot end in conviction against them, even assuming that the octogenarian ladies would be able to survive till the end of the trial. Secondly, the trial is not likely to end within one or two years. Even if the Special Court would strictly adhere to the directions issued by the Supreme Court in Raj Deo Sharma case, it is reasonably foreseen that the prosecution would be able to complete the evidence only within the farthest time permitted in Raj Deo Sharma in view of the volume of documents and of the evidence to be adduced by the prosecution. It would be unfair and unreasonable to compel the two ladies, who by the advancement of old age would possibly have already crossed into the geriatric stage, to stand the long trial having no reasonable prospect of ultimate conviction against them. Therefore, they are delinked from the array of accused and the criminal prosecution against them is quashed. (Para 22). Seeta Hemchandra Shashittal v. State of Maharashtra, (2001) 4 SCC 525: 2001 SCC (Cri) 787: AIR 2001 SC 1246: 2001 Cri LJ 1242.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-2-2001]

Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R. S. Nayak, (1992) 1 SCC 225: 1992 SCC (Cri) 93; Hussainara Khatoon (I) v. Home Secy., State of Bihar, (1980) 1 SCC 81: 1980 SCC (Cri) 23; State of A.P. v. P.V. Pavithran, (1990) 2 SCC 340: 1991 SCC (Cri) 7, relied on

[7629] — Ss. 482 and 173(8) — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Initially case not registered against appellant but subsequently having regard to fresh materials coming to light pursuant to a preliminary inquiry, case registered under S. 13(1)(d) of Prevention of Corruption Act and under S. 120-B IPC against persons including appellant — Registration of case, held on facts, not actuated by mala fides or extraneous considerations — Fresh facts having come to notice, investigating agency was justified in registering the case — High Court was justified in declining to interfere with the statutory functions of the investigating officer and to quash the criminal proceedings — Constitution of India — Art. 226

The appellant was the Chief Minister of the State of Kerala for the period 1991-95. Kerala State Civil Supplies Corporation entered into a contract with M/s Power & Energy Pvt. Limited, Singapore for the purchase of import of 15,000 MT of Palmolein. The Comptroller & Auditor General of India (CAG) submitted his report dated 11-2-1994 for the year ending on 31-3-1993. One V who was the opposition MLA in the Kerala Assembly raised the allegation of corruption with regard to import of Palmolein in the Assembly. One K, Chief Editor of a newspaper filed a petition in the High Court under Art. 226 for the issuance of appropriate direction directing the respondent State to conduct investigation and register appropriate crime against the persons guilty in the matter of import of Palmolein. The writ petition was dismissed. V then presented a first information report before the Superintendent of Police, Vigilance (Hqrs.) praying for registering a case for offences under Sections 13(1)(c) and (d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and Sections 406, 409, 420, 201, 34 and 120-B IPC against the persons named therein which included the appellant as one of the accused persons. The Superintendent of Police informed that the Vigilance Department was not to initiate inquiry suo motu even when a complaint is made in person or in a signed petition. V thereupon filed a writ petition in the High Court praying for issuance of direction to the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Vigilance (Hqrs.) to register a crime case pursuant to the FIR lodged by him and to investigate the same in accordance with law. A Single Judge of the High Court referred to various documents attached with the FIR and found that as the complaint under Section 154 CrPC had not been filed before the officer in charge of the police station, the fifth respondent was not obliged to register a case. The writ petition was therefore, dismissed. The writ appeal filed against the order of the Single Judge was also dismissed by a Division

(11)(xxix) Quashment/Interference re corruption offences (contd.)

Bench. The appellant laid down his office as Chief Minister in March 1995 whereafter elections to the State Assembly were held, in which the party and the Front of the appellant lost and the Left Democratic Front Government came into power on 20-5-1996. On 18-6-1996 the Commissioner-Secretary requested the Director of Vigilance, Investigation to submit inquiry report to the Government at the earliest after conducting a preliminary inquiry into the allegations raised in the Legislative Assembly pertaining to the Palmolein deal in which corruption worth crores of rupees had been alleged. The Superintendent of Police, Vigilance conducted a preliminary inquiry up to March 1997 whereafter a criminal case was registered under Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and under Section 120-B IPC against 7 persons including the appellant. The appellant filed a criminal miscellaneous case under Section 482 CrPC in the High Court praying therein that all proceedings pursuant to the aforesaid criminal case be quashed. The High Court dismissed the petition on the ground that as fresh matter had come into the notice of the investigating agency, there was no bar for it to register a case and conduct investigation. The present appeal has been filed against the aforesaid order of the High Court. Referring to letter dated 18-6-1996 filed as Annexure R-2 with the counter-affidavit in the Supreme Court, terming it to be actuated by extraneous considerations and assailing the government order dated 12-5-1992 (Annexure R-1) as illegal, the appellant prayed for quashing of the FIR and the subsequent proceedings initiated against him. It is submitted that the source of power for registering the FIR referable to the aforesaid government order being illegal and violative of the mandate of judgment of the Supreme Court in Vineet Narain v. Union of India, (1998) 1 SCC 226 the appellant cannot be subjected to the harassment of a criminal trial. The impugned FIR is stated to be amounting to overriding the judgments of the High Court and the Supreme Court passed in earlier litigation praying for registration of the FIR against the appellant. The registration of the FIR has been termed to be amounting to contempt of court having been filed without any new material. Political rivalry is alleged to be the prime consideration for registration of the case against the appellant. Dismissing the appeal by the accused,

Held :

After going through the pleadings of the parties and keeping in view the rival submissions, it is clear that the registration of the FIR against the appellant and others cannot be held to be the result of mala fides or actuated by extraneous considerations. The menace of corruption cannot be permitted to be hidden under the carpet of legal technicalities. In such matters probes conducted are required to be determined on facts and in accordance with law. The allegations of mala fides were, admittedly, not the basis for challenging the registration of the FIR in the High Court. If during the conduct of a preliminary inquiry the commission of an offence comes to light on the basis of new materials, the respondent officials were obliged to register a case and present it in a competent court of jurisdiction for holding of trial and adjudication. The government order (Annexure R-1) is not shown to have been used against the appellant in any way. The aforesaid order in fact protects the interests of the officials saving them from unnecessary harassment. Mere apprehension of the order being used against some persons is no ground to hold it illegal or unconstitutional particularly when its legality or constitutionality has not been challenged. Prima facie it does not hamper or interfere with the statutory functions of an investigating officer who has, otherwise, statutory rights to hold and complete the investigation in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The aforesaid government order has not been shown to be in any way illegal or unconstitutional so far as the rights of the appellant are concerned. (Para 8). K. Karunakaran v. State of Kerala, (2000) 3 SCC 761: 2001 SCC (Cri) 183: AIR 2000 SC 3381: 2000 Cri LJ 2278.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-2000]

K. Karunakaran v. State of Kerala, 1997 Cri LJ 3618 (Ker), affirmed

[7630] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Material collected by investigating agency not gone through by High Court — Offences under Ss. 420, 201 r/w S. 120-B IPC as well as under Ss. 13(1) and 13(2), Prevention of Corruption Act — Proceedings quashed by High Court on the ground that accused persons have been exonerated of the charges in departmental proceedings conducted for the same cause of action — Held, before quashing the proceedings, High Court ought to have considered the aforesaid material so as to find out if the charges could be framed against the accused on the basis of it — Order passed by High Court set aside — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420, 201 r/w S. 120-B — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, Ss. 13(1) and 13(2). State of Bihar v. Purushottam Singh, (2002) 10 SCC 333.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and S.N. Variava, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-11-2000]

[7631] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings under — When justified — Held, to be in very rare cases — Complaint (lodged against forest officers) involving mala fides — Inherent improbabilities in complainant's case — Held, continuance of proceedings in such case would amount to abuse of the process of law — High Court erred in rejecting the petition under S. 482 — Judgment of the High Court set aside — Proceedings quashed

The respondent filed a complaint against the appellants (six officers of the Orissa State Forest Department) alleging that they had falsely implicated him for offences under the Orissa Forest Act, 1972 and the Wild Life (Protection) Act, 1972. He further alleged that being not content with the said illegal acts, they seriously assaulted him thereby committing offences punishable under Sections 341, 323, 325, 506 and 386 read with Section 34 IPC. Before the Sub-Divisional Judicial Magistrate (SDJM), the appellants took the stand that the complaint was lodged as a counterblast and retaliatory measure because a large quantity of ivory was seized from the complainant and he could not produce any material to justify the possession thereof. According to them, the acts of search, seizure and arrest were done in pursuance of their official duty and they could not be proceeded against without necessary sanction as contemplated under Section 197 CrPC. The SDJM took the view that there was no necessity for sanction under Section 197. Thereafter the appellants preferred a petition under Section 482 CrPC before the High Court. The High Court, after taking the view that Section 197 CrPC had no application to the facts of the case, rejected the said petition.

Before the Supreme Court the appellants contended that in relation to the offences committed by the respondent, he was produced before the Magistrate. While hearing the bail application of the respondent when the SDJM specifically asked the respondent as to whether there was any ill-treatment, he did not make any grievance of any ill-treatment and on the contrary admitted that there was no ill-treatment. The respondent got himself examined by a private doctor after three days of the alleged incident and the complaint was lodged after 13 days. The appellants submitted that the complaint instituted by the respondent was nothing but an abuse of the process of the court and the High Court was not justified in holding that Section 197 CrPC was not applicable.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

When the background facts of the case are considered, the question regarding applicability of Section 197 CrPC takes a temporary back seat. The respondent was produced before the Magistrate on 28-2-1991. He was specifically asked as to whether there was any ill-treatment. Learned SDJM specifically records that no complaint of any ill-treatment was made. This itself strikes at the credibility of the complaint. Additionally, the doctor who has examined him stated that for the first time on 2-3-1991 he treated the complainant. Though there are several other aspects highlighted in the version indicated in the complaint and the materials on record are there, it is not necessary to go into them because of the inherent improbabilities of the complainant's case and the patent mala fides involved. (Para 20)

It is no doubt true that at the threshold interference by exercise of jurisdiction under Section 482 CrPC has to be in very rare cases, and this case appears to be of that nature. The continuance of the proceeding by way of prosecution in this case would amount to abuse of the process of law. (Paras 20 and 21). State of Orissa v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (2004) 8 SCC 40: 2004 SCC (Cri) 2104: AIR 2004 SC 2179: 2004 Cri LJ 2011.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-2004]

State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335: 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, relied on

Kumar Raghavendra Singh v. Ganesh Chandra Jew, (1996) 81 Cut LT 94 (Orissa), reversed

[7632] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceeding initiated under Prevention of Corruption Act in absence of sanction accorded by competent authority — Sanction not accorded by competent authority — Effect — There being no sanction of competent authority (Managing Director of the Company in instant case), proceeding initiated under the Act, held, was liable to be quashed — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, S. 19(1)(c). Manoranjan Prasad Choudhary v. State of Bihar, (2002) 10 SCC 688.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.B. Pattanaik and Y.K. Sabharwal, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-3-2000]

[7633] — Ss. 482 and 197 — Quashing of criminal proceedings at initial stage — Grounds for — Impugning the sanction required for prosecution — Where sanction order not ex facie illegal or invalid, held, proceedings cannot be quashed — Non-consideration of relevant documents supporting the accused while granting sanction cannot be a ground for quashing the proceedings — Such aspects can be examined at the stage of trial for invalidating the sanction — Circumstance that during pendency of the proceedings the accused was promoted by the State or that he retired thereafter is not relevant — Fact that the complainant is not traceable at the stage of the investigation and filing of challan is also not a relevant circumstance for quashing the prosecution — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 6

In the instant case the sanction order shows that the sanctioning authority was satisfied after complete and conscious scrutiny of the records produced in respect of the allegation against the accused. Now the question whether all the relevant evidence which would have tilted the balance in favour of the accused if it was considered by the sanctioning authority before granting sanction and which was actually left out of consideration could be examined only at the stage of trial when the sanctioning authority comes forward as a prosecution witness to support the sanction order if challenged during the trial. As that stage was not reached the prosecution could not have been quashed at the very inception on the supposition that all relevant documents were not considered by the sanctioning authority while granting the impugned sanction.

The further circumstance that during the pendency of the proceedings before the High Court the respondent was promoted by the State or that he retired thereafter cannot have any impact on the question whether on the evidence available at the stage of investigation and filing of charge-sheet, the prosecution had made out a case for prosecuting the respondent or not.

This is a trap case; the investigating agency has already recorded the statement of the complainant, the sanctioning authority has also considered, amongst others, the statement of the complainant. Consequently it could not be urged that the complainant was not available at the stage of investigation and the subsequent stage of filing the challan against the accused. If at the stage of trial, the complainant is not available to support the case what will be its effect on the fate of the trial is a question which will have to be decided by the trial court on its own merits. Whether the complainant will ultimately support the prosecution case at the stage of trial or not is not a relevant circumstance for deciding whether the proceedings could be quashed under Section 482 CrPC by not permitting the trial to proceed when there is sufficient material collected during investigation including the version of the complainant to implicate the accused and to call upon him to face the trial. State of M.P. v. Krishna Chandra Saksena (Dr.), (1996) 11 SCC 439: 1997 SCC (Cri) 35.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. A.S. Anand and S.B. Majmudar, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1996]

(xxx) Quashment re other offences

[7634] — S. 482 — Abetment of suicide — Requirements of — Weight to be given to suicide note — Quashment denied — Deceased a field officer in the employment of appellant (A-1), who owned a finance firm — A-1 joining as a partner in K group — Deceased selling 15 plots on behalf of K group and handing over collected amount to A-1 — A-1 not paying the said amount to K group and consequently the other partners not registering the plots in favour of the persons who paid the money to the deceased — On demand by deceased to register the plots in favour of the purchasers, A-1 abusing deceased in filthy language and neither registering plots nor returning the amount — Deceased committing suicide — Suicide note clearly stating that he was taking the extreme step because he was unable to bear the pressure from purchasers and mental harassment — Submission by appellant that there was no element of abetment and hence, offence under S. 306 not made out — Held, in view of the suicide note offence under S. 306 clearly proved — High Court rightly rejected the prayer of exercise of power under S. 482 CrPC to quash the proceedings — Penal Code, 1860, S. 306 (Paras 3, 8 and 9). Didigam Bikshapathi v. State of A.P., (2008) 2 SCC 403: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 434: AIR 2008 SC 527: 2008 Cri LJ 724: (2008) 106 Cut LT 313.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-11-2007]

Netai Dutta v. State of W.B., (2005) 2 SCC 659: 2005 SCC (Cri) 543, distinguished [7635] — S. 482 — Abetment of suicide — Proceedings against alleged abetment of suicide initiated without any factual foundation therefor — Fitness for interference by High Court with, under S. 482 CrPC — Following the reasons given in Netai Dutta v. State of W.B., (2005) 2 SCC 659, such proceedings quashed — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 306 and 107 (Para 3). Pawan Kumar Bhalotia v. State of W.B., (2005) 2 SCC 661: 2005 SCC (Cri) 545: AIR 2005 SC 1531: 2005 Cri LJ 1810.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2005]

Netai Dutta v. State of W.B., (2005) 2 SCC 659, followed

[7636] — Ss. 482, 225 to 247 — Stay of trial — Murder case — Stay when warranted — Held, stay of trial of such cases is an exception and is not to be granted as a matter of course — Even when granted, the main matter deserves to be disposed of within a reasonable period of time — In the present case, stay continuing for more than two-and-a-half years — High Court directed to dispose of the matter within one month from the date of receipt of the copy of the instant order — Penal Code, 1860, S. 302 (Para 10). Ajay Kumar Sharma v. State of U.P., (2005) 7 SCC 507: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1702.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal, B.N. Srikrishna and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-8-2005]

[7637] — S. 482 — Prosecution under S. 306 IPC quashed. Sanju v. State of M.P., (2002) 5 SCC 371: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1141: AIR 2002 SC 1998: 2002 Cri LJ 2796.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.B. Shah and H.K. Sema, JJ. [Date of decision: 1-5-2002]

[7638] — S. 482 — Interference not justified on facts — Scope and ambit of S. 307 IPC, restated — Held, nature of injuries not determinative — Respondent 2 filing petition under S. 482 CrPC before High Court, questioning framing of charges against him — Ground for challenge, inter alia, was that injuries inflicted on the victim were simple in nature and no injury was found on the vital parts of the body and, therefore, Ss. 307/149 had no application — High Court while accepting this submission, holding that framing of charge under S. 302 or S. 307 r/w S. 149 was an abuse of process of court — Sustainability — Reiterated, an accused charged under S. 307 IPC cannot be acquitted merely because injuries inflicted on the victim were in nature of simple hurt — Determinative question is intention or knowledge, as the case may be, and not the nature of injury — Therefore, held, impugned order of High Court, herein, is clearly unsustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 307/149 (Paras 4 to 6). Ratan Singh v. State of M.P., (2009) 12 SCC 585: (2009) 78 AIC 101 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and A.K. Ganguly, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-4-2009]

State of M.P. v. Saleem, (2005) 5 SCC 554: 2005 SCC (Cri) 1329; State of M.P. v. Imrat, (2008) 11 SCC 523: (2009) 2 SCC (Cri) 558 , relied on

[7639] — S. 482 — Interlocutory order — Ineffectual and/or needless interference by High Court must be avoided — Terrorist attack on Parliament — Terrorists shot dead — Telephone numbers recovered from them — Communication intercepted thereby, during course of investigation — Prosecution using intercepted communication as evidence — Accused-respondents H, S and N filing Criminal Misc. Appln., appeal under S. 34 POTA r/w S. 482 CrPC and petition under S. 482 CrPC r/w Arts. 226 and 227 respectively to challenge the interlocutory order passed by Special Court which dismissed the applications made by respondents for eschewing/exclusion of evidence relating to intercepted communication — Single Judge of High Court setting aside the interlocutory order of Special Judge — But by that time the evidence had already been recorded and no abuse of process of court could then be prevented — Even ends of justice did not warrant interference at that stage — Matter should have been relegated for statutory appeal after final hearing — So, on facts, there was no miscarriage of justice or palpable illegality which justified interference by the High Court

On facts, the order dated 11-7-2002 passed by the Special Judge was clearly an interlocutory order. The order of the Special Judge is based on an interpretation of the various provisions of POTA. The Special Judge undoubtedly had authority and jurisdiction to interpret the various provisions of POTA and other laws. The Special Judge had jurisdiction to decide whether the evidence collected by interception could be used for proving a charge under POTA. The Special Judge was acting within the limits of his authority in passing the impugned order. Neither the power under Article 227 nor the power under Section 482 enabled the High Court to correct an error in interpretation even if the High Court felt that the order of the Special Court was erroneous. Even if the High Court did not agree with the correctness of that order, the High Court should have refused to interfere as the order could be corrected in the appeal under Section 34 POTA. To be remembered that by the time the impugned order was passed, the evidence had already been recorded. Thus there was no abuse of process of court which could now be prevented. Even the ends of justice did not require interference at this stage. In fact the ends of justice required that the statutory intent of Section 34 POTA be given effect to. The High Court should have directed the respondents to raise all such points in the statutory appeal, if any required to be filed, under Section 34 POTA. If in the appeal the Division Bench felt that the order was not correct or that it was erroneous it would set aside the order, eschew the evidence and not take the same into consideration. Thus no prejudice was being caused or would be caused to the respondents. Their rights were fully protected as per the provisions of POTA. At this stage there was no miscarriage of justice or palpable illegality which required immediate interference. Thus, even if powers under Article 227 or under Section 482 could have been exercised, this was a case where the High Court should not have exercised those powers. (Paras 30 and 31). State v. Navjot Sandhu, (2003) 6 SCC 641: 2003 SCC (Cri) 1545: (2003) 104 DLT 794.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.N. Variava and Brijesh Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2003]

(11)(xxx) Quashment re other offences (contd.)

[7640] — S. 482 — Death by medical negligence — Prosecution for — Wrong diagnosis of child patient — Child succumbing to actual disease later on — Conflicting opinions of the experts, one opining that there was no negligence on the part of the accused while the other opining that there was gross and reckless negligence — Effect of — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Prayer for — Accused, who professed himself to be a child specialist, treated child of Respondent 2 for tuberculosis — On condition of the child becoming serious, Respondent 2 consulted another doctor who diagnosed the child to be suffering from advanced stage cancer — Child subsequently succumbed to cancer — Considering the two sets of opinions: one in favour of the complainant and another in favour of the accused, held, it could not be said that the materials brought on record by the complainant, even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety did not disclose an offence — Which opinion would ultimately prevail was essentially a question to be determined by the trial Judge upon considering the evidence adduced by the parties in their entirety — Hence, refusal by High Court to quash the criminal proceedings against the appellant-accused, held, not liable to be interfered with — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 304-A

The appellant was running a hospital advertising himself as a specialist in child diseases. On 22-6-2000 Respondent 2 took his seven years old daughter to the appellant for treatment as the child had vomited while in school. The child was admitted in the hospital and blood tests were conducted which disclosed abnormal increase in white blood cells. The appellant diagnosed the disease which the child was suffering from as tuberculosis. The appellant discharged the child and advised her to take the medicine prescribed.

The treatment continued but instead of showing improvement, the child became almost crippled and was not even able to move. She had been taken to the hospital on a large number of occasions but Respondent 2 was on each occasion assured that there was nothing to worry about. Even his request to refer the child to another specialist for having a second opinion was not acceded to.

On 1-10-2000 early in the morning, the child developed high fever. She had rashes all over her body. Her face became swollen. She had been vomiting also. The child was taken to the hospital immediately. The appellant, seeing her condition, became panicky. Another doctor R was called. He immediately suggested a "biopsy of bone marrow". The child underwent the said test. R informed the second respondent that the girl had been suffering from leukaemia which was in advanced stage and her liver was enlarged. He advised the girl to be admitted in a particular hospital. Considering the advanced stage of leukaemia, the doctor informed the second respondent that chance of survival of the child was bleak. Ultimately, the child died on 10-11-2000.

Thereafter, Respondent 2 filed a consumer complaint before the State Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission. He also filed a private criminal complaint in terms of Section 200 CrPC, which was referred to police station concerned under Section 156(3) CrPC. The police filed a final report. But the complainant preferred a protest petition on the basis whereof cognizance was taken and processes were issued against the appellant by the Magistrate concerned. On the other hand, the Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission found the appellant to be negligent in his performance of professional services to the deceased child and awarded damages of Rs 4,00,000. Against the order passed by the Magistrate issuing summons to the appellant, the appellant preferred a petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashing the proceedings. Hence, the present appeal.

Dismissing the appeal with costs,

Held :

A person should not profess himself to be a child specialist unless he has the requisite expertise. Unless a person has a special skill to treat a child, ordinarily he could not have treated her, not because he was wholly incompetent therefor but because it required a specialised skill keeping in view the nature of the disease the child was suffering from. (Paras 20 and 21)

It may not be a valid argument at least at this stage that the child would have otherwise died having been suffering from leukaemia. The question which has been raised is that if on the face of the first blood report medical opinion other than the diagnosis of cancer was possible, whether it will fall within the ambit of medical negligence, is a matter which requires deeper consideration. For the said purpose, the opinion of the experts will have to be thoroughly examined. Their opinion must be tested. (Para 22)

Keeping in view the facts and circumstances of this case, it cannot be said that the materials brought on record by the complainant, even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety do not disclose an offence. It is said so because there are two sets of opinions; one in favour of the complainant and another in favour of the accused. Which opinion would ultimately prevail is essentially a question to be determined by the trial Judge upon considering the evidence adduced by the parties hereto in their entirety. The jurisdiction of the courts, at this stage, is limited as to whether a case of reckless/gross negligence has been made out or not will depend upon the facts of each case. Further, the civil liability of the appellant having been determined, at this stage it may not be relevant to consider the charges of criminal negligence on the part of the appellant on the touchstone of standard of proof required for proving a case of criminal negligence as the same would fall for consideration at the hands of the trial court at an appropriate stage. (Paras 28, 22, 25, 24 and 23). B. Jagdish v. State of A.P., (2009) 1 SCC 681.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2008]

Bolam v. Friern Hospital Management Committee, (1957) 1 WLR 582: (1957) 2 All ER 118, distinguished [7641] — S. 482 — Quashing of a criminal complaint — Husband filing complaint against Gynaecologist alleging wilful negligence resulting in death of his wife — Magistrate taking cognizance under S. 304-A IPC — Single Judge however quashing it on the ground that the mere fact of death of a patient in a hospital does not lead to a presumption of negligence — Held, the Single Judge was not justified in quashing the complaint at the threshold when the complainant had no opportunity to adduce evidence before the Magistrate — More so, when culpability of the doctor could be established only on proper analysis of expert evidence (Paras 1 and 2). Mohanan v. Prabha G. Nair, (2004) 3 SCC 391: 2004 SCC (Cri) 816: AIR 2004 SC 1719: (2004) 2 KLT 160: (2004) 1 CPJ 21 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-2-2004]

[7642] — Ss. 482 and 190 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Complaint of forcibly taking away movable articles belonging to the husband of the appellant after his death — Police submitting final report — Magistrate taking cognizance of offence under S. 380 IPC after examining the complainant and her witnesses — Held, High Court not justified in quashing the proceedings on ground that the dispute was of a civil nature — Civil dispute regarding partition of immovable property of appellant's husband has nothing to do with complaint about forcible removal of movable articles — Proceedings could not be said to be abuse of process of law — Further held, in the circumstances of the case, complaint filed after submission of final report by police could not be quashed in limine by treating it stale. A.E. Rani v. V.S.R. Sarma, (1995) 1 SCC 627: 1995 SCC (Cri) 262: (1995) 32 ACC 179: 1995 Cr LR (SC) 78.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.C. Agrawal and G.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1994]

[7643] — S. 482 — Quashing of charge-sheet, on facts, if justified — Medical negligence — Delay on the part of the doctor to attend on the patient — Held, it may at worst be a case of civil negligence and not one of culpable negligence — That apart death of patient being due to poisoning and there being no allegation against the doctor that he administered poison to the patient no prima facie case of rash or negligent act on the part of the doctor made out — Charge-sheet quashed — Penal Code, 1860, S. 304-A. Rakesh Ranjan Gupta v. State of U.P., (1999) 1 SCC 188: 1999 SCC (Cri) 76: AIR 1999 SC 2115: 1999 ACJ 807.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M.M. Punchhi, C.J. and K.T. Thomas and S. Rajendra Babu, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1998]

[7644] — Ss. 482, 154(3) and 174 — High Court quashing complaint case for offence under S. 306 IPC by appreciating material facts — Permissibility — Complaint case against wife (Respondent 1) as newly wedded husband committed suicide due to harsh and abusive language of wife uttered in a fit of anger — No suicide note — Though husband committed suicide in his native village, different/doubtful version as to whether wife, after the marriage, had accompanied the husband to his native village or not — Moreover, appellant (father) filed complaint before the SP after about two-and-a-half months of the alleged incident — Though, normally threshold interference should not be made under S. 482 CrPC, the quashing of complaint case, on facts held, was just — Therefore, was not interfered with

On 29-5-2004, Respondent 1 (wife) married the deceased husband (son of the appellant complainant). On 3-6-2004 (the day after the nuptials), the wife abused the husband regarding his potency and ugliness (dark complexion). On 9-6-2004, the complainant father (the appellant) received a message from police station that the deceased had committed suicide. The appellant (father of the deceased husband), alleging that police did not register a case lodged a complaint on 26-8-2004 against the respondent wife for offence under Section 306 IPC. The High Court by the impugned order quashed the complaint under Sections 482 CrPC.

(11)(xxx) Quashment re other offences (contd.)

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

It is fairly well settled that words uttered in a fit of anger or emotion without any intention cannot be termed as instigation. Additionally, there was no suicide note in the present case. Different versions of death were given. At the earlier stage, during investigation under Section 174 CrPC, the version was that the accused had accompanied the deceased to the native home, but subsequently stand was that the accused did not accompany the deceased because the latter was bad and ugly looking. Admittedly, marriage was an arranged one. If that is so, it is not believable that the deceased and the accused had not met. The alleged grievance of the accused that the deceased was an ugly man could not have been noticed after marriage, for the first time on 3-6-2004. The appellant (father) filed a complaint to the Superintendent of Police after about two-and-a-half months of the alleged incident. Allegation was that the police did not register a complaint. Ultimately, the complaint was filed on 26-8-2004. (Paras 12 and 13)

Though, normally threshold interference should not be made under Section 482 CrPC, in the aforesaid background, this is not a case where any interference is called for with the order of the High Court. (Para 14). Sonti Rama Krishna v. Sonti Shanti Sree, (2009) 1 SCC 554.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-11-2008]

[7645] — S. 482 — Quashing of charges — Conspiracy to commit murder — Main accused, who was alleged to have hatched the conspiracy and who had motive to kill the deceased, already discharged and that matter attaining finality — Respondent implicated in the case on the basis of the alleged conspiracy entered into between him and the main accused — No other material placed before the Court to prove his complicity — No direct evidence that he supplied weapons and rendered assistance to assailants in carrying out the common object of killing the deceased — Held, High Court was fully justified in holding that no purpose would be served in further proceeding with the case against the respondent — Quashing of charges framed against him was therefore justified — Penal Code, 1860, S. 120-B r/w S. 302 and S. 109 (Paras 5 and 6). CBI v. Akhilesh Singh, (2005) 1 SCC 478: AIR 2005 SC 268: 2005 All LJ 195.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-2004]

Distinguished in State, CBI v. Sashi Balasubramanian, (2006) 13 SCC 252: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 337

[7646] — S. 482 — Scope and applicability — High Court quashing the charge-sheet submitted under various provisions of IPC by applying S. 28 of the Societies Regitration Act, observing that some other allegations prima facie made out an offence under S. 4 of the Societies Registration Act and hence, since provisions of S. 28 were breached, the proceedings were unsustainable — Held, S. 28 provides procedure for trial of offences punishable under the 1860 Societies Registration Act itself and not for offences punishable under the Penal Code — Hence, impugned order set aside and matter remanded to trial court for decision afresh — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 419, 420, 467 and 468 — Societies Registration Act, 1860, Ss. 28, 4 and 27 (Paras 3, 5 and 6). Sarvesh Kumar Singh v. Jai Govind Mishra, (2006) 9 SCC 206: (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 618.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and R.V. Raveendran, JJ. [Date of decision: 21-11-2005]

[7647] — S. 482 — Conditions for applicability of — Complaint made by Principal Officer, Mercantile Marine Department for initiation of inquiry under S. 363, MSA, 1958 against Master of a foreign ship which had sunk in high seas causing loss of lives — Held, prima facie the complaint does not satisfy the essential requisites of S. 363 — Hence should have been quashed by the High Court S. 482, CrPC — Merchant Shipping Act, 1958, S. 363(1)

The appellant was Master of a Panamanian ship registered in Panama. The ship had sunk in high seas beyond the territorial waters of India causing loss of several human lives. The Principal Officer, Mercantile Marine Department, Madras, on receipt of information about the shipping casualty, filed a complaint in Court of Metropolitan Magistrate, Madras against the appellant for initiation of inquiry proceedings under S. 363 of the Merchant Shipping Act complaining about the negligence of the appellant while he was the Master of the ship and that at that time he was residing in Madras; further that the shipping casualty had occurred due to sheer negligence and gross incompetence on the part of the appellant in commanding the ship and the crew, resulting in loss of the ship, the cargo and lives of the sailors. The complaint accordingly said that the Magistrate's Court under S. 363 had got powers to make inquiry into the charges of incompetence or of misconduct of the appellant therein and that the inquiry might be commenced in accordance with the provisions of the Act so as to cancel the certificate of competency of the Master, namely the appellant, which had been granted by the Central Government; and that cancellation might be recommended under the Act after holding the aforesaid inquiry. The appellant, on receipt of a notice stating that the inquiry proceedings were instituted against him, filed a Cri MP under S. 482 CrPC in the High Court which was dismissed. Before the Supreme Court three questions arose for decision: whether the complaint made by the Principal Officer under S. 363 would be maintainable; whether the Act would at all be applicable in the facts and circumstances of the case; and if the Act was applicable whether Part XII of the Act would apply. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

One of the requisites of S. 363 is that the Central Government must have reason to believe that there are grounds for charging any master etc. with incompetency or misconduct; and such reason to believe must have been arrived at otherwise than in the course of a formal investigation into the shipping casualty and it is the Central Government who may transmit the statement of a case to a court having jurisdiction under S. 361. The complaint in this case neither mentions that the Central Government had such reason to believe, nor mentions that it was a transmission of the statement of a case to the court by the Central Government, nor mentions that the reason to believe had been found otherwise than in the course of a formal investigation into the shipping casualty. Thus, prima facie the complaint does not disclose the ingredients required under S. 363. (Paras 26 and 29). Captain Subash Kumar v. Principal Officer, Mercantile Marine Department, (1991) 2 SCC 449: AIR 1991 SC 1632: (1991) 1 Crimes 830: 1991 Cri LJ 2000.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.N. Saikia and M.M. Punchhi, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1991]

[7648] — S. 482 — Abuse of process of law — Landlord after losing his case in civil courts implicating the tenant in frivolous criminal prosecution — Such action in the circumstances held, amounts to abuse of process of law which must be prevented by High Court in exercise of its power under S. 482

Chagrined and frustrated litigants should not be permitted to give vent to their frustration by cheaply invoking jurisdiction of the criminal court. Complainant herein is an advocate. He lost in both the courts in the rent control proceedings and has now rushed to the criminal court. This itself speaks volumes. Add to this the fact that another suit between the parties was pending from 1975. The conclusion is inescapable that invoking the jurisdiction of the criminal court in this background is an abuse of the process of law and the High Court should not have glossed over this important fact while declining to exercise its power under S. 482, CrPC. Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, (1982) 1 SCC 466: 1982 SCC (Cri) 249: AIR 1982 SC 1238: 1982 Cri LJ 1731: 1982 ALJ 507.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, D.A. Desai and A. Varadarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-1-1982]

[7649] — S. 482 — Complaint alleging kidnapping of minor girl by her own father lodged by girl's maternal grandfather with whom she was living in view of strained relations between the girl's parents — Magistrate directing the father of the girl to hand over the child to police for restoration of her custody to the complainant otherwise police would register a case against him and proceed to declare him a proclaimed offender — Petition filed under S. 482 by the father — Held, High Court justified in quashing the order of the Magistrate on the finding that the father, being the natural guardian of the child, could not be charged with the offence of kidnapping. Chandrakala Menon (Mrs) v. Vipin Menon (Capt.), (1993) 2 SCC 6: 1993 SCC (Cri) 485: (1993) 1 Crimes 556: (1993) 1 BLJR 536.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Kuldip Singh and B.P. Jeevan Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-1-1993]

[7650] — S. 482 — High Courts power under to quash criminal proceedings — Case initiated without any factual foundation, held, fit one for exercise of the said power — Abetment of suicide — Essential ingredient of, held, is abetment — Employee of a company transferred but not joining and after remaining absent for 2 long years submitting resignation expressing grievance against stagnation in pay and unsatisfactory working conditions — Subsequently, his dead body found and on the basis of a suicide note recovered from the dead body, police registering a case against appellant — No allegation in the suicide note against the appellant, of causing any harm to the deceased or delaying his pay — Except referring to the name of the appellant at some places, the suicide note not making any allegation against the appellant to have committed any wilful act or omission or intentionally aiding or instigating the deceased in committing suicide — Even no allegation by the complainant of any harassment of the deceased by the appellant — In such circumstances, proceedings under S. 306 IPC against the appellant, held, were without any factual foundation and leading towards sheer harassment to the accused without any fruitful result — Hence, the case, held, was fit for the exercise of High Court's extraordinary power under S. 482 CrPC to quash the criminal proceedings — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 306 and 107

(11)(xxx) Quashment re other offences (contd.)

One P was an employee of a company. On 11-9-1999 he was transferred to another worksite but did not join. Two years later, he sent a letter of resignation expressing his grievance against stagnancy of salary and unfortunate circumstances. The Company accepted his resignation. On 16-2-2001, his dead body was found near the railway lines. Subsequently, on the basis of a suicide note allegedly recovered from the dead body, the brother of the deceased lodged a complaint with the police and consequently, a case under Section 306 IPC was registered against the appellant and some others. The suicide note indicated that the appellant herein and one PC had engaged him in several wrongdoings and that he had reported certain incidents to them. He also expressed dissatisfaction at the working conditions in the office and at the worksites. The appellant filed a petition under Section 482 CrPC for quashment of the said criminal proceedings but the High Court rejected that petition. The appellant then filed the present appeal by special leave.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

There is absolutely no averment in the alleged suicide note that the present appellant had caused any harm to him or was in any way responsible for delay in paying salary to the deceased. Although the deceased was very much dissatisfied with the working conditions at the workplace but he remained absent for two years and the suicide took place still later. It cannot be said that the present appellant had in any way instigated the deceased to commit suicide or he was responsible for the suicide of P. An offence under Section 306 IPC would stand only if there is an abetment for the commission of the crime within the meaning of Section 107 thereof. (Para 5)

In the suicide note, except referring to the name of the appellant at two places, there is no reference of any act or incidence whereby the appellant herein is alleged to have committed any wilful act or omission or intentionally aided or instigated the deceased in committing the act of suicide. (Para 6)

Moreover, the case registered against the appellant is without any factual foundation. The contents of the alleged suicide note do not in any way make out the offence against the appellant. The prosecution initiated against the appellant would only result in sheer harassment to the appellant without any fruitful result. Therefore, the present case is a fit one where the extraordinary power under Section 482. The criminal proceedings initiated against the appellant is therefore quashed. (Para 7). Netai Dutta v. State of W.B., (2005) 2 SCC 659: 2005 SCC (Cri) 543: AIR 2005 SC 1775: 2005 Cri LJ 1737.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Tarun Chatterjee, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-2-2005]

Distinguished in Didigam Bikshapathi v. State of A.P., (2008) 2 SCC 403

[7651] — S. 482 — High Court refusing to quash proceedings for offence of criminal trespass under S. 448, IPC — On meticulous examination of the record, as well as statements under S. 161, CrPC, held, there was no material connecting the appellant with the offence of criminal trespass — Allegations vague and an afterthought — Charged quashed but not to affect proceedings against other accused under Ss. 448 and 380, IPC — Penal Code, 1860, S. 448 — Constitution of India — Art. 136. Bhaskar Chattoraj v. State of W.B., 1991 Supp (2) SCC 574: 1991 SCC (Cri) 1077: AIR 1991 SC 317: 1991 Cri LJ 451.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian, M. Fathima Beevi and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-11-1990]

[7652] — S. 482 — Presumption must be drawn that holder of the cheque received the cheque of the nature referred to in S. 138, NI Act for the discharge of any debt or other liability unless the contrary is proved — Held, therefore High Court not justified in quashing complaints at initial stage of proceedings — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Ss. 139 and 138. Maruti Udyog Ltd. v. Narender, (1999) 1 SCC 113.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M.K. Mukherjee and S.S.M. Quadri, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-7-1998]

[7653] — S. 482 — Quashing of the complaint by High Court maintained by Supreme Court though for different reasons. State of Punjab v. National Organic Chemical Industries Ltd., (1996) 11 SCC 613.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K. Ramaswamy and S.P. Kurdukar, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-10-1996]

[7654] — S. 482 — Requirements for attraction of — On facts, complaint for offence under S. 304-A, Penal Code, quashed

It is settled position in law that the inherent power of the High Court under Section 482 CrPC for quashing criminal proceedings can be invoked only in cases where on the face of the complaint or the papers accompanying the same no offence is made out for proceeding with the trial. The test is that taking the allegations and the complaint as they are, without adding or subtracting anything, if no offence is made out, the High Court will be justified in quashing the proceedings. (Para 8)

After examining all the medical papers accompanying the complaint, it is found that no case of recklessness or gross negligence has been made out against the doctor to compel him to face trial for offence under Section 304-A IPC and the criminal proceedings pending against the present doctor who is the accused and appellant are quashed. (Para 28). Suresh Gupta (Dr.) v. Govt. of NCT of Delhi, (2004) 6 SCC 422: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1785: AIR 2004 SC 4091: (2004) 3 KLT 14: (2004) 112 DLT 866.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and D.M. Dharmadhikari, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-8-2004]

Municipal Corpn. of Delhi v. Ram Kishan Rohtagi, (1983) 1 SCC 1: 1983 SCC (Cri) 115: AIR 1983 SC 67; Drugs Inspector v. Dr. B.K. Krishnaiah, (1981) 2 SCC 454: 1981 SCC (Cri) 487: AIR 1981 SC 1164, relied on

See also Jacob Mathew v. State of Punjab, (2005) 6 SCC 1

(xxxi) Multiple/Successive petitions under/ Restoration/Review, etc.

[7655] — S. 482 — Application for quashing FIR filed before the High Court dismissed for default of appearance — Second application also dismissed on ground that there was no scope for entertaining second application — Held, High Court erred in dismissing the application without considering the contentions of the applicant — Matter remitted back to the High Court for deciding it afresh after hearing the parties. Krishna Narain Lal v. State of Bihar, (1999) 9 SCC 247: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1155: AIR 2000 SC 3612.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.T. Nanavati and S.N. Phukan, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1999]

[7656] — Ss. 482 and 362 — Fresh petition on subsequent development — Sustainability and manner in which to be disposed of — High Court against the statutory prescription of S. 362, CrPC had reopened a disposed of S. 482 petition and passed the impugned order — Supreme Court set aside the impugned order on technical grounds rather than on merits — Fresh petition under S. 482 for similar relief, held, is permissible if any subsequent development had taken place after the disposal of original S. 482 petition by High Court

The High Court was not justified in handing over the investigation of the case from the State police authorities to CBI because the respondents had not filed any independent application for the same on certain events which had occurred after the final order was passed by the High Court disposing of the earlier criminal petition under Section 482 CrPC. (Para 26)

A prayer could be made by the respondents before the High Court for transferring the investigation from the State police authorities to CBI by filing a fresh petition under Section 482 CrPC in view of subsequent events that had taken place after the final order disposing of the earlier criminal petition was passed. If a fresh criminal petition under Section 482 CrPC is filed by the respondents for transferring the investigation from the State police authorities to CBI after bringing in certain subsequent events that had taken place after the disposal of the original criminal petition, if there be any, it would be open for the High Court to entertain such application if it is warranted and decide the same in accordance with law. (Paras 26 and 27). State v. K.V. Rajendran, (2008) 8 SCC 673: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 600: (2008) 230 ELT 577.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and P. Sathasivam, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-9-2008]

[7657] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings — Second petition filed therefor, after the dismissal of first one — Complainant heard in first petition — Second petition allowed by High Court without being informed of earlier order and without affording an opportunity to complainant for being heard or being made a party thereto — Second petition not based on anything which developed subsequent to the date of dismissal of first petition, but only on the facts which subsisted prior to that date — Therefore, held, the subsequent order of the High Court cannot stand though it was passed without being informed of the prior order — Hence, order passed in second petition quashed. R. Annapurna v. Ramadugu Anantha Krishna Sastry, (2002) 10 SCC 401.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.T. Thomas and R.P. Sethi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-8-2000]

[7658] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceeding — Second application under S. 482 — Maintainability of — Res judicata if applicable — No case made out against accused — First application under S. 482 was permitted to be withdrawn with liberty to avail remedies if any available to the petitioner in law — Held, High Court was not denuded from exercising its inherent jurisdiction on being petitioned again — Principles of res judicata were not attracted — Further, the question as to maintainability was not raised before the High Court — It was too late to contend that application under S. 482 was not maintainable where not only the merit of the matter had been gone into by the High Court and the Supreme Court but also the questions in the petition had been referred to a larger Bench for obtaining an authoritative pronouncement

The submission that the second application under Section 482 CrPC was not maintainable. Such a question had not been raised before the High Court. Even otherwise, the High Court was not denuded from exercising its inherent jurisdiction in a matter of this nature. The principles of res judicata are not attracted. (Para 28)

In its previous order (in proceedings under Section 482 CrPC), the High Court gave liberty to Respondent 1 (accused) to agitate the matter once again. Respondent 1 merely took recourse thereto. (Para 29)

(11)(xxxi) Multiple/Successive petitions under/ Restoration/Review, etc. (contd.)

In this case, not only the merit of the matter had been gone into by the High Court as also by the Supreme Court, the questions raised in the petition had been referred to a larger Bench for obtaining an authoritative pronouncement. It is, therefore, too late in the day for the appellant to contend that the application under Section 482 CrPC was not maintainable. (Para 31). S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Ltd. v. Neeta Bhalla, (2007) 4 SCC 70: (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 192: (2007) 4 Mah LJ 452: (2007) 3 KLT 672: (2007) 3 MPLJ 275: (2007) 136 Comp Cas 268.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Markandey Katju, JJ. [Date of decision: 20-2-2007]

Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Mohan Singh, (1975) 3 SCC 706: 1975 SCC (Cri) 156, relied on

Simrikhia v. Dolley Mukherjee, (1990) 2 SCC 437: 1990 SCC (Cri) 327, distinguished

Rajinder Prasad v. Bashir, (2001) 8 SCC 522: 2002 SCC (Cri) 28, considered, explained and distinguished

[7659] — S. 482 — Restoration petition — Date of hearing of — Hearing with the petition on merits — Permissibility — Petition under, restored after dismissal for default of appearance — Direction for hearing and disposal of such petition on merits on the very day it was restored, held, quite permissible — Hearing on merits need not necessarily be adjourned to some later date — CPC, 1908, Or. 9 Rr. 4 and 8

Appearance of a party or his advocate and prayer for recalling an order of dismissal for default may be a good ground for restoring the matter but it cannot be said to be a good ground for restoration of the matter for hearing in future. In other words, a matter may be restored for hearing and not for adjournment. Therefore, it is not possible to hold that the Court could not have insisted on the advocate to argue the matter on merits after the order of dismissal for default was recalled and restoration was ordered. (Paras 21 and 20). Madhumilan Syntex Ltd. v. Union of India, (2007) 11 SCC 297: (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 143: AIR 2007 SC 1481: (2007) 210 ELT 484: (2007) 290 ITR 199.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: C.K. Thakker and P.K. Balasubramanyan, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-3-2007]

[7660] — S. 482 — Review of order of High Court under — Once an application under S. 482 stood disposed of, held, High Court cannot review that order in the garb of modifying the same — More so, in absence of allegation of abuse of the process of the court or manifest injustice caused to a party. State of U.P. v. Surendra Kumar, (2005) 9 SCC 161.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Singh and Arun Kumar, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-12-2004]

(xxxii) Practice and procedure re disposal of quashment application

[7661] — S. 482 — Accused seeking quashing of complaint placing additional material before HC — No reply filed by complainant — Held, High Court erred in relying on this fact for concluding abuse of process of court — On facts also sufficient opportunity for reply was not afforded to the complainant. Chand Dhawan (Smt) v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636: AIR 1992 SC 1379: 1992 Cri LJ 1956.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and M. Fathima Beevi, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-4-1992]

[7662] — S. 482 — Annexures to the petitions under — Cannot be termed as evidence without being tested and proved — Hence, should not be acted upon by High Court (Para 13). State of M.P. v. Awadh Kishore Gupta, (2004) 1 SCC 691: 2004 SCC (Cri) 353: AIR 2004 SC 517: 2004 Cri LJ 598.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Doraiswamy Raju and Arijit Pasayat, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-11-2003]

Chand Dhawan v. Jawahar Lal, (1992) 3 SCC 317: 1992 SCC (Cri) 636, relied on [7663] — S. 482 — High Court quashing criminal proceedings by placing reliance on an overruled decision cited by accused's counsel — None of the counsel bringing to the notice of the High Court that the decision relied on had been overruled — High Court's judgment set aside — Matter remitted for decision afresh in accordance with law — Constitution of India — Art. 136 (Para 6). State of Orissa v. Nalinikanta Muduli, (2004) 7 SCC 19: 2004 SCC (Cri) 1861: AIR 2004 SC 4272.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Arijit Pasayat and C.K. Thakker, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-2004]

[7664] — S. 482 — Parties — Impleading court as a party to proceedings — No allegation of bias against Presiding Officer — Court cannot be equated with the Tribunal exercising quasi-judicial powers — Court's name from the array of the parties struck out — Constitution of India — Arts. 226 and 227. Pepsi Foods Ltd. v. Special Judicial Magistrate, (1998) 5 SCC 749: 1998 SCC (Cri) 1400: AIR 1998 SC 128: 1998 Cri LJ 1.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Sujata V. Manohar and D.P. Wadhwa, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-11-1998]

[7665] — S. 482 — Petitions by co-accused — Need for disposal of petition of each co-accused on merits — Petitions filed under, by appellant, dismissed by High Court not on merits but merely because petition under S. 482 filed by the co-accused against the same order had already been dismissed by it — Held, High Court should dispose of the petitions on its own merits after hear- ing both the parties (Paras 3 and 4). Vasudev Dani v. Purushottam Das Khandelwal, (2004) 13 SCC 506.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Shivaraj V. Patil and B.N. Srikrishna, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-12-2004]

[7666] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings pending in trial court without hearing parties basing on point neither raised in application nor argued, held, improper — Case remitted for fresh decision — If High Court considers that respondent enjoys some kind of immunity from prosecution it should give opportunity of hearing to parties and allow them to adduce evidence in form of affidavit and counter-affidavit in support of their case — Expression of opinion on merits of case by High Court not proper. P.M. Nalini v. K.M. Mathew, 1990 Supp SCC 683: 1991 SCC (Cri) 221.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and L.M. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-4-1988]

[7667] — S. 482 — Quashing of criminal proceedings without notice to original complainant — Held, unsustainable — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 420 and 120-B

It is uncontroverted that proceedings under Section 156(3) CrPC for offences under Sections 420/120-B IPC against the respondent-accused had been quashed under Section 482 CrPC without notice to the appellant, who was the original complainant. The impugned order was, therefore, set aside and remitted back to the High Court for a fresh decision in accordance with law. (Para 4). Mosiruddin Munshi v. Mohd. Siraj, (2008) 8 SCC 434: (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 525: (2008) 67 AIC 192 (SC).
Bench Strength 2. Coram: Tarun Chatterjee and H.S. Bedi, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-5-2008]

[7668] — S. 482 — Quashing of proceedings on a ground not raised in petition, held, improper — Again, if any defence on facts had been made then the same being a disputed question of fact it could not be made a ground for quashing the proceedings — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138 (Paras 4 and 5). M. Gurunathan v. R. Amutha, (2005) 13 SCC 58: (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 786.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: Y.K. Sabharwal and P.P. Naolekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 7-2-2005]

[7669] — S. 482 — Several accused — Quashing of criminal complaint by High Court in respect of those accused who had not approached it — Held, not justified

On the basis of the allegations made in the complaint and the statements given by the witnesses, the Special Judge issued summons to sixteen accused. The first accused S filed Crl. Misc. Case No. 1862 of 1985 under Section 482 CrPC. The third accused M filed a criminal revision petition. The High Court quashed the entire complaint by passing a common order.

Held :

Since S is no more, the Supreme Court is not concerned with the order passed in Crl. Misc. Case No. 1862 of 1985 so far as it relates to him. As regards the other accused persons, it is pertinent to say that they had not challenged the proceedings pursuant to the complaint. If these accused persons were really aggrieved by the issuance of summons against them, they should have approached the High Court and challenged the same in appropriate proceedings. The learned Single Judge was not justified in quashing the entire complaint. (Para 6). Rajmata Vijaya Raje Scindia v. State of M.P., (2003) 12 SCC 429.
Bench Strength 2. Coram: K.G. Balakrishnan and Dr. Ar. Lakshmanan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-10-2003]

[7670] — Ss. 482, 190, 301, 302 & 225 — Petition by accused for quashing criminal proceedings — Held, complainant, at whose behest the proceedings were initiated, must on his request be permitted by the court to be heard before the proceedings are quashed — Fact of cognizance having been taken is no bar to complainant's continued participation in the criminal proceedings initiated by him — Constitution of India — Art. 226

The appellant filed a complaint before the police alleging that Respondents 2 and 3 committed offences of criminal breach of trust and cheating. The police, after investigation, filed a charge-sheet against the respondents for offences under Sections 420, 406 and 120-B IPC and the Magistrate's Court issued process to the respondents requiring them to appear before it. At that stage the respondents filed the present petition before the High Court praying for quashing the suit criminal proceedings pending. In the writ petition the appellant was not made a party and therefore a petition was filed in the High Court for impleading the appellant as a party. The appellant urged that the criminal proceedings were initiated at his behest and hence he too may be heard before the criminal proceedings are to be quashed. A Single Judge of the High Court rejected the petition filed by the appellant taking the view "that the right of the complainant to be heard ceases once cognizance is taken and he cannot thereafter continue to participate in the proceedings as if he were the aggrieved party who must have his say in proceedings".

(11)(xxxii) Practice and procedure re disposal of quashment application (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The Single Judge has done wrong to the appellant when he closed the door of the High Court before him by saying that the High Court is going to consider whether the criminal proceedings initiated at his behest should be quashed completely and that the complainant would not be heard at all even if he wants to be heard. (Para 15)

In this case the accused approached the High Court for quashing the criminal proceedings initiated by the appellant. It may not be that the complainant should have been made a party by the accused himself in the petition for quashing the criminal proceedings, as the accused has no such obligation when the case was charge-sheeted by the police. It is predominantly the concern of the State to continue the prosecution. But when the complainant wishes to be heard when the criminal proceedings are sought to be quashed, it would be a negation of justice to him if he is foreclosed from being heard even after he makes a request to the court in that behalf. (Para 8)

The scheme envisaged in the Code of Criminal Procedure indicates that a person who is aggrieved by the offence committed is not altogether wiped out from the scenario of the trial merely because the investigation was taken over by the police and the charge-sheet was laid by them. Even the fact that the court had taken cognizance of the offence is not sufficient to debar him from reaching the court for ventilating his grievance. Even in the Sessions Court, where the Public Prosecutor is the only authority empowered to conduct the prosecution as per Section 225 of the Code, a private person who is aggrieved by the offence involved in the case is not altogether debarred from participating in the trial. This can be discerned from Section 301(2) of the Code. Further, when the trial is before a Magistrate's Court the scope of any other private person intending to participate in the conduct of the prosecution is still wider. This can be noticed from Section 302 of the Code. The genesis in almost all such cases is the grievance of one or more individual that they were wronged by the accused by committing offences against them. (Paras 9, 11 and 12). J.K. International v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2001) 3 SCC 462: 2001 SCC (Cri) 547: AIR 2001 SC 1142: 2001 Cri LJ 1264: (2001) 90 DLT 157.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K.T. Thomas, R.P. Sethi and B.N. Agrawal, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-2-2001]

Thakur Ram v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 911: 1966 Cri LJ 700, distinguished

Bhagwant Singh v. Commr. of Police, (1985) 2 SCC 537: 1985 SCC (Cri) 267, relied on [7671] — Ss. 482 & 154 — High Court in exercise of its inherent powers cannot quash an FIR just after it was filed, without notice to the complainant. Kurukshetra University v. State of Haryana, (1977) 4 SCC 451: 1977 SCC (Cri) 613: AIR 1977 SC 2229: 1977 Cri LJ 1900.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Y.V. Chandrachud, P.K. Goswami and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-3-1977]

[7672] — S. 482 — Quashment without hearing complainant, based on surmises and conjectures — Impermissibility — High Court by impugned judgment quashing order passed by Judicial Magistrate taking cognizance of offence punishable under S. 406 IPC and consequent summons issued against Respondents 2 and 3 taking the view that the case might have been filed by the complainant in order to pressurise the petitioners before the High Court not to proceed with the case which was lodged under Ss. 304-B, 201/34 IPC r/w Ss. 3 and 4 of the Dowry Act against the complainant and others — Held, conclusions of High Court seem to have been based on presumptions and surmises as no material in regard thereto had been placed and in any event the stage for deciding that question had not arisen — Moreover, High Court passed the impugned order without issuing notice to the complainant — It was not a case where the complainant was not required to be heard, more so, because the proceedings were initiated on the basis of the complaint filed by him — Impugned order set aside and parties directed to appear before High Court without any further notice (Paras 2, 3, 6, 7 and 8). Baikunth Singh v. State of Bihar, (2008) 14 SCC 766.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. Arijit Pasayat and Dr. M.K. Sharma, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-12-2008]

— S. 483 See Ss. 156(3) & 320 and 482 & 483

See also Ss. 397(3), 401, 482 and 483

See also Ss. 482 and 483

[7673] — S. 483 — Duty of High Court to exercise continuous superintendence over Courts of Judicial Magistrate — Held, apart from exercising its supervisory jurisdiction under Arts. 227 and 235 of the Constitution, High Court has duty to exercise continuous superintendence over Courts of Judicial Magistrate — On facts held, when the order passed by Magistrate which was wholly without jurisdiction was brought to notice of High Court, it could have interfered therewith even suo motu — Constitution of India, Arts. 227 and 235 (Para 12). Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S.B. Sinha and Cyriac Joseph, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-5-2009]

[7674] — S. 484 — Trial pending immediately before the commencement of the new case governed by the old Code and not the new Code

Section 484 of the new Code clearly provides that where a trial is pending immediately before the commencement of the new Code, it shall be proceeded with in accordance with the provisions of the old Code as if the new Code were not in force. State of Karnataka v. K.H. Annegowda, (1977) 1 SCC 417: 1977 SCC (Cri) 106: AIR 1977 SC 357: 1977 Cri LJ 220: (1977) 2 SCR 350.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and A.C. Gupta, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-12-1976]

[7675] — Ss. 484 and 397(3) — Where prosecution launched under the old Code and accused failed to challenge maintainability of second revision filed and heard after coming into force of the new Code by invoking S. 397(3) and instead throughout participated in revision proceedings under the old Code, held, he cannot later claim benefit under S. 397(3) — Acquiescence

Since in this case the prosecution was launched under the old Code, since the appellant has not challenged the maintainability of the second revision filed and heard after the commencement of the new Code before the High Court claiming advantage of S. 397(3) of the new Code and since he participated in the revision proceedings throughout under the old Code, only the provisions of the old Code have to be applied as per S. 484 of the new Code. Therefore the contention that the order of the Magistrate rejecting the application of the prosecution under S. 540 is not a revisable order under S. 397(1) as it being an interlocutory order and even if it is not so, the second revision by the same party — i.e. Union of India is not entertainable in view of the statutory bar under S. 397(3) of the new Code as the Union of India has already availed the revision under S. 397(2) before the Sessions Judge cannot prevail. Having failed in the revision the appellant has no justification to raise this point before this Court, especially when the proceedings under the old Code are saved by S. 484 of the new Code. (Para 34). Mohanlal Shamji Soni v. Union of India, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 271: 1991 SCC (Cri) 595: AIR 1991 SC 1346: (1991) 2 GLH 11.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Ratnavel Pandian and K. Jayachandra Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-2-1991]

[7676] — Ss. 484(2)(a) and 399(3) — Revision application filed under S. 435 of the Code of 1898 — Held, is covered by the word "application" in cl. (a) of S. 484(2) of the new Code and hence requires to be disposed of under the old Code — Word "application" synonymous with the word "petition"

The word "application" in the saving provision contained in cl. (a) of sub-section (2) of S. 484 immediately follows the term "appeal". It therefore takes some colour from the collocation of words in which it occurs. It is synonymous with the term "petition" which means a written statement of material facts, requesting the court to grant the relief or remedy based on those facts. It is a peculiar mode of seeking redress recognised by law. Thus considered, there can be no doubt that the word "application" as used in cl. (a) of S. 484 of the Code of 1973 will take in a revision application made under S. 435 of the old Code. P. Philip v. Director of Enforcement, (1976) 2 SCC 174: 1976 SCC (Cri) 241: AIR 1976 SC 1185: 1976 Cri LJ 920.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and N.L. Untwalia, JJ. [Date of decision: 3-3-1976]

[7677] — S. 484(2)(a) proviso — Committal proceedings wrongfully quashed by High Court when new Code came into force — Committing Magistrate under the new Code only to see whether the case is exclusively triable by the Court of Session in view of the allegations made. Supdt. and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Ashutosh Ghosh, (1979) 4 SCC 381: 1979 SCC (Cri) 991: AIR 1979 SC 1195.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and A.D. Koshal, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1979]

[7678] — S. 484(2)(a) proviso — High Court setting aside order of discharge and directing commitment for trial under S. 409, Indian Penal Code (Criminal breach of trust) — Held, order of the High Court did not revive the committal proceedings and therefore did not attract the 1973 Code by virtue of proviso to S. 484 — The High Court did not order any fresh enquiry in terms of S. 437, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 but straightaway committed him to Sessions. M.R. Dhawan v. Delhi Admn., (1978) 2 SCC 184: 1978 SCC (Cri) 186: AIR 1978 SC 1011: 1978 Cri LJ 769.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: S. Murtaza Fazal Ali and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 13-3-1978]

— S. 484(2)(b) See also Ss. 428 & 484(2)(b)

[7679] — S. 484(2)(b) — Unlike S. 24 GCA, 1897 there are no words in S. 484(2)(b), CrPC, 1973 limiting its application to orders made and sentences passed which are not inconsistent with the provisions re-enacted — General Clauses Act, 1897, S. 24. Jagir Singh v. Ranbir Singh, (1979) 1 SCC 560: 1979 SCC (Cri) 348: AIR 1979 SC 381: 1979 Cri LJ 318: (1979) 16 ACC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-1978]

[7680] — Ss. 484(2)(b), 125 and 127 — Scope of — "Corresponding provisions of the new Code", and S. 484(2)(b) held, does not mean identical provisions — S. 125, CrPC, 1973, corresponds to S. 488, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, despite the disentitlement of maintenance under the new provision to a major child who does not suffer from any infirmity — General Clauses Act, 1897, S. 24, distinguished — Judicial orders and sentences, as against statutory instruments, which have attained finality, held, do not have to answer the test of being consistent with the provisions of the new Code — Order under S. 488, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 would therefore continue after the coming into force of Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 subject however to change or cancellation under S. 127, Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 because of change in the circumstances

Whenever an Act is repealed and re-enacted there are bound to be changes and modifications. To say that a modified provision dealing with the same subject-matter in substantially the same manner as the original provision is not a corresponding provision would be to practically nullify the effect of a "Repeal and Savings" provision like S. 484(2)(b) of the new Code. Also, unlike S. 24 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, there are no words in S. 484(2)(b) limiting its application to orders made and sentences passed which are not inconsistent with the provisions of the new Code.

Hence, S. 125 of the new Code corresponds to S. 488 of the old Code notwithstanding the fact that under the new Code a child who has attained majority and who does not suffer from any infirmity is not entitled to be maintained by the father. Once an order under S. 488, Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, is deemed to be under S. 125, Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 it will also be subject to S. 127 of the new Code. The change in the law in respect of maintenance, as much as other factual change of circumstances, are circumstances to be considered under S. 127

But statutory instruments, though deemed to be made under the corresponding provisions of the new Code, will have their vires tested like other statutory instruments made under the new Code.

Howsoever, in the case of judicial orders made and sentences passed, such orders and sentences which have attained finality and which created rights in parties do not have to answer the test of being consistent with the provisions of the new Code. Jagir Singh v. Ranbir Singh, (1979) 1 SCC 560: 1979 SCC (Cri) 348: AIR 1979 SC 381: 1979 Cri LJ 318: (1979) 16 ACC 74.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Jaswant Singh and O. Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-11-1978]

— Sch. I See Ss. 26(a)(ii) & (iii) and Sch. I
See also Ss. 209 and 26 and Sch. I
See also Ss. 436, 2, 81 and Sch. I

[7681] — Sch. I and S. 354(3) — Proportionality of punishment — Maximum and minimum prescriptions in Sch. I — Utility and implications — Wide discretions available to courts with regard to quantum of punishment under — Therefore, courts, held, have wide discretion to award punishments commensurate with aggravating and mitigating circumstances vis-à-vis an accused in each case

With regard to the quantum of punishment to be awarded to persons found guilty of offences dealt with in IPC, CrPC confers a wide discretion by prescribing the maximum punishment and in some cases both the maximum as well as the minimum punishment for the offence. Though no general guidelines are laid down, punishment should be commensurate with the gravity of the offence having regard to the aggravating and mitigating circumstances vis-à-vis an accused in each case. In such situation, the obligation of the court in making the choice of death sentence for the person who is found guilty of murder becomes more onerous indeed. (Para 15)

Section 354(3) CrPC enjoins that in the case of sentence of death, special reasons for such sentence shall be stated. To kill is to be cruel and therefore, all murders are cruel, yet such cruelty may vary in its degree of culpability and it is only when culpability assumes the proportion of extreme depravity that special reasons can legitimately be said to exist. (Para 16)

There can be several considerations for identifying the "rarest of rare" cases awarding death penalty. For a case to be regarded in the rarest of rare category, fact situation has to be exceptional. Life imprisonment should be the rule and death sentence an exception. Death sentence must be imposed only when life imprisonment appears to be an altogether inadequate punishment. Unless the nature of the crime and the circumstances of the offender reveal that: (1) the accused is found to be an ardent criminal and a menace to the society or (2) the culpability of the accused has assumed depravity or (3) the crime is committed in an organised manner and is gruesome, cold-blooded, heinous and atrocious or (4) innocent and unarmed persons are attacked and murdered without any provocation, the court should not ordinarily impose the extreme punishment of death. (Paras 13, 14 and 17 to 20). State of Punjab v. Manjit Singh, (2009) 14 SCC 31: AIR 2009 SC 2888: (2009) 79 AIC 9 (SC).

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Dr. M.K. Sharma and Dr. B.S. Chauhan, JJ. [Date of decision: 28-5-2009]

Ronny v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 3 SCC 625: 1998 SCC (Cri) 859; Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 SCC 684: 1980 SCC (Cri) 580; Machhi Singh v. State of Punjab, (1983) 3 SCC 470: 1983 SCC (Cri) 681; Allauddin Mian v. State of Bihar, (1989) 3 SCC 5: 1989 SCC (Cri) 490, relied on

— Sch. I Pt. II See Ss. 438 & 439 and Sch. I Pt. II

— Sch. II Form 45 See S. 441 and Sch. II Form 45

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, 1898

[7682] — Generally

Code is complete and that makes it different from a statute. Joseph Peter v. State of Goa, Daman and Diu, (1977) 3 SCC 280: 1977 SCC (Cri) 486: AIR 1977 SC 1812: 1977 Cri LJ 1449.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: V.R. Krishna Iyer and Jaswant Singh, JJ. [Date of decision: 4-5-1977]

[7683] — Generally — Object of — Further the ends of justice and not to frustrate them

The Code is a Code of Procedure and, like all procedural laws, is designed to further the ends of justice and not to frustrate them by the introduction of endless technicalities. The object of the Code is to ensure that an accused person gets a full and fair trial along certain well-established and well-understood lines that accord with our notions of natural justice.

If he does, if he is tried by a competent court, if he is told and clearly understands the nature of the offence for which he is being tried, if the case against him is fully and fairly explained to him and he is afforded a full and fair opportunity of defending himself, then, provided there is 'substantial' compliance with the outward forms of the law, mere mistakes in procedure, mere inconsequential errors and omissions in the trial are regarded as venal by the Code and the trial is not vitiated unless the accused can show substantial prejudice. That, broadly speaking, is the basic principle on which the Code is based.

Now here, as in all procedural laws, certain things are regarded as vital. Disregard of a provision of that nature is fatal to the trial and at once invalidates the conviction. Others are not vital and whatever the irregularity they can be cured; and in that event the conviction must stand unless the Court is satisfied that there was prejudice. Some of these matters are dealt with by the Code and wherever that is the case full effect must be given to its provisions.

The Code has carefully classified certain kinds of error and expressly indicates how they are to be dealt with. In every such case the Court is bound to give effect to the express commands of the Legislature; there is no scope for further speculation. The only class of case in which the Courts are free to reach a decision is that for which no express provision is made. Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140: 1956 Cri LJ 291.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das[1], Vivian Bose[1], B. Jagannadhadas[2], Syed Jafer Imam[3] and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1955]

[7684] — Generally — Object of — Provisions of the Code disregarded — Conviction to be set aside if the principles of natural justice violated — No interference necessary, if no prejudice caused

Expect where there is something so vital as to cut at the root of jurisdiction or so abhorrent to what one might term natural justice, the matter resolves itself to a question of prejudice. Some violations of the Code will be so obvious that they will speak for themselves as, for example, a refusal to give the accused a hearing, a refusal to allow him to defend himself, a refusal to explain the nature of the charge to him and so forth.

These go to the foundations of natural justice and would be struck down as illegal forthwith. It hardly matters whether this is because prejudice is then patent or because it is so abhorrent to well-established notions of natural justice that a trial of that kind is only a mockery of a trial and not of the kind envisaged by the laws of our land, because either way they would be struck down at once.

Other violations will not be so obvious and it may be possible to show that having regard to all that occurred no prejudice was occasioned or that there was no reasonable probability of prejudice. In still another class of case, the matter may be so near the border line that very slight evidence of a reasonable possibility of prejudice would swing the balance in favour of the accused.

The real question is not whether a matter is expressed positively or is stated in negative terms but whether disregard of a particular provision amounts to 'substantial' denial of a trial as contemplated by the Code and understood by the comprehensive expression "natural justice". Willie (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116: (1955) 2 SCR 1140: 1956 Cri LJ 291.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.R. Das[1], Vivian Bose[1], B. Jagannadhadas[2], Syed Jafer Imam[3] and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 31-10-1955]

[7685] — Only spirit of the Code applicable in some areas — Not discriminatory — Rules for administration of justice and police in Naga Hills Districts, 1937 — Constitution of India, Art. 14

Regional differences do not necessarily connote discrimination and laws may be designed for effective justice in different ways in different parts of India if people are not similarly circumstanced. These backward tracts are not found suitable for the application of the Criminal Procedure Code in all its rigour and technicality, and to say that they shall be governed not by the technical rules of the Code but by the substance of such rules is not to discriminate this area against the rest of India.

The exigency of the situation clearly demands that the Criminal Procedure Code should not apply in this area. It is not discrimination to administer different laws in different areas. The Presidency Towns have got special procedures which do not obtain in other areas. We have known of trial by jury in one part of India for an offence which was not so triable in another. Similarly, what is an offence in one part of India is not an offence in another.

Article 371-A of the Constitution itself contemplates a different treatment of these tracts and the differences are justified by the vast differences between the needs of social conditions in Nagaland and the various stages of development of different parts. State of Nagaland v. Ratan Singh, AIR 1967 SC 212, 224: (1966) 3 SCR 830, 852: 1967 Cri LJ 265.

Bench Strength 4. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar, C.J. and K.N. Wanchoo, M. Hidayatullah and S.M. Sikri, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-3-1966]

[7686] — Generally — Nature and scope

Is in the nature of extra-territorial legislation. Rao Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of V.P., AIR 1953 SC 394: 1953 SCR 1188: 1953 Cri LJ 1480.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: Patanjali Sastri, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea, Vivian Bose, Ghulam Hasan and B. Jagannadhadas, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-5-1953]

[7687] — Generally — Provisions for search in the Code

In the Criminal Procedure Code there are four groups of sections regulating the searches authorised under it. Sections 47, 48, 51 and 52 appear in Ch. V of the Code which provides for the arrest, escape and retaking of persons. The second group consists of Ss. 100, 101, 102 and 103 of Ch. VII of the Code. Section 153 forms the third group and it falls under Ch. XIII of the Code. The fourth group of sections appears in Ch. XIV which provides for searches by a police officer during the investigation of a cognizable offence. State of Rajasthan v. Rehman, AIR 1960 SC 210, 212: (1960) 1 SCR 991: 1960 Cri LJ 286.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.B. Gajendragadkar and K. Subba Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-10-1959]

[7688] — Generally — Trade mark — Commission of offence relating to — Procedure — Applicability of CrPC — Complaint under Ss. 78 & 79, Trade Marks Act

Merely because sub-section (1) of S. 89 refers to the manner of taking cognizance in respect of offence under the section specified therein, it does not preclude cognizance of other offences specified in Ch. X from being taken under the procedure prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Code. It is apparent that offences under Ss. 78 and 79 are punishable with imprisonment of two years or with three years if they fall under the respective provisos to the said section. In cases where an offence is punishable with imprisonment of one year and upwards but less than 3 years, under Ch. XXIII of Sch. II it is non-cognizable and is a summons case, triable as already stated under S. 89(2) by the Sessions Judge, Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the 1st Class. In such cases under S. 155 of the Criminal Procedure Code when an information is given to an officer incharge of the Police Station of the commission of a non-cognizable offence, he has to enter the substance of the information in a book to be kept for the purpose and refer the informant to the Magistrate, but he cannot under sub-section (2) investigate such a case without the order of a Magistrate. On receiving such an order any police officer may exercise the same powers in respect of the investigation (except the power to arrest without warrant) as an Officer in charge of Police Station may exercise in a cognizable case. On receipt of a report from the police in compliance with such orders, the Magistrate may if the report discloses the commission of an offence try the accused by the procedure prescribed under S. 251-A of the Criminal Procedure Code. State of U.P. v. Ram Nath, (1972) 1 SCC 130: 1972 SCC (Cri) 74: AIR 1972 SC 232: 1972 Cri LJ 52.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy and D.G. Palekar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-11-1971]

[7689] — S. 1 — Applicability to Assam and Manipur — Constitution of India, Sch. VI

The Criminal Procedure Code is not applicable to certain areas by reason of Sch. VI to the Constitution. Only the spirit of the Code applies. Saptawna v. State of Assam, (1972) 4 SCC (N) 45: 1971 SCC (Cri) 247: AIR 1971 SC 813: 1971 Cri LJ 679.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, C.J. and P. Jaganmohan Reddy and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-2-1971]

[7690] — S. 1(2) — Scope — Special jurisdiction excluded — Not applicable to matters of contempt

Section 1(2) CrPC excludes special jurisdiction from its scope and the power of a High Court to institute proceedings for contempt and punish where necessary is a special jurisdiction in all courts of Record. Therefore the Code of Criminal Procedure does not apply in matters of contempt triable by the High Court. Sukhdev Singh v. Teja Singh, AIR 1954 SC 186: 1954 SCR 454: 1954 Cri LJ 460.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, Vivian Bose and N.H. Bhagwati, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-1953]

[7691] — S. 1(2) — Extent and applicability — Not applicable in Nagaland in view of rules for the Administration of Justice and Appeals in Naga Hills District, 1937 — Only spirit of the Code applicable

Under the Rules for the Administration of Justice and Appeals in Naga Hills Districts, 1937, since the Code is not in force in Nagaland, the procedure to be followed is according to the spirit of the Code and not strictly according to the terms of its provisions. Mowu v. Supdt., Special Jail, (1971) 3 SCC 936: 1972 SCC (Cri) 184: 1971 CAR 66 (SC).

Bench Strength 5. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and J.M. Shelat, G.K. Mitter, C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-12-1970]

[7692] — S. 1(2) — Specific provision to the contrary — S. 10(2) CrPC is one such provision. Central Talkies Ltd. v. Dwarka Prasad, AIR 1961 SC 606: (1961) 3 SCR 495: (1961) 1 Cri LJ 740.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.L. Kapur, M. Hidayatullah and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-1-1961]

— S. 1(2)(a) See also Ss. 162 and 1(2)(a)

[7693] — S. 1(2)(a) — Bombay Police Act, 1951 replacing Bombay City Police Act, 1902 repealing S. 1(2)(a) of Criminal Procedure Code — In Bombay City S. 162 CrPC will not apply to the statements recorded during the investigation conducted up to the repeal and will apply to the investigations conducted after the repeal — Bombay Police Act, 1951 (22 of 1951), S. 167(2). Ramkishan Mithanlal Sharma v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 104: (1955) 1 SCR 903: 1955 Cri LJ 196.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati[1], B. Jagannadhadas[2] and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-1954]

[7694] — S. 1(2)(a) — Application of Code to Bombay

It may be noted that under S. 1(2)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Code the Code did not apply to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay. On the 11th June, 1951 the State Legislature passed the Bombay Police Act 22 of 1951. Section 167(3) repealed S. 1(2)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Code so far as the police in the town of Bombay were concerned with the result that when this Act came into operation with effect from the 1-8-1951 the Bombay City Police were also governed by the provisions of Criminal Procedure Code. Ramkishan Mithanlal Sharma v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 104, 110: (1955) 1 SCR 903: 1955 Cri LJ 196.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: N.H. Bhagwati[1], B. Jagannadhadas[2] and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 22-10-1954]

— S. 4(1) See also Ss. 156, 157 and 4(1)

[7695] — Ss. 4(1) and 162 — "Investigation" — Steps taken for trapping of bribe-taker by Inspector after recording of complaint, held, investigation — Statement made by accused to Inspector at the time of raid to be excluded — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 — Conduct of accused however relevant under S. 8, Evidence Act, 1872 — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 2(h) and 162. Maha Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1976) 1 SCC 644: 1976 SCC (Cri) 135: AIR 1976 SC 449: (1976) 3 SCR 119: 1976 Cri LJ 346.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.K. Goswami and P.N. Shinghal, JJ. [Date of decision: 8-1-1976]

[7696] — S. 4(1)(f) — "Case"

The word 'case' is not defined by the Code but its meaning is well-understood in legal circles. In criminal jurisdiction it means ordinarily a proceeding for the prosecution of a person alleged to have committed an offence. In other contexts the word may represent other kinds of proceedings but in the context of the sub-section it must mean a proceeding which at the end results either in discharge, conviction or acquittal of an accused person. Bhimappa Basappa Bhu Sannavar v. Laxman Shivarayappa Samagouda, (1970) 1 SCC 665: 1970 SCC (Cri) 263: AIR 1970 SC 1153: 1970 Cri LJ 1132.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1970]

[7697] — Ss. 4(1)(f) and 496 — Specific class of officers mentioned in S. 6(1) of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, being competent also to personally arrest without warrant for offences under Ss. 4 and 5 of that Act, held, are

"police officers" and those offences are "cognizable" within the meaning of S. 4(1)(f) of the Code — Such offences being bailable, held, persons arrested must be enlarged on bail by virtue of S. 496 of the Code and any administrative instruction having a contrary direction would be bad — CrPC, 1973, Ss. 2(c) and 436 — Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, 1887 (4 of 1887), Ss. 4, 5 and 6. State of Gujarat v. Lal Singh Kishan Singh, (1981) 2 SCC 75: 1981 SCC (Cri) 330: AIR 1981 SC 368: (1981) 22 GLR 450.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: R.S. Sarkaria and R.S. Pathak, JJ. [Date of decision: 12-8-1980]

Union of India v. I.C. Lala, (1973) 2 SCC 72: 1973 SCC (Cri) 738, applied

[7698] — S. 4(1)(h) — Scope of — Complaint, what is — Cognizance of case by Magistrate on the basis of report by police under Ch. XIV of the Code of Criminal Procedure — Investigation on the basis of information given by postal authority — Whether such cognizance can be said to be upon complaint made by order of or under authority from the Director General or Postmaster General — Post Office Act, 1898, Ss. 72, 57 and 73

The expression 'complaint' is not defined in the Act but the 'complaint' contemplated under S. 57 is one that initiates the prosecution on the basis of which the accused if found guilty is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years and also with a fine. That being so the expression complaint in S. 73 cannot be equated to mere information or accusation. The context in which that expression is used in S. 72 indicates that it is a formal document indicting an officer of the Postal Department for a criminal offence. The purpose behind S. 72 is that officials of the Postal Department should not be harassed with frivolous prosecutions and that before any of the prosecutions contemplated by S. 72 is launched, the authorities mentioned in that section should have examined the appropriateness of launching a prosecution and either file a complaint themselves or authorise the filing of such a complaint. Such a requirement will not be satisfied if the concerned authorities merely ask the police to investigate into the case and take appropriate action. An information laid before the police or even a sanction granted for a prosecution by the police would not meet the requirements of S. 72. If the Legislature contemplated that a mere information to the police by the appropriate authorities is sufficient then there was no need to enact S. 72. Further if all that was required was to obtain the sanction of the concerned authorities then the Legislature would have enacted a provision similar to S. 197 CrPC. The fact that the Legislature did not choose to adopt either of the two courses mentioned above is a clear indication of the fact that the mandate of S. 72 is that there should be a formal complaint as contemplated by S. 4(1)(h) CrPC. If the word 'Complaint' in S. 72 of the Act is to be understood as defined under S. 4(1)(h) of the CrPC then there was admittedly no 'complaint' against the appellant which means that the Learned Magistrate was incompetent to take cognizance of the case. From that it follows that the trial of the case was an invalid one and that the appellant was convicted without the authority of law. Bholanath Amritlal Purohit v. State of Gujarat, (1970) 2 SCC 414: 1970 SCC (Cri) 469: AIR 1971 SC 194: 1971 Cri LJ 258.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, K.S. Hegde and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-8-1970]

[7699] — Ss. 4(1)(h) and 190 — 'Complaint'

The word 'complaint' has been defined in S. 4(1)(h) and means an allegation made orally or in writing to a Magistrate, with a view to his taking action, under the Code, that some person, whether known or unknown, has committed an offence, but it does not include the report of a police officer. The word 'complaint' has a wide meaning since it includes even an oral allegation. It may, therefore, be assumed that no form is prescribed which the complaint must take. It may only be said that there must be an allegation which prima facie discloses the commission of an offence with the necessary facts for the Magistrate to take action. Section 190(1)(a) makes it necessary that the alleged facts must disclose the commission of an offence. Bhimappa Basappa Bhu Sannavar v. Laxman Shivarayappa Samagouda, (1970) 1 SCC 665: 1970 SCC (Cri) 263: AIR 1970 SC 1153: 1970 Cri LJ 1132.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-3-1970]

— S. 4(1)(i) See Ss. 377 and 4(1)(i)

[7700] — S. 4(1)(l) — Laying a trap is part of investigation. Sailendranath Bose v. State of Bihar, AIR 1968 SC 1292: (1968) 3 SCR 563: 1968 Cri LJ 1484: (1969) 1 LLJ 549.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: G.K. Mitter and K.S. Hegde, JJ. [Date of decision: 26-3-1968]

[7701] — S. 4(1)(o) — "Offence" — Meaning of — Accused firing a single shot two persons with the intention of causing their death — Held, only one offence is at committed and not two. Bhagat Singh v. State, AIR 1952 SC 45: 1952 SCR 371: 1952 Cri LJ 323, 324.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Fazl Ali, M.C. Mahajan and N. Chandrasekhara Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-12-1951]

[7702] — S. 4(1)(o) — "Offence" and "prosecution of offence" — Distinction

There is an essential distinction between an offence and the prosecution for an offence. The former forms part of the substantive law and the latter of procedural law. An offence is an aggregate of acts or omissions punishable by law while prosecution signified the procedure for obtaining an adjudication of court in respect of such acts or omissions. Kapur Chand Pokhraj v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 993, 997: 1958 Cri LJ 1558: (1958) 9 STC 455: 1959 SCR 250.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.P. Sinha, Syed Jafer Imam and K. Subba Rao, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1958]

[7703] — Ss. 4(1)(t) and 492 — 'Public Prosecutor' — Additional Government Advocate notified as Public Prosecutor for the High Court — Can deal with 'appeals against acquittal' in High Court when designated to take up 'cases'

Reading S. 4(1)(t) CrPC, which defines "Public Prosecutor" together with S. 492 CrPC, under which the State Government is empowered to appoint Public Prosecutors, the Additional Government Advocate when appointed as a Public Prosecutor for the High Court in respect of the cases arising in the State of M.P. must be held to be a Public Prosecutor lawfully empowered to present the appeals in the High Court against orders of acquittal. Mansoor v. State of M.P., (1971) 2 SCC 369: 1971 SCC (Cri) 541: AIR 1971 SC 1977: 1971 Cri LJ 1445.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: I.D. Dua and V. Bhargava, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1971]

[7704] — S. 5 — Scope — "Otherwise dealt with" — Meaning of — Inquiries in connection with disciplinary proceedings against Government servant — Need not be held in accordance with the provisions of CrPC

"Otherwise dealt with" occurring in S. 5 CrPC refers to such dealing with offences as is provided for in the provisions of the Code apart from the provisions for investigation, enquiry or trial. The use of these words in S. 5 does not justify a conclusion that inquiries in connection with disciplinary proceedings on the basis of offences alleged to have been committed by the Government servant must also be held in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. R.P. Kapur v. S. Pratap Singh Kairon, AIR 1964 SC 295: (1964) 4 SCR 224: (1964) 1 Cri LJ 224, 27.

Bench Strength 7. Coram: S.K. Das, A.C.J.[1] and P.B. Gajendragadkar[1], A.K. Sarkar[2], K.N. Wanchoo[3], M. Hidayatullah[1], K.C. Das Gupta[3] and N. Rajagopala Ayyangar[3], JJ. [Date of decision: 2-8-1963]

[7705] — S. 5 — "Otherwise dealt with"

It was contended that the expression 'dealt with' must mean something which is not included in investigation, inquiry or trial. This does not necessarily follow from the provisions of this section. The word 'otherwise' points to the fact that the expression 'dealt with' is all comprehensive, and that investigation, inquiry and trial were some aspects of 'dealing with' the offences. Delhi Admn. v. Ram Singh, AIR 1962 SC 63, 67: (1962) 2 SCR 694: (1962) 1 Cri LJ 106.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: K. Subba Rao[1], Raghubar Dayal[1] and J.R. Mudholkar[2], JJ. [Date of decision: 3-5-1961]

[7706] — S. 5 — "Any other law" — Words do not cover contempt of a kind punishable summarily by High Courts

Contempt is a special subject and the jurisdiction is conferred by a special set of laws peculiar to Courts of Record. It is clear that the words "any other law" in S. 5 of the Criminal Procedure Code do not cover contempt of a kind punishable summarily by the High Courts. Sukhdev Singh v. Teja Singh, AIR 1954 SC 186: 1954 SCR 454: 1954 Cri LJ 460.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, Vivian Bose and N.H. Bhagwati, JJ. [Date of decision: 25-11-1953]

[7707] — S. 5(1) — Nature

It appears from S. 5(1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure that the provisions of the said Code relating to the place of trial assume the existence of substantive liability under the Indian Penal Code or under any other law. Mobarik Ali Ahmed v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857, 867: 1958 SCR 328: 1957 Cri LJ 1346.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-1957]

[7708] — S. 5(2) — Offences under S. 5 — Applicability and effect of Criminal Procedure Code in such cases — Words "notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure" — Meaning of — S. 5-A may be related with S. 5(2) CrPC — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, Ss. 5-A & 5

Section 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act should be related to the provision in S. 5(2), which limits the application of the provisions of that Code to be subject to any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying or otherwise dealing with such offences. The only change which S. 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act makes is with regard to officers competent to investigate and arrest without warrant; in all other respects the Code of Criminal Procedure applies and, therefore, there is no doubt that all offences mentioned in S. 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act are cognizable offences.

The words "notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure" found at the beginning of S. 5-A(1) merely carve out a limited exemption from the Code of Criminal Procedure insofar as they limit the class of persons who are competent to investigate into offences mentioned in the section and to arrest without a warrant. It does not mean that the whole of the Code of Criminal Procedure, including Sch. II thereof, is made inapplicable. Union of India v. Maj. I.C. Lala, (1973) 2 SCC 72: 1973 SCC (Cri) 738: AIR 1973 SC 2204: (1973) 3 SCR 818: 1973 Cri LJ 1190.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: A. Alagiriswami, I.D. Dua and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 29-3-1973]

[7709] — S. 5(2) — Applicability of Code where no procedure provided under the special law — U.P. Panchayat Raj Act

To the extent that no valid machinery is set up under the U.P. Panchayat Raj Act for the trial of any particular case the jurisdiction of the ordinary criminal court under S. 5 CrPC, cannot be held to have been excluded. Exclusion of jurisdiction of a court of general jurisdiction, can be brought about by the setting up of a court of limited jurisdiction, in respect of the limited field, only if the vesting and the exercise of that limited jurisdiction is clear and operative. Where, as in this case, there is no adequate machinery for the exercise of this jurisdiction in a specific case one cannot hold that the exercise of jurisdiction in respect of such a case by the Court of general jurisdiction is illegal. Bhim Sen v. State of U.P., AIR 1955 SC 435, 438: (1955) 1 SCR 1444: 1955 Cri LJ 1010.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: Vivian Bose, B. Jagannadhadas and B.P. Sinha, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-1955]

[7710] — S. 5(2) — Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 — Ss. 19(A) and 19(3) — Provision for investigation — Applicability of Code

Magistrate can exercise his powers under the Code with respect to property seized under S. 19(3).

As regards S. 19(A), the Act is a special Act and it provides under S. 19-A for the necessary investigation into the alleged suspected commission of an offence under the Act, by the Director of Enforcement. The provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure therefore will not apply to such investigations by him, assuming that the expression 'investigation' includes the retaining of the documents for the purposes of the investigation. Nilratan Sircar v. Lakshmi Narayan Ram Niwas, AIR 1965 SC 1, 5: (1964) 7 SCR 724: (1965) 1 Cri LJ 100.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M. Hidayatullah and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 14-4-1964]

— S. 6 See Ss. 195(1)(b), (2) and 6
See also Ss. 439(2) and 6

[7711] — Ss. 6, 10 and 12 — Magistrates — Do not possess inherent powers — Hence cannot review or recall any order passed by them — Magistrate therefore erred in recalling the order made under S. 203 dismissing the complaint on ground of triviality. Bindeshwari Prasad Singh v. Kali Singh, (1977) 1 SCC 57: 1977 SCC (Cri) 33: AIR 1977 SC 2432: 1978 Cri LJ 187.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: P.N. Bhagwati and S. Murtaza Fazal Ali, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-8-1976]

— S. 8(2) See Ss. 337 and 8(2)

[7712] — S. 9 — Additional Sessions Judge and post of Civil Judge — Applicability of Arts. 233 and 236 of the Constitution

It makes no difference whether a person is first appointed as a Civil Judge and then as an Additional Sessions Judge or whether he is appointed both as a Civil Judge and an Additional Sessions Judge at the same time. When such an appointment is made the appointee exercises both the powers of a Civil Judge and those of an Additional Sessions Judge. From such a combination of powers in the same person it does not follow that he is not an Additional Sessions Judge or that he is a Civil Judge and, therefore, does not fall under the definition of a 'District Judge' in Art. 236(a). Since such a post falls under that definition it would be Art. 233 and the Rajasthan Higher Judicial Service Rules which would apply to him and not Art. 234 or the Rajasthan Judicial Service Rules, 1955. Prem Nath v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1967 SC 1599, 1604: (1967) 3 SCR 6: (1967) 2 ITJ 502: 1967 Cri LJ 1569.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: K. Subba Rao, C.J. and J.C. Shah, J.M. Shelat, V. Bhargava and G.K. Mitter, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-1967]

— S. 10 See also Ss. 6, 10 and 12

[7713] — S. 10 — ADM exercising powers of DM under S. 29 of Defence of India Act, 1962

The question was whether the Additional District Magistrate, Gurdaspur who had been invested with all the powers of the District Magistrate under S. 10(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure could make an order under S. 29(1) of the Defence of India Act, 1962, requisitioning a shop the respondent belonging to which was in occupation of the appellant as a tenant.

Held :

The Additional District Magistrate who is invested with the powers of a District Magistrate does not thereby attain the status of a District Magistrate as there can be only one person in the district who can be a District Magistrate and the Government when it conferred the power on the District Magistrate conferred it on the officer actually holding the office of the District Magistrate and no one else. Hari Chand Aggarwal v. Batala Engineering Co. Ltd., AIR 1969 SC 483, 487: (1969) 2 SCR 201: 1969 Cri LJ 803.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.C. Shah, V. Ramaswami and A.N. Grover, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1968]

[7714] — S. 10 — District Magistrate — Designation of

Unless a person has been appointed under S. 10(1) of the Code he cannot be called a District Magistrate and that an Additional District Magistrate is below the rank of a District Magistrate. Hari Chand Aggarwal v. Batala Engineering Co. Ltd., AIR 1969 SC 483, 487: (1969) 2 SCR 201: 1969 Cri LJ 803.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.C. Shah, V. Ramaswami and A.N. Grover, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1968]

[7715] — S. 10 — Object of appointing ADMs

The object of appointing an Additional District Magistrate is to relieve the District Magistrate of some of his duties and that he is subordinate to the District Magistrate to the extent specified in sub-section (3) of S. 10. Hari Chand Aggarwal v. Batala Engineering Co. Ltd., AIR 1969 SC 483, 485: (1969) 2 SCR 201: 1969 Cri LJ 803.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.C. Shah, V. Ramaswami and A.N. Grover, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1968]

[7716] — S. 10 — Scheme of — ADMs & DM — Distinction

The Scheme of S. 10 of the Code leaves no room for doubt that the District Magistrate and the Additional District Magistrate are two different and distinct authorities and even though the latter may be empowered under sub-section (2) to exercise all or any of the powers of a District Magistrate but by no stretch of reasoning can an Additional District Magistrate be called the District Magistrate which are the words employed in sub-section (1) of S. 10. Hari Chand Aggarwal v. Batala Engineering Co. Ltd., AIR 1969 SC 483, 485: (1969) 2 SCR 201: 1969 Cri LJ 803.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.C. Shah, V. Ramaswami and A.N. Grover, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1968]

See also (1961) 3 SCR 495: AIR 1961 SC 606

[7717] — S. 10 — Transfer of certain pending cases — Applicability of the section — Case transferred to Session Court before the Act came into force and pending before Assistant Sessions Judge when the Act came into force — Had he jurisdiction to try case

Under S. 10 of this Act all cases pending before the Court of a Magistrate were transferred to the Court of a Special Judge. Section 10 did not purport to transfer cases, pending in the court of Sessions at the commencement of the Act, to the Court of the Special Judge. Din Dayal Sharma v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 831, 832: 1959 Supp (2) SCR 776: 1959 Cri LJ 1120.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: Syed Jafer Imam and J.L. Kapur, JJ. [Date of decision: 23-4-1959]

[7718] — Ss. 10 and 517 — Security bond — Procedure and form — Sessions Judge directing the furnishing of bond to the satisfaction of the District Magistrate — Additional District Magistrate can accept the bond — Indemnity bond can be used — In the absence of direction that the bond be taken in the name of any particular court, it can be taken in the name of State Government

There is nothing in the words of S. 517 of the Criminal procedure Code, which excluded the use of an indemnity bond. The Sessions Judge did not order that the bond should be taken in the name of any particular court. A bond in the name of the Government of West Bengal substantially (if not wholly) complied with the order of the Sessions Judge. The contention that only the District Magistrate could accept the bond ignores the powers of the Additional District Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure. The practice of courts in Bengal is also against the proposition because such bonds are usually considered for acceptance by Additional District Magistrate. Debabrata Bandhopadhyaya v. State of W.B., AIR 1969 SC 189: (1969) 1 SCR 304: 1969 Cri LJ 401.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: M. Hidayatullah, C.J. and V. Ramaswami and C.A. Vaidialingam, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-7-1968]

[7719] — S. 10(1) — Notification under — No order of State Government appointing an officer as District Magistrate. Ajaib Singh v. Gurbachan Singh, AIR 1965 SC 1619: (1965) 2 SCR 845: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 553.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.N. Wanchoo, M. Hidayatullah, J.C. Shah and S.M. Sikri, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-1965]

— S. 10(2) See also Ss. 337(1), 10(2), 529 and Sch. III, Part V, Entry 7(a)

[7720] — S. 10(2) — Notification under S. 40, 1962 Act empowering DM to exercise powers under S. 29 — ADM empowered under S. 10(2) CrPC, 1898 incompetent to requisition property — Defence of India Act, 1962, Ss. 40 and 29. Hari Chand Aggarwal v. Batala Engineering Co. Ltd., AIR 1969 SC 483, 487: (1969) 2 SCR 201, 207: 1969 Cri LJ 803.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: J.C. Shah, V. Ramaswami and A.N. Grover, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-9-1968]

[7721] — Ss. 10(2) and 11 — No officer below the rank of DM to exercise power of detention — ADM invested with power of DM under S. 10(2) CrPC 1898 — Exercise of DM's powers under S. 11, CrPC on temporary vacancy — Held, he is not a DM in law or of equal rank — Detention order invalid — Defence of India Act, 1962, Ss. 3(2)(15)(i) & 40(2) & Rr. 30(1) & 30-A. Ajaib Singh v. Gurbachan Singh, AIR 1965 SC 1619, 1622: (1965) 2 SCR 845, 849: (1965) 2 Cri LJ 553.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: K. Subba Rao, K.N. Wanchoo, M. Hidayatullah, J.C. Shah and S.M. Sikri, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-2-1965]

— S. 11 See Ss. 10(2) and 11

— S. 12 See Ss. 6, 10 and 12

[7722] — Ss. 12(1) and (2) — Magistrate of first class — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5-A

Ordinarily, Magistrates of the first class may have defined areas within the meaning of S. 12(1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure but in cases governed by S. 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act Magistrates of the first class will exercise jurisdiction throughout the district irrespective of defined areas of their jurisdiction within that district by reason of S. 12(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Union of India v. B.N. Ananti Padmanabiah, (1971) 3 SCC 278: 1971 SCC (Cri) 535: AIR 1971 SC 1836: 1971 Cri LJ 1287.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, C.J. and C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-1971]

— S. 12(2) See Ss. 12(1) and (2)

— S. 14 See also Ss. 197(2) and 14

[7723] — S. 14 — Constitutionality of section — Whether violates Art. 14

Where the Special Magistrate under S. 14 CrPC has to try the case entirely under the discrimination of the kind contemplated in Anwar Ali Sarkar case, 1952 SCR 284 and the other cases authority under such circumstances cannot be said to be discriminatory as such, and is therefore not hit by Art. 14 of the Constitution. M.K. Gopalan v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 362: (1955) 1 SCR 168: 1954 Cri LJ 1012.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1954]

[7724] — S. 14 (as amended by Bombay Act 23 of 1951) — Held valid as S. 14 had been held valid — Constitution of India, Art. 14

There is substantially no difference between the powers conferrable by S. 14 of the Code as originally enacted and S. 14 as amended by Bombay Act 23 of 1951. Therefore S. 14 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as amended, cannot be regarded as infringing Art. 14 of the Constitution. No discrimination practised by a notification. Jagannath Sonu Parker v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 728, 731: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 573: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 639.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and P.B. Gajendragadkar, K.N. Wanchoo, K.C. Das Gupta and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1962]

[7725] — S. 14 (as amended by Bombay Act 23 of 1951) — Notification issued appointing a Special Judicial Magistrate having jurisdiction over the area when a conspiracy to smuggle gold is alleged to have been hatched — Notification not discriminatory and not hit by Art. 14 of the Constitution. Jagannath Sonu Parker v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 728: 1963 Supp (1) SCR 573: (1963) 1 Cri LJ 639, 42.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.P. Sinha, C.J. and P.B. Gajendragadkar, K.N. Wanchoo, K.C. Das Gupta and J.C. Shah, JJ. [Date of decision: 11-10-1962]

[7726] — Ss. 14, 197(1) and 197(2) — Object of S. 197(2) and policy behind it — Powers under S. 197(2) not exercised — Interference from

Section 197(2) is not inspired by any policy of protection of the concerned public servant, as S. 197(1) is.

The power under S. 197(2) is to be vested in the appropriate Government for being exercised, on grounds of convenience, or the complexity or gravity of the case or other relevant considerations. It cannot be said that it is for the very Government which sanctioned the prosecution under S. 197(1) to specify the Court before which the trial is to be held and no other, and that consequently, in a case to which S. 197(1) applies, the exercise of any power under S. 14 is excluded. If in a particular case power under S. 197(2) is not exercised it cannot be taken that the appropriate Government did not feel called upon to allot the case to any special court, and that, therefore, such allotment by another Government under S. 14 would affect or nullify the power of the appropriate Government under S. 197(2). The power under S. 197(2) to specify a court for trial in such cases being a permissive power there can be no such implication arising from the non-exercise of the power. M.K. Gopalan v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 362: (1955) 1 SCR 168: 1954 Cri LJ 1012.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1954]

[7727] — Ss. 14(1) and 197(2) — Respective scopes of sections — Distinction between

The one relates to the "Court" and the other to the "person". Under sub-section (2) of S. 197, the sanctioning Government may specify a court for the trial of the case but is not bound to do so. When it does not choose to specify the Court, the trial is subject to the operation of the other provisions of the Code. But even when it chooses to exercise the power of specifying the Court before which the trial is to be held, such specification of the Court does not touch the question as to who is the person to function in such court before which the trial is to take place. That is a matter still left to be exercised by the Provincial Government of the area where the trial is to take place. The words "Court" is sub-section (2) of S. 197 and "person" in sub-section (1) of S. 14 are not interchangeable. M.K. Gopalan v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 362: (1955) 1 SCR 168: 1954 Cri LJ 1012.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das, N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-4-1954]

[7728] — S. 18 — Presidency Magistrate — Jurisdiction — Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, S. 5-A

The words "Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, as the case may be" in S. 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act indicate that a Presidency Magistrate refers to the Presidency town where he exercises jurisdiction and similarly a Magistrate of the first class refer to a Magistrate of the first class of a district exercising power in that district. A Magistrate does not exercise jurisdiction throughout the length and breadth of India for purposes of Code of Criminal Procedure or of Prevention of Corruption Act. The Code of Criminal Procedure defines the territorial jurisdiction of Magistrate.

It is appropriate that Magistrates in Presidency towns or districts will order investigation of cases within their respective jurisdictions. The effect of S. 5-A of the Prevention of Corruption Act is that it is a special Act which confers powers on Presidency Magistrates exercisable throughout the Presidency town and Magistrates of the first class throughout the districts where they exercise powers under the Code of Criminal Procedure. Union of India v. B.N. Ananti Padmanabiah, (1971) 3 SCC 278: 1971 SCC (Cri) 535: AIR 1971 SC 1836: 1971 Cri LJ 1287.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, C.J. and C.A. Vaidialingam and A.N. Ray, JJ. [Date of decision: 22-4-1971]

[7729] — Ss. 28 and 30 — Relative scope

The provisions of S. 28 and second schedule must give way to the provisions of S. 30. Budhan Choudhry v. State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 191: (1955) 1 SCR 1045: 1955 ALJ 309: 1955 Cri LJ 374, 376, 37.

Bench Strength 7. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das, Vivian Bose, N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-1954]

— S. 29 See also Ss. 530(p) and 29

[7730] — Ss. 29 and 30(2) — Offence under 1948 U.P. Act tried by a Magistrate First Class — Trial is void in view of S. 29/S. 30(2) CrPC, 1898 — U.P. Private Forests Act, 1948 (6 of 1949), S. 15(2)

Section 29 CrPC says that offences under any other law shall be tried by that court which that law mentions and it is only when no court is mentioned that the eighth column of the Second Schedule is applicable. Here sub-section (2) of S. 15 mentions the courts by which offences under S. 15(1) are triable and S. 29(1) excludes the application of the second part of the Second Schedule. The words of sub-section (1) of S. 29 are peremptory. There is no escape from them. They say that 'subject to the other provisions of the Code' any offence under any other law shall be tried by the Court when such court is mentioned in that law. A case under S. 15(1), therefore, is triable only by the two courts named therein, namely, magistrate of the second and the third classes and not by any other magistrate. What S. 15(2) does is to prescribe a particular court and in the view of the words of S. 29(1) no other court can try offences under S. 15(1) even though the powers of those courts may be superior to those of magistrates of the second and the third class. If the Second Schedule itself, which prescribed the courts for the trial of offences under laws other than the Penal Code, is excluded, the Third Schedule cannot bring about the same result indirectly. The provisions of the Third Schedule must therefore be taken to define general powers and not to create jurisdiction to try offences which the Second Schedule does.

In view of the clear words of S. 29(1) CrPC the trial for offences under S. 15(1), Private Forests Act should have been in a court designated in S. 15(2) and as the trial was before a Magistrate not so designated the proceedings were void under S. 530(p) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. State of U.P. v. Sabir Ali, AIR 1964 SC 1673: (1964) 7 SCR 435: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 606.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M. Hidayatullah and N. Rajagopala Ayyangar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1964]

[7731] — S. 29(1) — Nature — Peremptory in nature

The words of sub-section (1) of S. 29 are peremptory. There is no escape from them. State of U.P. v. Sabir Ali, AIR 1964 SC 1673, 1674: (1964) 7 SCR 435: (1964) 2 Cri LJ 606.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: M. Hidayatullah and N. Rajagopala Ayyangar, JJ. [Date of decision: 24-3-1964]

— S. 30 See also Ss. 28 and 30

[7732] — S. 30 — Scope

The effect of the State Government investing the District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class with power under S. 30 is to bring into being an additional court in which all offences not punishable with death become triable. In other words, the effect of the exercise of authority by the State Government under S. 30 is, as it were, to add in the 8th column of the second schedule the Magistrate so empowered as a court before whom all offences not punishable with death will also be triable. Budhan Choudhry v. State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 191: (1955) 1 SCR 1045: 1955 ALJ 309: 1955 Cri LJ 374, 376, 37.

Bench Strength 7. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das, Vivian Bose, N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-1954]

[7733] — S. 30 — Is not inconsistent with Art. 14 of the Constitution

Section 30 empowers the State Government in certain areas to invest the District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class with power to try as a Magistrate all offences not punishable with death. There is an obvious classification on which this section is based, namely, that such power may be conferred on Special Magistrates in certain localities only and in respect of some offence only, namely, all offences other than those punishable with death.

The section only authorises the State Government to invest certain Magistrates with power to try all offences not punishable with death and this authority the State can exercise only in the specified places. If the State invests any Magistrate with powers under S. 30 anybody who commits any offence not punishable with death and triable by a Court of Sessions under S. 28, read with the second schedule is also liable to be tried by Magistrate under S. 30. The risk of such liability falls alike upon all persons committing such an offence. Therefore, there is no discrimination in the section itself.

Section 30 CrPC, does not infringe the fundamental rights under Art. 14 of the Constitution. Budhan Choudhry v. State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 191: (1955) 1 SCR 1045: 1955 ALJ 309: 1955 Cri LJ 374, 376, 378.

Bench Strength 7. Coram: M.C. Mahajan, C.J. and B.K. Mukherjea, S.R. Das, Vivian Bose, N.H. Bhagwati, B. Jagannadhadas and T.L. Venkatarama Aiyar, JJ. [Date of decision: 2-12-1954]

— S. 30(2) See Ss. 29 and 30(2)

[7734] — S. 33 — Imprisonment in default of fine — Power of the Magistrate — Sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment in default of payment of fine — Propriety — Penal Code, 1860 (45 of 1860) — S. 65

Section 33 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1898 would override S. 65, Indian Penal Code, or, to be more accurate, apply more specifically to Magistrates.

While a Magistrate's powers are specifically limited by S. 33, Criminal Procedure Code, they must also be so exercised as not to contravene S. 65, Indian Penal Code.

As the sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment in default of payment of fine passed by the Munsif Magistrate was in excess of his powers, appeal is allowed to the extent that the sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine is reduced to six months' rigorous imprisonment. It would have been better if this obvious illegality and excess of power could have been corrected by the High Court when the matter was brought to its notice by means of an application under S. 561-A, Criminal Procedure Code. Chhajulal v. State of Rajasthan, (1972) 3 SCC 411: 1972 SCC (Cri) 561: AIR 1972 SC 1809: 1972 Cri LJ 1184.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Grover and M.H. Beg, JJ. [Date of decision: 17-3-1972]

[7735] — Ss. 33 and 288 — Evidence of eyewitness recorded in FIR but not in Sessions Court as by that time he was dead — Held, his evidence in committal Court as prosecution witness cannot be treated as evidence under S. 288 — It can be treated as evidence under S. 33. Tarlok Singh v. State of Punjab, (1973) 2 SCC 458: 1973 SCC (Cri) 872: AIR 1974 SC 1797: 1974 Cri LJ 1265.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: P. Jaganmohan Reddy, H.R. Khanna and A. Alagiriswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 30-7-1973]

[7736] — S. 35 — Sentence of person convicted for more than one offence subject to S. 71 IPC. Nafe Singh v. State of Haryana, (1971) 3 SCC 934: 1972 SCC (Cri) 182.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.N. Ray and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 16-3-1970]

[7737] — S. 35 — Scope — Passing of separate sentences

Section 35 permits the passing of separate sentences for different offences and for them to run consecutively, unless the Court directs that they shall run concurrently. This, however, is subject to the provisions of S. 71, Penal Code.

It is clear from these provisions that where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences. Puranmal Agarwalla v. State of Orissa, AIR 1958 SC 935, 936: 1959 SCR 1162: 1958 Cri LJ 1432.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: B.P. Sinha and Syed Jafer Imam, JJ. [Date of decision: 19-8-1958]

[7738] — Ss. 36 to 39 — Scope — Appointment of Civil Judge as ADM

Ss. 36 to 39 cannot apply to the case of a Civil Judge appointed also as an Additional Sessions Judge, for these sections contemplate vesting of additional powers on District Magistrates, Sub-Divisional Magistrates and Magistrates of the first, second and third class. Therefore, the power to appoint a Civil Judge as an Additional Sessions Judge is to be found not in Ss. 36 to 39 but in S. 9. Prem Nath v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1967 SC 1599, 1604: (1967) 3 SCR 186: (1967) 2 ITJ 502: 1967 Cri LJ 1569.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: K. Subba Rao, C.J. and J.C. Shah, J.M. Shelat, V. Bhargava and G.K. Mitter, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-3-1967]

— Ss. 37 to 39 See Ss. 36 to 39

[7739] — S. 39(2) — Prescribed Authority — Jurisdictional competence of — U.P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act, 1972 — S. 3(e) — Appointment and qualification of Prescribed Authority — Nature of experience required under S. 3(e) — Tehsildar deriving powers of First Class Magistrate under General Notification dated February 6, 1968 (published in official gazette dated February 17, 1968) promoted and posted as Additional City Magistrate II, Kanpur in February 1974 till August 1974 and again posted as such in May 1975 till August 26, 1975 — By notification dated September 9, 1974 Additional City Magistrate II, Kanpur designated as Prescribed Authority under the Act — Order of release passed by him under S. 21 of the Act on August 19, 1975 in favour of respondent-landlord, held, not without jurisdiction, hence valid — Prescribed Authority duly qualified and his appointment valid — Deputy Secretary's note restricting powers of First Class Magistrate conferred on the Tehsildars to ensure maintenance of law and order only cannot override the General Notification — De facto doctrine also attracted — Appointment as Prescribed Authority not open to question by the tenant in collateral proceeding — Rent Control and Eviction — Jurisdiction. Beopar Sahayak (P) Ltd. v. Vishwa Nath, (1987) 3 SCC 693: 1987 SCC (Cri) 641: AIR 1987 SC 2111: 1987 ALJ 1434.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: A.P. Sen and S. Natarajan, JJ. [Date of decision: 15-7-1987]

Beopar Sahayak (P) Ltd. v. Vishwa Nath, 1977 All WC 607, affirmed

[7740] — S. 46 — Person "in custody" making confession — "Custody" when starts — Possibility of giving information without appearing before investigating officer — Evidence Act, 1872, Ss. 27, 24, 25 & 26

Per majority (Subba Rao, J. contra)

When a person not in custody approaches a police officer investigating an offence and offers to give information leading to discovery of a fact, having a bearing on the charge which may be made against him he may appropriately be deemed to have surrendered himself to the police. Section 46 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not contemplate any formality before a person can be said to be taken in custody: submission to the custody by word or action by a person is sufficient. A person directly giving to a police officer by word of mouth information which may be used as evidence against him, may be deemed to have submitted himself to the "custody" of the police officer within the meaning of S. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Exceptional cases may certainly be imagined in which a person may give information without presenting himself before a police officer who is investigating an offence. For instance, he may write a letter and give such information or may send a telephonic or other message to the police officer. Though the possibility cannot be ruled out; but such an occurrence would indeed be rare. There is no such instance amongst decided cases. State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya, AIR 1960 SC 1125: (1961) 1 SCR 14: 1960 Cri LJ 1504.

Bench Strength 5. Coram: S.K. Das[1], J.L. Kapur[1], K. Subba Rao[2], M. Hidayatullah[3] and J.C. Shah[1], JJ. [Date of decision: 6-5-1960]

The conflict as to when custody begins was not resolved when it next presented itself in Aghnoo Nagesia v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 119, 125 (Para 21): 1966 Cri LJ 100 and the court resorted to the concept of constructive custody

[7741] — S. 46 — Illegality of arrest not to affect conviction

Even if arrest of the accused in India for the purpose of a trial in respect of a fresh offence is considered not to be justified, this by itself cannot vitiate the conviction following upon his trial. Mobarik Ali Ahmed v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857, 866: 1958 SCR 328: 1957 Cri LJ 1346.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: B. Jagannadhadas, Syed Jafer Imam and P. Govinda Menon, JJ. [Date of decision: 6-9-1957]

[7742] — S. 46(3) — Applicability — Installation of high-voltage live wire on jail walls which would cause death to a prisoner attempting to escape by scaling jail walls — Held, S. 46 is not attracted

The installation of the high-voltage wire does not offend against the command of S. 46(3) even on the assumption that the sub-section covers the re-arrest of a prisoner who has escaped from lawful custody. The installation of the system does not by itself cause the death of the prisoner. It is a preventive measure intended to act as a deterrent and can cause death only if a prisoner courts death by scaling the wall while attempting to escape from lawful custody. In that sense, even a high wall without the electrical device would be open to the exception that a prisoner falling from a height, while attempting to escape by scaling the wall, may meet with his death. S. 46(3) is, therefore, not contravened and the grievance that the mechanism involves a total negation of the safeguards afforded by criminal law is without any substance. D. Bhuvan Mohan Patnaik v. State of A.P., (1975) 3 SCC 185: 1974 SCC (Cri) 803: AIR 1974 SC 2092: 1974 Cri LR (SC) 605: 1975 Cri LJ 556.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: H.R. Khanna, Y.V. Chandrachud and P.K. Goswami, JJ. [Date of decision: 9-9-1974]

— S. 51 See Ss. 103 and 51

[7743] — S. 52 — Decency in search — Not an extraordinary circumstance that some of the men accompanying the raid should have seen seizure of the article from the person of the accused woman. Kamalabai Jethamal v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1962 SC 1189: 1962 Supp (2) SCR 632: (1962) 2 Cri LJ 273: 64 Bom LR 517.

Bench Strength 2. Coram: J.L. Kapur and Raghubar Dayal, JJ. [Date of decision: 18-1-1962]

— S. 56(a) See Ss. 144 and 56(a)

— S. 61 See also Ss. 155, 61, 94, 167, 164 and 202

[7744] — S. 61 — Undertrial prisoner

It is not necessary that the undertrial should be produced on each occasion before a Magistrate for remand.

An undertrial prisoner need not be arrested separately for every criminal case pending against him. The subsequent lawful detention is not vitiated by the earlier illegal detention. Saptawna v. State of Assam, (1972) 4 SCC (N) 45: 1971 SCC (Cri) 247: AIR 1971 SC 813: 1971 Cri LJ 679.

Bench Strength 3. Coram: S.M. Sikri, C.J. and P.Jaganmohan Reddy and I.D. Dua, JJ. [Date of decision: 5-2-1971]

[7745] — Ss. 75 to 86 — Arrest and Supply of Grounds of Arrest — CPC, 1908, Or. 38 R. 1, S. 55 read with Or. 21 R. 38 — Sea Customs Act, 1878 — Ss. 173, 174 — Forest Act, 1927 — S. 64 — Constitution of India, Art. 22(1) & (2)

Broadly speaking, arrests may be classified into two categories, namely, arrests under warrants issued by a Court and arrests otherwise than under such warrants.

The warrant quite clearly has to state that the person to be arrested stands charged with a certain offence.

As in the case of a warrant of arrest issued by a Court under the Code of Criminal Procedure, a warrant of arrest issued by a Court under the Code of Civil Procedure quite plainly discloses the reason for the arrest in that it sets out an accusation of default, apprehended or actual, and that the person to be arrested is made acquainted with the reasons for his arrest before he is actually arrested.

